It was then determined that the ſubſcribers to the non importation agreement be deſired by public notice to meet on Saturday morning next, at 10 o'clock, at Joſiah Davenport's, to chooſe eleven perſons, to ſupply the places of thoſe gentlemen of the committee who have now reſigned.

The thanks of the ſubſcribers were then given to the chairman for his impartial conduct in propoſing the different queſtions at their meeting; alſo to the gentlemen of the committee, for their care and attention, in endeavouring to have the non importation agreement hitherto complied with.

SALEM, Sept 18.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Gibraltar to his Friend in Salem, dated July 10 1770.

"In my laſt I adviſed you that the ſecond diviſion of the Ruſſian Squadron, commanded by admiral Elphinſton, had paſſed this Place; a third Squadron is hourly expected in theſe Seas, which conſiſt of about 24 ſail, including Frigates, Storeſhips, &c. The Ruſſians have now in the Levant about fifteen Sail of line of Battle ſhips, beſides a number of Frigates, Bombs, &c. By the laſt Accounts, they were carrying every Thing before them, both by ſea and by land, having already conquered the greateſt part of the Morea, and we apprehend will go nigh to reduce all the iſlands in the levant, belonging to the Porte this Summer, altho' the Turks make a noble defence, but muſt be overcome at laſt by the Greeks, who are very numerous, and have all revolted, and taken up Arms in Favour of the Ruſſians ſo that there will be terrible Work among them, as it ſeems no quarters are given on either Side. We have a report in town that the French are actually fitting out their fleet at Toulon in order to aſſiſt the Turks, but this wants Confirmation; ſhould it prove true, a general rupture muſt enſue, as we are by treaty obliged to aſſiſt the Ruſſians.—About a fortnight ago a Daniſh Squadron, conſiſting of four Ships of the line, two Frigates, two Bombs, and three Storeſhips, put into this Bay, bound to Algiers, which place they intended to bombard in caſe the Dey refuſes to come into their Terms, ſome of his Cruiſers having lately ſeized and taken ſeveral Veſſels of that nation: However, we are of Opinion they will not come to blows, but that Matters will be made up.——The Dutch have had a Squadron in theſe Seas for ſome Time paſt, being afraid of ſome of the Barbary powers. The Swedes are likewiſe preparing a Squadron to ſend out to the Mediterranean, but with what View is not known.——The Emperor of Morocco has taken the Field at the Head of 40,000 Men, and a large train of artillery, and is now in his march towards Tetuan & many People imagine that he intends to attack Ceuta, which I ſhould not be ſurprized at. The laſt Letters from Tunis mention, that the Dey of ſaid place had ſeized upon all the Greeks in his Dominions, and it was apprehended would put them all to the Sword, on Account of their having taken up Arms againſt his Friends the Turks."

June 7 A Correſpondent, who freqnently favours us with his productions, has ſent us the following. Next Friday (ſays he) we are informed is the day fixed for the departure of the Princeſs of W—, upon a Tour of ſome Months, to viſit her Royal Relations in Germany.——How much Popularity or popular Applauſe is a mere Shadow, a Phantom never to be kept, the long unjuſt repeated Inſults ſhewn this Prenceſs ſtrongly vereſies. Every mind may inſtantly recollect, during the Life of her Royal Conſort, her Conduct was an example of the moſt amiable Wives. She was the Ornament of the matrimonial State. When ſhe became a Widow, many muſt remember that affectionate ſcene upon the great ſtairs of the palace; when ſurrounded by her royal Offspring in Weeds and deep Mourning, ſhe preſented them to his late M—j—ty the Grandfather of the beſt of Kings. His approbation of his Royal daughter in Law, in the affection of her Conduct, in the parental care of her Children, in the unfeigned grief of her Widowhood; ſuch Teſtimony of her Virtues from the aged parent of her deceaſed Prince, ſtill increaſed that popular Love and enthuſiaſtick Applauſe of the Multitude, that Prayers and Acclamations conſtantly attended her Footſteps. She was the Admiration of the refined mind; ſhe was the Adoration of the general public opinion. The Aera of baneful Faction ſoon commenced, Virtue was attacked, and the moſt amiable Characters were ſacrificed by the Infamy of falſehood, Envy, and Inveteracy. Natural affection, and paternal Tenderneſs for the Glory and Happineſs of the moſt amiable of Sons, of the greateſt Monarch, was eſteemed by faction, ſecret and unjuſt influence. Faction prohibits every natural Affection, every moral Virtue—Her Servants Relations are many; ſome the moſt inveterate in faction: Her R. H. Politicks are not ſo unconſtitutional as to occaſion a Diſmiſſion for any p—l—t—y conduct. ——Remember, my countrymen let me intreat you to remember, Bravery is a characteriſtick Virtue of Great Britain, Bravery and Gratitude are inſeparable virtues. Britons were never void of Gratitude. Unite therefore in your prayers for the ſafe return of a princeſs the moſt amiable of Chriſtians, to whom we are indebted for the beſt of Kings, the Ornament of the Annals of Great Britain. [Thus writes a Courtier!]

Extract of a Letter from Canterbury June 10.

"When the Princeſs Dowager of Wale paſſed thro' this city on Friday laſt, ſhe was moſt ſcandalouſly treated by the Mob, who repeatedly ſpit at her coach, and in the midſt of a torrent of abuſive Epithets, continually cried out "Wilkes and Forty five for ever! &c." They hiſſed her all through the Street, but gave great acclamations to the Duke of Glouceſter, who followed her ſoon after."

The Mayor apologized to her highneſs for the Behaviour of the Mob aſſuring her his Majeſty had not more loyal Subjects in the Kingdom nor her highneſs more faithful friends, than were to be found among the people of Canterbury. Her hignes behaved with great complacency upon the occaſion, and in a moſt affecting manner ſaid, ſhe hoped the populace would ſome time perceive how much they had been miſſed, and thanked the Mayor for his Profeſſion of attachment, &c.

Whereas my Huſband has attempted by an Advertiſement ſhamefully to ruin my Character; to defend Myſelf, I inform the Public, that I can produce the fulleſt Proof that my Conduct has been prudent and blameleſs, eſpecially with Reſpect of running my Huſband in Debt, and as fully Prove that his Temper and Conduct and Diſpoſition has been extremely Ill; particularly by more than once running Away, without the leaſt viſible Cauſe, leaving Me and a Family of ſmall Children in bad Circumſtances. And the laſt time he Abſconded, he tarried almoſt two Years, and returned a bound Servant, and almoſt naked. For information of Strangers I inſert this, for where he and I are known, 'tis beyond his Power to injure my Character. I deſire no one would Credit him, with a view that my Father or I ſhou'd pay the Debt as we have often done—But my Father is releas'd of that Trouble, & myſelf of Paying any more Debts; for the Selectmen have put a Prohibition on my kind Huſband, for his good Conduct, as by their act will more fully appear.

WHEN both ſexes are thus perpetually dazling one another with imaginations and filling their heads with nothing but colours, it is no wonder that they are more attentive to the ſuperficial parts of life, than the ſolid and ſubſtantial bleſſings of it. No wonder, if thoſe things of a heavenly nature are baniſhed from the thoughts ſo long as gaudy habits, grand equipages, luxurious entertainments, poſts of honor, and ſcenes of pleaſure, gain the attention and entire conqueſt over the ſoul. The deceitful glare, ſplendor and flattering appearance of earthly ſenſual enjoyments, corrupt the judgment, ſeduce the mind, and prejudice the underſtanding of the unwary and inconſtant. It is an approved maxim that preſent pleaſures (however inſufficient in their nature, operations and effects) influence mankind much more than eternal uninterrupted ſcenes of joy. The converſation amongſt the learned, often turns upon the conveniency of ſuch a ſpot of ground to erect an edifice upon; the beauty of ſuch a particular lady; the advantage of red heels and top knots; the excellency of ſuch a piece cloth; on the fineneſs and propriety of a red ribbon; with innumerable ſubjects of this kind. And the young who are trained up in this polite method of communication, are in great danger of eſteeming every embroidered coat, of falling in love with any one who has a laced jerkin, and marrying him that carry's a watch in his pocket; and thus they proportion the worth and excellency of any one, to his outward dreſs and gay appearance: a bad method this, and equally detrimental to both ſexes. In a word, lace and ribbons, ſilver and gold gallooms, with the like glittering gewgaws, are ſo many lures to perſons of weak minds and low educations, and when artfully diſplay'd, are able to fetch down the moſt airy coquet from the wildeſt of her flights and rambles. Being ſuch a cuſtomary thing to viſit four afternoons in a week, I ſhall ſay thus much in vindication of the practice: that as the greateſt drudgery is the ſpending of three hours a day in labour or reading; I think ſome ſuitable amuſement ought to be found out for the proper ſpending of time, and if no better one can be invented, let the good old cuſtom be ſtill followed and if poſſible increaſed. I'm informed, that after the formal round of compliments is paſt, and their ſeats taken, each tries to outdo his companion by propoſing fooliſh queſtions, and relating uſeleſs ſtories, and many have laid it down as a fundamental principle, not to introduce any thing that borders upon knowledge or tends to improve their converſation. If my advice was to be taken, I would humbly propoſe the peruſal of ſome valuable author, and performing ſome pleaſant and advantageous work which would make life eaſy, and this world a ſcene of happineſs. SYLVANUS.

LONDON, July 31.

"I imagine you have already heard of the melancholy news of his Majeſty's dock yard being wilfully ſet on fire by ſome incendiary villains, who took the opportunity to execute their wicked deſign, whilſt the people were at Portſ Down fair, as there were ſeveral cartridges of powder found at the end of the long ſtore-houſe, now in flames. The combuſtible matter muſt have been laid in the evening, as the ſmoke was perceived by ſeveral at a great diſtance from Portcheſter, and as far as the Mother-bank. The men on board the cuſtom houſe cutter, ſaw a great ſmoke (thro' a ſpy glaſs) in four different places in the dock yard about three o'clock in the morning; they took it to be a ſhip, breaming; it was not diſcovered near us, till about five o'clock which was by the centinel near the place, who perceived it to burſt out vehemently thro' the roof. The damage according to beſt eſtimation, is about 160 cables of different ſizes; all the boatſwains and carpenters ſtores of ſhips in good condition; alſo 300 tuns of hemp, and the like number of barrels of tar, pitch and turpentine; ſlop and marine cloathing miſſing or loſt; the laying & ſpinning houſes, long ſtore houſe, new hemp houſe, block houſe, carpenters ſhop, glaziers, braziers, and plumbers ſhops, the large maſt-houſe near the academy, with the capital maſts laid there, with about half of the ſails in the ſtore houſes, are entirely conſumed. A ſervant maid in the dock yard, who was looking out of a garret window about four o'clock, was perceived by ſome perſons, who accoſted her with ſaying, you had better go to bed than riſe, for ſoon you will have a fine light to get up by; and then went off, ſaying to themſelves it is almoſt time to give the alarm. Our good friends now may rejoice as they have ſucceeded in this. And I now believe (as well as others) that it was ſet on fire ten years ago this month in like manner, though the conflagration then not half ſo large as now. It is a diſmal ſight to behold; and more ſo as the common was near meeting with the ſame fate; if that had happened, the next would have been the gun wharf, and then the garriſon (which is not well garriſoned, tho' it is the key of our iſle) the ſtrongeſt in the kingdom. God ſend the perpetrators may meet the reward they juſtly deſerve for ſo diabolical an execution."

Extract from another Letter of the ſame Date.

"Before this can poſſibly reach you, the public will be informed of the unfortunate cataſtrophe which happened this morning at 5 o'clock, when our Dock-Yard took fire, and burnt with moſt amazing rapidity; inſomuch that it alarmed greatly the adjacent neighbourhood. It is now rather abated, after having done great ravages, and is much larger than that in 1760. I cannot at preſent give you particulars; but ſuffice it to ſay, we have all our doubts concerning its firſt beginning; and this it is moſt probable, is a part of that blow Lord Chatham talked of. I am in haſte, intending to give you in my next a further account."

Extract of another Letter of July 30.

"I have now the pleaſure to aſſure you that the fire at the Dock has not ſpread ſince the firſt Day, and now is in a manner extinguiſhed, there having been a vaſt quantity of water pumped into the cellar under the Hemp Houſe.

"The Store Houſes have four floors, and on one floor only, the firſt laſt, was ſtored in ſeperate parcels, all the rigging, ſails and cables, with every inch of cordage, to equip 23 ſhips of the line. It was very ſhocking to ſee the people in the common throwing their goods out of their houſes, and run about ſcreaming and crying, expecting their houſes to be on fire, which was not without reaſon, for it was expected every moment that the north weſt corner would be all in flames, but with the help of two engines it was happily prevented. I am told that all the Stores were entirely full. Several Perſons are in Cuſtody, on ſuſpicion of having ſet fire to the Dock.

We have it from the beſt authority that the damage ſuſtained by the dreadful conflagration in the royal Yard at Portſmouth, is to the amount of between 5 and 600,000l. ſterling.

Orders are diſpatched to Plymouth, Chatham and Sheerneſs, for the ordinary guards of marines to be doubled in the ſeveral Dock Yards.

"Thoſe who have connexions with government want to ſtifle the affair, and ſeem to make light of the damage the nation ſuſtains by it, and that it has done no more than what can be repaired; however, we are not to be deceived by their fallacious arguments; we are ſenſible that the fineſt Dock Yard in England, or perhaps in the whole world, is made uſeleſs for a length of time, beſides deſtroying a vaſt quantity of maſts, ſails, ropes, &c. &c. which God knows how ſoon we may want. I hope they will at the other dock yards be more careful than they have been there.

" A great perſonage arrived here, it is ſaid to view the ruins: I hope he has no ill deſign upon our wives and daughters; if he has, I believe he'll be diſappointed, as we are determined to keep them within doors till his departure.—People do not pay him that reſpect which is due to him, conſidering his high ſtation."

A great number of labourers and artificers of all kinds, are already ſet out for Portſmouth in expection of advanced wages in order to aſſiſt in clearing the rubbiſh and rebuilding the ſtore-houſes.

By the Duke of Cumberland Packet, Capt Goodrich, and the Ship New-York, Capt Haight, arrived at New-York in 7 Weeks from London; and the Capts. Fellows and White, arrived at Boſton, there is the following Advices.

L O N D O N, July 26.

PARLIAMENT will certainly meet either the 6th or 9th of November next; and the reaſon of this early (though in fact but proper time of) meeting is the neceſſity of bringing the affairs of America under the conſideration of Parliament; for by a reſolution which the council have come to, the Miniſtry can take no farther ſteps without the aid of Parliament. The ſubſtance of the reſolution is, " That the Boſtonians have forfeited their charter;" and therfore, to ſupport this reſolution, Parliament muſt take away the charter.

The Lords of the Admiralty have appointed George Mackenzie, Eſq. Captain of the Arogant, a guardſhip at Portſmouth, to be Commander in Chief of his Majeſty's ſhips and veſſels at Jamaica, in the room of Commodore Forreſt, deceaſed.

It is ſaid that a fleet of ſhips will ſhortly be fitted out, under the command of Admiral Rodney.

Auguſt 6. The laſt blow was given to every branch of Lord N———n's negotiations on Thurſday laſt, at a meeting of certain great Perſonages in a houſe not far from St. James's ſtreet.

The miniſter is determined upon three points, which the public may be aſſured will be carried into execution before he quits the helm. The firſt, to bring the Americans to a ſenſe of their duty; the ſecond, to have Great Britain indemnified in the ampleſt manner, by all foreign powers on whom ſhe has claims of any ſort; and thirdly, to put the marine, in all its departments, upon a footing on which it has never yet been known.

On Saturday laſt his Moſt Gracious Majeſty ſent a gentleman to Mr. Akerman, keeper of Newgate, who paid the ſum of 100l. which was levied by the Houſe of Lords on Mr. Edmunds (late publiſher of the Middleſex Journal, in which was inſerted the Lords Proteſt!) the dues to the Black Rod are ordered not to be paid.—An inſtance of Sovereign clemency in ſuch a caſe is not to be parallelled.

They write from the continent, that the progreſs of Ruſſia, with the late manœuvers of the King of Pruſſia, and the armaments making by moſt of the continentl powers, indicate a general war throughout Europe, which it is feared, will take place much ſooner than is expected.

By the great preparations made of late by the King of Pruſſia, it is thought he will ſoon declare either for the Turks or Ruſſians, having been much ſolicited by both parties.——Whoever he takes part with, it will certainly ſoon put an end to that bloody war.

The following article is copied verbatim from an Iriſh Evening Paper: " Advice is received that the late irregularities in the Morea will coſt the Pacha of that place his Head, or ſomething worſe."

Aug 2. We are aſſured that a great Lawyer talked very confidently to an exalted Perſonage of his reſolution to retire before the approach of winter, having laboured ſufficiently long in the ſervice of his country.

It is ſaid, that an eye has been caſting of late among the gentlemen of the Robe for a ſucceſſor ſufficiently qualified to fill up the vacancy, if a certain reſignation ſhould take place.

It is ſaid General Paoli is ſolliciting the intereſt of his friends to procure him a command in the honorable Eaſt-India Company's ſervice.

We are poſitively aſſured, that the moſt coerſive meaſures are now adopted by the major part of a certain Board, to reduce the refractory Americans to their Duty.

We hear a commercial treaty is concluded bewteen the King of Sardinia and the Empreſs of Ruſſia

Portſmouth, Auguſt 5. The following is an exact catalogue of what we have loſt and ſaved. Burnt—about 150 or 160 cables of different ſizes; all the boatſwins and carpenters ſea ſtores; all the ſtanding rigging for ſhips of fit condition; about 300 tons of hemp; about 300 barrels of tar, pitch, and turpentine, lying and ſpinning houſes, long ſtore houſe, block loſt, new hemp houſes, carpenters houſe & ſhop, with the new maſt-houſes, & all the capital maſts therein contained. Saved—the rigging-houſe, with the ſtores therein, and half the ſails; the lower maſt houſe, with its contents.

Auguſt 8 In laſt night's Gazette a reward of one thouſand pounds, clear of all deductions, is offered by the Lords of the Admiralty, to any perſon as ſhall, within three months, diſcover any of the perſons concerned in ſetting fire to the Store-houſes and Buildings in the Dock yard at Portſmouth; and his Majeſty promiſes his pardon to any of the ſaid offenders (except the perſon who actually ſet the premiſes on fire) who ſhall diſcover any one or more of his other accomplices in the ſaid offence, ſo that he or they may be apprehended and proſecuted to conviction.

It is a certain and a very pleaſing fact, that there are now in the ſtore houſes of Chatham-yard only, utenſils of every kind ſufficient to equip forty capital ſhips of the line.

Orders are now given for more ſhips of war to inveſt the town of Boſton, and for more Regiments, who are to re aſſume their old quarters in it.

An honeſt Jack Tar ſeeing the D— of G——— at Portſmouth ſcribbling with his pencil in a pocketbook cried out, " I wiſh your R—l H——ſs would write me a love-letter to Blue Moll at Wapping.

Wedneſday at Guilford, the Serjeant for ſtabbing Mr. Smith at Weſtminſter bridge, of which wound he afterwards died, was tried before Judge Smythe; the jury found him Guilty, when the Judge ſent them out of court again; and on their return they again found him Guilty; when the Judge again ſent them out of court, and on their return they brought in a Special Verdict.

Laſt Evening we were informed by a melancholly Meſſenger from Newbury Port, that Yeſterday Morning about 6 o'Clock, at that Place, the Reverend & renowned GEORGE WHITEFIELD, Chaplain to the Right Hon the Counteſs of Huntingdon, &c. &c. was, by a ſudden Mandate, ſummoned to the Boſom of his Saviour! He had been preaching in divers Parts of the Province ſince his Arrival from the Southward, with his uſual dilligence and Energy; was now from a Tour to the Province of New Hampſhire on his return to this Town but bing ſeized with a violent Fit of the Aſthma, was in a very ſhort ſpace tranſlated from the Labours of this Life, to the Entertainments of a better.——Of this truly pious and very extraordinary Perſonage little can be ſaid but what every Friend to vital Chriſtianity who has ſet under his Miniſtrations will readily atteſt: In his public Performances thro'out Europe, and on ſeveral different Viſits, in moſt Parts of Britiſh America; he has, for a long Courſe of Years, aſtoniſhed the World as a prodigy of Eloquence and Devotion! With what Frequency and Chearfulneſs did he aſcend the Deſk and Language of his Actions being ever, " Wiſt ye not that I muſt be about my Maſter's Buſineſs"; With what divine Pathos, did he not plead with, and perſuade by the moſt engaging Incitements, the Impenitent Sinner to the Practice of Piety and Virtue! Filled with the Spirit of Grace he ſpoke from the Heart; and with a Fervency of Zeal perhaps unequalled ſince the Days of the Apoſtles, ornamented the celeſtial animations of the Preacher, with the graceful and moſt enticing Charms of Rhetoric and Oratory. From the Pulpit he was unrivalled in the command of an ever crouded and admiring Auditory; nor was he leſs entertaining and inſtructive in his private Converſation and Deportment: Happy in a remarkable Eaſe of Addreſs, willing to communicate, ſtudious to edify, and formed to amuſe; ſuch in more retired Life, was the Character of the Perſon whoſe Departure we lament: and while a peculiar Pleaſantry enlivened and rendered his Company agreeable, his Converſation was ever marked with the great Objects of his purſuit Virtue and Religion! It were to be wiſhed, that the good Impreſſions of his Miniſtry may be long retained; and that the riſing Generation, like their pious Anceſters, may catch a Spark of that aetherial Flame which burnt with ſuch diſtinguiſhed Luſtre, in the Sentiment and Practice of this faithful Servant of the Moſt High GOD.

Early on Monday Morning laſt a Number of Gentlemen ſet out from hence for Newbury Port, in order to convey the Corpſe of the Rev'd Mr. Whitefield, to this Town, to be here interred: The Gentlemen are not yet returned; and we hear the People at Newbury Port would not allow the Corpſe to be brought away, they having prepared a Brick Tomb under the Preſbyterian Meeting Houſe: His Funeral was attended by a great Concourſe of People, on Tueſday Afternoon;——We have received no Particulars thereof, nor of his Death; only that having Preached the Day before in an open Field at Saliſbury, arrived at Newbury Port that Evening;—about Two o'Clock he got up and dreſſed himſelf, complained of his Illneſs, and went to Prayer with the Gentlemen who accompanies him;—then lay on the Bed with his Cloaths on, and at 4 o'Clock, got up and ſaid he was near his End, and before the Rev'd Mr. Parſons could be called, he fainted and died.

In the Engliſh Papers are a Number of Letters from Boſton, containing the debates at Faneuil Hall, relative to Non Importation, Reports of Committees &c with many bitter and cruel reflections on the Inhabitants of the Town, who have ſuffered moſt of any Colony by the Agreement: The adherence to the Agreement in June laſt, and the Philadelphians and New Yorkers joining therein, gave a moſt ſenſible Alarm to the People in England, and made even the Enemies of America do Juſtice to the Public Virtue and Patriotiſm of its Inhabitants which they allow is unparrallelled in Modern Times:——But how will they be affected when the Orders arrive from New York for Goods; which doubtleſs would be in a Week after Capt. White failed! Certainly they will be ſurprized.

The Honorable Houſe of Repreſentatives on Thurſday laſt appointed a Committe of nine Members of which the Speaker was Chairman, to take under conſideration his Honor's Speech delivered that Morning, who the next Day reported, that it was for the Intereſt of the Province ſtill to adhere to their former Reſolution not to proceed to the public Buſineſs. It was then moved and ordered that the Conſideration of the Report be poſtponed till Wedneſday next, and that in the mean time Expreſſes be ſent to call in the abſent Members.——On Saturday the Houſe voted to obſerve Wedneſday next as a day of Prayer, to ſeek the Direction and favour of Almighty GOD, and ſent the Vote to the Council Board, where it was unanimouſly concurred.

We hear, that on, or about the 23d ult a great number of the Inhabitants of the Province of Pennſylvania, beſet the Fort at Wyoming, on the Suſquehannah, in the Night, while the People in the Fort were aſleep cut and wounded many of them and took Poſſeſſion of the Garriſon; but that no lives were loſt.——Theſe are all the Particulars which we have heard.

We hear, that three of the Whalemen, fitted out at Middletown, laſt Spring are returned, having had very bad Succeſs.

H A R T F O R D, October 9.

We have advice from Springfield, that on Monday the firſt inſtant, one William Shaw of Palmer, was preſented before the Superior Court of Aſſize and general Goal delivery, then ſitting at ſaid Springfield, upon an indictment for the murder of one Edward Eaſt, of Barnets-Town: and that after a full & lengthy hearing of the evidences & pleadings, both on the part of the crown & the priſoner, the jury by their verdict declared the priſoner to be guilty; whereupon the ſentence of death was paſſed upon him; which we hear is to be executed on the 8th day of next month.

At the ſame time alſo, one George French, (as he call'd himſelf) a tranſient perſon was preſented and tried for his life; ſuppoſed to be acceſſory to ſaid murder; but there not appearing ſufficient evidence to the jury of his guilt, (after a ſecond conſideration) they returned a verdict in his favour.

N. B. The above murder was committed in the county goal, as lately mentioned in this paper.

We hear from Farmington, that on information that one of their inhabitants had purchaſed a box of Glaſs contrary to the reſolution come into by the inhabitants of ſaid town, heretofore publiſhed in this paper, and afterwards by the gentlemen merchants and landholders of this colony at New-Haven convened. The committee of inſpection, appointed by ſaid town, immediately acquainted the purchaſer aforeſaid, of the intelligence they had received, and endeavoured to lay before him the evil tendency of ſuch conduct and perſuade him not to make uſe of ſaid glaſs, but conſent to have it ſtored on good ſecurity, 'till the revenue acts impoſing duties on tea, &c. ſhould be totally repealed, or a general importation take place; but all was to no purpoſe.——Whereupon, the committee aforeſaid acquainted as many of the inhabitants of ſaid town as they could, of the whole of ſaid affair, and a large number of the reſpectable inhabitants who had the cauſe of liberty near their hearts, went to the ſaid purchaſer, and endeavoured by rational arguments to convince him of his error, and to perſuade him to comply with the advice of the committee aforeſaid; with all informing him, in caſe he ſhould refuſe, of the neceſſity they ſhould feel themſelves under of obliging him to ſubmit to ſo reaſonable a propoſal.——Whereupon he with ſeeming chearfulneſs, ſubmitted to their propoſals, and conſented it ſhould be ſtored as above. And accordingly they immediately Stored it, and each retired to his own buſineſs without the leaſt diſorder, and the whole from the beginning, was conducted with decorum, and the greateſt veneration to good order.

WHEREAS we have received Accounts from our ſettlers on the Suſquehannah Purchaſe, of the moſt intereſting Nature, both with reſpect to ſaid Settlers, and ſaid Company, as alſo Accounts of Importance from Great-Britain relative to ſaid Purchaſe.

THESE ARE THEREFORE, to warn the Proprietors of the Suſquehannah Purchaſe to meet at the Court-Houſe in Windham, on the Seventeenth Day of October Inſtant, to take ſaid Matters into Conſideration, and act thereon as ſhall be thought beſt.

Sublime

An ODE to DELIA.

WHILE you enjoy bleſt Solitudes Repoſe,
And court the Muſes in the lonely Grove.
Read Milton, Pope, with the great Addiſon ;
And turn the Volumes of immortal Young.
And graſp Creation in your gen'rous Arms.
Let others dote on Riches, Honor, Fame,
Illuſtrious blood, and an immortal Name.
By which they wound a fickle foolish Heart,
Your Native Bloom put out their borrow'd Rays,
Like Sol's bright Beams the Hoſt of twinkling Stars.
Your Smiles wou'd ſmooth my Life's uneven Way,
Turn Midnight Darkneſs to the Blaze of Day.
Make horrid Winter bloſſom into Spring,
And fading Autumn, endleſs Summer bring.
When melancholy Thoughts poſſeſs my Soul,
Diſpel the Gloom before the nectar'd Bowl.
E'en in the Pangs of agonizing Death,
Make my Pulſe beat, my Lungs receive new Breath,
My Cheeks to glow with never fading Health.
Might I, with you dwell in connubial Bliſs,
I ne'er ſhou'd long for Angels happineſs ;
Since Marriage rites are ne'er perform'd above,
Therefore immortal, grant this life, great Jove.

The following is an Abſtract of a Letter to a Merchant in New York, from his friend in London, whoſe Veracity and Candour, cannot be doubted.

"— Am ſorry to find Parties run ſo high amongſt you. Things muſt be got to a ſad Pitch indeed, to produce ſuch Threats——I think the Manner of your Proceedings have been very modeſt and juſtifiable, and becoming a People that Loves Peace and Harmony.—I am ſorry you ſtill continue in the Mind to conſult the People of Boſton, who act treacherouſly by you : In my Opinion they are not worthy of your Notice : We have a late Inſtance of their Behaviour ; they pretended to return a ſhip with all the cargo ſhe took from hence, which was very large, but when ſhe had reported at the cuſtom houſe, and the goods landed, the ſearchers coming to examine them, they found in the trunks reported to be haberdaſhery, and various other Goods, Brick Bats and Straw tied up, and in ſome other Packages, Hams, and other Trumpery, to make the Packages ſeem full. Now if ſuch a deceitful People as theſe, are worthy to be conſulted, I leave you to judge. You may depend on the Truth of this : One of my Neighbours, a Man of good Credit and Reputation, was at the Cuſtom-Houſe and ſaw the Brick Bats, Straw, Hams, &c. in the Packages.——There are divers Ships now gone and going to Boſton, with large Quantities of Goods ——That whilſt you are contending and conſulting them, they are running away with your Trade."

Query, Can Carolina, Philadelphia, Albany, New-Brunſwick, Woodbridge or New Haven &c. &c. &c ſtill retain a deſire to hold an Union with thoſe Gentlemen, tho' they promiſe ever ſo great an Union in Deceit ? Can you ſtill reſolve and proteſt againſt the Merchants in New-York who maintained their Agreement inviolate, until they were convinced of the Propriety of an Alteration, and then acted bold and upright publickly declaring to the world their Intentions,——like honeſt Men.

Yeſterday a quantity of ſailmakers, boatſwains, and carpenters ſtores were ſhipt from Woolwitch yard, on board a tranſport for Portſmouth.

The laſt fire in Portſmouth Dock happened on the 3d of July, 1760, about one in the morning. The loſs was computed at about 100 000l.

As the fire at Portſmouth, has brought on the tapis the fate of Mr. Gordon, lately executed at Breſt, it may not be improper to give ſome account of that matter, of which ſo much has been publiſhed without foundation.

This young man was Gordon, of Biderne, Jun. in the North of Scotland, of an ancient family, and an eſtate of about 500l. per annum. In his peregrination through France, being in the retinue of the Duke of Gordon, the chief of his name, he declared his curioſity to viſit Breſt, and other ſea ports of France : He had diſcovered a genius for drawing, and was but juſt initiated in the art, wherever he came he took out his pencil, and at Breſt he could not refrain. He had not got within the fortifications, for no Engliſhman in France is allowed that privilege, he was only in the town and had a view of the harbour, the profile of which he began to ſketch out. Unfortunately for him he was obſerved, ſeized, tried, and condemned ; the Duke of Gordon was applied to in his favour, and that Nobleman was earneſt in his ſolicitation to procure him a pardon, and prevailed ſo far, that the ſentence was changed into perpetual impriſonment in Languedoc ; which being intimated to Mr. Gordon, he refuſed the proffer, and inſiſted to have his cauſe tried before the Parliment of Paris, by way of appeal ; which, when his Judges heard, and an unfavourable report was made of him, and he was beheaded by the common executioner, without being heard.

As ſoon as the news of the fire at Portſmouth was received at the houſe of the French and Spaniſh Embaſſadors, an account was immediately diſpatched by Couriers to their reſpective Courts.

The Connecticut COURANT.

THERE C——ls, ſince the 15th of this month, have been held on American affairs. Many members were of opinion, that his Majeſty, with the advice of his Privy council, was ſufficiently empowered to ſuppreſs the tumults in America in what manner he thought proper ; but a cautious member, of the law, obſerved, that in the preſent ſituation of affairs they cou'd not act too prudently, and therefore it was ſafer to leave the manner of quelling them to the Parliament, as by that means it would be the action of the whole nation : which opinion, we hear, was adopted.

It was ſaid on Monday night, with the greateſt confidence, and bets were laid upon it, that the leading men in the Boſton committee would pay a viſit to the Britiſh capital in leſs than three months.

Aug. 3. Yeſterday a full board of Treaſury was held, at the breaking up of which an expreſs was ſent to Lord North at North Rod, who, to the ſurpriſe of many did not appear yeſterday at St. James's.

A conſiderable number of Quakers, moſt of whom were females, attended the Levee at St. James's yeſterday, and had the honour of ſeeing their Majeſties, by whom they were noticed with the moſt gracious marks of attention.

Aug. 6. Thomas Bradſhaw, Eſq; one of the joint Secretaries to the Treaſury, will certainly reſign in a few days ; and ——Robinſon, private Secretary to Lord North, be appointed in his room. Mr. Robinſon already tranſacts the principal part of the Treaſury buſineſs.

A board of Trade and Plantations will be held to morrow.

His Majeſty ſeldom lies in bed after five o'clock, and moſt mornings either rides on horſeback, or walks ſeveral miles before breakfaſt.

Aug. 8. We are aſſured that the report of an accommodation having taken place between the miniſtry and the minority, is not true.

Yeſterday a Board of Treaſury was held, at the breaking up of which, an expreſs was diſpatched to Lord North, at Dillington, in Somerſetſhire, in conſequence of which he is expected in town this day.

The report of Lord Northington's being ſent for to town to uſe his endeavour to bring about a coalition of parties, and that the Seals were offered to his Lordſhip and refuſed, is totally void of the leaſt foundation. The true reaſon of his Lordſhip's coming to town was to purchaſe a houſe, and furniſh it for the reception of Lady Northington, in caſe of his Lordſhip's death, as his Lordſhip has at preſent no town houſe.

The report of a coalition of parties is entirely falſe and groundleſs ; and we are aſſured no union will ever take place between the preſent contending parties, the gentlemen in oppoſition have frequently declared, that they will never come into power again, unleſs every man who has attached himſelf to the preſent adminiſtration be diſmiſſed from his employment.

Lord N—— has received a certain aſſurance of the certain poſſeſſion of all his honours and emoluments—till the 10 of November next at leaſt.

Paſſed by the Iſle of Wight, for the River, the Norfolk Boggin, from the Eaſt Indies, who brought advice of the Lord Holland, Narin, being loſt in Bengal River, and the whole crew being drowned, except twenty three ; amongſt the latter is the Captain and the third Mate.

Entered in from Boſton, the Leviathan, Jenkins.

From New England, the London, Hazel.

From No. America, the John & Eſther, Hodgſon.

We are authorized to inform the public, that Mr. Robinſon has not as yet done any part of the buſineſs of the Treaſury whatſoever.

Briſtol Aug 4. Saturday laſt died at his lodgings at Clifton, Robert Dinwiddie, Eſq; aged upwards of 80 many years Lieutenant Governor of Virginia, which office he ſome time ſince quitted on account of his years, with the higheſt reputation.

Many reſpectable Freeholders and Inhabitants of this City and Country, juſtly alarmed at the Reſolutions formed by a number of the Dry Good Importers on Thurſday laſt at Davenport's Tavern, which reflect diſhonour on this City and Country, to meet in the State-houſe this afternoon, at 3 o'clock, to conſider and determine what is proper to be done to vindicate the Honour of this City, and to avert the Danger that threatens their Country.

WHEREAS the Parliament of Great Britain has of late claimed a Power of making Laws to bind the Colonies in all caſes whatſoever, and in conſequence of that claim, and to eſtabliſh a Precedent, has paſſed an Act, impoſing Duties on Tea, &c. imported into America, for the expreſs purpoſe of raiſing a Revenue in America, and have ordered the Money ariſing from thoſe Duties to be applied to "defray the Charge of the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, and the Support of Civil Government, in ſuch Provinces where they ſhall be found neceſſary, and towards the further defraying, protecting and ſecuring his Majeſty's Dominions in America." And whereas this Claim and Precedent are not only deſtructive of Property (as no Man can be ſaid to have a Property in that, which another may, as of Right, give and grant without his Conſent) but have a manifeſt Tendency to reduce Americans to the moſt abject Slavery can be more compleat, more miſerable, more diſgraceful, than that of a People where Juſtice is adminiſtered, carried on, and a ſtanding Army maintained, at Expence of the People, and yet without the leaſt Dependance upon them ? And whereas the carrying this Plan into execution tends to render our aſſemblies uſeleſs, which are our beſt Bulwark againſt arbitrary Power ; and in proſecution of the plan of ſubjugating the Colonies, a Board of Commiſſioners is eſtabliſhed in America, with unbounded and uncontroulable powers, for the better collecting the duties that are, or may be impoſed upon us, without our Conſent ; the Juriſdiction of Admiralty courts (which are unfriendly to Liberty) is extended and enlarged in America ; a Power arrogated of ſuperſeding and diſpenſing with Acts of Aſſembly; which have received the Royal confirmation, in order to increaſe the Fees of Crown Officers ; and perſons ſuſpected of Treaſons, and Miſpriſions of Treaſon, are threatened to be dragged from hence, and tried in England, contrary to law, and the Principles of the Engliſh Conſtitution ; and a ſtanding Army is kept up in time of profound Peace, independent of any Authority in the Colonies :

We, therefore, the GRAND JURY for the city and county of Philadelphia, think it our duty to declare, that we conſider ourſelves as FREEMEN, and entitled to all the rights and privileges of free-born Britiſh ſubjects.——"That it is inſeparably eſſential to a people, and the undoubted right of Engliſhmen, that no tax be impoſed upon them, but with their own conſent given perſonally or by their repreſentatives. That courts of juſtice are eſtabliſhed for the trial of all crimes committed within this province ; and that no perſon is, legally and conſiſtent with the principles of liberty and the Engliſh conſtitution, amenable before any court but of this Province, for any crimes committed within it."——And therefore leſt the alteration, which a majority of the importers of Britiſh merchandize in this city, who met at Davenport's tavern, on Thurſday the 20th inſtant, have made in the non importation agreement, may be conſtrued into an acquieſcence of the people in the parliament's claim of right to tax the colonies, in order to vindicate our juſt and inherent rights, we declare and reſolve :

1ſt. That we will, as far as in us lies, promote a union with the other colonies, and concur with them in any meaſures that may be deemed prudent and practicable, conſiſtent with the duty we owe to our King in endeavouring to procure a full redreſs of all our grievances, and a full enjoyment of Engliſh and conſtitutional liberty.

2d. That we will unite with our fellow ſubjects in diſcountenancing the uſe of Britiſh manufactures, and the conſumption of Britiſh merchandize, until the Parliament's claim of right to tax the colonies is given up, the act impoſing duties on tea, is repealed ; the juriſdiction and power of the Admiralty courts is reſtricted ; the Board of Commiſſioners diſſolved, and the ſtanding army removed, or put under the direction of the civil authority, ſo as not to be dangerous to the liberty of the people.

3d. That we will abſtain from the uſe of all ſuch articles of luxury imported from Great Britain, as ſhall hereafter be agreed to by our fellow ſubjects in this province.

By order of the Grand Jury,

Philadelphia, Sept. 24. John Gibſon, Foreman.

Captain Gregory, from Cadiz informs us, it was reported there, that four Ruſſian Men of War were lately loſt on ſome of the Iſlands in the Archipelago, by running aſhore in the night.

By Capt. Calef and Capt. Davies, arrived here from LONDON, we have the following Advices ;

LONDON, Auguſt 17. 1770.

ACCOUNTS of two important Victories gained lately by the Ruſſians over the Turks, by Sea and Land.

THE Ruſſians were ſo lucky as to make good their way into the Archipelago much ſooner than was expected, as the uſual courſe of the winds could not be depended on to carry them ſooner than September. They were not, however, far advanced into the ſea, when, on the 15th of July, being nineteen ſhips commanded by Admiral Elphinſton, they fell in with the Turkiſh fleet, conſiſting of twenty-three ſhips, commanded by Zaffier Bey. They engaged each other with the appearance of great ardour on both ſides, and after an obſtinate engagement, the Turks were obliged to yield the victory ; and thoſe of their veſſels which remained in a condition to effect it, ſaved themſelves by flight. It is ſuppoſed the Turkiſh Admiral Zaffier Bey, was very near being taken, as the veſſel ſunk in which he was preſumed to be, as the commander was ſeen to get out of her, with great difficulty, into a boat.

The loſs of the Turks, in the above mentioned engagement, is three ſhips taken by the Ruſſians 2 ſunk, and ſeveral others ſo diſabled, in appearance, as to be in great danger of foundering before they could reach any port ; the reſt were diſperſed, moſt of them in a ſhattered condition. The Ruſſians on their part, received very inconſiderable damage. The Ruſſian fleet will not at preſent endeavour to force its paſſage to Conſtantinople, on account of the plague being in that city and neighbourhood ; but while it waits a more favourable ſeaſon, it will find important work, in deſtroying the remainder of the Turkiſh marine in thoſe ſeas, in taking the principal iſlands in the Archipelago, in cutting off ſupply of proviſions from Conſtantinople.

The Ruſſians had entirely evacuated the Morea before their fleet paſſed up the Archipelago, having occaſion for all their forces aboard, and having anſwered their intended purpoſe, landing part of them, for making an embarraſſing diverſion to the arms of the Grand Signior.

By an expreſs which arrived by way of Germany, and through Holland, certain and authentic advice is brought of a moſt ſignal and total victory of the Ruſſians over the principal army of the Turks, on the 15th of July.

Extract of a Letter of Count Romanzoff's, dated July the 19th, from the enemy's camp upon the Pruth, on the other ſide of the river Larga.

" At the defeat of the enemy on the 18th of June, upon the eminences leading towards Bender, our army purſued and came up with them on the 15th of July, when the Turks had fortified their army upon a very ſteep mountain on the other ſide of the river Larga. The enemy poured down upon us his beſt cavalry, to the amount of 20,000 men, which however were repulſed with very great loſs.

" As I had intelligence that the Turkiſh army, conſiſting of 80 000 men, was commanded by Caplan Hiry Kan, of the Crimea, who had under him three of the moſt eminent Baſhaws, I reſolved to come to a deciſive engagement with him ; which began on the 15th of July, and ended in a moſt compleat victory on our ſide : for as ſoon as our men had gained the ſummit of the mountain, they drove the enemy out of our entrenchments ſucceſſively, till they fled in the utmoſt confuſion, and abandoned to us their whole extenſive camp, and an immenſe quantity of all ſorts of ammunition and proviſions, together with 30 pieces of fine braſs cannon, and a great number of colours.

" As the purſuit of the enemy by our troops engroſſes all my time at preſent, I am not able to ſend you the particulars of this glorious action, as to the number of the ſlain, priſoners, and trophies, &c till the next opportunity."

The following account is brought by the laſt letters from Leghorn : ' The progreſs of the Ruſſian arms in the Morea, ' aſtoniſhes all that hear of it. ——— The Empreſs of ' Ruſſia is already become miſtreſs of the greateſt part of ' the Peloponneſus, and of ſeveral ports, and with a handful of her troops, joined by ſome thouſand Greeks, ſhe is ' giving law to a power which has hitherto been conſidered as one of the moſt reſpectable in Europe.'

HARTFORD, October 16.

On Thurſday laſt died at Middletown, Capt. David Webb, of the Small Pox, taken in New York, a ſhort Time ſince. He was a Gentleman who had, as Maſter of a Veſſel, long uſed the Weſt-India Trade, and by thus ſuddenly being cut off from a very numerous Family of young children, and favourable Proſpects in life, at once holds [illegible] the uſeful Leſſons of being always ready, and ſtrongly urges thoſe in that courſe of Life in particular, to avoid ſo peſtilential a Diſeaſe, by embracing the favourable Remedy of Inoculation, which a kind Providence, in Mercy to Mankind, has granted, in counterpoiſe to the Malignity of this terrible Diſorder.

PHILADELPHIA, Octo. 8

On Saturday ſe'nnight ſailed the Ship London Packet captain Cook, for London, by which Veſſel the merchants concerned in the Britiſh Trade, have forwarded their Orders for all ſorts of goods from Great Britain, except teas, and ſuch other Articles as are or may be ſubject to duties for the Purpoſe of raiſing an American revenue ; conſiſtent with the ſalutary alteration made on the 20th ult. in the non importation agreement, by a conſiderable number of the ſubſcribers thereto—And it is not doubted that every true friend to the liberties of America, will diſcountenance the importation of dutied articles from England, and thereby defeat the machinations of our enemies.

BOSTON, October 11, 1770.

THE Honorable Houſe of Repreſentatives on Thurſday laſt proceeded to the conſideration of the report of the committee appointed to conſider his Honors ſpeech to both houſes ; the Subſtance of which Report was, that it was for the intereſt of the province that the houſe ſtill adhere to their former reſolution not to proceed to the public Buſineſs. After ſome Debate upon the Queſtion, Whether to accept this Report, it was moved that the further conſideration of it be refer'd, and that in the mean Time a committee be appointed to prepare a Meſſage to the Lieutenant Governor, praying that his Honor would be pleaſed to explain a certain Paſſage in his Speech ; and alſo that he would inform the Houſe whether he had received any late inſtructions with reſpect to the Continuance of the Aſſembly out the town of Boſton, and Mr. Hancock, Mr. John Adams, Mr. Ingerſol, Mr. Samuel Adams and capt. Fuller were appointed accordingly.

At a Meeting of the Merchants in this Town at the Britiſh coffee houſe, it was unanimouſly Voted to alter the Non Importation Agreement, and to open the Importation of Goods from Great Britain, except Teas, and ſuch other Articles as are, or may be ſubject to Duties for the Purpoſe raiſing of a Revenue in America.

DARTMOUTH COLLEGE, in Hanover, Oct. 11, 1770.

WHEREAS a meeting of the honorable corporation of Dartmouth College, was appointed to be on this day in this place, but by ſome means the advertiſement of the ſame, which was ſent to be publiſhed in the New-Hampſhire Gazette miſcarried, which makes another appointment neceſſary.

THESE are therefore to notify all concerned, that a meeting of ſaid Corporation is now appointed to be held at the houſe of Mr. Wyman, innholder in Keen, on monday the 22d inſtant, at nine o'clock in the forenoon.

By ELEAZER WHEELOCK,
Preſident of ſaid College.

LONDON.

May 7. It was extremely ſhocking Yeſterday, to ſee no leſs than five Carts conveying Malefactors, (all of them young Men, ſome not above ſeventeen or eighteen) to the fatal Spot, where they ſuffered an ignominious Death. One Charles Sparks behaved in a very hardened Manner at the Gallows, refuſing to pray with the Clergymen, and thinking the Executioner did not preform his Office dexterouſly, told him he was not fit to hang a Dog, and much leſs a Man. Two well dreſſed young Men were detected in picking Pockets while the Malefactors were putting in Cart; and one Gentleman had his Pocket picked of a Gold Watch.

Charles Stephens, Henry Holyoake, and Henry Hughes, for the wilful murder of John Shaw, in the City New Road, about 200 yards from the Angel Inn, when attacked with an intent to rob, but he making a vigorous reſiſtance with a large knife, Holyoake and Hughes retired, and Stephens advancing with a blunderbuſs, diſcharged it into his belly, which brought out his bowels; which, holding in his hands, he ran to the Angel Inn for help. Stephens was convicted as perpetrator of the murder, and the other two of being preſent aiding, abetting, and comforting him therein.

Yeſterday morning Charles Stephens, Henry Holyoake, and Henry Hughes, were executed purſuant to their ſentence, at Tyburn, and afterwards carried to Surgeons-Hall for diſſection; the two latter behaved very penitently, and declared that Stephens had bro't them to that courſe of life.

They were all young, the eldeſt of them ſeemingly not above twenty. Holyoake had a good character given of him by ſeveral gentlemen of the navy on Friday at the Old Bailey, whom he ſerved in capacity of ſteward, but Stephens ſhewed a hardened ſpirit during the whole trial; and after hearing a ſentence which affected the whole audience, he flung himſelf out of Court with an indifference that ſhocked every breaſt but his own, toſſing up his handkerchief in the form of a ball and playing with it as he paſſed through the crowd.

To the PRINTER.

And hang the wretch that Juryman may dine.
POPE.

HAVING ſeen a letter in your paper, wherein the author very juſtly laments, that three hundred and thirty perſons were laſt ſeſſions tried at the Old Bailey, many of whom were condemned to death, and the greateſt part of the remainder to tranſportation; it is indeed a moſt melancholy circumſtance to ſee ſuch numbers every ſix weeks dragged to execution, from which we muſt conclude, that either our people, from principle, are more abandoned than thoſe of the other nations of Europe, or that our laws are founded in injuſtice; the latter I believe, ſince, if natural juſtice only had taken place, there would long ſince have been no cauſe for the above complaint.

Juſtice, Sir, is to indemnify the perſon injured; a theif or a robber, therefore, ought to repay me with damages what I have ſuffered; and, for want of ability to do this, he might be condemned to work in the King's yards, or in coal or tin mines for a limited time, and he ſhould be rendered infamous by being pilloried and whipped; for a ſecond offence to be condemned to hard labour for life. This is the practice in Holland, where they raſp logwood, &c the good effect of which is, that ſometimes there is not a perſon put to death in that populous country by the hands of juſtice in twelve months It is the ſame in Connecticut in N. England which contains above half as many inhabitants as this vaſt metropolis, but in which no perſon ever yet loſt his life by the law; for murder was never yet committed in it, tho' it has been ſettled above 130 years; for ſtealing, the offender is condemned to be drummed and whipped about the town, with part of the ſtolen goods faſtened on him; he is to pay four fold, or ſold by the magiſtrates to the higheſt bidder for a limited time.——This only is juſtice.

Will any man ſay, that, becauſe a perſon has forgot himſelf ſo far as to invade his neighbour's property, he ought to be hanged? Surely it is inadequate to his crime! Life, being the moſt precious property, ought not to be taken away for ten ſhillings, ten pounds, or ten thouſand pounds; 'tis injuſtice whenever it is done; and I think I may venture to ſay, that, as it is contrary to the laws of nature, it is murder. Public executions, Sir, are meant as examples, to deter others from the like crimes; but have our executions ſuch effects?——Every one knows to the contrary.

In theſe remarks I do not mean to be an advocate for murder; ſuch perſons ſhould be puniſhed with death, for his crime is infinitely greater than the crime of him who invades my property. In ſhort, I think juſtice and humanity cry aloud, that we ſhould withdraw the ſeverity of our law to the latter offenders; for it is a reproach to this kingdom, that more people are put to death in it by the laws, than in all the kingdoms of Europe beſides; our people muſt, therefore, be worſe in their principles, or our laws unjuſt; beſides ſuch frequent condemnations render them very familiar to Old Bailey Jurors, who, according to my motto, often haſten through their verdict in order go to dinner.

It may perhaps be ſaid, that tranſportation carries with it no ſeverity; I admit it; but I am ſure it is bad policy; for thoſe perſons, being mechanics, carry our arts and the knowledge of manufactures to the colonies, to the great prejudice of this country. If theſe crude thoughts ſhould be read by any member of parliament, and he ſhould be thereby led to ſtep forward in the cauſe of humanity, by bringing in a bill to reform our criminal laws, he may depend he will thereby ſecure to himſelf immortal honour, in being inſtrumental to men's living out the days which God and Nature deſigned them.

BOSTON.

SINCE our laſt we are favoured with a few particulars of the Death and Funeral of the late Rev'd and pious Mr. WHITEFIELD, which we doubt not will be acceptable to our Readers.

On the Morning he died, viz. the 1ſt of laſt Month, (having preached the preceeding Day in the open Field at Exeter, by Reaſon of the Meeting Houſe not containing half the People that came to hear him) he aroſe from his Bed about 3 o'Clock, and as his conſtant Manner was, immediately addreſſed himſelf to Heaven, in a pathetic and devout Prayer, Mr. Smith his Companion being the only Perſon then preſent, after this, ſetting awhile on his Bed, between 4 and 5 he aroſe a ſecond Time, complained of his Aſthma, found himſelf much ſtreightened for Breath, opened the Windows, walked ſeveral Times acroſs the Chamber, in great Diſtreſs, paſſed into the Entry, opening a Window there, but could get no Relief; ſaid to Mr. Smith, I am going, and being led by that Gentleman to a Chair, without a Struggle fell aſleep in Jeſus!——

The News of this melancholy Event being, as we mentioned in our laſt, brought to this Town, a reſpectable Number of Gentlemen of the South Church ſet out for Newbury Port with a view of bringing the Corps here for interment, knowing it to be Mr. Whitefield's deſire, in Caſe he ſhould die at or near Boſton, to be buried among his Friends there, inſomuch as to requeſt the favour of a particular Tomb: But to the Surprize of theſe Gentlemen upon Application for [illegible] to the Rev'd Mr. Parſons, at whoſe Houſe he died, they were totally defeated of their intended Compliance with Mr. Whitefield's Deſire; Mr Parſons abſolutely refuſing to permit the Corps being buried but from his own Houſe, and before his own Pulpit! and this tho' Mr. Smith, the Companion of Mr. Whitefield in his Life, and rightful Guardian of the Body, if there was any, intimated his Knowledge of Mr. Whitefield's Deſire to be buried at Boſton, and alledging that he could not anſwer any other Diſpoſal of it, to his own Conſcience, or to Mr. Whitefield's Friends at Home; and notwithſtanding to remove any further Objections, the Committee of the South Church conſented that all the honorary Ceremonies of Sepultre, ſhould be paid, by any who might think fit to attend, in eſcorting the Body from Newbury Port to the confines of the adjoining Town.

The Committee finding no Arguments would prevail on Mr. Parſons, and being informed that if they removed the Corps they muſt do it by an Officer, and in the way of the Law, thought proper, after attending the Funeral, to return; and that celebrated and ever memorable perſonage, the Reverend Mr. GEORGE WHITEFIELD, now lies buried in the Meeting Houſe at Newbury Port, of which the Rev'd Mr. Parſons is Paſtor; within the Bounds of New England, and next to Boſton, in one of the moſt capital Towns in the Province of Maſſachuſetts Bay.

It is remarkable, that the day Preceding Mr. Whitefield's Death, upon going to out preach, he expreſſed himſelf deſirous, God willing, that the might finiſh his Work with that Day.

Funeral Sermons were preached Yeſterday in many Churches in this Town, on Account of the Death of the Rev. Mr. Whitefield.

We hear form Portſmouth in New Hampſhire, that laſt Tueſday all the Bells in the town were tolled from Eleven o'clock, till near ſun ſet, at three different Times, on the mournful Occaſion of Mr. Whitefields being interr'd at Newbury Port.

Mr. WHITEFIELD always appeared to be a truly pious and very extraordinary Perſonage, both in his public performances throughout Europe, and in his different viſits to moſt parts of Britiſh America.——It may be ſaid, that he has for a long courſe of years aſtoniſhed the world as a prodigy of eloquence and devotion! it is queſtionable whether any one ſince the days of the Apoſtles, or even they, had more hearers, he having delivered above ſeventeen thouſand Diſcourſes, to five, ten, fifteen, & twenty thouſand perſons at a time both in Europe & America.——He kept up his zeal and popularity to the laſt diſcourſe which he delivered the day before his death to an audience of at leaſt ſix thouſand in the open air, and tho' he was then much troubled with the Aſthma, yet the charms of his rhetoric & oratory were ſurprizing.——He always appear'd to ſpeak from the heart; and as to his fervency and zeal perhaps equalled by none.——From the pulpit he was unrivalled in the command of an ever crowded and admiring auditory; and in private converſation facetious, agreeable, pleaſant and inſtructing.——And while a peculiar pleaſure enliven'd & render'd his company agreeable, his converſation was ever marked with the great object of his purſuit, Virtue and Religion! He ſeemed to have a clear view of the entertainments of another life; and would commonly converſe ſo familiarly of death, as tho' he was a kind friend he was waiting for, and even long'd to receive the ſummons; and was unwilling to tarry here any longer than he could be ſerviceable to mankind——Such was the character of the Perſon whoſe departure we lament.——

LONDON.

Private letters from Paris adviſe, that ſeveral letters have been received there from Liſbon, which give an account, that on the 19th of laſt month the King of Portugal iſſued an ordinance, which enjoined all the inhabitants of Liſbon, on pain of death, to their houſes at the firing of a gun at a certain hour, and not ſtir out again till another gun ſhould be fired, the time for which was likewiſe appointed. The King's orders were very punctually obſerved, but when the people were at liberty to go abroad again, they were very curious to know the reaſon of their confinement; ſome of them accordingly repaired to the place of public execution, where they found thirty three monks hanged, fifteen gentlemen beheaded, and one man quartered. Theſe unhappy wretches had conſpired againſt the King their maſter, and one of them had even made an attempt againſt his life.

July 27. Yeſterday the celebrated General Paoli was at Court, and had an audience of his Majeſty, by whom he was moſt graciouſly received.

It is ſaid, that though conſiderable conceſſions have been made to Lord Chatham, yet he is reſolved not to take any poſt in the Adminiſtration, till a certain point in the right of election is cleared up.

It is whiſpered, that a Northen Potentate has certainly renewed a demand of a very extraordinary nature on the Britiſh Court.

There now actually ſubſiſts among the Merchants of Boſton in America, a great diviſion relative to the taxations. Many of them are for allowing the importation of Tea, and the reſt are ſtrenuous againſt it; whilſt the mob commit daily riots and diſorders, and pave the way for a military force to compel the town to any terms.

We are told that it has been determined to let the affairs of America remain in their preſent ſituation, (a regiment having been previouſly diſperſed in the environs of Boſton) till the meeting of parliament, and then to have concluſive and effectual meaſures determined on with all poſſible expedition.

From the Gazetteer and New Daily Advertiſer.

OUR able rulers have, at laſt, come to a determination to force ſlavery on the colonies with the ſword.—With this view a ſquadron is to block up the harbour of Boſton, and a land force is to march into the town, under a pretence of ſupporting the Officers of the Revenue in the diſcharge of their duty. The Aſſembly then is to be called to Boſton, and, under the muſquet and ſcrewed bayonet, are to paſs ſuch regulations as G——t pleaſes, or to be diſſolved, diſhonoured, and deprived of their charter. All theſe operations will be laid before a certain obſequious H——e in November, and will moſt certainly meet with their approbation,—Ruunt omnes in ſervitium.

SCÆVOLA.

LONDON, Auguſt 4.

Although Mr Serjeant Glynn, on the late trials of the Printers and Publiſhers of Junius's Letter, inſiſted on the Jury's right to judge on the law as well as the fact, the Counſel on the other ſide, would by no means acknowledge that right. We can, however, quote an authority that will place this important point beyond a doubt; the ſufferage we mean is of Littleton, who in his Tenure, ſect 368, declares, " That if a Jury will take upon them the knowledge of the law, upon the matter, they may." And this is agreed to by Coke in his comment thereupon.

Some years ago an eminent Crown lawyer, in giving his charge to a City Jury, told them, " they were only judges of fact, and not of law;" but as he was ſenſible this doctrine was rather new, he put the following caſe in defence of his poſition: " Suppoſe, Gentlemen, (ſays he) that a perſon was to be indicted for a diſbelief of the Trinity, and that there was a Deiſt on the Jury; we'll admit the fact ſufficiently proved by the declarations of the accuſed, is it to be ſuppoſed that this Deiſt, if he was not bound down merely to evidence, would ever criminate the party? certainly he would not, for diſbelieving the doctrine of the Trinity himſelf, he would never think another culpable for poſſeſſing the ſame ſentiments."——Thus we ſee when prejudice gets the better of law and reaſon, how jeſuitical evaſive become the arguments of the greateſt underſtandings; for as blaſpheming the Trinity is againſt law, a Juryman, though a Deiſt, would be bound, in foro conſcientia, to find a perſon guilty; becauſe the queſtion does not ariſe, what is the private opinion of the Juror, but has the accuſed tranſgreſſed the written laws of the land?"

A Writer, in favour of the Liberty of the Preſs, ſays " How much indebted are we to the late ſenſible, uncorrupt, and uninfluenced juries! Their glorious verdicts have prevented the eſtabliſhment of a ſyſtem of laws, that would have proved fatal not only to the Liberty of the Preſs, but to the art of Printing itſelf. Every improvement, every diſcovery in art or ſcience, would then be unknown. Even deſpotiſm would gain ground by ſilent and inſenſible degrees. The novelty would grow into habit, and the Engliſh, from being the freeſt nation on earth would become the moſt ſervile."

Aug. 2. The following is fact:—The Trained Bands, when exerciſed a few years ſince in Alderſgate-ſtreet, were ſo ignorant as not to know how to turn at the word of command; on which the officer exclaimed, " d—— ye all, face about to Barbican;" which was performed with the utmoſt exactneſs.

A correſpondent has ſent the following liſt of killed and wounded on Tueſday, the day the Orange Regiment of Militia were exerciſed on Bunhill Plains:

2 Dropped down and expired——through fear.

3 Were dangerouſly wounded in the ſhoulder, by preſenting the wrong ends of their muſquets.

5 Loſt their eyes by the bayonets of their comrades. And 15 Who had ſtrayed from their ranks were found in a ditch, dead——drunk.

CHARLES-TOWN, (South Carolina) September 6.

Laſt Week died at the Horſe-Shoe, Mr. John Law, Son to a Lieutenant Governor of the Colony of Connecticut, and lately married to the Widow of Mr. William Glover.

At South-Carolina they are very warm againſt the New-York Revolters, as they ſtile them and it was propoſed that their worthy Committee write to Philadelphia, New Jerſies and Connecticut, exhorting them to withdraw their whole Trade from New-York, particularly their Flax ſeed, the great Staple of the Iriſh Factors at New-York;—alſo to write to the Landholders, Farmers and Mechanicks of Albany and Long-Iſland; to ſtop their intercourſe with New-York, and to take ſuch ſteps as may be moſt proper for recovering the Backſliders: And laſtly, to write to the Landholders and Mechanicks at New York, by all means to CALL THE PEOPLE TOGETHER, exhorting them never to have any Dealings with the Revolters, and oblige them to countermand their Orders for Goods, and to reſhip immediately all ſuch as may arrive. This, they ſay, the People have in their power to do, and no doubt will do, &c. &c.

BOSTON, October 18.

Extract of a Letter from London, dated July 27, 1770.

" YOU may rely on it as matter of fact, that it is voted in C——l, to ſend ſeveral Regiments into Boſton, to ſupport ſuch people there in importing and vending their Goods, as will in oppoſition to the ſenſe of the province, purſue ſuch a Buſineſs; and that a number of ſhips are alſo ordered to inveſt the Town"—If the foregoing be true, it ſhows how important the Non-importation agreement has been, even in the opinion of adminiſtration; how great a pity it is therefore, that the merchants did not continue it, at leaſt one ſeaſon longer. It remains then that the LANDHOLDERS take the matter under their conſideration, and withhold from buying a ſingle article——We can live without the baubles of Britain—If there are no purchaſers there can not long be Importers; we ſhall ſave our money, and ſave our Country.

It is ſaid that the freſh Talk in England of ſending Troops to this Place was occaſion'd by an Affidavit ſent from hence by —— under the immediate direction of * in which the Province in general and ſome reſpectable Perſons in particular have been groſly calumniated—It is certainly high Time that Magiſtrates who take Depoſitions ex parte, to the prejudice not only of private Characters, but of the whole Community, ſhould be diſcountenanced by higher Authority.

We hear the Goods which have been ſtored in this Town by the committee of Inſpection for ſome Time paſt, are now delivering out to their reſpective Owners.

It is ſaid the Rhode-Iſland People exult in that they have adhered to the Non-Importation Agreement longer than any other Colony on the Continent, excepting South-Carolina.

We hear that at the Superior Court held at Taunton laſt Week, one Eliſha Bliſs of Rehoboth was convicted of aſſaulting a young Woman of that Town, and attempting to raviſh her; and was ſentenced to be ſet on the Gallows for the Space of an Hour, with a Rope about his Neck and the other End caſt over the Gallows, to be whipt 20 Stripes under the Gallows, to ſuffer 3 Months Impriſonment, and to be bound for his good Behaviour for ſeven years.

NEW-YORK, October 18.

Saturday Evening laſt, was married, Sir Willliam Draper, Knight of the Bath, to the amiable Miſs Suſanna De-Lancey, Daughter of the Hon. Oliver De Lancey, Eſq; a young Lady endowed with all the Accompliſhments neceſſary to render the Marriage ſtate happy.

Many letters from Leghorn, mention that the Empreſs of Ruſſia was miſtreſs of the Peleponneſus, and of ſeveral ports, &c.

We have juſt now the news of the Arrival of his Excellency, the Right Hon. Earl of Dunmore our Governor, at the Narrows, in his Majeſty's ſhip the Tweed Frigate.

YESTERDAY being Lord's Day, uſually called by the better ſort of People SUNDAY, I took notice with abundance of ſpiritual Conſolation, that the Dawn was uſhered in with the Diſcharge of Cannon from all his Majeſty's Ships in this Harbour and Fort William—Leſt it ſhould be forgot by any, it may be proper to obſerve, that this Day is ſet apart Weekly in Commemoration of the Reſurrection of our bleſſed Saviour; The Thunder of Cannon therefore " early in the Morning when it is yet dark" may be very ſuitable to awaken ſleepy Chriſtians to a ſenſe of Duty; and probably the ſolemn Fiſe and Drum may hereafter as heretofore, be brought in to aid in the religious Exerciſes of the Day—a ſacred Regard to the original Intention in celebrating this day, muſt in the opinion of all pious Perſons ſufficiently atone for the great quantities of Powder which muſt be expended, if continued Weekly—or perhaps it may not be amiſs in order to ſave expence, to have A—— of P——t binding in the Colonies for the obſervation of the Lord's Day or Sunday once in a Quarter or half a Year—Upon a ſecond thought, Meſſrs. Printers, what if it ſhould be kept once only in the Year and that on Chriſtmas Day? This may be thought by ſome to be a happy Means of the long wiſh'd for Coalition between the Mother Country and the Colonies.

HUE AND CRY!

SEIZE THE ASSASSIN!

THE Cries of innocent Blood, the ſympathizing Feels of Humanity, Self-Preſervation, public Safety, and common Juſtice, loudly beſpeak all his Majeſty's good Subjects, far and near, as well to be wary of the malicious Attacks, as to detect, ſeize and apprehend, and (as ſoon as poſſible) bring to Juſtice the Perſon, of a certain Doctor James Thomſon a Native of Scotland, for ſome Time paſt a Reſident in this Town of Hartford; who on the Saturday Evening of the 20th Inſtant, void of the Fear of GOD, from Fore thought, Malice prepenſe, and of ſet Purpoſe, to Kill and Murder, did Wound, and with a Sharp Iron Weapon, cruelly and barbarouſly Stab the Body of Mr. James Shepard, of Northampton, privately & at unawares, coming behind and attacking of him, as he was peaceably and innocently walking in the main Street; by which Attempt of Aſſaſſination, his Life was imminently Endangered; and after which Attempt the Aſſaſſin made his Eſcape.

Said Thomſon is about 25 Years of Age, about 5 Feet 6 Inches high, grey Eyes, has ſomething of the Scotch Manner of Pronounciation; had on when he fled a Wig made in Imitation of his own Hair, a light colour'd Broad-Cloth Surtout, a ſnuff colour'd, homeſpun Coat, Black Waiſtcoat and Breeches, &c. He has had a Wound on his Head, which perhaps is not entirely healed.

LONDON,

Auguſt 1. A few days ſince the eldeſt ſon of a Great Perſonage, having ſome diſpute with one of his playfellows, in the midſt of ſome of their amuſements, the former was ſo greatly incenſed as to ſtrike the latter, which the Great Perſonage obſerving, commanded the little boy to pull off his cloaths and beat him ſoundly for being the aggreſſor, which he accordingly did, was commended for it, and given to underſtand the diſcipline was by way of diſcouraging the former from any attempt in future of lifting up his hand againſt a ſubject,

No ſooner did the Duke of C—— enter Portſmouth, but ſome men at the engines, aſked if his R. H. would take a ſpell at it.

We hear that the D. of C. paſſing by the Iron Houſe near the Dog and Duck, in his way to Portſmouth, obſerving Multum in Parvo wrote over the Door, heſitating ſome time, was at laſt over head by a Perſon riding by to read it Mitcham in Surry.

A Lady greivouſly afflicted with diſorders in her Bowels, having applied to the celebrated Mrs. Clive for a remedy, was adviſed by that witty Lady to ſwallow the Riot Act as a Cure for all Inteſtine Riſings.

On Sunday, the Bankers ſhops being of courſe ſhut, a Scotch Gentleman ſent his ſervant to his Friend, an Apothecary, for a little Caſh. The Servant returned with a Roll or two of Brimſtone. His Maſter reprehending him, the Fellow anſwered, "Why you know this is Caſh at Edinburg.

The following is fact; A pooor woman came from Hadley, near Barnet, a few days ſince to have her nativity calculated by the Old Baily Conjurer, but meeting with a Gentleman whom ſhe took for him, "Pray (ſaid ſhe) are you the cunning man?" "Yes, Dame, what would you have?" O Sir (cries the woman) "I want to have my captivity captivated."

A gentleman was obſerving the other day to the preſent firſt lord of the treaſury, That he was ſurprized that colonel Barre, who was ſo poor a miniſterial man, ſhould be ſo powerful when he became an oppoſer of government; but the premier anſwered, That he was not ſurprized at all, for a man might make a great figure in breaking windows, who would make but a very indifferent glaizer, was he ſet to mend them.

LONDON, Auguſt 9.

Commodore Palliſer yeſterday kiſſed his Majeſty's hand on being appointed Comptroller of the Navy, in the room of George Cockburne, Eſq; deceaſed.

It is ridiculous to reflect on the Miniſtry for the late Fire at Portſmouth. How could they poſſibly prevent what no Human Wiſdom could foreſee?

The Situation of the Boſtonians is not alarming——if they are ſurrounded by Fleets and Armies, they have only to live quietly, receive all the Money that circulates, and accumulate Fortunes.

It is ſaid, an order ſimilar to that of Commodore Gambier has been tranſmitted to General Gage, Commander in Chief of the American Land Forces, who is to act in concert with the Commodore, if occaſion requires.

A great Perſonage has intimated, that he will make it an object of Parliamentary conſideration, to enact, or enforce, ſome ſumptuary laws for ſuppreſſing the immoderate luxury of the times, which he apprehends will be the ruin of this nation. Should ſuch a law take place, perſons of a certain condition only will be permitted to travel abroad to ape the French manners and geſtures, and that with certain limitations.

It is ſaid, as an encouragement to the Weſt India planters for not entering into the views of the American refractory Colonies, that an additional duty will be laid next ſeſſions on foreign Brandies, in order to increaſe the value and conſumption of Rum.

A celebrated engraver has juſt finiſhed a print of a great perſonage leaning on a lock of a door on the outſide at St. Alban's, in the character of a FOOL, with the following label from his mouth, "I'LL TAKE MY bible oath, I WAS NOT ON THE INSIDE." The lady is diſcovered in a ſwoon on the bed, the room pictureſquely deſcribed. In ſhort the whole forms a very exact picture of a late much celebrated amour.

Goſport, Aug. 10. Saturday Lord Halifax came to Portſmouth and viewed the dockyard, and afterwards dined on board the Tweed frigate; he was ſaluted both by the fort and ſhips and returned the ſame day to his ſeat in Suſſex. His Majeſty's ſhip Kennington is rigged and nearly compleated for ſea. She is ſtationed at the Weſt-Indies for three years.—Captain Mackenzie, commander of the Arrogant, a guardſhip in Portſmouth harbour, is appointed Commodore in the Weſt-Indies, in the room of Commodore Forreſter, deceaſed.——Remain at Spithead, the Dorſetſhire, Glory, Tweed and Montreal.

It is an alarming truth, that the Portugal gold that uſed to circulate in this country, is now transferred to our Colonies, and that the trade for corn, which uſed to ſupply England with the corn of that country, is now wholly carried on by the Americans. It is ſaid they have exported within theſe two years, wheat, flour, and Indian corn, from three provinces only, to the amount of 700 000l. and that many of the merchants of that country are ſo rich, as to have thouſands of pounds in the hands of their correſpondents in London, by which they make 8 or 10 per cent in bills of exchange

Letters from Poland ſpeak of the unhappy ſituation of Moldavia, who are butchered by the Turks, or made priſoners, on pretence of their Being rebels, and revolting to the Ruſſians. The truth is, the poor people having no means of reſiſtance when the Ruſſians entered their country, paſſively ſubmitted, and put themſelves under the protection of the enemy. Now the Turks have entered their country, they would again return to their duty, but the haughty Ottomans, refuſe their obedience, becauſe they ſay it is forced, and hand up the men with as little ceremony as if they were ſo many dogs, and carry off the likelieſt of their women and children into captivity.

It is poſitively aſſerted, that the King of Pruſſia has determined to take part with the Ruſſians, in caſe the Houſe of Auſtria ſhould in any manner oppoſe the operations of the Court of Peterſburg, in the preſent war with the Turks.

There are letters in town which poſitively affirm, that after the Daniſh fleet had deſtroyed the batteries of the Algerines upon the mole, a Flag of Truce was hung out, and that matters were likely to come to an accomodation, by the mediation of the French Conſul. Two of the Daniſh ſhips were much damaged by the ſhells of the enemy.

October 12, 1770.

WHEREAS we the ſubſcribers, with others of our ſeveral occupations, did petition the hon. General Aſſembly of this colony in October laſt, for relief from the burthen of working at highways, as by law we are at preſent obliged to, which we look upon to be unequal and oppreſſive——and did in ſaid petition give reaſons ſufficient to have the ſame altered, but by reaſon of not having or employing ſufficient council or attorny's to ſpeak and ſupport the ſame, it fell through and nothing was done.——And whereas we look upon the ſaid law as it now ſtands, to be injurious, oppreſſive and unjuſt, we therefore promiſe to pay our proportion according to our ſeveral liſts, to pay ſufficient attornies to ſpeak to the caſe, and for defraying any other neceſſary charges in the approaching ſeſſions of aſſembly, hereby declaring that we never can reſt eaſy in the premiſes without relief.

N. B. We are ſenſible that many of us will be obliged to pay vaſtly more to mend the high ways by a rate.

☞ 'Tis hoped the ſeveral towns in this colony, eſpecially where there are any ſeamen and tradeſmen, oppreſſed by the preſent mode of repairing the high ways, will ſign and publiſh ſomething ſimilar to the foregoing, that their minds might be manifeſt to the honourable aſſembly, who hitherto have not thought proper to liſten to the cries of their petitioners.

Friday laſt arrived here the ſhip Hercules, Captain Woolſey, from Dublin, by whom we have the following advices, viz.

GENOA, July 7.

We have received letters here which aſſert that execution lately ſaid to have been at Liſbon, was all fiction. It is however true, that a conſpiracy has been diſcovered. In conſequence of which his Majeſty has demanded ſuccours from the King of Spain, which have been accordingly granted, who form a chain round the frontiers of Portugal, while the Portugueſe guard their ports, in order to prevent any of the conſpirators from eſcaping.

Letters from Marſeilles adviſe, that the French fleet no ſooner arrived before Tunis, than the Bey ſubmitted to every thing which the French demanded of him, and he ordered his corſairs to be immediately diſarmed. The Daniſh ſquadron has left Gibraltar in order to go againſt the Algerines.

LONDON, Auguſt 11.

Letters from Germany, bring a confirmation of the great application made by the houſe of Auſtria to put its military not only in a reſpectable, but even a formidable ſituation. It is ſaid, that it conſiſts in the whole of above 200,000 troops throughly well trained, diſciplined, and provided.

Letters from Paris ſay, the Court of Verſailles has lately made ſome demands of a very extraordinary nature upon the Republic of Genoa, which has occaſioned the holding ſeveral Councils.

The terms, it is ſaid, Lord Mansfield is to retire on, are theſe: His Lordſhip is to have a penſion of 3000 per annum, with a proviſo of his attendance at council, and private levees.

From Conſtantinople, we learn, that the Grand Signior, in a fit of rage, ſtruck off the Viſier's head with his own hand in the midſt of the Divan, for giving him ſome wholeſome advice, which not agreeing with the maxims of his Sublime Highneſs, he took this method of acquanting the world that he was not to be contradicted, even in matters of the greateſt importance. The continual ſcene of confuſion on all ſides has ſo exaſperated his mightineſs, that it is no longer ſafe or prudent to venture into his preſence, ſo that the office of Viſier at preſent is looked upon as not very eligible, eſpecially by thoſe who would like to ſleep in a whole ſkin.

The report of a certain council having declared, that one of the American colonies had forfeited their charter, is totally void of foundation.

It is now more poſitively aſſerted than ever, that Lord Camden will be appointed Lord Chancellor next week.

Yeſterday a council was ſummoned to meet this day at St. James's when it is ſaid the motions of our enemies will be taken into conſideration, and what part Britain is likely to take in any troubles that may commence, in order to put her into a proper ſituation.

If it will afford any ſatisfaction to the colonies, we can aſſure them, that a noble Duke, not long ſince in high office, (on our talk and aſſertion, of being at the eve of a war) has wagered 1000 guineas to 500, that we ſhall have no rupture with any power, between this and Chriſtmas, 1771.

A ſquadron of five frigates, with two tenders, is now getting ready at Chatham to cruiſe about the French and Spaniſh ports, to watch their motions. The command will be given to an able ſea officer.

It is reported that at a Board of Admiralty held a few days ago, the immediate calling home of Engliſh ſeamen at the different foreign ports, was the ſubject under conſideration.

We learn from very good authority, that a great perſon has lately expreſſed the moſt earneſt deſire of having the unhappy differences between Great-Britain and America, terminated in a manner equally ſatisfactory to both parties, and with all the expedition the nature of the buſineſs will allow,

It is poſitively aſſerted, that the King of Pruſſia has determined to take part with the Ruſſians, in caſe the houſe of Auſtria ſhould in any manner oppoſe the operations of the Court of Peterſburgh in the preſent war with the Turks.

Auguſt 14. They write from Copenhagen, that a fleet is fitting out at Elſineur, ſuppoſed to be intended againſt ſome of the French ſettlements, and war is expected ſoon to be declared, the Daniſh Ambaſſador having left the French court.

BOSTON, October 25. 1770.

Laſt Saturday Morning a moſt violent Storm came on, the Wind at about N. N. E. attended with Rain and Hail: The Tide roſe about Noon to ſuch a height that it overflowed moſt of the Wharves in this Town, the Water came up into King ſtreet as far as Admiral Vernon's Head Tavern, as alſo into Dock ſquare, about the Draw-Bridge, and into the Streets at the South and North Parts of the Town, that were neareſt the Sea-ſide, ſo that it ran not only into the Cellars, but into the Shops and Rooms of Dwelling-Houſes, obliging ſeveral Families to retire up into Chambers: Many Stores on the Wharves were almoſt filled with Water, whereby great Quantities of Sugars, Salt, Lime &c. were deſtroyed: ſeveral large Stores removed by the Violence of the Wind and Waves: Vaſt Quantities of Fire Wood, Timber, Staves, Shingles, and other Lumber, were waſhed off the Wharves, and carried down the Harbour: A Number of Veſſels were forced from the Anchors, and drove aſhore on Dorcheſter Neck and Braintree Bay: Capt. Dunn, in a Ship from Glaſgow, laſt from Newbury Port, being at Anchor in Nantaſket Road, parted her Cables, and was obliged to cut away the Maſts, and drove on Braintree-Flats.—Capt. Bennet, in a Ship bound to Africa, was the only Veſſel in Nantaſket that rode out the Gale without Damage;——Capt. Higgins, in a Sloop bound to Connecticut, was obliged to cut away his Maſt and Bowſprit, and is ſince towed up to Town; another Sloop ſhared the ſame Fate; and a Schooner came aſhore on Deer-Iſland without any Perſon on board, ſuppoſed to have drifted from Lynn or Marblehead;——The Men of War and other Shipping lay in this Harbour received little or no Damage.—At Charleſtown they ſuffered in the ſame Manner as in this Town.—It is ſaid that the Tide roſe higher than has ever been known, excepting once about 47 Years ago, it roſe a Foot higher.

From the Southward we learn, that great Damage was done along that Shore: A Brig belonging to Providence and a Schooner to Newport, from Whaling, were caſt away at Tarpaulin-Cove: Capt. Scott from Turks Iſland for this Place, laden with Salt, was drove aſhore the Back of Cape-Cod, at Eaſtham: A Rhode Iſland Sloop from Whaling, aſhore near the ſame Place: A Sloop belonging to Plymouth aſhore at Race-Point: The people belonging to theſe Veſſels were ſaved.——At Plymouth, a Number of Veſſels drove aſhore, one of which was Capt. Ellis, from Rhode-Iſland; but the Account in Monday's Papers, that 40 or 50 Lives were loſt there, is a Miſtake; only two dead Bodies had been found drowned, theſe it was ſuppoſed belonged to ſome Eaſtern Coaſter. Several other Veſſels it is ſaid are aſhore and ſome ſunk, but we cannot learn what they are. Many that we were in fear of, have ſince heard they are ſafe.——At Hingham all their ſmall Veſſels drove aſhore, one or two of about 45 Tons, was floated on to a Wharf which at common Tides the Water never roſe ſo high as the top of the Wharf.——A ſmall Fiſhing Boat was ſunk between Nantasket and Hingham, the ſmall Pump, a Maſt that had been cut away, and Boat or Canoe, drove aſhore, the other Maſt held to the Rigging of the Boat that ſunk.——A Fiſherman was waſhed aſhore on the Beach but they cannot tell who he is, or where he belonged, he was a large Man, above 6 Feet in length had on thick Boots, an under and outer Jacket, had in his Trowſers Pocket only a Fiſh-hook and a ſmall Knife with two Letters cut on the Handle, but our informant could not recollect what the Letters were.

The greateſt Damage ſuſtained at the Southward was the waſhing away the Hay from the Meadows, ſpoiling the Sugars and Salt in Stores, carrying off the Cord-Wood, &c from the Wharves, blowing down Stores Sheds, Barns, Fences, Trees, and carrying off the Roofs of Houſes.

Far Eaſtward we don't learn that any great Damage was done. At Piſcataqua, Cape Ann and Newbury ſome Stores were hurt, &c. A new Ship coming out of Newbury Port, Capt Dunlap bound to this Place, was drove on Plumb-Iſland, and in her way ſtove a Sloop to pieces belonging to Newbury.

At Salem and Marblehead great deſtruction was made there: But have no Particulars. The Eſſex Gazette, it is ſuppoſed contains them, but the Paper is not come to hand.

The Loſſes ſuſtained in the Storm amounts it is ſuppoſed to ſome Thouſands of Pounds Sterling

NEW-YORK, October 22.

On Thurſday Morning laſt, we had the agreeable News of the Arrival of our Governor, the Right Hon JOHN EARL DUNMORE, at the Narrows, in his Majeſty's Ship the Tweed. About Three o'Clock his Excellency came up in a Barge, and landed at the Ferry Stairs at White Hall: On his Landing, the Battery Guns were fired and all the Shipping in the Harbour diſplayed their Colours: A crouded Aſſembly of People of all Ranks, attended him from the White-Hall to the Council Chamber, in Fort-George, with repeated loud Huzza's, and the utmoſt Joy appeared in every Countenance.

NEW-YORK, October 25.

On Friday laſt, the Day after the Governor's Arrival,

A Number of Gentlemen had a genteel Dinner at Hampden Hall, where the following Toaſts were drank viz.

1. The KING. 2. The QUEEN, PRINCE of WALES, and all the ROYAL FAMILY. 3. The Right Hon. the EARL of DUNMORE. 4. A total Abolition of all Party Spirit, by the juſt and equal Adminiſtration of the EARL of DUNMORE. 5. Great-Britain and her Colonies. 6. The Navy and army. 7. The Proteſting Lords and Diſſenting Commons. 8. Unanimity to the Colonies to the lateſt Poſterity. 9. All the Friends of America in Great-Britain, Ireland, and the colonies. 10. More Public Virtue and integrity, and leſs Venality throughout the Britiſh Empire. 11. Lord Chatham. 12. Lord Cambden. 13. Sir George Saevill. 14. General Conway. 15. Colonel Barre. 16. On Sunday the 14th Inſtant, Sermons were preached in both the Preſbyterian Churches in this City, on the mournful Occaſion of the Rev. Mr. WHITEFIELD's Death, by the Rev. Doctor RODGERS, from Matthew xxv. 21, "His "Lord ſaid unto him, well done thou good and faithful "Servant, thou haſt been faithful over a few Things, I "will make the Ruler over many Things; enter thou in- "to the Joy of thy Lord:"—Which Paſſage of Scripture he applied with great Propriety to the Character and Reward of that eminent Servant of Chriſt.—The Rev. Mr. TREAT alſo took proper notice of this melancholy Event.

NEWPORT, October 22.

Samuel Caſey, who the Week before laſt was tried at S Kingſton, for feloniouſly making and uttering counterfeit dollars, on thurſday laſt received ſentence of death: His counſel declined and agreement upon the ſpecial verdict found, and waved the motion they had made in arreſt of judgment. On the ſame day Thomas Clark, Samuel Willſon, William Reynolds, and Eliſha Reynolds, having been indicted, and ſeverally convicted, before the ſame court, for making and uttering counterfeit Half Joes, received the following ſentences, viz. Thomas Clark to ſtand in the pillory one hour, to have both ears crop'd, to be branded with a hot iron on each cheek, with the letter R to pay 100l lawful money fine, & coſt of proſecution, & to ſtand committed till ſentence performed. Samuel Willſon to ſtand in the pillory and be crop'd and branded in like manner, to pay 600 fine, & Coſt, and ſtand committed till ſentence performed. William Reynolds to ſtand in the pillory for one hour, to have both ears crop'd, to pay 300l. fine, and coſt, and ſtand committed till ſentence performed. Eliſha Reynolds to ſtand in the pillory one hour to be whipped 39 laſhes, to pay coſt and ſtand committed till ſentence performed. The trial of Willſon laſted ten hours when the jury went out, and returned a verdict in leſs than ten minutes guilty.

The ſentences of thoſe who are to be pilloried, &c are to be executed upon Little Reſt hill, South-Kingſton, next Friday. Sundry perſons ſtand recognized over to next term, upon ſuſpicion of being concerned in counterfeiting gold & ſilver coins.——A more horrid and extenſive combination to defraud the public, has never been heard of in New England.—The public may be well aſſured it extends much further, and it behoves the magiſtrate, and every honeſt man, by all poſſible means, to deſtroy ſo baneful a practice. The authority here have greatly and worthily exerted themſelves in this affair and ſtill continue ſo to do.

In a field at Little Reſt has been found a ſet of inſtruments belonging to Samuel Caſey, for caſting, ſtamping and milling Joſephuſes of 1756 1760 1763; and for dollars of 1766 1767; and at Tower Hill, a ſet was found hid in a ſtone wall, belonging to Samuel Willſon, for caſting, ſtamping & milling dollars, dated 1748, 1763, 1764 1769, and piſtareens of 1755. All the inſtruments found have been brought to this town, except the 2 preſſes uſed in ſtamping, which weigh twenty hundred weight each.

Tho' Caſey and Willſon had every thing neceſſary for counterfeiting all the above dates, the following dates have not been found to be counterfeited in this town, viz. Dollars, 1748, 1763 and piſtareens, 1755; the others have.

Thurſday, the fifteenth of November next, is appointed to be obſerved as a Day of public THANKSGIVING thro' out this Colony.

Meſſrs. PRINTERS.

Whereas in your laſt weeks paper, you publiſh'd a HUE AND CRY, for Doctor James Thompſon, but by what authority, or who was the author, I'm not able to ſay; but of this I am certain it was from no lawful authority and I think the facts relative to the affair of the 20th inſtant were not fairly ſtated, in order that the reader might be able to judge impartially of the matter, here ſend you a true narration of the affair, and the circumſtances that attended it, as I have it from good authority, which pleaſe to give a place in your next.

I WOULD be very far from being underſtood in the leaſt to juſtify or extenuate a crime, which, in itſelf is of ſo deteſtible a nature, and ſo much beneath the character of a gentleman, as the late conduct of Doct. Thomſon with Mr. Shepard on the evening of the 20th inſtant——would only have the truth appear, which every man has an undoubted right to.—Some time paſt Dr. Thomſon was at a tavern, in company with ſome gentlemen, Mr. Shepard came into company, after ſome converſation, the Dr. aſk'd Mr. Shepard "if he intended to pay him the money that he won of him ſometime before at cards, which you promiſed upon honour?" To which Mr. Shepard reply'd, "that he thought but little of debts of that kind," upon which a warm diſpute aroſe between them; at length the Dr. told him, "that in caſe he would not give him his money, he ſhould give him ſuch ſatisfaction as a gentleman has a right to require," which Mr. Shepard refuſed; upon that the Dr. ſtruck Mr Shepard ſundry times with his cane, upon which Mr. Shepard with a chair gave the Dr. a wound on the head, which ended the diſpute for that time, which wound the ſurgeons for about a week thought would prove mortal, by which wound the Dr. is deſcrib'd in the HUE AND CRY. Before the Dr. was able to go out, and afterwards, he ſent ſundry times to Mr. Shepard to come and ſee him in order to ſettle with him, in a peaceable way for what had paſt; but Mr. Shepard refuſed coming. On the evening aforeſaid, Dr. Thomſon and Mr. Shepard met at a tavern with ſome other gentlemen—after drinking a few bottles of wine, the company broke up; the Dr. Mr Shepard and Mr. Brown, was going the ſame way, after walking ſome rods Thomſon ſays to Shepard, "you d——d raſcal, what ſatisfaction do you intend to give me for breaking my head?" With that making up to him, Mr. Brown ſtep'd in between them, deſired the Dr. not to make any diſturbance in the ſtreet; Mr. Brown went ſome ſteps between them, the Dr. ſtruck him over Mr. Brown, into his ſhoulder through the cape of his ſurtout with a ſmall pen knife he then had in his hand at which Mr. Shepard parted, being juſt by his lodgings, ſent for a ſurgeon, who found it to be but a ſlight wound, Mr. Shepard was not confin'd at all to his houſe on account of it——the Dr. went to his lodgings, reflected much on himſelf for what he had done, he took the knife and hove it into the fire.

The Dr. had for ſome time paſt determin'd to go into ſome other parts in order to look for a place to ſettle in, as this town was fully ſupply'd with gentlemen of his profeſſion. The late affair, together with his former reſolutions, was the cauſe of his precipitate departure. Since which there was ſearch made for the knife, which was found in the aſhes; it is a pen knife, of a ſhort blade not exceeding two inches in Length. Had that good gentleman that ſent out the HUE AND CRY, who appeared ſo zealouſly affected with the matter, have taken pains to inform himſelf more of the particulars of the affair before he wrote—it might have been as well, at leaſt it would have ſaved the trouble of this.

N. B. All the Printers that have thought proper to publiſh the aforementioned HUE AND CRY, are deſired to publiſh the above as ſoon as poſſible.

Meſſrs. PRINTERS,
Pleaſe to inſert the following in your next, and you will oblige your's, &c.

ON the 21ſt day of September, A.D. 1770, the wife of Samuel Hungerford, of New Fairfield in Connecticut, ſpun for herſelf with her own hand, on a common ſpinning wheel, 126 knots of good fine worſted yarn ; which was carefully reel'd by two credible young women, who can very ſafely atteſt to the truth of the ſame. She begun and performed the ſame by daylight, on the abovefaid day, in the ſpace of about twelve hours time ; under the diſadvantage of having a young ſucking child to take care of : ſhe being in the 43d year of her age, having 12 children now living born of her, and having alſo 5 grand children.

So great threfore, now is the ambition even of the fair ſex, in this colony, to honor thoſe worthy patriots, viz. the merchants and landholders of the colonies who are joined, in the laudable non importation agreement, that they are daily exerting themſelves to the utmoſt of their ability, to vie one another both in labour and art, in order to promote the manufactories of their own country : which if properly encouraged and ſtrictly adhered to, with the bleſſing of heaven, will be the only means of ſaving this country from threatened ruin, and alſo produce a greater fund of wealth, than all the rich mines that Peru can afford.

THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic.

From TUESDAY, November 6, to TUESDAY, November 13, 1770.

The Printers to the PUBLIC.

WHEREAS by Reaſon of the many new Sources, and freſh Occaſions of foreign Intelligence that have opened, and frequently happened of late, both in our own and foreign Nations; we have often been obliged, for Want of Room, either wholly to omit, or elſe give the Public but a very partial Account of many very interesting and important Articles of News which in larger Papers, are more fully and largely ſet forth. And whereas by Means hereof, many of our Cuſtomers and others, have expreſſed their Deſires that a larger and fuller Paper may take the Place of the preſent Connecticut COURANT——to remedy and redreſs the above Inconvenience, Therefore,

THE Public are hereby advertiſed, that we have determined to enlarge the Connecticut COURANT to a Size no leſs than that of the Boston or York Papers, of which we here offer them a Specimen;——that we mean to devote our Attention and Care more particularly to the Buſineſs of furniſhing out the Paper with ſuch Collections of News as will render it as entertaining, uſeful and profitable as lies in our Power—and as the New-York and Boſton Poſts arrive here on Saturday every Week, and the Publication of the Paper being on Tueſday, we are allow'd ſufficient Time to collect and publiſh the Whole of the moſt material and important Advices that come to Hand; ſo by this Means we ſhall be able to make the Courant as reputable, and univerſally beneficial as any Publication of the Kind on the Continent. And as this Enlargement will neceſſarily ſubject us to an additional Expence, we depend our Cuſtomers will be willing to make the ſmall Addition of ONE SHILLING per Year; after which the Paper will be at as cheap a Lay as any One (of this Size) on the Continent. And as this Alteration will require a very ſpeedy Supply of Ready Caſh to furniſh the Office with Paper, and other Neceſſaries to continue the Buſineſs, we moſt earneſtly requeſt all and every of our good Cuſtomers who are in Arrears for the Paper, Advertiſements, or on any other Account, to make us Payment in Caſh or Country Produce, by the 18th Day of December next, the Day the Paper is publiſhed, which will compleat the third Year of the Partnerſhip; No. of the Paper 312. after which Time the intended Alteration will take Place.

We earneſtly requeſt all indebted to us, to take this Matter into their Conſideration, and they will immediately ſee, that while they are obliging us (which Favours on all Accounts we are ready to acknowledge,) they themſelves will be reaping the Benefit, as they will by that Means enable us to fulfil our promiſed Enlargment.

And while we are importunate with thoſe of our Cuſtomers who are negligent in making punctual Payment, we would with Gratitude, acknowledge the Favors of thoſe who have been careful ſeaſonably to pay their Dues. Thoſe of our preſent Cuſtomers who are unwilling to comply with the propoſed Plan, we expect will ſignify their Diſlike, by deſiring us to diſcontinue their Paper by the Time forementioned. And thoſe who continue, as well as thoſe who ſhall newly ſubſcribe, are to expect that a Settlement will be inſiſted on at the End of every Year. Thoſe of our former Cuſtomers, whoſe Papers have been diſcontinued for Twelve Months paſt, on Account of their not making payment and who have not yet ſettled their Accounts muſt expect to be ſued without further Notice, as we are determined to come to a Settlement with ſuch. Thoſe of our preſent Subſcribers who do not make us Payment by the 18th of Dec. in Produce, muſt, after that, expect to pay the Caſh, or Produce will no longer anſwer.

The PRINTERS.

N. B. Thoſe who have Advertiſements for this Paper, are deſired to ſend the Pay with them, or they will not be inſerted.

LONDON, September 5.

Extract of a Letter dated June 19. 1770. from a young Engliſh Officer, (brought up in the Britiſh navy under Captain John Montegue) now ſerving in the Ruſſian fleet.

WE were lying off Matapan Bay in the Morea, when we were informed, that the whole Turkiſh fleet was at Napoli di Romana, ſix or ſeven leagues from us. Our Admiral, who is a brave Ruſſian, immediately reſolved to attack them, without waiting for our other diviſions comings up, in order it is ſuppoſed, to obtain the entire glory of the action; accordingly we went down to them with only three ſhips of the line, two frigates, and four tranſports. It was on Sunday morning that we diſcovered the enemy's fleet, conſiſting in all of 22 ſhips, eleven of which were of the line: the Admiral now ordered me (as I can ſpeak the Ruſſian language) to leave the frigate I was in, and go on board one of the line, in the room of a Lieutenant who was dead, and immediately after orders were given for a general engagement; ours was the firſt ſhip that was engaged, but how was I ſurprized at ſeeing my Ruſſian Captain and moſt of his officers, as ſoon as the Turkiſh fire became troubleſome meanly quit their poſts, and fly down to their cabins; ſo that there was none but myſelf left to command; in which authority I was further confirmed, by the Captain's ſending me up his own ſword. We were now obliged to put the beſt face on our dangerous ſituation! I had a brave Engliſh pilot who ſeconded me, and brought me, after paſſing through moſt of their fire, within piſtol ſhot of the Turkiſh Admiral in Chief, who carried 90 guns, whilſt we had but 64 Although I had received a broad-ſide from him in going down, yet I did not return it until I came cloſe up with him; I now called all hands aft, and told them, that we had nothing but the moſt cruel uſage to expect if taken, that we were all *brothers and Chriſtians, and therefore for the honour of her Imperial Majeſty, and our own, we ſhould reſolve to die, or conquer, with the † croſs in our hands. This ſpeech had the deſired effect; they gave me three cheers, and immediately I ordered a broadſide to be poured into the enemy which made him reel; after which our fire was ſo regular and hot that he ſoon determined to leave us; which he did by help of another ſhip, which now ran between us; but had I been properly ſeconded by our Commodore, who kept firing at too great a diſtance, I think we ſhould have taken her. The Admiral could not come up ſo ſoon as he wiſhed, ſo that for near two hours I was ſurrounded on all ſides, but at laſt he reached us, and began with throwing ſhells at the enemy, which determined them (thinking us, I believe, ſtronger than we were) to run into port; and leave us maſters of the day. Thank God I have not received one wound, although as I was ſhewing the men how to lavel a gun, a chain ſhot ſwept four of them away; I turned at one of their groans, and then another ball came and took off the clerk's right arm, as he was minuting down particulars, only about three yards from me. I had only 15 men killed, and wounded, which is but a few, conſidering how hard we were preſſed. The Admiral has thanked me publickly for my behaviour, and promiſes to recommend me properly, ſo that I am in hopes of returning a commander of one of her Imperial Majeſty's ſhips. We have now joined the whole of our fleet, which makes a fine ſhew. I hope, therefore, that the next I write will acquaint you with a total defeat of the enemy, and of our joyouſly returning home."

The following contains a very particular Account of the ſea fight which happened on the 5th of July between the Ruſſians and Turks, and which has ſince been confirmed by the moſt authentic advices.

"Two Engliſh ſhips were arrived at Malta, under the command of Capt. Bodie, in the Ruſſian ſervice in 14 days from the channel of Scio; the ſaid Capt. declared, that on the 5th of July the Ruſſians having followed the Turkiſh fleet to the Channel of Scio, found them at the bottom of the Gulph Libuno, where it being reſolved to attack them they formed the line; Count Alexis Orlow was in the center in the three Primates: Commodore Grieg, Admiral Spiridoff, Admiral Elphinſtone, commanding on each ſide; Count Fidor Orlow was with Admiral Spiridoff, who quitted the line, and attacked the Capt. Baſhaw's ſhip of 90 guns, and ſo near, that the Ruſſian marines and ſoldiers tore the Turkiſh ſtandard from the ſtern, and having thrown a quantity of grenades, and artificial fire into the Baſhaw's ſhip, ſet her on fire, but her maſts and yards grappling with, and falling on the Ruſſian Admiral's, ſhe alſo took fire, and was blown up half an hour afterwards, but the Admiral, his ſon, and Count Fidor Orlow, ſaved themſelves, and twenty four officers were in time to get clear of her, and ſave themſelves in the barge: The Turkiſh fleet conſiſted of fifteen large ſhips, two large carnvillas, and five xebecs, eight half gallies; the Ruſſian fleet was compoſed of nine ſhips of the line, two frigates, and two packet boats. The ſaid action was on the 5th, and on the 6th the Turks prepared for battle on ſhore, to ſave themſelves, and the Ruſſians prepared four ſhips to burn them: at about midnight the ſaid four ſhips went down towards them, with four line of battle ſhips to defend them, but a bomb with artificial fire followed Caraliddle ſet her on fire, which communicated and burnt till the others, except Zafier Beg's of 70 braſs guns, and five half gallies, and a number of ſmall veſſels, which were all taken the next day by the Ruſſians; moſt of the Turks ſaved themſelvs on ſhore, but the Ruſſians have recovered and taken 400 Chriſtian ſlaves. Admiral Elphinſtone ſailed immediately with his ſquadron for the iſland of Tenedos to block up the Dardanelles.

Trieſte, Aug. 13. The Ruſſian and Turkiſh Squadrons, after the two combats, which they fought, the one near Napoli di Romania, and the other in the ſeas of Andros and Tenedos, retired, in order to repair their damages: the firſt to Sidre or Andros, and the latter to Samos. We have ſince learned by ſeveral letters, that the Turks returned to Napoli di Romania, where the Ruſſian ſquadron had followed them, and debarked their troops near Muchli, and erected ſome batteries, the firſt of which ſunk two Ottoman veſſels; that the other Turkiſh ſhips had been all deſtroyed, except two Galliots; that the Ruſſians had taken two ſhips laden with ammunition from Conſtantinople; that the batteries continued to fire on the place, and had deſtroyed the walls of Fort Palameda, and it was believed the town would ſoon ſurrender.

Extract of a letter from Minorca, dated St. Philips, Auguſt 10.

"The Daniſh fleet conſiſting of three ſhips of the line, two frigates two bombketches, ſix ſtore ſhips and tranſports, having been here three weeks; they did not attack Algiers as was reported. They expect another ſquadron will arrive here every day.

"Commodore Proby ſailed out of this harbour yeſterday morning with a conſiderable quantity of money on board for the merchants at Leghorn, and other ports in the Mediterranean, where he will winter.

"A frigate came down laſt week from the Ruſſian fleet, with a Rear Admiral on board, to take the command of a ſquadron daily expected here.

" There is great talk of war, & not without ſome appearance of reaſon, the Capt. of the Packet informing us, that he ſaw twenty ſhips of the line ready for ſea in the harbour of Toulon.

LONDON. Auguſt 20.

There are various conjectures concerning the reaſon of the King of Pruſſia's interview with the Emperor in Moravia; ſome impute it to an intention of concerting meaſures for ſome important enterprize, jointly deſigned; but the more judicious believe it to be only the effects of a little ſpirit of oſtantation in the young Emperor, to ſhow the flower of his army, which is really very fine, to a great millitary Prince; and of the readineſs in the King of Pruſſia to reconnoitre the troops he may probably, in future events, have occaſion to cope with; for the preſent great ſtrength of the Houſe of Auſtria, being in the moſt compleat readineſs to act, cannot be a matter of indifference to him.

They write from Rome, that the Pope has lately ordered ſome curious manuſcripts, which have lain dormant for ages in the Vatican Library, to be printed, that the Chriſtian World may no longer continue ignorant of their contents; they are to be printed under his own inſpection, for which purpoſe his holineſs has a preſs in his Palace.

Portſmouth, Auguſt 21. Yeſterday orders came to the Officers here, for their immediate opening places of rendezvous, for entering ſailors on board the following men of war here and at Plymouth, viz the Achilles, 60 Guns: Centaur, 74: St. Antonio, 64: Bellona, 74: Arrogant, 74: Ajax, 74: Dorſetſhire, 70: Rippon, 64: Hero, 74: Cornwal, 74: Tamerlane, 74: Burford, 70: Bel'ſle, 70: Perm, 64: and Edgar, 64: And that they may be manned as ſoon as poſſible, great encouragement is offered all able ſeamen that will enter.—It is ſaid that as ſoon as theſe Ships have got their compliment of Men, they will be ſtationed in the Mediterranean as a Fleet of obſervation.

LONDON,

To Lord NORTH.

My Lord,

MR. Luttrell's ſervices were the chief ſupport and ornament of the Duke of Grafton's Adminiſtration. The honour of rewarding them was reſerved for your Lordſhip. The Duke, it ſeems, had contracted an obligation he was aſhamed to acknowledge, and unable to acquit. You, my Lord, had no ſcruples, You accepted of the ſucceſſion with all its incumbrances, and have paid Mr. Luttrell his legacy, at the hazard of running the eſtate.

When this accompliſhed youth declard himſelf the Champion of Government, the world was buſy in inquiring what honours or emoluments could be a ſufficient recompence to a young man of his rank and fortune, for ſubmitting to mark his entrance into life with the univerſal contempt and deteſtation of his country. His noble father had not been ſo precipitate. To vacate his Seat in Parliament;——to intrude upon a country in which he had no intereſt or connection;—to poſſeſs himſelf of another man's right, and to maintain it in defiance of public ſhame as well as juſtice, beſpoke a degree of zeal or of depravity, which all the favour of a pious Prince could hardly require. I proteſt, my Lord, there is in this young man's conduct a ſtrain of proſtitution, which, for its ſingularity, I cannot but admire. He has diſcovered a new line in the human character; he has degraded even the name of Luttrell, and gratified his father's moſt ſanguine expectations.

The Duke of Grafton, with every poſſible diſpoſition to patroniſe this kind of merit, was contented with pronouncing Colonel Luttrell's panegyric. The gallant ſpirit, the diſintereſted zeal of the young Adventurer were echoed thro' the Houſe of Lords. His Grace repeatedly pledged himſelf to the Houſe, as an evidence of the purity of his friend Mr. Luttrell's intentions,—that he had engaged without any proſpect of perſonal benefit, and that the idea of compenſation would mortally offend him The noble Duke could hardly be in earneſt, but he had lately quitted his employment, and began to think it neceſſary to take ſome care of his reputation. At that very moment, the Iriſh Negociation was probably begun—Come forward, thou worthy Repreſentative of Lord Bute, and tell this inſulted country, who adviſed the King to appoint Mr. Luttrell Adjutant General to the Army in Ireland. By what management was Colonel Cunninghame prevailed on to reſign his employment, and the obſequious Gilborne to accept of a penſion for the Government of Kinſa'e*? Was it an original ſtipulation with the Princeſs of Wales, or does he owe his preferment to your Lordſhip? My Lord, tho' it may not be poſſible to trace this meaſure to its ſource, we can follow the ſtream, & warn the country of its approaching deſtruction. The Engliſh Nation muſt be rouſed and put upon its guard. Mr. Luttrell has already ſhewn us how far he may be truſted, whenever an open attack is to be made upon the liberties of this country. I do not doubt that there is a deliberate plan formed,—your Lordſhip beſt knows by whom;——the corruption of the legiſlative body on this ſide——a military force on the other——and then farewell to England! It is impoſſible that any miniſter ſhould dare to adviſe the King to place ſuch a Man as Luttrell in the confidential poſt of Adjutant-General, if there were not ſome ſecret purpoſe in view, which only ſuch a Man as Luttrell is fit to promote. The inſult offered to the Army in general is as groſs as the outrage intended to the people of England What! Lieutenant Colonel Luttrell to be Adjutant General of an Army of Sixteen thouſand men! One would think his Majeſty's Campaigns at Blackheath & Wimbleden might have taught him better.——I cannot help wiſhing General Harvey joy of a Colleague who does ſo much honor to the employment.—But, my Lord, this Meaſure is to paſs unnoticed, too dangerous to be received with indifference or ſubmiſſion. You ſhall not have Time to new model the Iriſh Army, They will not ſubmit to be garbled by Colonel Luttrell. As a Miſchief to the Engliſh Conſtitution, (for he is not worthy the Name of Enemy) they utterly deteſt him. As a Boy, impudently thruſt over their Heads, they will receive him with Indignation and Contempt.—As for you, my Lord, who perhaps are no more than the blind, unhappy Inſtrument of Lord Bute and her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Wales, be aſſured that you ſhall be called upon to anſwer for the Advice, which has been given, and either diſcover your Accomplices, or fall a Sacrifice to their Security.

JUNIUS,

* This infamous tranſaction ought to be explained to the Public Colonel Gisbore was Quarter-Maſter-General in Ireland. Lord Townſhend perſuades him to reſign to a Scotiſh Officer, one Fraſer, and gives him the Government of Kinſale. Colonel Cunninghame was Adjutant General in Ireland. Lord Townſhend offers him a Penſion to induce him to reſign to Luttrell. Cunningham treats the offer with contempt. What's to be done? Poor Gisborne was to move once more.—He accepts of a Penſion of 400l a Year, until a Government of greater value ſhall become vacant. Colonel Cunningham is made Governor of Kinſale, and Luttrell, at laſt, for whom the whole machinery is put in motion, becomes Adjutant General, and in effect takes command of the Army in Ireland.

NEW YORK, November 8.

Monday arrived the Earl of Halifax Packet Boat, Capt. Boulderſon, in 7 Weeks and 4 Days from Falmouth; and the Ship Robert, Capt. Ruſſell, from Dublin, by whom we have the following Advices, viz.

LONDON,

Sept. 4. Lord N—h, through the meditation of Lord H——d, is indefatigable in forming a coalition of parties againſt the enſuing ſeſſion. Though Lord C——m and his friends ſtill keep aloof, the Marquis of R——m and his party have liſtened to the propoſals, and Mr. B—— has in conſequence of theſe overtures, been in conference with Lord H——d ſeveral times within this fortnight paſt, particularly on Tueſday laſt, for above four hours. What the plan of accommodation is, has not yet tranſpired.

We hear that the miniſtry, in the above propoſals to Lord C——m, offered him his choice of any department, which he peremptorily refuſed without having a charte blanche.

They write from Paris, that it is thought there the King will be obliged at laſt, to uſe military force to ſuppreſs the diſcontents cauſed by the affair of the Duke d'Aiguillon.

Private letters from the Bay of Honduras ſay, that a ſharp diſpute had happened between the Bay men and the Spaniards, in which ſeveral of the former were killed.

It is reported, that when Commodore Proby was very lately at Cadiz, a native of Ireland, a Proteſtant, who having been fraudulently inliſted was then a ſoldier in the Spaniſh ſervice, at the riſk of his life, ventured out of the city, and leaping into the Commodore's boat, wrapped himſelf in the colours, claiming their protection as a ſubject of Great-Britain; that in violation of the ſacredneſs of our flag, the Spaniſh ſoldiers forced him from the boat: and to give proof how they are taught to reſpect an Engliſhman, they took the colours with him, which with an unparralleled inſolence they tore in pieces, and inſultingly trampled them under their feet. It is ſaid the Commodore has preferred a complaint to the Miniſtry, who (report ſays, we hope untruly) have hitherto treated it with diſregard.

Letters from Leghorn, dated Auguſt 18, ſay, " We have juſt now received certain advice from the Archipelago, that the Ruſſian fleet under Admiral Elphinſton had at laſt come up with the Turks, near the iſland of Scio, the 16th of July, N S. and had entirely deſtroyed them."

NEW-BERN, (North Carolina,) October 5.

On Wedneſday laſt, a ſpecial meſſenger arrived in town from Granville County to his excellency the Governor, with the melancholy account of a violent inſurrection, or rather rebellion, having broke out in Orange county among a ſett of men who call themſelves Regulators, and who have for ſome years paſt given infinite diſturbance to the civil government of this Province, but now have ſapped its whole foundation, brought its courts of juſtice to their own controul, leaped the ſtrong barrier of private property, and audaciouſly violated the laws of God and Man.

The people have for a long time oppoſed paying all manner of taxes, have entertained the vileſt opinion of the gentlemen of the law, and often threatened them with their vengence. Accordingly, as the Hon. Judge Henderſon, and ſeveral gentlemen of the law, were returning from Saliſbury circuit to Hillſborough in order to hold the court there, they were waylayed by a number of them with their rifles: but happily having notice of their helliſh deſign, by taking a contrary rout eluded their bloody plot. They ſtill gave out their threats of meeting them at Hillſborough, and wreaking their vengence on them there.

Theſe menaces were treated with contempt, or rather the violent ravings of a factions and diſcontented mob, than any ſettled and fixed reſolution of men of property to commit ſo daring an inſult to the laws of the country; and accordingly the court was opened, and proceeded to buſineſs But on Monday, the ſecond day of the court, the tragical ſcene began; a very large number of theſe People, headed by men of conſiderable property, appeared in Hillſborough, armed with clubs, whips, loaded at the ends with lead or iron, (a ſtroke from which would level the ſtrongeſt man) and many other offenſive weapons, and at once beſet the court-houſe. The firſt object of their revenge was Mr. John Williams, a gentleman of the law, who they aſſaulted as he was entering the court houſe; him they cruelly abuſed with many and violent blows with their loaded whips on the head and different parts of his body, until he by great good fortune made his eſcape and took ſhelter in a neighbouring ſtore. They then entered the court-houſe and immediately fixed their attention on Col. Fanning as the next object of their mercileſs cruelty; he expected his fate, and had retired to the judges ſeat, as the higheſt part of the court-houſe from which he might make the greateſt defence againſt theſe bloodthirſty and cruel ſavages; but, poor gentleman, vain were all his efforts, for after behaving with the moſt heroic courage, he fell a ſacrifice to numbers, and ſuffered a cruelty the richeſt language can but faintly paint: They ſeized him by the heels dragged him down the ſteps, his head ſtriking violently on every ſtep, carried him to the door, and forcing him out, dragged him on the ground over ſtones and brick batts, ſtruck him with their whips and clubs, kicked him, ſpit and ſpurned at him, and treated him with every poſſible mark of contempt and cruelty; till at length, by a violent effort of ſtrength and activity he reſcued himſelf from their merci eſs claws, and took ſhelter in a houſe; the Vultures purſued him there, and gave him a ſtroke that will probably deſtroy one of his eyes: In this piteous and grievouſly maimed condition they left him for a while, retreated to the court-houſe knocked down & very cruelly treated the deputy clerk of the Crown, aſcended the bench, ſhook their whips over judge Henderſon, told him his turn was next, ordered him to purſue buſineſs, but in the manner they ſhould preſcribe which was, that no lawyers ſhould enter the court-houſe, no juries but what they ſhould pick, and order new tryals in caſes where ſome of them had been caſt for their practices. They then ſeized Mr. Hooper, a gentlemen of the law, dragged and paraded him through the ſtreets, and treated him with every mark of contempt and inſult. This cloſed the firſt day. But the ſecond day preſented a ſcene, if poſſible, more tragic: Immediately on their diſcovering that the judge had made his eſcape from their fury, and refuſed to ſubmit to the dictates of lawleſs and deſperate men, they marched in a body to Col. Fanning's houſe, and on a ſignal given by their ringleaders, entred the ſame, deſtroyed every piece of furniture in it, ript open his beds, broke and threw in the ſtreets every piece of China and glaſs ware in the houſe, ſcattered all his papers and books in the wind, ſeized all his plate, caſh, and proclamation money; entered his cellar, and after ſatiating and gorging their more than ſavage ſtomachs with his liquors, ſtove and threw in the ſtreets the remainder; being now drunk with rage, liquor, and lawleſs fury, they took his wearing cloaths, ſtuck them on a Pole, paraded them in triumph through the ſtreets, and to cloſe the ſcene, pulled down and laid his houſe in ruins, Hunter and Butler, two of their chiefs, ſtripping in buff and beginning the heroic deed. They then went to a large handſome Church bell that Col. Fanning, at the expence of 60 or 70l. had made a Preſent of to the Church of Hillsborough, and ſplit it to pieces, and were at the point of pulling down the Church, but their leaders thinking it would betray their religious principles, reſtrained them. Their revenge being not yet ſatiated on this unhappy gentleman, they again purſued him, again cruelly beat him, and at length with dogs hunted him out of town, and with a cruelty more ſavage than blood hounds, ſtoned him as he fled. What heart but feels for the diſtreſſes of the unfortunate gentlemen! What hand that would not be uplifted in defence of ſuch injured innocence!

When they had fully glutted their revenge on the lawyers, and particular Col. Fanning, to ſhew their opinion of courts of juſtice, they took from his chains a Negro that had been executed ſome time and placed him at the lawyer's bar, and filled the judge's ſeat with human excrement, in deriſion and contempt of the characters that fill theſe reſpectable places. Would a Hottentot been guilty of ſuch a piece of brutality! or is there the moſt ſavage nation on earth whoſe manners are leſs cultivated!

On Monday the 15th Inſtant, about One o' Clock in the Morning, departed this Life, univerſally lamented throughout this Colony his Excellency the Right Honourable NORBORNE Baron de BOTETOURT, his Majeſty's Lieutenant Governor General, and Commander in Chief of the Colony and Dominion of Virginia, and Vice Admiral of the ſame.

PHILADELPHIA, November 1.

By an authentic Copy of a Report of the Lords of Trade and Plantations on the Petition lately exhibited by the honourable Proprietaries of Pennſylvania to his Majeſty in Council, againſt the Colony of Connecticut, for the Intruſions made by the People of that Government on the ſaid Proprietaries Lands on the River Suſquehanna, it appears, that the Agents for the ſaid Colony being called before their Lordſhips, declared, they had no other Inſtructions to avow the Proceedings of the Settlers upon the above Lands, as founded on any Authority from that Colony, or to ſet forth on behalf of the Colony, any Claim to the ſaid Lands.

" The New-York Merchants here, in Conſequence of Orders from thence, by the laſt Packet, are ſhipping large Quantities of all Sorts of our Manufactures; thoſe for Woolen Goods in particular, are ſo extenſive, that there are not enough in the Market, I am well aſſured, to ſupply them. A Hiſtory of a very extraordinary Aneuriſmatic Tumor.

MRS. Sarah Lucas, of this town, about 19 years ago, ſoon after ſhe was delivered of twins, diſcovered a ſmall tumor upon the right ſide of her neck which gradually increaſed and by turns grew painful, and more hard than common, eſpecially when ſhe had a fever. About 12 days ago upon fatiguing herſelf, and taking cold before ſhe had perfectly recover'd of a malignant fever, of which ſhe had been ill great part of this laſt ſummer, ſhe was ſeized with a violent diſtraction, and the tumor, which had enlarged much faſter the laſt ſummer than before, was ſurprizingly enlarged, and exceſſively hard. And in defiance of all that was done, died yeſterday morning, Æt 46. Upon examination this day, we found the ſkin of the tumor nearly the ſame colour of the reſt of her body, extending eleven inches from one ſide of her neck to the other, acroſs the trachea or windpipe, from her chin to the ſternum or breaſt bone ſix inches, upon making an inciſion round it, we found it adhered to the trachea, and ſeem'd to be a a ſarcomous cartilaginous dilatation of the carotid artery, in ſome part more than an inch thick, and contain'd by gueſs (of ſome of the byſtanders) near a pint of black fluid blood. Upon taking off this we diſcovered another tumor of the ſteatomatous, ſarcomous cartilaginous kind, about the bigneſs of a large gooſe egg, but more reſembling a large long pair, reaching from near her left ear down into the thorax, a little below the clavelet or colar bone. At her deſire I have frequently felt of the tumor within this 12 or 14 years, but could never, tho' I felt with that view, diſcover any pulſation, which I now account for, from the thickneſs and cartilaginæus nature of the capſula: and for its being more hard and painful in a fever, from the preternatural extention of the aneuriſmatic tumor, ariſing from the morbid expanſion of the blood and juices.——And if any ignorant bold operator had been truſted to cut it open or out, ſhe would have ſuddenly died under his hands.

The only method as it appears to me, in ſuch caſes that can be made uſe of to any advantage, is to mend the morbid ſtate of the blood and juices, and to abſtain from every thing that has a tendency to produce too much heat and motion.

YESTERDAY, after cloſely applying myſelf to buſineſs, I amuſed myſelf in walking in a neighbouring grove, very pleaſant in its ſituation, attended by the ſweet muſic of various and beautiful birds, echoing their harmonious notes through the wood. But ſoon their muſic was turned into ſilence, and my joy into mourning; for I ſaw many people with their heads bowed down, ſorrow in their faces, and every eye running down with tears. Amazed at the ſight, I ran with haſte to know the cauſe of their grief, and aſking them why they wept? one ſaid, "O! ſir, " art thou a ſtranger to theſe ſhades? haſt thou " not heard of the fall of LIBERTY? Liberty, " that deareſt of names, and beſt of bleſſings;— " follow me, ſir, and I will ſhew you the cauſe " of this great mourning." He conducted me to a mournful ſhade, where ſat a beautiful woman all beſmear'd in blood.—" This (ſaid he) is liberty " who is haunted by the nobles of the earth, " and whoſe wounds are almoſt inſupportable. " Alas! why was I born to this unhappy hour, " thus to behold dying liberty! or why do I " ſurvive only to be made wretched and live in " miſery! are all the pleaſures of life at at an " end? Alas! they are gone!"——But to behold the wounds, and the fatal ſtabs given by the hands of tyranny, would ſhock the hardeſt heart, to hear her crying out under the anguiſh of her wounds, " O! how I am caſt out, and how I am " forſaken by thoſe that were my friends, and " delivered into the hands of cruel murderers! " Behold thoſe that ſhewed their pretended zeal " for my cauſe; have now taken the ſword in " their hands to give the fatal wound and com- " pleat my ruin——to whom ſhall I go for ſup- " port, but to thoſe who move within the mid- " dle region of life;—but I faint under the pains " of my wounds—adieu."

A ſhocking ſight thus to behold dying liberty! O, my dear countrymen, is liberty a dying! I fear that its dead, if ſo it deſerves the moſt ſolemn mourning ever yet known in America. But if it be yet alive, let thoſe to whom, ſhe addreſs'd herſelf in her laſt words (viz. the common people or landholders) exert themſelves to the utmoſt of their power to defend and maintain her, ſince ſhe is forſaken by her pretended zealots, the import-

iew our houſes & our lands mortgaged; our ſons
nd our daughters ſold into bondage; and not in our power to redeem them——Is it therefore not time to look out for our ſafety, and to unite in ſome method to prevent thoſe ſcenes of woe and ſtorms of impending ruin which are gathering over our heads, and threatens our final ruin. But to adopt meaſures for that purpoſe I muſt leave to the wiſe and candid lovers of liberty. Humbly offering this thought, viz that if the principal part of the towns on the continent would vote it at their public town meetings not to purchaſe any goods imported from Great Britain, contrary to the agreement formerly held to, nor allow any to be had in their families, and that all ſuch as purchaſe ſuch goods or wares, ſhall incur the diſpleaſure of the town, and be treated as enemies and betrayers of their country, and their names, together with the offences committed, be recorded in the public records of the town.——And further that they ſhall not be allowed the honour of any office of public truſt in ſaid town, nor have any privileges that they lawfully could withhold from them It would greatly diſcourage the importing of Britiſh goods into America, and perhaps for the preſent put a ſtop to it. Which is the earneſt prayer of a Son of Liberty, and a

Friday laſt, Edmund Burke, Eſq; Member for Wendover, arrived at his houſe in Fludger-ſtreet, Weſtminſter, from Ireland, where he has been for theſe two months paſt.

By the arrival of a certain Gentleman from Ireland, and the appearance of Junius's letter on Wedneſday, relative to Col Lutterell, many think the grand myſtery at length unravelled who is the real Junius.

The miniſtry have not now the leaſt doubt but that all the American Colonies will ſoon follow the example of that of New-York, as they think their ſelf love and avarice will not let them ſuffer New York to engroſs excluſively all the advantages of trade with the mother country.

There is no doubt but the colony of New-York would be very glad that all the other colonies would continue to abide by their non importation agreement, as the New York merchants muſt ſpeedily acquire enormous fortunes, by having as it were an excluſive power of ſupplying the whole continent of North-America, with the manufactures of Britain.

Plymouth. Auguſt 31. The Queen man of war, a new ſhip, is now unrigging in order to be put out of commiſſion, and to be laid up in ordinary. He hath ſomthing about him very valuable, and it is a commodity that we ſtand much in need of: but it is doubtful whether it will thrive in our climate at this time, was the Holy Father diſpoſed to part with it.

TUESDAY, November 20, 1770. [NUMB. 308.]

LONDON,

A ſummary of the trial of John Taylor, (Serjeant in the Firſt, or Royal Scots, Regiment of Foot) at Guildford, Auguſt 1, before Sir Sidney Stafford Smythe, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, for the murder of Mr James Smith; taken by a Gentleman preſent.

THE witneſs produced in favour of the proſecution was aſked, "Sir, do you know how to hold a pint pot?" Yes, ſaid the witneſs. Then the Council, ſtretching out his arm, ſaid, "Did not you, at the Wheatſheaf, and in company with the priſoner, hold out your arm thus, and ſay, Here is damnation to all Scots, and damnation to them who will not drink it?" Being anſwered in the affirmative, the Judge ſaid,——"Turn that fellow out of the Court; I will admit no ſuch evidence!" This done, a woman appeared; but it being objected to her that ſhe had frequently ſworn ſhe would hang the priſoner, her evidence was refuſed, but none of them ſwearing any thing to affect the priſoner's life, it was thought needleſs to bring any exculpatory proof.

The firſt witneſs examined was James Edwards, a coachman to the deceaſed, who depoſed, That being at the Wheatſheaf near the Turnpike, on the Surry ſide of Weſtminſter bridge, about nine o'clock in the evening, ſome time in the beginning of October laſt, drinking a pint of beer with one Pepper, his fellow ſervant, in the common taproom, the priſoner, in company with another ſoldier and a gardener, all Scotſmen, came in, and called for a pot of beer; and ſome words or diſpute ariſing between them, the Deponent in a low voice obſerved to his companion Pepper, that they ſeemed to be all of them Lord Bute's countrymen: which words being overheard by the Serjeant he jumped from his ſeat, and ſaid, D——n your bludes, what is that you ſay about Lord Bute and his countrymen? Did you ever know any harm by the Scots? "No, ſays Edwards, nor no good." The Serjeant then replied, "Did not the Scots fight the ſavages in America, and ſubdue them?" Edward ſaid, "That it was very fit one ſavage ſhould fight another?" upon which the Serjeant ſtruck Edwards on the ſide of his head, with a ſmall cane; and the Gardener likewiſe ſtruck him a terrible blow with his fiſt; the Deponent being fearful more harm might enſue, ran out of the tap room down into the yard, with a view to call in another fellow ſervant, one Brook, to his aſſiſtance, who, being buſy about his horſes, did not come immediately to his aid; however, he returned back again, and on coming into the paſſage leading from the yard to the tap room, he obſerved his maſter, the deceaſed, having the priſoner either by the arm, or collar, he would not be poſitive which, endeavouring to turn him out of the houſe, which he accompliſhed, and then quitted his hold; on this he obſerved the Serjeant to draw his ſword, and making a lounge, ran his Maſter, Mr. Smith, into the belly, and then took to his heels, and ran away; and on hearing Mr. Smith calling out, "Stop the villain, he has ſtabbed me," the Deponent and ſeveral others purſued him about forty yards, took him, and brought him back to the houſe.

The next witneſs examined was William Forreſt, a coach-liner, who was drinking a pint of beer; and with Edwards, Pepper, and the three Scotſmen, beforementioned were the only perſons preſent in the ſaid tap room, who entirely confirmed the evidence of Edwards, to the minuteſt particulars as to the words, blows, &c. &c. with the following additional circumſtances; that while Edwards was gone into the yard, the Scotſmen kept up ſuch a wrangling, and made ſuch an uproar, that Mr. Smith, who lived in the back part of the houſe, came into the tap room, being ſo deſired by Mrs. Sabine, (whoſe huſband rented the tap of Mr. Smith,) in order that he might put a ſtop to the noiſe and confuſion made by the Serjeant and his companions; Mr. Smith on his entering the room, enquired into the occaſion of the diſturbance; the Serjant replied, "D——n your fat guts, what is that to you, are you Landlord of the houſe?" Mr. Smith anſwered, "He was not Landlord, but Maſter of the houſe," and very civilly requeſted of them to pay their reckoning, and go quietly out of the houſe; the Serjeant then made uſe of many abuſive words declared he would not ſee his countrymen ill uſed, and ſaid, "He would as ſoon kill an Engliſhman, as eat a meſs of crowdie." Mr. Smith then ſaid to the Serjeant, "So, friend, becauſe you wear a red coat on your back, you think you have a right to come into people's houſes, and abuſe them as you pleaſe!" The Serjeant replying in a very impudent and abuſive manner, Mr. Smith took him by the ſhoulder or collar, and puſhed him out of the drinking-room into the paſſage, when he, the deponent, loſt ſight of them both; but in a very ſhort ſpace of time he heard Mr. Smith cry out, "Stop the villian! he has ſtabbed me;" and on Mr. Smith's return into the room he unbuttoned his waiſtcoat, and pulled up his ſhirt when the blood ſpouted from the wound in a moſt terrible manner.

The next witneſs examined, was one John Grundy, a Taylor, who depoſed, that he was coming by the door at the ſame time the affair happened, going home to his own houſe in the Upper Marſh, and hearing a great noiſe, he ſtopped, and ſaw Mr. Smith and the Serjeant in the paſſage; that the former had the latter either by the arm or coller and puſhed him out of doors, ſaying, that "he would be maſter of his own houſe;" that the Serjeant then drew his ſword inſtantly, and ſtamping with his foot, made a very furious lunge and ran his ſword into Mr. Smith's body, making uſe of this expreſſion, "There, d—mn you!" and ran away immediately; that he, (the ſaid deponent) purſued him, with ſome more perſons, near 40 yards, and helped to take him, and bring him back again to the houſe.

Two or three more witneſſes were examined, who gave their evidence to the above purport; and one of them, whoſe name was Joſeph Brooks (a ſervant likewiſe to Mr. Smith) depoſed, that on his Maſter's turning the Serjeant out, he ſaw him draw his ſword, and was ſo exact in his evidence as to diſpoſe, that he ſaw the ſword go into his Maſter's belly.

After the trial had laſted about four hours, the Judge ſummed up the evidence, with candour & impartiality and gave charge to the Jury, he obſerved, "Reflections upon countries were really horrid in themſelves, and ſuch as he, from the bottom of his heart, deteſted and abhorred: there is continued he, no Scotſman nor Engliſhman; we are all Britons, the ſubjects of the ſame Prince, and under the protection of the ſame government; the inhabitants of North-Briton have fought our battles and prevailed; let national prejudices be exploded, every Scotſman is an Engliſhman, and every Engliſhman is a Scotſman: this is the ſenſe of the Treaty of Union."

The Jury conſulted together half an hour, without going out of Court, when the Foreman gave in their verdict, "Guilty of Murder;" But the Judge ſeemed much ſurprized, and ſaid, "You are wrong; it is not Murder, only Manſlaughter:" On which the Jury, after ſome heſitation, and being confuſed, agreed that it ſhould be Special.

Sig; Strong

Immediately after the above circumſtance, Mr. Jaſper Smith, a near relation of the deceaſed, aſked a Counſellor preſent, whether he might be permitted to propoſe a queſtion? The Judge immediately enquired the perſon's name, and deſired him to walk forward, which he did. After making a handſome apology, he ſaid, he hoped there was no harm in his ſpeaking; to which his Lordſhip anſwered, No: Mr. Smith then obſerved, that he was much ſurprized at ſuch a tranſaction, and aſked whether it was uſual, after a Jury had brought in a ſolemn verdict, to have it cancelled? That he always underſtood that after a verdict was brought in by a Jury, it was deciſive and final; And further ſaid, "If this is to be the caſe, I think Juries to be entirely uſeleſs and unneceſſary." His Lordſhip made no reply, and every perſon preſent in Court ſeemed pleaſed with Mr. Smith's decent and ſpirited behaviour.

Cork, Aug. 20. Friday evening a riotous mob aſſembled in the North Liberty of this city to intercept ſome carrs expected from Dublin with woolen cloth the manufacture of that place; ſome carrs were met by them, but contained nothing but the cloathing of the army, which they unpack'd, deſtroyed ſome, and carried off a great deal more, among which were the waiſtcoats and breeches (which are buff colour) of a whole regiment.——

PHILADELPHIA,

Nov. 12. Capt. Loxley, from London, out laſt from Falmouth, which he left on the 30th of Sept. informs us, that Advice, it was ſaid, had been received by the Britiſh Miniſter of a very formidable Fleet of French and Spaniſh Men of War having entered the Mediterranean, with Deſign, it was apprehended to interrupt the rapid Progreſs of the Ruſſian Arms in the Levant, in conſequence of this and other Alarming Intelligence, Orders were iſſued out for equipping, at Chatham and Portſmouth with all poſſible expedition, 32 Ships of the Line, and ſeveral ſmaller Men of War, the principal Part of which were to be ſent into the Mediterranean as a Fleet of obſervation, and a ſtrong Squadron was deſtined for N. America—that he was told there was a very hot Preſs in & about London, &c. to man the Ships of War, 1700 Seamen, who are now very ſcarce in England, being wanted; and what confirms this, he was boarded in the Downs by a Lieut. of a Man of war, who took one of his beſt hands, which occaſioned his putting into Falmouth—that it was currently reported that a War between Britain, France, and Spain would inevitably take Place in a ſhort Time, and all the other Powers of Europe ſeem'd to be preparing for Action, particularly the King of Pruſſia, who has now, ready for the Field, the beſt diſciplined Army in the World, and it was generally believed he would ſoon ſtrike ſome capital Stroke——that it was reported that ſome terrible Commotions had lately ariſen at Conſtantinople, which had obliged all the European Ambaſſadors to flye from thence, in Diſguiſe, to preſerve their Lives.

NEWYORK, November 12.

Sunday Evening Capt. Miller arrived here from London, but laſt from Plymouth in 6 Weeks: Whilſt he lay there Advice was received that the Spainards had taken Faukland Iſland, (the Patagonian Country, in the South Seas) from the Engliſh, which occaſioned a hot Preſs at Plymouth, &c and a large Fleet of Men of War was immediately put into Commiſſion, which gave Cauſe to ſuſpect a ſpeedy Rupture between Great-Britain and Spain.

On Saturday, from Philadelphia, came to Town Capt. William Bedlow lately from Jamaica, which he left the 1ſt October, and reports, that on the 28th Sept. a Veſſel arrived there from Hiſpanola which brought advice that a Plague was broke out there at Leogane, Port au Prince, and other Places in the Bite. That the diſorder was not brought from any infected place, but ſuppoſed to originate there, and to be occaſioned by unwholſome Effluvia from the frequent Iruptions and Earthquakes, with which that Place has been viſited for ſome Months paſt, and have continued almoſt every Day ſince. That ſoon after the people are taken, a Boil riſes under the Arm, and they generally die in 18 Hours. That the General had retired from Port au Prince to the Plat Form, and that the French on the ſouth ſide the Iſland, had poſted troops to guard the paſſes and prevent Communication with infected places.

On the above Intelligence. Depoſitions were taken before the County Lieutenant in Jamaica, and orders given to admit no veſſels without Examination, or Quarantice. We hear there are orders for the like Precaution in this place————Capt. Bedlow's Depoſition having been taken before the Mayor on Sunday laſt; and on Monday, Capt. John Baptiſto Kan, in the Sloop having arrived from in Hiſpaniola was not admitted into the Harbour, but is now performing Quarantine at Bedlow's Iſland, in the Bay before the Town.

A London paper of the 20th of September, (by Capt Miller,) mentions that a Dutch ſhip laden with Military Stores for Morocco, having been forced by a ſtorm into Cadiz, the Cargo was ſeiz'd and the ſhip detain'd ——The Parliament of Paris continue to make new and ſpirited Remonſtrances againſt the arbitrary proceedings of the Court, as being contrary to the Letter and Spirit of the French Monarchy, and the Kings oath, and evincing a premeditated deſign to change the Form of Government.——The Daniſh Squadron had been reinforced with 3 Ships of the Line, 2 large Frigates, and ſeveral Bomb Ketches.—Had renew'd their Attack upon Algiers, made a great Breach, beat down ſome of the Battlements, diſmounted ſeveral Guns, and Terms of accomodation had been made, but rejected, and the Firing continued when the advice Boat left the Place. The Spaniſh Ambaſſador pretends to have 2 cauſes of Complaint.——One reſpecting Falconcers Iſland, the other for calling his Maſter a Fool. At the York Meeting, Sir George Saville is to have the Thanks of the Freeholders for his conduct in Parliament, when they are to aſſure him of Support.——The Duke of St. Albans, who has been abroad 16 Years, great part of the time a priſoner, is returned home, and has been viſited by many of the Nobility and Gentry. The French Fleet had bombarded Tunis, and thrown the place into Conſternation, on which, Terms of accommodation were propoſed, and a Ceſſation of the firings enſued But the Bey finding leſs damage was done than he expected, declared War againſt France, and the firing was renewed when the expreſs came away.

Two Fleets of Obſervation, it is ſaid are to be ſent out immediately, one to the Streights to aſſiſt the Ruſſians if attack'd and to watch the Motions of the French and Spaniards; the other to the Weſt Indies; each Fleet to conſiſt of 16 Ships of the Line. The hotteſt preſs in England for Seamen, that ever was known, from Fiſhing Boats and outward bound Veſſels, the Men are impreſſed and even, Landſmen, and Naval Preparations of every Kind are making with the utmoſt Diligence.——Sept. 18. At Portſmouth 9 more Ships of the Line ordered into Commiſſion, 3 are at Spithead, and from Chatham, 3 of 64 Guns, 1 of 74 and a ſloop of 14 are fitting for Channel Service, 1 of 74 is to remain a Guard Ship; all poſſible Expedition is uſed, and the greateſt Encouragement given to Artificers, who work extra Hours, one of 32, another of 50 are fitting at Sheerneſs.——Sept. 20. The Ruſſian Fleet not ſail'd from Dover, a Difference had ariſen between the Ruſſian Commanders and the Engliſh Maſters of Tranſports in their ſervice, the firſt requiring them to ſail under Ruſſian Colours, which the Engliſh refuſed, inſiſting upon having Engliſh Colours—The Ruſſian Ambaſſador gone down to ſettle the Diſpute,—not doubted but the Engliſh will be juſtified. The Board of Admiralty daily making Contracts for all Sorts of Naval Stores. 17 000 Seamen to be raiſed immediately.——An Army of 30 000 Men ordered by the Empreſs Queen, to the Frontiers of Hungary.——many think that Earl C. will have no Part in the new adminiſtration,—Wagers that England, France, Spain, Portugal, and Pruſſia, will be engaged in the War.——for which the Peace-makers may be thanked,——An Alliance ſaid to be on the Carpet between the French and Dutch, &c.

PROVIDENCE, November 16.

Saturday night laſt a conſiderable Number of People riotouſly aſſembled in King's County, and with their Faces black'd proceeded to his Majeſty's Goal there, the outer door of which they broke open with Iron Bars and Pick-Axes; they then violently entered the Goal, broke every Lock therein, and ſet at Liberty ſundry Criminals, viz William Reynolds, Thomas Clarke, Eliſha Reynolds, and Samuel Caſey lately convicted of Money-making, one of whom (Samuel Caſey) was under Sentence of Death.——A Proclamation is iſſued by the Governor, at the Requeſt of the General Aſſembly, offering a Reward of Fifty Pounds lawful Money for apprehending any one or more concerned in this Affair, and Fifty pounds more for apprehending Caſey. ——Information has been lodged againſt ſome of the Parties concerned in this daring Outrage, and Meaſures are taken for tracing the Villainy to its Source.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1770. [NUMB. 309.]

By Capt. Loxley, from London, and Capt. Crawford, from Liverpool and Londonderry, both arrived at Phailadelphia in ſhort Paſſages, we have the following Advices, viz.

LONDON, September 10.

AT the late viſit of a certain Ambaſſador to Lord Weymouth, it is ſaid, that he inſiſted knowing the deſtination our men of war now fitting out, but his Lordſhip aſſured him, that the Engliſh would by no means be accountable to any nation on that head: Upon which the Ambaſſador replied, that if the Engliſh thought proper to drive his coutry into a war, his Court would be prepared for it; and immediately turning on his heel, abruptly left the Engliſh Miniſter.

Sept. 11. L—d C——n, it is now well known, will not accept the Seals, unleſs his Friend L—d C——m has, either publicly, or privately the Direction of Affairs.

It is ſaid that Col. L———l has reſigned the poſt of Adjutant General to the Army in Ireland, to which he was lately appointed. The following Reaſon is aſſigned for this Reſignation; upwards of 150 Officers have ſent over Letters to the Secretary of State, deſiring Leave to reſign their Commiſſions, and for no other reaſon, but becauſe Mr L——l was their Adjutant. The Adminiſtration, foreſeeing the diſagreeable Conſequences that might probably enſue from continuing Mr. L——l in his Office, prudently demanded his Reſignation.

Sept. 13 It was obſerved by a great Man at a late moſt reſpectable Meeting, that France and Spain were unfaithful as to the obſervance of Treaties ſubſiſting between them and this Nation; but that the Behaviour of Portugal, for a long Time paſt, has been Ingratitude itſelf.

Extract of a letter from Paris, September 5.

"Some Politicians here are of Opinion, that notwithſtanding the Pains which the Miniſter of this Court, and that of Great Britain, ſeem to take, in order to maintain the Peace between the two Nations, Affairs are nevertheleſs in ſuch a Situation, as it will be impoſſible to regulate them to mutual Satisfaction, without coming to an open Rupture."

Extract of a letter from Warſaw, Auguſt 10.

"Advice has been received at Lemberg, that General Tottleben had gained a compleat Victory over the Turks, commanded by four Baſhaws in Armenia, the Conſequence of which was the taking of Erzerum The Turks loſt upon the Occaſion 6000 Men 15 Pieces of cannon, ſeverral Staffs of command, Horſes Tails, and a great Number of Tents."

"Yeſterday we received Advice, by a Veſſel which put in here to deliver ſome Diſpatches from London, that a few Days before ſhe fell in with a Spaniſh Fleet conſiſting of ſix ſhips of the line, and as many Frigates, beſides Bomb-ketches and Store ſhips, ſteering towards the Mediterranean: She expected to be brought to, and examined, but they lay by, and continued ſo till it was dark, when ſhe ſaw no more of them. This account did not at all alarm us, as our Garriſon is very healthy, well ſupplied with proviſions, and the Fortifications repaired, and in good Order."

It is certain that the Spaniſh Ambaſſador has preſented a Memorial to our Miniſtry from his Court, touching ſome Inſults that Nation is ſaid to have met with from the Engliſh in the South Seas.

Diſpatches of Importance, relative to the ſecret Machinations of the Spaniſh Court, it is ſaid, have been very lately received from Gibraltar.

It is ſaid that a Patent has paſſed the Seal, appointing Thomas Hutchinſon, Eſq; Lieutenant-Governor of Maſſachuſett's Bay, to be the Governor of that Province.

A great Perſonage is reported to have declared it as his Wiſh, that a ſpeedy Reconciliation may be effected between Britain and her Colonies.

There are Letters in Town from Conſtantinople, which inform, that unhappy City now labours under all the Horrors of an approaching Famine, there being at preſent a great Scarcity; all the Supplies, both from the Black Sea and the Propontis being cut off by the Ruſſians.

Biſhop Lloyd, many Years ſince, fortold from the Revelations the Deſtruction of the the Turkiſh Empire: Whiſton, who was laughed at by the Wits for it, actually fixed the final Ruin of the Ottomans to the preſent Period, or very near it.

Sept. 22. The accounts from Plymouth, Portſmouth, Chatham and Sheerneſs, furniſh us with the following Liſt of 23 ſhips of War, ordered to be fitted out for immediate Service.

At Plymouth. Hero of 74 Guns, Cornwall 74, Defence 74, Temeraire 74, Prince of wales 74, Belleiſle 64, and Firm of 60 Guns.

At Portſmouth. Achilles of 60 Guns, Ajax 70, Centaur 70 Arrogant 74, St Antonio 50, Bellona 74, and Rippon of 60 Guns.

At Sheerneſs. Portland of 50 and Minerva of 32 Guns

The Albion is intended for a Guardſhip

Orders are iſſued for the raiſing of 17,000 Seamen, with all poſſible expedition.

Several Perſons were preſſed Yeſterday in Newgate-ſtreet.

As ſoon as the preſs Warrants were iſſued out, the French and Spaniſh Ambaſſadors ſent Diſpatches with the Intelligench to their reſpective Courts.

We are aſſured, from very good Authority, the Parliament is to meet on Tueſday, the 13th Day of November next.

It is apprehended, that the Blow is ſtruck before this Time at Falkland Iſland.

We are aſſured from the beſt Authority, that there is not the leaſt Truth in the Report through Holland of an Inſurrection at Conſtantinople, or that any of the Ambaſſadors there have been put to Death, or even moleſted.

According to the returns at the Admiralty, no more than 902 ſailors were impreſſed the firſt night and day preſs warrants were iſſued, upwards of 100 of whom made their eſcape from on board the veſſel, which they run aſhore at Gray's.

Several houſes of rendezvous are opened at Hull, Shields and Sunderland, where the preſs is carrying on very hot. Tenders are at all the above places.

We hear that the preſent preſs warrants are confined to a limitted number of days.

Beſides the ſhips before ordered for ſervice, the following are put into commiſſion: At Woolwich, the Prudent, of 64 Guns. At Chatham, the Barfler, of 90 Guns Reſolution, 74; Egmont, 74; Buckingham, 74 At Portſmouth the Namure, of 90 Guns; Elizabeth, 74; Terrible, 74; Trident, 74; Boyne 74

PHILADELPHIA, November 15.

Exract of a letter from an Engliſh gentleman at Liſbon, October 15.

"We have advice from Braſil, that five ſail of Spaniſh men of war and frigates, with a large ſtore ſhip, had ſail'd in May laſt from Buenos Ayres, to diſlodge us from our new ſettlements at Faulkland iſland; this may poſſibly draw on hoſtilities on our ſide againſt the Spaniards.——The The Ruſſians have had amazing ſucceſs againſt the Turks which ſeems to give umbrage to France & Spain, & occaſions our ſending ſome ſhips of the line up the Medterranean."

Six Guardſhips are ordered to be ſtationed along the North American Coaſt.

By letters from Cadiz, of the 10th of September, we learn, That a Spaniſh frigate arrived there from Buenos Ayres the 6th of that month on which an expreſs was ſent off to the King at Madrid——that in the mean time no perſon was ſuffered to land from her, nor any to go on board, or even along ſide: It is ſaid ſhe has on board the Engliſh garriſon of Fulkland Iſland in the South Seas, of which the Spaniards have diſpoſſeſſed them.——This no doubt is the foundation for the ſituation for the fleet in England, and the hot preſs there, and will very probably terminate in a war between England and Spain.

Friday laſt arrived here, the ſhip Hope, Capt. John Robinſon, from the Bay of Honduras, which he left the 29th of September, by whom we learn, that a number of Spaniards having been detected in enticeing the Negroes to run away, were ſeized by way of reprizal, and put to work on board an Engliſh veſſel.

NEW-YORK, November 22.

The Ship Britannia, Capt. Miller whoſe Arrival here we mentioned in our laſt, ſail'd from London the 9th of September; but meeting with contrary Winds, he put into Plymouth, where all his hands were preſſed, which obliged him to ſend an Expreſs to London, the Return of whom brought Letters to the 28th of September, with Advice, that a Spaniſh War was hourly expected.——That the Spaniards had taken Faulkland Iſland from the Engliſh, and had a very large Fleet at Ferrol; on occaſion of which great Preparations were making in England; and that upon the Arrival of the next Mail or Expreſs from Madrid, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador was to give his definitive Anſwer,

BOSTON, November 22.

Since our laſt arrived here, Capts. Hall, Reed, Langden and Burnell, from London, by whom there is the following FRESH ADVICES, viz.

LONDON, September 25,

The following is an authentic copy of a letter ſent on Monday night from the Admiralty to the maſter of Lloyd's Coffee houſe, Lombard ſtreet.

"The Favourite ſloop of war being arrived off the Mother Bank from Faulkland iſland, brings an account, that a Spaniſh men of war and five frigates with artillery and land forces on board, had diſpoſſeſſed His Majeſty of the ſettlement of Fort Egmont. I am commanded by the Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty to give you this information, that the merchants, and others who are any ways intereſted therein, may be fully acquainted therewith."

Signed ———.

Several houſes of rendezvous are opened at Hull, Shields, and Sunderland, where the preſs is carrying on very hot. Tenders are at all the above places.

The Spaniſh ambaſſador diſpatched three expreſſes to his court in the ſpace of three hours after the meaſures for impreſſing was reſolved upon and had taken place.

A categorical anſwer has been demanded from the Court of Spain, whether they would immediately relinquiſh all pretentions to Faulkland's iſland.

We are well aſſured, that a few days ſince the Merchants in the Turkey trade applied to Lord N——h, to know the deſtination of the fleet now fitting out, (a certain information on that head was a matter of no ſmall imporance to them) when his Lordſhip waved acquainting them with the part of the world it was deſigned for, but declared it was NOT intended for the Mediterranean.

This naval armament now fitting out, is certainly in conſequence of the French and Spaniſh hoſtile meaſures, that they apprehend they can't act quick enough to be upon a footing with them.

A naval officer aſſures us, that near 6000 men have been impreſſed for the uſe of His Majeſty's navy ſince this day ſe'nnight.

Fifteen per Cent. Inſurance againſt a War for one Month, was offered Yeſterday at Lloyd's Coffee houſe.

Sept. 26. The preſs for ſeamen began in Ireland the very day it did in London.

Within theſe few days, the frieght of ſhipping in the river Thames has been raiſed very conſiderable on account of the riſe in ſeamen's wages, and the expectation of a war.

Laſt Friday evening a courier extraordinary arrived at the Spaniſh Ambaſſador's with diſpatches from the Court of Madrid; and it is ſomewhat remarkable, that he ſet out early next morning with diſpatches from his Excellency for the ſaid court.

Not leſs than nine meſſengers have been ſent from the Spaniſh Ambaſſador's within the courſe of a fortnight laſt paſt to the court of Madrid.

Meſſengers were ſent on Monday to ſome of the Members of the Privy Council who are out of town to repair hither immediately.

It is ſaid Lord Chatham is much againſt the tedious form of demanding the reſtitution of Faukland Iſland from the Spaniards; his Lordſhip, as they have firſt begun hoſtilities, being of opinion that ſome important blow ſhould be ſtruck immediately on our part.

Diſpatches are preparing to be ſent off with the greateſt expedition, to the governors and conſuls at all the Engliſh ſettlements in the Weſt Indies, & on the continent.

Sept 27 All the letters received by our merchants from Madrid, by the laſt packet, mention a report, which prevailed there, of an intended rupture with England; and that they every hour expected a declaration of war to be made there.

Preſs warrants are ſigned by the lord mayor for impreſſing men within the city.

Monday 20 per cent was given to inſure veſſels from the leeward iſlands, but to return 15 in caſe of no war before their arrival.

Why ſhould War, ſays a correſpondent, change the Miniſtry, ſeveral of the preſent ſet have given ample proof that they have no objection to Scenes of Blood.

The Earl of Chatham it is ſaid, is in high eſteem with a Great Perſonage; his declaration that the Spaniards had already ſtruck a blow againſt us in ſome part of the world, being now verified.

It is conjectured that Lord Chatham's intelligence came by means of the King of P——.

The Spaniards have taken care to be armed at all points to receive us; a new Governor has put Cadiz in a ſtate of defence; and Gen. O Reily from the Havannah, aſſures that every place in that part of the world was in thorough repair.

When the Spaniſh Ambaſſador was aſked concerning the truth of ſome important intelligence received by our Court, he very politely aſſured the Secretary, that he neither could nor would return an anſwer, till he recived further orders from Madrid.

The French and Venetians have lately entered into a treaty with each other, ſo that we may expect to ſee, when an additional French fleet is in the Mediterranean, an open alliance between thoſe States declared.

Some intelligent people imagine, that the French have no real deſigns in the Mediterranean, but that they will attempt to draw great part of our forces there, and then attack our poſſeſſions in the Atlantic.

FRANCE and SPAIN——arming againſt Great Britain. ———PORTUGAL——ſoliciting the aſſiſtance of Spain, and treating England with contempt.———PRUSSIA and GERMANY——bound, by affection for each other; the former watching an opportunity to retaliate and pay himſelf what we owe him.———DENMARK——married our King's ſiſter, but F—e is the pedagogue of the pupil Prince.———HUNGARY——has conſolidated its intereſt by the marriage of the Dauphin.———SWEDEN——ſupplies ammunition to our enemy.———TURKY is leagued in with the intereſts of France.———The STATES of ITALY——are cemented by religion to the intereſts of France and Spain.———CORSICA——in the poſſeſſion of France.———PIRATES and ALGERINES——in awe of France.———ORIENTAL INDIA——rebelling againſt England.———HOLLAND——aſſiſting all ſtates but ours.———RUSSIA——making her own conqueſts, with the aſſiſtance of our ſeamen.———IRELAND——in mutiny———AMERICA——in open rebellion.———SCOTLAND——adviſing meaſures to prove herſelf the firſt great friend to the Stuart Line, and this ſwarm of enemies.——Alias! poor England.

BOSTON, November 19.

Extract of a Letter from London, September 19.

"The Nations of Europe are on the eve of a general Rupture. By the daily accounts, England and Spain will ſoon commence hoſtilities. Laſt night was a very great preſs for ſeamen. Powerful armaments are fitting out by ſea—the land forces recruiting. Frequent councils and conſultations between the King, Miniſters and Ambaſſadors of foreign Courts. Expreſſes returning to and from all quarters; in ſhort every thing bears the aſpect of War.

"How a war with Spain will affect the Colonies I cannot tell; but 'tis generally thought here a change of Miniſters will by that means be brought about in favour of the popular party. Should that take place, a union muſt enſue."——

Extract of a Letter from London, dated Sept. 25. 1770.

"MOST of our Friends are of Opinion a War will ſoon be declared, ten Guineas was offer'd laſt Night to inſure no War for a Month, to pay one hundred if it happens. Yeſterday a Letter was ſent to the Maſter of Old Lloyd's Coffee Houſe, ſigned Philip Stephens, Secretary to the Admiralty, acquainting him, That the Favourite Sloop of War was arrived at the Mother Bank from Faulkland's Iſland, who brings an Account that a Squadron of five Spaniſh Frigates, with Land Forces and Artillery, had diſpoſſeſſed his Majeſty's Forces of their Settlement there; which he was commanded by my Lords Commiſſioners of the Admiralty, to acquaint him with, in order that the intelligence might be made public among the Merchants intereſted in this Information.—This Letter, and the large Fleet now fitting out, has a ſerious aſpect, and from all I collect, a War is likely to happen ſoon; if the Fleet are not manned ſoon, it is thought there will be a general Embargo in Great Britain and Ireland——Thirty eight ſail of the Line are now fitted and fitting out, beſides a great Number of Frigates, for manning which, a hot Preſs is going on.--The Spaniards are making vaſt Preparations for War at Barcelona, and other Places in Spain.--Lord North told the Turkey Merchants this Day, who waited on him, that the Spaniards had a Fleet at Ferrol, ready for the ſea.--An Expreſs from Madrid is daily expected, which it is thought will determine the Matter.

"Our Attention at preſent is taken up with regard to the Naval preparations for War. Thirty eight Ships of the Line are already put into Commiſſions, and a Declaration of War againſt France and Spain is expected before this reaches your hands——Capt. Hall has been obliged to have a Protection for his Men, and the Lords of the Admiralty upon Application this Day made to them, have promiſed to protect the Ships homeward bound from North America——You will perceive that the Spaniards are the firſt Agreſſors, by taking Faulkland's Iſland, and in Conjunction with the French it is ſuppos'd they intend to deſtroy the Ruſſian Fleet that we are bound to protect."

Extract of another Letter of Sept. 26.

"We did not propoſe writing you again till the departure of Dixcy, but a ſudden alarm of a ſpeedy Rupture with Spain has determined us to give you the firſt Information thereof; Premiums of Inſurance are advanced, five Guineas per Ct. is now given from Boſton to London, and few Inſurers can be prevailed on juſt now on any terms. Such a univerſal Panic has taken Place on this ſudden Alteration of things. Great Preparations are making in our Marine, as much ſo, as though we were at the Eve of a War. The Spaniards having diſpoſſeſſed us of Faulkland Iſlands in the Streights of Magellan, is ſaid to be the ſole Reaſon of our arming ſuch a number of Ships of the Line and Frigates; but we can hardly believe this to be all. You will pleaſe to communicate this unhappy Account of Things to our ſeveral Friends who we have not time to write to by this Opportunity; tho' the Public Prints will ſufficiently alarm them."

Some other late Letters from London mention, that it was tho't WAR with Spain was inevitable, and that the Miniſtry only waited for the Return of a Meſſenger from the Court of Spain to cauſe the ſame to be proclaimed immediately.

Capt. Hall ſail'd from an Out Port in England 2ſt October:——The Preſs for Seamen was then as hot, as perhaps ever known.——A Gentleman Paſſenger in Capt. Hall, informs, that the Spaniſh Ambaſſador had pack'd up his Baggage, quitted his Houſe, and was hourly expected to leave England.

A Letter from Portſmouth, New-Hampſhire, dated laſt Friday, ſays, "Capt. William McLennan, who arrived at Caſco Bay laſt Tueſday, informs, That in Lat. 32, Long. 69, on the 3d of November, he ſpoke with Capt. Stevenſon, in a Brig, bound from Falmouth to Cape Fear, out 28 Days, who told him that when he left England, WAR was expected to be declared every Day againſt France, Spain and Portugal.——and did not doubt, but in a few Days after he left that Port it took place:—He further informs, that on his Paſſage, he was chaſed a whole Day by a Portugueſe Man of War, but luckily got clear.——Many wiſh here that this may prove true, as no doubt it would make buſineſs brisker, Caſh plentier, and perhaps put an end to our Diſputes both in England and America."

HARTFORD, November 27.

Laſt Tueſday departed this Life, Æt. 58, of a Paralytic Diſorder, Mrs. Hepſibah Collyer, Widow of Capt. Hezekiah Collyer, late of this Place deceaſed.

The following paragraph is in the Boſton Papers, viz.

"A Gentleman from Connecticut inform, that the General aſſembly of that colony, in their laſt ſeſſion, upon the petition of the Corporation of Yale College, voted between two and three hundred Pounds lawful Money, to diſcharge the debts of that ſociety: and that the aſſembly had alſo voted to found a profeſſorſhip of natural and experimental philoſophy at the expence of the government.

WHEREAS application has been made to me the ſubſcriber, a juſtice of the peace for the county of Litchfield, by more than a ſixteenth part of the townſhip of STOW, near Onion river, a townſhip lately granted by the governor of New Hampſhire deſiring to warn a meeting of the proprietors of ſaid townſhip, in order to chooſe a committee to ſurvey and bound out ſaid townſhip, and to lay out a firſt diviſion lot to each right. Theſe are therefore to notify all the proprietors of ſaid townſhip, to meet together at the houſe of Mr. Jonathan Gillet, inholder in Sharon, on the third tueſday of December next, at one of the clock in the afternoon, for the purpoſe aforeſaid, and to do any other buſineſs that may be tho't proper to be done at ſaid Meeting. Dated at Sharon, the 20th day of Nov. 1770.

DANIEL GRISWOLD, Juſt. Pacis.

MY cuſtomers may remember that I deſired a general ſettlement at No. 300, as I then expected to bring the buſineſs of riding to a cloſe, ſince which at the deſire of friends, have agreed to continue it, and have hired a man to perform the ſame who began at No. 301, who will deliver the papers at NINE SHILLINGS per year, which is the uſual price, with only the addition of One Shilling, (which is determined on by the Printers to defrey the expences of a propoſed enlargement of the paper, a ſpecimen of which they gave in No. 307) to be delivered once a fortnight. Muſt therefore earneſtly deſire every perſon to ſettle with me to the above number as ſoon as poſſible. Any perſons deſirous of becoming cuſtomers, may be ſupplied with the papers by ſending their names to me, and ſuch of the old cuſtomers as are inclined to diſcontinue their papers, may have them ſtopped by ſending me word. All thoſe long indebted to me upon note, are deſired to cancel them, if they would avoid thoſe diſagreeable conſequences that may happen upon a neglect.

TAKE this method to inform their cuſtomers, that they have juſt received (from London) a large aſſortment of BOOKS, containing a great variety of articles, not included in their laſt printed catalogue.——All perſons who ſhall be pleaſed to favour them with their cuſtom, may depend on being well uſed. np

Meſſieurs PRINTERS,

Pleaſe to inſert the following Extracts from the Records of the Colony of NEW-HAVEN, and you will oblige your humble Servant, &c.

"At a GENERAL COURT, held at NEW-HAVEN, for the Juriſdiction, the 30th of January, 1654.

A Petition was preſented by Thomas Munſon, and Cooper, of New Haven, on behalf of a company of perſons, intending to remove to Delaware Bay; wherein they propound,—— That for the enlargement of the Kingdom of Chriſt, the ſpreading of the goſpel, and the good of poſterity therein, that they may live under the wings of Chriſt; they would afford ſome encouragement to help forward ſo public a work. That two magiſtrates, Mr. Samuel Eaton, and Mr. Francis Newman, may have liberty from this court to go in perſon at firſt, and in caſe they ſee not themſelves called, to lay out ſo much of their eſtate, as is like to be diſburſed in ſuch an undertaking.—That then it would pleaſe the court, that out of the Juriſdiction, they may be honorably provided for, as men that are willing to lay out themſelves, for the public good. In caſe that there be an undertaking, they that go, may go under the protection of this Juriſdiction, and that in caſe of any affront, the Juriſdiction will engage to aſſiſt, 'till by the bleſſing of God, they may be able of themſelves to ſet up a common wealth, according to the fundamentals of government, laid at New Haven.——That ſeeing our numbers [illegible] they think may be a competent number, that we may ſerve God's Providence, and yet not let the work fall, for want of too great a number.—That two great guns and powder, and what belongs to them might be granted.—Seeing that moſt that have purpoſed to go, do only for public reſpects undertake, and not for any need at preſent, and thereupon do leave their houſes and lands without that improvement, that they themſelves did make; they deſire, that for ſometime, as the court ſhall think meet, they may be freed from rates and public charges——ſeeing that they whoſe hearts God ſtirs up to undertake at firſt, are men for the general, of no great eſtates and ſome cannot go without help; we deſire that a ſum of money may be raiſed in this Juriſdiction which may be employed, either to buy a ſmall veſſel, that may attend the ſervice, or otherwiſe, as ſhall be tho't meet.—Now that which occaſions this laſt, is not only the ſenſe of the great expence and charge at firſt, and the preſent need that ſome have now.—But alſo, we have heard from ſundry, that generally men are willing to help on the work, either by perſons or eſtates——Thus begging pardon for our boldneſs, and humbly deſire to commit all your conſultations, unto the direction of the God of wiſdom ——And ſo remain yours to be commanded.

New Haven, the 30th
of the 11th Month, 1654

JOHN COOPER,
THO'S MUNSON, in behalf of the reſt.

To which the court returned, "That having read and conſidered a prayer of ſome propoſitions preſented by Thomas Munſon, and John Cooper, of New Haven in the name and behalf of ſundry perſons of this Juriſdiction, and elſewhere, appearing as undertakers for the firſt planting of Delaware, in order to the publick good of this juriſdiction, and the enlargement and further advancement of the kingdom of Chriſt in theſe parts——Do return in anſwer, as followeth——That they are willing ſo far to deny themſelves for the furtherance of that work, in order to the ends propounded, as to grant liberty to one, or both of thoſe magiſtrates mentioned to go along with them, who, with ſuch other fit perſons, as this court ſhall ſee meet, to join with them, may be impowered for managing of all matters of civil government there, according to ſuch commiſſion as ſhall be given them by this court.——That they will either take the property of all the purchaſed lands into their own hands, or leave it to ſuch as ſhall undertake the planting of it:— Provided, That it be and remain a part or member of this Juriſdiction.——And for their encouragement they purpoſe, when God ſhall ſo enlarge the Engliſh Plantations in Delaware, as that they ſhall grow the greater part of the juriſdiction; that then due conſideration ſhall be taken for the eaſe and conveniency of both parts, as that the governor may be one year, in one part, and the next year in another; and the deputy governor is not. And that general courts for making laws may be ordinarily but once a year, and where the governor reſides. And if God much increaſe plantations in Delaware, and deminiſh them in theſe parts; then poſſibly they may ſee cauſe, that the governor may be conſtantly there, and the deputy governor here; but that the leſſer part of the juriſdiction be protected and eaſed by the greater part, both in rates and otherwiſe, which they conceive will be both acceptable to God, and (as appears by the concluſions of the commiſſioners, Anno 1651) moſt ſatisfying to the reſt of the uniting colonies.——That for the matters of charge propounded for [illegible] be given or lent to [illegible] particular plantations, and promote the buſineſs, for procuring ſome thing that way, and ſhall return their anſwer with all convenient ſpeed."

A PROCLAMATION,

For encouraging Seamen to enter themſelves on Board his Majeſty's Ships of War.

GEORGE R.

WHEREAS it is our royal intention to give all due encouragement to all ſuch Seamen, who ſhall voluntarily enter themſelves in our ſervice; we have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, to publiſh this our royal proclamation: and we do hereby promiſe and declare, that all ſuch able Seamen, not above the age of fifty, nor under the age of twenty years fit for our ſervice who ſhall, on or before the twenty-firſt day of October next, voluntarily enter themſelves to ſerve in our royal navy, either with the Captains or Lieutenants of our ſhips, or the chief Officers on board ſuch Tenders, as ſhall be employed for raiſing men for the ſervice of our navy, ſhall receive, as our royal bounty, the ſum of thirty ſhillings each man: and all ſuch ordinary Seamen, fit for our Service, who ſhall ſo enter themſelves as aforeſaid, ſhall receive the ſum of twenty ſhillings each man as our royal bounty; ſuch reſpective Clerks of the Cheque, reſiding at the ports or places where the ſhips, into which they ſhall be entered, ſhall be, immediately after the third muſter of ſuch ſeamen.——And we do declare, that the qualifications of the ſeamen, ſo entering themſelves as aforeſaid, ſhall be certified by the Captain, Maſter and Boatſwain of the ſhip or veſſel where they ſhall enter. And for prevention of any abuſes, by any perſons leaving the veſſels to which they ſhall belong, and entering themſelves on board any other our ſhips or veſſels, in order to obtain the ſaid bounty money; we do declare and command, that ſuch ſeamen, belonging to any of our ſhips or veſſels, as ſhall abſent themſelves from any of the ſaid ſhips or veſſels to which they ſhall belong, and ſhall enter themſelves on board any other of our ſaid ſhips or veſſels, in order to obtain the ſaid bounty, ſhall not only looſe the wages due to them in the ſhips or veſſels they ſhall leave but alſo be ſeverely puniſhed according to their demerits.

Given at our Court of St. James's the twenty-ſecond day of September, 1770, and in the tenth year of our reign.

Meſſieurs PRINTERS,

IT is ſaid that the late verdict of the jury in favor of Capt. Preſton, aroſe from a doubt whether he gave orders to fire: And that the ſoldiers who are to be tryed this week expect to obtain a verdict in their favour, by bringing full evidence that in firing they obey'd the orders of the Captain—But whether ſuch orders will be ſufficient to clear them, is ſaid to be matter of ſpeculation among ſome of the learned in the law. However, there may be a ſhort and eaſy method of clearing them all, by proving that the inhabitants were the aggreſſors, or which is the ſame thing, objecting to evidence to prove that they were not——The noted Richardſon who was convicted of murder in March term, remains yet unhang'd—Chriſtopher Monk who ſtill ſurvives the wounds which he receiv'd in the horrible maſſacre of the 5th of March, lives to ſee that the death of his fellow ſufferers is not yet reveng'd; and that the poor innocent young Snider is quite forgot!—What ſays the law of God? "Whoſo ſheddeth man's blood, by man ſhall his blood be ſhed."—"The murderer ſhall flee to the pit," and who dares ſtay him?—Some indeed begin to doubt whether there was any murder on the evening of the 5th of March; and whether the dogs greedily licking human blood in King-ſtreet, as has been ſaid, is any thing more than a dream. LONDON, October 2.

By the KING,

A PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE. R.

WHEREAS our Parliament ſtands prorogued to Tueſday, the 13th day of Nov. next; We, with the advice of our Privy Council, do hereby publiſh and declare our Royal Will and Pleaſure that the ſaid Parliament ſhall on the ſaid 13th day of Nov. after, be held and ſit for the diſpatch of divers weighty and important affairs. And the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, & the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes, and the Commiſſioners for Shires and Burghs, of the Houſe of Commons, are hereby required, to give their attendance accordingly, at Weſtminſter, on the ſaid 13th day of November next.

" Given at our Court at St. James's, the [illegible]th day of September. 1770, in the 10th year of our reign.

GOD ſave the KING.

It is reported that Admiral Elphinſtone has already remitted upwards of 10,000l to his Lady at Plymouth.

It is talked, that yeſterday morning General Paoli had a long conference with the Ruſſian Ambaſſador.

A Gentleman of character and fortune is ſent off expreſs to Madrid. The miniſtry are determined not to act raſhly in the preſent criſis, but to proceed through every ſtep of this important quarrel deliberately and ſlowly they are determined to ſtoop to argument, before they riſe to blows. If the meſſenger meets with an honourable reception at the Court of Madrid, and receives candid anſwers to his interrogatories concerning Falkland Iſlands, it will ſeem to merit a candid diſcuſſion on both ſides; but if he is put off with ſhuffling, evaſive anſwers, (as is thought will be the caſe) the expreſs is to return immediately, —and a Britiſh fleet will eaſily aſſert the Britiſh rights.

It is aſſerted, that there are ſeveral aggravating circumſtances, relating to the affair at Falkland Iſlands, in the papers of the Favourite ſloop of war, which have not yet been made public. They are depoſited at the Admiralty-Office.

The commander of the Favourite ſloop of war, from Falkland Iſlands, has we hear, been introduced to his Majeſty, and honoured with a private conference.

Tueſday laſt a letter was ſent to the Lord Mayor, to inform him, that a Grand Council would be held in a few days, concerning the preſent critical ſituation of affairs with reſpect to Spain; and to aſſure his Lordſhip, that he ſhould be immediately acquainted with the determination thereupon.

Wedneſday, after the breaking up of the Admiralty Board, an Expreſs was ſent off to Falmouth, to be forwarded by an advice boat, to the Commander of his Majeſty's ſquadron at Newfoundland.

The ſame day an order was ſent to the Board of Ordnance, for a large quantity of powder, balls, bombs, and ſhells, for the uſe of his Majeſty's garriſons of Gibralter and Port-Mahon.

His Majeſty's ſhip Portland, of 50 guns, at Sheerneſs, is put into commiſſion, and the command of her given to Capt. Elliot.

Lord Chatham, it is reported, has been lately employed in drawing up a plan for ſettling the differences with America, which it is ſaid, his Lordſhip intends to lay before the Houſe of Peers, at the opening of the next Seſſion of Parliament.

It is confidently aſſerted that Admiral Knowles has been invited by the Empreſs of Ruſſia to enter into her ſervice; and it is generally believed that Admiral will ſoon go to Peterſburgh on that account.

This day came on at Guildhall the election of a Lord Mayor of this City for the year enſuing, on which occaſion the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen went to Guildhall chapel to hear divine ſervice (inſtead of St. Lawrence's church, as uſual.) After the ſermon, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen returned to Guildhall, where on a ſhew of hands, Braſs Croſby and James Townſhend, Eſqrs. were returned by the Livery to the Court of Aldermen, who made choice of Mr. Croſby for Lord Mayor. When Sir Henry Bankes was put up, there was an almoſt general hiſs, and only three hands were held up in favour. There was a very full hall.

At preſent all party diſputes ſeem to be laid aſide: It is ſaid, that moſt of the principal members of oppoſition, who are perſons of character and property, have reſolved at this dangerous criſis, to ſtrengthen the hands of Government, that Great-Britain may act with vigour and unanimity againſt her foreign enemies.

The general toaſt in moſt companies now is Foreign War and Domeſtic Peace.

There is a report that a perſon in a public character, from a Southern Court, has been made to underſtand, that his viſits to ——— will be diſpenſed with, till an anſwer be received to ſome diſpatches lately ſent to the Continent.

DUBLIN, October 6.

A correſpondent aſſures us, that Admiral Elphinſtone is a Yorkſhire gentleman by birth, but deſcended from a ſecond ſon of James, the firſt Lord Balmerino, who attended King James the firſt, in 1605, into England, and marrying a gentlewoman of fortune, he ſettled in York, and his Poſterity have continued there ever ſince. The preſent Admiral was in the ſea engagement off Toulon with Admiral Matthews in 1743 and with Lord Anſon off cape Finiſterre 1757; after which he conducted the fleet of Sir George Pocock through the gulph of Florida in May 1762.

LONDON, October 2.

The following is the Letter which has given offence to the Spaniſh Ambaſſador.

I Would ſtart the D. of C· againſt any one of the three crowned heads of the Bourbon family. There ſeems to be diſtinct climax among their three Bourbonian Majeſties. The King of Sicilys eldeſt Brother, we all know, was put aſide from the throne, becauſe he was an abſolute, irrecoverable ideot. His preſent Majeſty of Sicily is, I conceive juſt one remove from his brother.

The next crowned head of the Bourbon family, I mean the King of Spain, may be allowed to be one remove and a half from his ſicilian Majeſty, if weighed in the ſcale of intelligent and intellectual beings.

As a proof that the King of Spain is removed ſomewhat more than a degree and a half from downright ideotry, I will relate a ſtory of him, which will convince any favourer of monarchial government, that his catholic Majeſty is endowed with ſufficient underſtanding to govern the rich and powerful kingdom of Spain, or indeed any other kingdom in Chriſtendom, according to the modern ſtandard of Bourbonean kings.

Some few years ago Charles the Third, his preſent catholic Majeſty, who is paſſionately fond of hunting had accoutred himſelf for the chace. It was in the month of January, and the weather at the extremeſt point of cold.— The ſnow began to fall in ſuch broad flakes, that the poor King was abſolutely prohibited the chace that day. The ſervants about his Perſon were ordered to lay three or four dozen of watches before their royal maſter, in order that he might amuſe himſelf with the delighful and inſtructive paſtime of winding them up. It ſeems that even this King affects, and is allowed, all the pageantry, ceremony, and parade of regal ſtate. His ſervants thus having brought him the watches, retired, and left him all alone. It is remarkable of this crowned head, that, like Cicero, he is nunquam minus ſolus quam cum ſolus; that is to ſay, he never perceives the leaſt difference whatever between a ſolitude and a multitude.

I take the winding up of thirty or forty watches to be an operation which muſt ſoon fatigue the mental faculties, and thoſe faculties fatigued make room for the exertion of the body powers; accordingly we are told that his Majeſty, who is an enemy to idleneſs and inaction, the moment he had wound up his watches, immediately percieved by dint of inſtinct, that the weather was extremely cold. To counter-operate the inclemency of this ſharp ſeaſon, what could his Majeſty do? His ſervants had left his hunting whip in the room with him; this room was hung with Gobalin tapeſtry. The vivid colours, and lively figure of an Arabian ſteed, ready ſaddled, was repreſented to the life. His Majeſty, who is not eaſily deceived, immediately approches the high-coloured arras, attempts to mount his Bucephalus; the pictured ſtirrup fails to admit his Kingly foot, and oh! dire miſhap, plump falls his Majeſty of Spain on the reſplendent wax rubbed floor. Long did this mighty Monarch, o'er whoſe wide dominions the ſun never ceaſes to ſhine, ponderate in his kingly breaſt, whether he ſhould correct the reſplendent wax-rubbed floor, or whether his hunting-whip would not fall with greater juſtice on the ſtill prancing, proud Arabian ſteed. Wiſely did Charles the Third diſtinguiſh between primary and ſecondary cauſes. The ſaddled palfry could not but appear to be the proper and immediate object of royal reſentment. This weighty point determined, and Charles having thus acted the two parts of juryman and judge, there remained only the executioner's part for him to perform. Inſtantly he ſprung from the floor and with his three thong'd hunting whip, during thirty-four minutes, two ſeconds and an half, with hand uplifted ſubblimi flagello, flogg'd the unmoveing, unmoved, ſtately quadruped. At length halfe drowned and half ſuffocated in his own unfragrant exudations, which copiouſly oozed out at every pore, the King quite ſpent, again involuntarily ruſhed rumbling down upon the reſplendent wax rubbed floor. Alarmed at this unuſual noiſe, the guard attendant in the outer room, breaking through all order and every etiquette of Madrid's ſolemn, ſtately marching court, quickly ruſhed into the apartment royal, found their monarch Cyrus like, weltering, if not in reaking gore, at leaſt in reaking ſweat.

The faculty called in, all ſtand aghaſt! and they themſelves ſhivering with cold intenſe, much wonder whence the cauſe of all this burning heat which thus unknown had overpowered their king. When ſtrait, as riſing from a trance, and ſtarting into life again, thus oracularly, anſwered Charles the Third.

"Be not ſurprized that thus I ſweat, for by this watch of Graham's make, thirty four minutes two ſeconds and a half, have I been flogging, with this whip whoſe ponderous handle is of maſſy gold, that high ſtomached quadruped, whoſe traiterous hoof hath twice extended my whole length upon this floor." Much more ſpoke he, while every word was to the full as pertinently wiſe.

From theſe outlines, characteriſtic of this crowned head, your readers will perceive I had ſtrong reaſons for ſaying that Charles the Third King of the two Indies, is rather more than a degree and a half leſs unwiſe than his Son Ferdinand the Fourth, King of the two Sicilies.

In my next letter I will draw the picture of that other crowned head of the Bourbon family, Lewis the Fifteenth, King of Navarre. One who Paints to the Life

—"The Court of Spain have not yet returned any Anſwer to the Memorial ſent from our Court; —therefore, there can be no Certainty, as yet, whether we are to have War or Peace."——

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Gaudalope, to his Friend in St. John's, Antigua, dated the 8th of Nov. 1770.

DEAR SIR,

"I am now to acquaint you with the News current here: Yeſterday a Guarda Coſta came from Martinico expreſs, with an Account that a Man of War was arrived in 27 Days from France, and ſailed directly for St. Domingo, with Orders to put all the French Weſt-India Iſlands, immediately in the beſt ſtate of Defence poſſible; conſequently there is nothing but hurry and confuſion here: Tranſporting Cannon, Shot, and other Military Stores, to different Batteries; not only about this Town, but all parts of the Iſland, they are working with the greateſt Ardour.

"All the Detachments, belonging to the Regiments ſtationed here, are called in: The public are, that the Spaniards had deſtroyed one of our Frigates in the Mediterranean, and brought away Priſoners, the Garriſon of Falkland Iſland, in the Streights of Magellon, conſiſting of 7 Officers and 60 Soldiers. The Governor ſent Yeſterday for all the Merchants and Captains of the Veſſels, &c. he was out very early this Morning, about the Military Works carrying on.

"The French Man of War brings Advice of 8 Sail of the Line, and that 8 complete Battallions are ready to ſail at a moments Warning from Breſt, for thoſe Iſlands, if the Breach ſhould not be made up with the Spaniards, of which the French are the Mediators, by ſending the Duke de Nivernoiſe, as Ambaſſador extraordinary, to the Court of Gr. Britain."

HARTFORD, December 11.

We hear that on Tueſday the 4th Inſtant, departed this life after a waſting illneſs, aged LXIV years, the honourable ZEBULON WEST, Eſq; of Tolland, [particulars are not yet fully come to hand]——For many years he was repreſentative of that town—a juſtice of peace for Hartford county, and one of the Quorum—a judge of probate for the diſtrict of Stafford.—And from May 1766, till May 1770, ſpeaker of the houſe of Repreſentatives; at which time he was elected one of the ASSISTANTS of this colony, and was ſo at his death.—His good natural abilities, improved with a good degree of application and ſtudy, joined with exemplary goodneſs and piety, render'd him eminently ſerviceable as well in the more private, as in the ſeveral public offices he ſuſtained in the government; in all which, as he conducted with unexceptionable fidelity and integrity, & to univerſal ſatisfaction, ſo his death is greatly and univerſally lamented—His funeral was ſolemnized on the Thurſday after his death.

From the ESSAYS of LANCELOT TEMPLE, Eſq;
Of Large SOCIETIES.

WHEN a great number of weak heads and bad hearts are collected into a maſs, they muſt naturally improve in vice and folly; and very faſt too, if they are not kept in order by a wiſe diſcipline. It was probably from this conſideration among others, that in former times, a Prince celebrated for wiſdom, thought it an object of the utmoſt conſequence to a whole kingdom to put a ſtop at once to the further growth of its capital. In a very populous and overgrown city, eſpecially if it happens to be the ſeat of an extenſive commerce, great multitudes of people without either education or good natural ſenſe, muſt grow rich. Theſe, in all popular diſſentions, will generally throw their weight into the wrong ſcale; will join the clamour againſt the moſt ſalutary meaſures; raving for things unreaſonable, impracticable, and what with better eyes, they would often ſee detrimental and pernicious to themſelves. Yet ſuch heads as theſe lead the reſt of the nation, who conſider them as their true and uncorrupted ſource of political intelligence, their vigilant guardians their ſafe protectors, the ſoundeſt, ableſt, and moſt diſintereſted judges of whatever belongs to the management of national affairs.—God knows to what a contemptible degree they are miſtaken! for there is nothing more true, than that the inhabitants of a certain metropolis are in general, not only the moſt brutal, indecent, and immoral, but the moſt ſtupid and ignorant, of the whole people throughout the kingdom.

Oh!—to any one who feels for the honor, and dignity of England, what a ſubject of ſhame and mortification it muſt be, that the bad manners of thoſe who inhabit the capital, expoſe the whole nation to the contempt of all foreigners!——Oh! good God! to the contempt of all Europe; who muſt naturally form an unjuſt opinion of the more civilized and more ſenſible people in all the moſt diſtant corners of the kingdom, from what paſſes here. Where the maſter of a family is a clown, the whole family partakes in his diſgrace, and is even apt to be infected by him. Pray don't call the people of this town Engliſhmen——for the honor of England call them Londoners for ever——the yeſty dregs of Great-Britain and Ireland, the frothy ſcum of every nation in Europe, of every province in America, fermenting with the gowk ſpittle of Jamaica, is their compoſition. Such Engliſhmen as theſe Londoners, good Heaven! are the only real enemies of England; which never can be ruined but by their ſtupidity, their abſurdity, their madneſs and villany.

In this bleſſed meridian of Liberty, the French Proteſtants too, whoſe fathers, within the memory of ſome that are yet alive, fled hether for ſhelter from an inhuman perſecution, are become, of a moſt humble colony of ſuppliants, a gang of profligate ruffians that madly and ungratefully rebel againſt a government, to which they owed their protection then, and do to this day. In their own original country, the wheel, inſtead of the gallows, would long ago have put an end to their turbulence.

LONDON, Sept. 16.
Extract of a Letter from Dublin, Sept. 12.

"Nothing ſhews the baſeneſs and ill deſigns of Government ſo much as the daily attempts which are made to corrupt and ſeduce the few honeſt men who are in the intereſt of their country. A few days ago, Neville Jones, Eſq; member for Wexford (who was Engineer General in 1753) was applied to by Lord Townſend. It ſeems a conſiderable ſum of money due to him by Government, which he has frequently applied for in vain. Lord Townſend made this propoſal to him, "That if he would join the Court, he ſhould have an employment, which ſhould be ſtruck for him (his Lordſhip's Phraſe) and all the money paid, which was due to him by Government." To which Mr. Jones ſpiritedly anſwered, that he rejected the place, and deſpiſed the money upon that condition." How is a man to come at his right? muſt he be obliged to give up his country, in order to obtain that which is his own? There are no leſs than ſix new places making here, in order to become bribes. They are to be called Commiſſioners of accounts. The firſt Commiſſioner is to have 750l. a year; and the other five 500l. a year each. The place of Firſt Commiſſioner was intended for Mr. Jones. All that theſe Commiſſioners are to do has always been, and is now, very faithfully and fully executed, by one of the Clerks of the Cuſtom houſe, who thinks himſelf very well paid at 200l. per ann.

LONDON, Sept. 22.

A great man, in the adminiſtration of public affairs, was lately aſked by a particular friend, why he did not promote merit; to which the great man pertinently anſwered, Why! becauſe merit did not promote me.

London is the oldeſt city in the world; its foundation is dated back full 2900 years—No other place has remained undeſtroyed for ſo long a period.

From the London Evening Poſt, Sept. 22.
To the KING.

TO what a miſerable ſituation are your affairs reduced, by a gang of the greateſt Villains that ever infeſted any nation ſince the birth of Chriſt. To you perſonally the kingdom bears a proper reſpect. But the nation has a vigour and will complain, when its moſt eſſential and deareſt intereſts are abuſed and ſacrificed. The few great men, who are able, honeſt & wiſh to ſave their country, are baniſhed from your councils and ear. The common people ſee and know this. Hence it comes, that now, when it is neceſſary to call forth the ſtrength of your kingdom, your people do not voluntarily enter into your ſervice; but you are obliged to have recourſe to the odious and unconſtitutional method of impreſſing, to man the firſt fleet that has been put into commiſſion theſe ſeven years. If ſuch is your Diſtreſs now, what will it be next ſummer, when the flames of war will be raging in every nation of Europe? The army is abhorred for the wanton and cruel maſſacre in St. George's fields. And the baſe and cowardly ſurrender of the Manilla ranſom, has deſtroyed the beſt excitement to the navy. Your people are not ſo ignorant, as your miniſters wiſh them to be. This difficulty of getting men was foretold laſt Winter, by the Marquis of Granby, in the houſe of commons. He ſaid, "Such a general "diſlike to the ſervice prevailed among the people, in every part of the Kingdom, that the officers could not get "men to compleat their regiments." This, as well as every other diſtreſs is, owing to the want of able and honeſt miniſters. If the preſent blundering, ignorant and infamous ſet, continue much longer, an ideot may foretell, that the public credit will be deſtroyed.

An ENGLISHMAN.

Extract of a letter from New Caſtle, September 1.

"It is generally talked of here, that the Free Burgeſſes of this town (being quite ſick of looking for redreſs from the Throne) will ſhortly have a meeting, in order to draw up inſtructions for their members, to impeach in the Houſe, the next ſeſſions, ſome certain elevated State Plunderers; and in caſe the members ſhould refuſe to comply with requeſt, by oppoſing their liberty of judging, they will then proceed to petition the Houſe to expel them both."

BOSTON, Dec. 13.

This Morning arrived Capt. WATT in a Ship from Briſtol; From the public Prints we have extracted the few following Articles:

LONDON, October 6.

We hear that a convention is actually ſigned between the Turks and the Ruſſians, by the mediation of Great-Britain.

Died at his houſe at Whitehall, the Right Hon. Thomas Robinſon, Lord Grantham, K. B. and F. R. S.—At Chelſea, Sir Richard Lyttelton, K. B. Governor of Jerſey, &c.—— died in the 13th year of his age, the moſt noble George, Marquis of Tweedale, Earl of Gifford.

On the death of Sir Richard Lyttelton, the King immediately ordered a letter to be wrote to Sir Jeffery Amherſt, offering him the government of Jerſey——As in this he has Rewarded a brave and generous Man, & did not conſult his miniſtry, we may hope better days in other appointments. Sir J. A. immediately anſwered the letter with thanks, and acceptance of the office.

A great Perſonage has been obſerved to be in uncommon high ſpirits ſince the firſt rumour of a war.

On Friday and Saturday nights there was a very hot preſs on the River, every ſhip that came in was cleared of her hands, except the Capt. mate, and apprentices.

When the laſt letters were ſent from Boſton, every thing there was in the moſt profound tranquillity, the inhabitants being reſolved to wait with patience the meeting of the Britiſh parliament.

October 11. Tueſday night ſummonſes were iſſued for the Parliament to meet as ſoon as poſſible: and it is thought they will be aſſembled this week: It is not certain whether this unexpectedly early meeting is occaſioned by the evaſive anſwer from Spain, or by the plague having broke out in France. Expreſſes were immediately ſent to the members of both Houſes of Parliament in all Parts of Great Britain.

The laſt anſwer from the court Madrid, according to a private letter from thence, was to the following purport:—"That his Catholic Majeſty had ever looked upon the reciprocal friendſhip between Spain and Great-Britain as a proper object of attention, and worthy the conſideration of the reſpective powers, and which he, for his part, was deſirous of cultivating with every mark of confidence and good faith; and if any of his ſhips, either of war or others, had done any thing deſtructive of the mutual harmony that ought to ſubſiſt between them, immediate orders ſhould be ſent to the governors for redreſſing the ſame."

We do not hear that any meſſenger has been ſent off for Madrid ſince the arrival of Mr. Potter. The truth is, more intelligence concerning the Spaniſh diſpute is expected Saturday or Sunday next. If nothing ſatisfactory is received, final and concluſive diſpatches will be ſent off (perhaps by a meſſenger of greater immportance and character than the laſt) to Madrid, who will be inſtructed to demand a Categorical anſwer within a few hours.——Thus much has tranſpired from a very reſpectable quarter.

NEW-YORK, December 13.

ALEXANDER COLDEN, Eſq; of this City, is appointed Secretary and Comptroller of the General Poſt-Office for the Northern Diſtrict of North-America, in the Room of JAMES PARKER, Eſq; Printer, deceaſed.

Extract of a Letter from Philadelphia.

"Since our laſt arrived the Brig Dove, Gamble from Liverpool, and Brig Peggy, Conyngham from Antigua.

"Capt. Gamble who left Liverpool the 17th of Oct. ſays that they expected War would ſoon be declared in England, and moſt of the Ships in Liverpool that were near ſailing, were getting Guns, &c. on board as in Time of War.——We have one Liverpool Paper of the 12th Oct. but little in it, except the following articles.

"London, Oct. 6. Yeſterday morning at 3 o'Clock Mr. Potter, one of his Majeſty's meſſengers, who was ſent from hence with Diſpatches to the Court of Madrid, arrived at Lord Weymouth's office from that Place; his Lordſhip came to Town in the afternoon, and on receiving the Diſpatches brought by Mr. Potter from Spain, his Lordſhip immediately ſet out for Richmond, to wait on his Majeſty.

"We hear the anſwer received from the Spaniſh Court is evaſive.

"We are well informed, that the Subſtance of the anſwer which the King of Spain has ſent, is, that as England has no miniſter at the Court of Madrid, no direct anſwer could be ſent by the meſſenger; but that he ſhould give inſtructions to his miniſter to give a proper anſwer to our demands.

"It is reported that the augmentation of the army was reſolved upon the laſt Cabinet Council,

"We are informed, from very reſpectable authority, that there will be no War at preſent."

The above is all the News that is in the Paper, worth mentioning.——Capt. Conyngham ſays, that at Antigua, Guadaloup, Martinico, &c. they were all putting the Iſlands in good order for defenſe, daily expecting a Declaration of War.

SAVANNAH, (in Georgia)

Commons Houſe of Aſſembly, Monday, Nov. 5. 1770.

The Houſe being informed of the much lamented death of the Rev. Mr. George Whitefield, which lately happened at Newbury-Port, in the Maſſachuſetts government, and taking into conſideration the many and uncommon inſtances of his friendly diſintereſted regard and attention to the welfare of the inhabitants of this province, as well as his benevolence to mankind in general and unwearied aſſiduity in preaching the goſpel wherever he had the opportunity; and this Houſe being deſirous to tranſmit to poſterity the juſt ſenſe they entertain of the Virtues of the deceaſed, and to perpetuate the commemoration of them, have unanimouſly come to the following reſolutions, viz.

Reſolved, That this Houſe will provide a ſufficient ſum to defray the expence of bringing the remains of the Rev. Mr. Whitefield from Newbury-Port, in the Maſſachuſetts government to be depoſited at the Orphan Houſe in this province.

Reſolved, That this Houſe will provide a ſufficient ſum to erect a proper monument at the Orphan Houſe, for depoſiting the remains of the Rev. Mr. Whitefield.

Reſolved, That this Houſe will provide a ſufficient ſum to defray the expence of putting the church of Savannah in mourning, on account of the death of the Reverend Mr. Whitefield.

Ordered, That Mr. Ewen and Mr. Crooke, do wait on the Rector of Chriſt Church, in Savannah, and requeſt he will preach a funeral ſermon, in memory of the Rev. Mr. Whitefield, next Sunday.

Accordingly they withdrew, and being returned, Mr. Ewen reported they had (according to order) waited on the Rector and that he anſwered, he would prepare a ſermon accordingly.

Ordered, That the Clerk do write the Rector & Church Wardens of Chriſt Church in Savannah, acquainting them, That the Houſe having come to a reſolution to defray the expence of putting the church in mourning, on account of the death of the Rev. Mr. Whitefield, the Houſe therefore requeſts they will be pleaſed to give orders accordingly.

Ordered, That a committee be appointed to enquire what will be the expence attending the putting the foregoing reſolutions into execution, and report their opinion thereon to the Houſe; and a Committee was appointed accordingly Committed to Sir Patrick Houſtoun, Mr. Rae, Mr. Bulloch, Mr. Le Conte, and Mr. Young.

PROVIDENCE, Dec 1.

On the 22d ult. Capt. Bowen ſpoke the ſhip Two Peggies, George M'Kenzie Maſter, from Belfaſt, bound for New York, out 29 days. He informed Capt. Bowen, that the preſs for ſeamen continued throughout England and Ireland when he ſailed; That great Preparations were making for War, which it was hourly expected would be declared; and that a formidable Spaniſh Fleet had ſailed from Cadiz for the Weſt Indies, ſuppoſed to be deſtined againſt Jamaica.

NEWPORT, Dec. 3.

Yeſterday arrived Capt. Bourk from the Weſt-Indies who a few Days paſt, Lat. 34 Long 73, ſpoke with a Veſſel from Cork, bound to Virginia, with near 200 Servants on Board, about 6 Weeks out, the Captain of which told him there was a very hot Preſs in Ireland when he ſailed, and that a War was ſoon expected.

NEW-HAVEN, Dec. 14.

Laſt, Monday, one Richard Steele, was puniſhed in this Town, for the ſecond Offence of Burglary, by being whipt and branded, and having his left Ear cropt. He has ſince eſcaped from Goal, but was Yeſterday taken, and re-committed.

HARTFORD, December 18.

Agreeable to the late Appointment of the Rev'd Corporation (as mentioned in a late Paper) the Rev'd NEHEMIAH STRONG has accepted the Office of Profeſſor of Mathematicks and natural Philoſophy, at Yale-College; and this Day ſet out from this Town for New-Haven, to enter on the Buſineſs of ſaid Office.

We have advice from Springfield, that on thurſday 13th inſtant, about 3 o'clock P. M. (purſuant to the ſentence of the Superior Court of aſſize and general goal delivery, at their late ſeſſions there) was executed William Shaw of Palmer, for the murder of Edward Eaſt, as mentioned in a late paper.—On which ſolemn occaſion, an affecting ſermon was delivered by the Rev. MOSES BALDWIN of Palmer, from Pſal. 1, 5, to an audience of many thouſands collected from all the adjacent towns as ſpectators of the awful ſcene.

TUESDAY the fourth Day of December inſtant after a ſhort Illneſs, which in an uncommon Manner, affected his Lungs and other Viſcera died at his Seat in Tolland, the Honorable ZEBULON WEST, Eſq; He was Son to Deacon Francis Weſt, one of the firſt Settlers in the Town of Tolland, and the firſt Deacon in the Church; a Gentleman diſtinguiſhed for Piety, love of good Order and Benevolence to Mankind. In his youthful Age he diſcovered a promiſing Genius, good Memory and Judgment, which encouraged his Parents to put him to a Grammar School, as preparatory to a more Public Education, which was probably of Advantage to him, though he did not long purſue his Accademical Studies. His uncommon Abilities for doing good, ſoon Recommended him to Public Notice, and while a young Man, he was employed in Places of Public Truſt in the Town. He did not live for Himſelf, but ever Appeared to be under the Influence of a truly Benevolent and Public Spirit; laying himſelf out to do good to all, as he had Opportunity. His Advice in all Matters of Difficulty, whether of a Public or Perſonal Nature, was always Studiouſly ſought after, and highly Valued. He was a Friend to good Order, and ever careful to Recommend and Encourage what was Virtuous and Praiſe worthy, and though his natural make was little reſerved; yet he was far from every Thing that look'd like a Haughty, Supercilious Air, but was eaſy of Acceſs, and carefully attended to the juſt Complaints of the meaneſt Perſon; forward to Appear on the ſide of injured Innocence, to frown on the Oppreſſor, and to Puniſh the bold Offender. His Domeſtic character was truly Amiable; he Appeared to walk before GOD in his Houſe, with an upright Heart; was a tender Huſband, an affectionate Parent, a kind Maſter, and a faithful Friend——His benevolent Temper, upright Diſpoſition, and ſolid Judgment, recommended him to ſtill more Public Notice.

For a great Number of Years he faithfully ſerved the Town as their Repreſentative in the General Aſſembly as a ſingle Juſtice of the Peace; for ſeveral Years was Judge of the Probates, and one of the Juſtices of the Quorum, and alſo Speaker of the Houſe of Repreſentatives, till he was choſen a Member of the Council, which was at the General Election in May laſt, in all which Departments he acquitted himſelf with much Honor and to univerſal Acceptance; but to crown all, his whole Converſation exemplified the Chriſtian, he appeared to live under a realizing Belief of Spiritual and Divine things, and to live Religion without a noiſy Oſtentation. He was firmly Attached to the Doctrines of Divine Grace, as Profeſſed by the generality of Churches in this Land, happily avoiding the Extreme of Enthuſiaſtick Phrenzy, on the one Hand; and on the other, thoſe looſe Principles in religious matters which tend to ſap the foundation of Chriſtianity. Always profeſs'd to have his whole Dependance on the Mediator for Acceptance with GOD, yet not to the Encouragement of ſloth; Believing that Man's Religion to be vain, which dont diſcover itſelf in a Converſation according to godlineſs; the Doctrines and gracious Encouragement, of the Goſpel were his Support in his laſt Sickneſs, through the whole of which, he manifeſted a Chriſtian patience and reſignation to the Divine will; and while looking for his Departure (with the utmoſt calmneſs) profeſſed to be waiting the will of Providence, and (as we Charitably hope) fell aſleep in JESUS.

As he lived very generally Beloved and reſpected, ſo he died equally Lamented, leaving behind him a ſorrowful Widow and five afflicted Children.

As the Public have not lately been favoured with any Account from England of the Society of Bill of Rights, we ſhall give the following.

The following Letter was ſent by Robert Morris, Eſq; to the Chairman of the Supporters of the Bill of Rights, reſigning the office of Secretary to that Society.

GENTLEMEN,

THE poſt which I have held in your Society I ſhall ever eſteem to be one of the greateſt honors of my life, and the only ſort of place I ever deſire to accept. With what zeal, or abilities, I have promoted the common cauſe of liberty, you are beſt able to judge: Such as theſe have been, they ſtill ſhall never be wanting for the ſame purpoſes, when I conceive myſelf capable of exerting them to effect. Some ſucceſs has, without doubt, already attended the operations of our Society; but my own judgment is, that an unhappy neceſſity will require operations of a different nature, before we ſhall have fulfilled the duty, which, as Patriots, we owe to our country. In an age, ſpiritleſs and abandoned as the preſent, it is ſomething to have proceeded thus far. It is through our means that the claim of a free repreſentation has not long ago been cruſhed into its birth. Hitherto it has been ſuppreſt by the mere dint of ſuperior force; and now waits impatiently to be vindicated by the noble reſentment of an injured people. Through us the perſecution of an individual, who by the name of Countryman has every title to our ſupport, has been rendered almoſt ineffectual; and the abettors of it, however dignified, have become the ſcorn and hatred of the people. It has not been my fault if that gentleman has not been ſufficiently rewarded for all his troubles; I wiſh to ſee him ſuperior to his enemies, eaſy in his circumſtances as I know him to be independant in his principles. This he deſerves from the humanity, the gratitude, and if we have a deſire not to ſee a ſimilar proſcription repeated in our days, from the good ſenſe of this nation. As for thoſe perpetual candidates for power, penſion, or office, both within the ſenate and without, I equally [illegible] and adjure them all, whether they are poſ[illegible] preſent confidence or not; I hold them enemies to the liberty of the common people, impoſters in politics, and the ſcourge of this Kingdom.

"Much is wanting to give a proſpect of ſucceſs to our oppoſition againſt the Miniſters of Government We are not without abuſes, but without the legal means of reforming them. The whole frame of Adminiſtration is corrupt. It is a farce to call the P——t a compleat & adequate repreſentation of the people; againſt this more than the Middleſex election ſtares us in the face: it is in vain therefore to reſort to them, or poſtpone our hopes to the feeble remedy of a ſeptennial choice, a choice, placed in ſuch hands, as never to become expreſſive of the ſenſe of the community. Petitions and remonſtrances have been tried without effect. There remains however the good courage of the Engliſh nation, which I hope (though there has long appeared too great a deficiency of ſpirit) will never fail to ſhow itſelf when the meaſure of oppreſſion is fully compleated. I am in little doubt, that both the periods will ſoon arrive; till which, though I ſhould wiſh to prevent the occaſion, I ſhall reſerve myſelf, being of opinion with thoſe reſpectable ancients, who held it criminal not to take a part in the commotions of their country.

Having given this account of my principles, and theſe reaſons for my conduct, I muſt now reſign the office of Secretary, which I have been honoured with in your ſociety from its commencement. I ſhall ſtill be proud of being aſſociated with men, who I am perſuaded, have effectually removed themſelves, by the deciſive part which they have taken againſt the moſt favourite and determinate meaſures of the Court, from truſt, honour, or employ, whilſt the preſent ſyſtem of affairs continues. The ſupport of Mr. Wilkes, that victim to a woman's wrath, is a teſt to which the great leaders of parliamentary oppoſition will never ſubmit. They behold in him an unſurmountable barrier to the expected gratifications of all their labours. We have ſeen them ſeperate themſelves from him and from his cauſe (unleſs where they could make it ſubſervient to their own ambition) as they would from an infection; and whilſt they continue ſo ſeparated, I ſhall look upon them as intereſted men, more ſtudious to do themſelves good than their country. Theſe are not the perſons from whom we are to expect ſubſcriptions, ſolemn covenants, ſtipulations and confederacies. Such are the inſtruments and reſources of more honeſt men, for which the time already approaches; but to which theſe never will be driven, unleſs in mere deſpair of obtaining places: a matter which it is not impoſſible may ſoon happen, through the happy obſtinancy of the ſuperior powers; and thus they, who never could be virtuous before, be rendered ſo, from the want of otheir temptation, in deſpite of themſelves and their own evil inclinations.

"For my own part I will confeſs, that the cauſe of Mr Wilkes, as an injured and perſecuted individual, has been the firſt and hitherto only motive of my appearing in public. I have the ſatisfaction to ſay, that I leave this cauſe in a better ſituation, at leaſt, than when I found it; though not the vanity to think, that much of our ſucceſs (which indeed ought to have been greater) has been owing to my endeavours. I am reſolved however not to act any longer in the office of Secretary. I ſhould not have undertaken it at firſt, but in expectation that it would have ſoon fallen to the lot of others in turn, I have repeatedly deſired leave to reſign, and as conſtantly received no other anſwer than your compliments upon my conduct. I muſt now therefore reſign without leave, becauſe cannot continue in my office with the ſame alacrity I have done, being tired of my ſhare of the burthen, and having ſomething elſe to do. As for the odium which may have fallen upon my name, from the conſpicuous part I have appeared in, I ſhall eſteem that my greateſt reward; being ſatisfied it will come from a quarter whoſe enmity will be my greateſt honour. When you proceed to the election of another Secretary, I hope your choice will fall upon one much more worthy than,

Gentlemen,

Your devoted and obedient humble ſervant,

Aug. 6, 1770. ROBERT MORRIS.

INTELLIGENCE EXTRAORDINARY.

An Account of the DEATH and BURIAL of ROBERT MORRIS, late SECRETAY to the BILL of RIGHTS.

NOTWITHSTANDING this Gentleman ſo ſneakingly deſerted the Cauſe of LIBERTY yet no reſentment appeared thereon from that Illuſtrious Body—The Supporters of the Bill of Rights They charitably conſidered his former ſervices, and in memory of them were determined to bury him in all funeral pomp, as due to the Man who was once ſo inſtrumental and active in the ſupport of a Cauſe which it ought to be the intereſt of every Engliſhman to ſupport.

Yeſterday, at twelve o'clock at night, being the hour fixed for depoſiting the remains of this quandam Patriot, THE SONS OF LIBERTY accordingly attended at Guildhall, in the deep black; the body ſtanding in the center of the Hall, under the figures of Gog and Magog ſupported upon the ſhoulders of four Welch Gentlemen. After continuing in this poſition ſome hours, and being ſurveyed and viewed by all the loyaleſt of the loyal Citizens, Mr. Beardmore, in the character of the City Anthony, made a SPEECH, &c.

After that the elegant Oration was pronounced by Mr. Beardmore, the Funeral Proceſſion began in the following order, towards St. Sepulchre's Church.

The Ward of Farringdon Without.
The Waiters to the London Tavern.
The Cook.
Parſon Green.
The Lord Mayor, Half white Half black.
The Recorder, gagg'd.
Dryden Leach, hung with Middleſex Journals.
The Poet Kenrick, with an inkleſs pen and empty dram-glaſs.
A Printer's Devil, with the St. James's Chronicle, and Robert Morris's fatal Letter.
The Train Bands,
Conſtables
Death Hunters.
Forty five Welchmen in Yellow trimm'd with Black, and Leeks in their hats.

The BODY
Adorned with various Copies of the deceaſed Secretary's laſt Letter to the Province of CAROLINA.

Buckhorſe, crying the Elegy.
Four Babes, that could ſcarcely ſpeak, attempting to call out LIBERTY.

The Funeral Service being read by Parſon Green, as Cinna Shebeare was earneſtly looking into the grave, Dryden Leach give him a puſh, and he was earthed up with the unfortunate Robert Morris.

From the London Chronicle of Sept. 11.

HOWEVER we may be amuſed by the Friends of the preſent Administration, with the Hopes that the Treaty of Paris of 1763, will [illegible] inviolably obſerved [illegible] of the French and Spaniards for ſome Time to come, yet the general Face of Affairs in Europe plainly indicates the ſpeedy Termination of that diſgraceful Truce.

The power of the united Branches of the Houſe of Bourbon has been augmenting ever ſince that accurſed Period; and to add to the Strength and Influence of France and Spain, the former has conſolidated its Intereſt with the Court of Vienna, by the Marriage of the Dauphin with an Archdutcheſs of Auſtria: The Daughter of that very Maria Thereſa, that celebrated Queen of Hungary, who at one time was ſo perſecuted by the French, that if it had not been for Engliſh Blood, and Engliſh Treaſure, "ſhe would not have had a Town left to lie in at." And the latter is ſolicited to aſſiſt the King of Portugal with a Guard upon his Frontiers to prevent the Eſcape of his ſeditious Subjects; to ſend Succours to the very Prince who but the other Day was afraid of having his King taken from him by the Arms of Spain, and was then ſupported againſt that Monarchy by the good natured Engliſh. The King of Portugal's Throne totters under him; he ſeeks the Alliance of Spain, which will not be granted but on ſuch Terms as ſhall be preſcribed by the Court of Verſailles: Already the Miniſter of Portugal obſtructs the Commerce of the Engliſh and laughs at the Memorials and Repreſentations of a Miniſtry of London, who have neither Power, Credit, nor Influence beyond the Verge of St James's. We may then look upon the Alliance between Portugal, France and Spain, at preſent, to be nearly perfected on an offenſive and defenſive Footing. A future War will convince us of the Loſs we ſuſtain by this new Acceſſion to the Power of France. Her Family Alliance with the Empreſs Queen gives her another advantage over the Auſtrian Netherlands, if not ceded to France by the Marriage ſettlement (which moſt People believe) will moſt aſſuredly be garriſoned by, and ſubject to, the Military Government of France on all future Occaſions, when France ſhall be at War with England.

The Emperor of Germany is privately as great an admirer of the King of Pruſſia, as the late unfortunate Peter III. of Ruſſia, though he does not carry it to any ridiculous Height; but it is generally believed in Germany, that he will follow his Advice, and keep in cloſe Alliance with him, in caſe of any Rupture between the great Powers of Europe. The King of Pruſſia is at preſent no Friend to the Britiſh Court, and it is ſuſpected this Monarch and Prince Caunitz, the late Prime Miniſter at Vienna, weaned the young Emperor by Degrees from that remarkable Predilection he ſhewed in Favour of the Engliſh Nation at his Acceſſion, and ſome Time after.

On Denmark we can have little or no Reliance; a Court which has for many years been ſubſidied by France, and is now only attempting to look formidable through the aſpiring Genius of a young Prince, whoſe Syſtem of Politics cannot yet be known, but whoſe Weight in the Affairs of Europe is very trifling and inconſiderable.

It appears then by this ſlight Sketch of our Situation, that only two powers in Europe remain, with whom we can pretend the leaſt Alliance, viz. Holland and Ruſſia —— the Friendſhip of the former in Time of War is not to because it is not worth any Thing; and as to the maſculine Empreſs of Ruſſia, in all Probability, if the Turks do not check her ambition, her Subjects will; and her fall will be as rapid and fatal, as the dethroning and foul M———r of her H———d was ſudden and tyrannical.

We do not mean by this picture of our abandoned Situation with reſpect to the Powers of Europe, to plead in Favour of continental Connections, or to juſtify a Britiſh Miniſtry in exhauſting Great Britain of Men and Money to ſupport a viſionary Balance of Power, which, the Moment perhaps that it is formed, might be overturned by ſome future wretched Bigot, as ungrateful as the Queen of Hungary for whom we preſerved the Equilibre; but to point out the infamous conduct of the negotiators of the Peace of Paris, who left us deſtitute of the leaſt Shadow of an Alliance on the Continent, while France was aſſiduouſly ſtrengthening herſelf on all Sides by Family Compacts, and Treaties of Amity. It never will be ſaid again, "that America was conquered in Germany," for we have not one Friend in that extenſive Empire, or any part of the Continent, the Terror of whoſe Alliance might check the progreſs of the Houſe of Bourbon in a future War. Our Danger will not ariſe from any Contentious Sword in Hand, in Germany; we ſhall have no War to wage therein but the Miſchief is, that France, having nothing to fear from that Quarter, will not have her Forces called off from other Enterprizes, to maintain a freſh Conflict there; but will be able to collect and unite her whole Strength, combined with that of Spain, and to have in View by one capital Object when a rupture happens. This is no other, than the bringing the War home to our own Doors; but they will not do this till they are quite ready; Their Treaſury is not yet quite completely repleniſhed; but it is in a much better Situation than we are made to believe. As to their Marine, when joined to that of Spain, it will be formidable: And it is well known, Fleets are equipping in every principal port of the two Kingdoms. It is likewiſe no Secret, that tho' the Poor are dying for Want of Bread in many Provinces of France, yet all the Royal Magazines belonging to the Army and Navy, are ſupplied with Corn ſufficient for three Years Conſumption.

If no Hoſtilities are intended, if no War is meditated, why are the Granaries for the Uſe of the Troops and of the Seamen not opened, and the Famine ſtopped, which rages ſo violently, and has occaſioned in many Parts of France the moſt dreadful Riots, in which ſome Thouſands of the King's Subjects have been maſſacred by the Troops? Is it rational to ſuppoſe that the Corn would be withheld, if ſome great Deſigns were not in Agitation? There is no concealing our Fears when they are well grounded. The firſt Blow which the French and Spainards ſtrike againſt us, will be at home by a powerful Invaſion. It was a favourite Scheme of the late Marſhal Saxe and will moſt aſſuredly be attempted, whenever there appears to be a Proſpect of Succeſs. And if ever this Invaſion ſhould take Place, ſoon after the firing of our Docks, or when our Fleets are far from Home, or blocked up in our Ports by contrary Winds, or beaten at ſea, we, ſhall then feel the fatal Effects of our Luxury, of our Depravity of Manners, and fond Attachment to the Manners and Cuſtoms of the very People, whom we ought always to conſider as natural Enemies.

LONDON, October 11.

The Spaniſh ambaſſador has abſolutely refuſed to anſwer any queſtions concerning the preſent diſputes that may be put to him by the miniſtry, till he receives inſtructions from his court, which are expected every hour.

It is the opinion of all the politicians, that if hoſtilities are commenced between Great Britain and Spain, America will be the grand ſcene of the war.

Yeſterday Lord Mansfield, with the heads of the Miniſtry, had a private conference with his Majeſty.

We hear the Earl of Chatham and Lord Cambden are both ſummoned to attend the grand Council on the Spaniſh diſpute.

We are aſſured that there is yet another meſſenger at Madrid, waiting for the anſwer of the Spaniſh court to our laſt diſpatches.

It is certain, that the Spaniards have a fleet of between forty and fifty ſhips of the line at Ferrol.

In caſe of a war with Spain, we ſhall have all the privateers of France poured upon us, with Spaniſh commiſſions; which will be a great annoyance to our trade; while we can take nothing from the Spaniards, for they have nothing to take, now their galleons are come home.

Two regiments of foot are ordered to hold themſelves in readineſs to embark, on the ſhorteſt notice.

This day the following promotion of Admiral's took place; Sir Peter Dennis: Captains Buckle, Montague, Shuldam, Spry, and Lord Howe. No other promotions will be made, 'till the war is declared, which ſeems inevitable.

The Plague rages at Conſtable — at Bender which obliged the Ruſſians to abandon the ſiege. Alſo at the Levant. — It is alſo ſaid to be in France.

Auguſt 8, 1770 under the walls of Bender, & in the camp of Count Panin, General, Senator, and Knight and Commander in Chief of the ſecond army of her Imperial Majeſty.

"WE the under named Murſes and Chiefs, deputed from all the Murſes of Ediſan and Budgeak, and from all their communities, hereby declare that, in conſequence of the letters, as well as of the expreſs words of his Excellency Count Panin, General in Chief, all Murſes and Chiefs, and all peopel of Ediſan and Budgeak, without exception, have made oath, according to our religion, to ſeparate ourſelves entirely, and to depart from the Turkiſh dominion, and to unite ourſelves in friendſhip with the Ruſſian empire, upon the expreſs conditions, that we ſhall be under the protection and defence of her Imperial Majeſty, Empreſs of all the Ruſſians retain our antient cuſtoms and privileges, and be under no ſubjection: we alſo promiſe that, by the care of our Murſes, the Crimean, as well as the reſt of the Tartars, ſhall accede to the ſame alliance. We deſire not, nor will we ſuffer, ſuch a Chan to be our ruler, who will not join in all our common agreements, and in the good intentions which we have to reinſtate, by the aſſiſtance of the Ruſſian Empire, all the Tartar dominions in their antient freedom and independence. By the full power given to us, we ratify and confirm this agreement, in the moſt ſolemn and concluſive manner; and for the further ſecurity hereof, leave for hoſtages one Murſe of Ediſan, and one Budgeak, with two of our Chiefs, who ſhall remain here till ſuch time as the preſent treaty tending to the intereſt of both parties, ſhall be finally compleated —— On the other part, his Excellency Count Panin hereby grants to us, together with all our property, a free paſſage beyond the Danube, and permits us to abide in our former places, faithfully promiſing by his word and power, that from the ſigning hereof all friendſhip ſhall be ſhewn and all aſſiſtance given to us, both now and hereafter, by the Ruſſian troops of every denomination. This treaty we and all our community will not only endeavour to preſerve inviolate, but, we will alſo think it our duty to give immediate warning to the Ruſſian armies, as often as we have intelligence of any deſign of the Turks to attack them.

"May God aſſiſt and bleſs this our good intention, and ſtrengthen our mutual friendſhip forever! For the better confirmation of this treaty, we have ſet to it our hands and ſeals, and have delivered it to his Excellency Count Panin, from whom we have received one of the ſame tenor ſigned with his hand and ſeal."

The following is the Turkiſh account of the ſea engagement between their fleet and that of the Ruſſians, off the Iſle of Scio, in a letter from Conſtantinople, dated Aug 3.

"Our fleet which was compoſed of eighteen ſhips of the line, eight frigates, and ſome chebecs and galleys having, for ſome time, been cruiſing off the iſland of Scio, Haſſan Bey, who commanded a ſhip of 70 guns, demanded permiſſion, on July 5th, to encounter the Ruſſians with two frigates, in order to draw to an engagement under a battery of our cannon, which was planted on a height between Scio and the coaſt of Natolia, whither our fleet was to retire in caſe of an accident. No ſooner had Haſſan Bay ſet ſail, than he diſcovered the Ruſſians, conſiſting of twenty ſail, who immediately chaſed him. He directly gave the Signal to the Captain Pacha, who immediately prepared for an engagement. Soon after the frigates had joined the fleet the engagement began, and continued the whole of July 6 with equal obſtinacy. But on the decline of the day, the Captain Pacha thought proper to retire, with his fleet, under the cannon of the iſland of Scio, coaſt of Natolea, where he caſt anchor. This poſition being thought dangerous and contrary to the opinion of the famous Giaffer Bey, and others, a council of war was called, in which they gave their opinions freely, but he perſiſted in his reſolution of continuing there that night and the next day, and abſolutely forbid any Commander to weigh anchor, or put to ſea. Night being come the enemy obſerving our error, inveſted the place and detached ſucceſſively three fire ſhips, which ſet our fleet on fire, and entirely deſtroyed it, except the ſhip of Giaffer Bey, and ſome chebecs. Moſt of our felaccas eſcaped the conflagration, after taking on board about a third of the equipages of our fleet, with which they got off. — As to the Captain Pacha, he was dangerouſly wounded; and the Grand Signior on hearing the loſs, ordered his head to be ſtruck off, for not following the advice of Giaffer Bey and Haſſan Bey; his Highneſs has alſo appointed Giaffer Bey Captain Pacha and chief Commander of the Admiralty in his ſtead. Though the above was a great ſtroke againſt us, we have ſtill in our harbour ten ſhips of the line, a great number more at ſea, and we hope to be able to face the enemy with better ſucceſs."

Extract of a letter from Venice, Sept. 15.

"According to our laſt letters from Conſtantinople, the Divan were of opinion, that as the Grand Vizir had yet a ſufficient army, the Grand Signior ought to put himſelf at the head of his troops, in order to inſpire them by his preſence with an ardour, which might probably give a turn to affairs. By the ſame accounts, twelve Caravelles, ſome Saiques, and a great number of Soldiers had juſt been diſpatched to the Dardanelles. Some propoſitions of peace we are told at the ſame time, had been made on the part of a mediating power, which the Ottoman Miniſtry ſeemed inclined to liſten to, but the Grand Signior abſolutely refuſed even to hear them mentioned."

"The Secretary of the Society of Agriculture of Laon, hath drawn up a memorial, wherein he proves, 'that the great number of uſeleſs 'dogs in the kingdom annually conſume of ali'ments proper for the human ſpeices to the a'mount of ſixteen milions, which would furniſh 'ſubſiſtence for upwards of 300 000 men.'

Extract of a letter from the Hague, Sept. 27.

"We have juſt received a journal of Daniſh ſquadron that was ſent againſt Algier, which imports, that they had ineffectually bombarded and cannonaded that city from the 1ſt of July, to the 15th of the ſame month, a council of war had been held, and the reſolution taken to retire."

We hear the Lords of the Treaſury have given directions for the immediate payment of the money remaining due on the Civil Liſt, up to July laſt, including all arrears of expences, &c.

SALEM, December 28.

By a letter from a Capt. of a Veſſel at Martinico, dated Nov. 11, to a Gentleman in this Town, we learn, that the greateſt Preparations were making there for a War, and they expected it would commence in 15 Days from that time.

BOSTON, Dec. 20. 1770.

We all ſeem to be at an uncertainty with Regard to a War between Great-Britain and Spain: There has been no later Advices from England than what Capt. Watt brought laſt Week from Briſtol, which was to the 21ſt of October; it is certain War was not declared then in England.

We hear that the preſs for ſeamen was ſo hot in England, on the beginning of October laſt, that 2000 men were preſſed in one night in London.

Seamen are wanted for his Majeſty's ſhip the Tweed, bound for England; thoſe who apply will meet with encouragement.

On Friday laſt Matthew Killory, and Hugh Montgomery, two of the Soldiers who were lately try'd at the Superior Court for the Murder of the ſeveral Perſons in King-Street, on the 5th of March laſt, and who were found guilty of Manſlaughter, were branded in the Hand in open Court, and then diſcharg'd.

Several Watchmen of the Town, have informed us, that they have for ſeveral Mornings paſt diſcovered a Star, as they call it, or a Meteor, about 4 o'clock in Morning in the N. E. which continues for ſome Time riſing and lowering like a Lanthorn hung to a Kite.

NEW-YORK, December 20.

Saturday Night laſt the Ship Britannia, Capt. Munds, arrived here from London in 9 Weeks: He left the Downs the 11th of October, and the Land the 21ſt, the 24th, off Cape Finiſterre, Capt. Munds ſpoke with the Antigallican Frigate, who had been 7 days from Plymouth with Diſpatches for Gibraltar, &c who acquainted him, War was not declared when he left England.

Capt. Munds informs us, That about the 8th or 9th of October, the Courier who was ſent Expreſs to Madrid arrived at Dover, and that by what could be learned from him (he being very reſerved) the Court of Spain had made ſuch Conceſſions as were thought at Deal, by a Letter from Dover, that Matters would be ſettled to the Satisfaction of Great-Britain.

The Premiums of Inſurance on moſt of the Goods on board the Britain, is from 4 to 6 and Half per Cent, and tis generally believed in London, that a War between Great-Britain and Spain is unavoidable.

HARTFORD, December 25.

Laſt Thurſday Morning departed this Life, Mr. Ebenezer Benton, of this Place, aged about 76 Years. Alſo,

On Friday Night departed this Life, in the 37th Year of his Age, Capt. David Seymour, of this Place, late a very noted Sea Commander. And,

On the 19th Inſt departed this life, Deacon William Gaylord, of the Weſt-Diviſion, in the 93d year of his age: —He enjoy'd his health remarkably well, till a few days before his death.— He encounter'd death, the king of terrors with a calm mind, and a true chriſtian fortitude. And on the 21ſt, a ſermon was preach'd ſuitable to the occaſion, by the Rev. Hezekiah Biſſel of Wintonbury; after which, the remains of the deceas'd were decently interred,

He officiated in the church there, in the office of a Deacon, about 40 years: —His life was exemplary and worthy of Imitation: chaſtity and Temperance towards himſelf; juſtice and benevolence towards men: piety and love towards God, were always conſpicuous in his life and converſation: as a huſband, he was dear and loving: as a parent, tender and affectionate: as a neighbour kind and obliging: as a friend, faithful and ſincere. Oh! Hartford mourn, for this departed friend & ſaint, and wherein he imitated Chriſt his maſter, be ye followers of him.

PROPOSALS FOR PRINTING

A careful and ſtrict Examination of the external Covenant and of the Principles by which it is ſupported.

A REPLY

IN this Piece is conſidered, The moral Character of God exhibited in the Law given to Adam: the moral image of God, in which Adam; the nature of the depravity of Fallen Man; and it is inquired, whether the carnal Mind: and whether the Goſpel calls us to be reconciled to that Character of God againſt which we are at Enmity: and Whether the Law of God continues to bind man, ſince the fall, to obedience, as it did, before; the nature of the Covenant of Works, of the convenant of Grace, of the external Covenant: the Nature of the legal Conviction, of Regeneration, of a principle of Grace, of faith, of repentance: the nature of God's directions to unregenerate Sinners, and of Goſpel promiſes, and the reaſon there is no promiſes to the doings of the unregenerate &c &c. The whole in a conciſe and familiar manner, adapted to the loweſt capacities; deſigned, eſpecially for the direction of Awakened Sinners, and for the confirmation of young Converts, in the right way of the Lord.

Meſſ. GREEN & WATSON,

I Obſerv'd with Pleaſure, in your late Specimen for enlarging your Paper, that ſome Part of it would be devoted to the uſe of the Muſes, would therefore aſk the Favour of you to inſert the following in your Poet's Corner.

HOW wretched is a Womans, Fate !
No happy change her Fortune knows,
Subject to Man in every State,
How can ſhe then be free from Woes ?
In Youth, a Father's ſtern Commands,
And jealous Eyes controul her Will ;
A lordly Brother watchful ſtands,
To keep her a cloſer Captive ſtill.
The Tyrant Huſband next appears,
With awful and contracted Brow ;
No more a Lovers Form he wears,
Her Slave's become her Sovereign now.
If from this fatal Bondage free,
And not by marriage Chains confin'd ;
But bleſs'd wih ſingle Life can ſee,
A Parent fond, a Brother kind.
Yet Love uſurps her tender Breaſt,
And paints a Phœnix to her Eyes,
Some darling Youth diſturbs her Reſt,
And painful Sighs in Secret riſe.
Oh ! cruel Powers, ſince you'ved deſign'd
That Man, vain Man, ſhould bear the Sway ;
To a Slave's Fetters add a ſlaviſh Mind,
That I may cheerfully your Will obey.

THE Miſſouris, a people of Louiſiana, were ſtrangers to the Europeans, till about 50 years ago, a traveller, or hunter, coming into their country acquainted them with fire-arms, and ſold them muſkets, powder and ſhot, by means of which their next hunt was very ſucceſsful ; and of courſe, furniſhed them with a great quantity of ſkins. Some time after another adventurer went thither with amunition ; but the ſavages, part of their ſtock being yet remaining, were not very eager to deal with him, ſo that to retrieve this diſappointment, he bethought himſelf of a pretty odd ſtratagem. The ſavages being naturally curious, aſked him in what manner gunpowder, which they call grain, grew in France ; and he made them believe that it was ſown in the ſavannas, or fields, and reaped at certain times, like indigo and millet. The Miſſouris, overjoyed at this information, which ſeemed pregnant with ſuch vaſt benifits, fell to ſowing all their powder, and readily purchaſed that of the French trader, by which he got an immenſe profit in beaver and other ſkins. The Miſſouris went from time to time to ſee what appearance their powder made, and had placed a guard, that no beaſt might come and ſpoil this valuable crop ; but they ſoon ſaw into the dealers knavery. Be it obſerved that the ſavages are to be cheated but once, and that they never forget the fraud. Accordingly they determined to make themſelves amends on the firſt Frenchman who ſhould come among them. A little while after the allurement of gain prompted the powder monger to ſend a factor thither, with ſuch goods as he knew would go off well amongſt the Miſſouris. They by ſome means or other come to underſtand that this Frenchman was ſent by the man who had impoſed on them ; but inſtead of taking notice of that tranſaction, received him very courteouſly, and even lent him their common hut as a warehouſe. No ſooner were his goods ſpread abroad, and notice given of the ſale, than the Miſſouris ruſhed in, and all who had been ſo credulous as to ſow their powder, carried off a portion. The Frenchman inveighed againſt ſuch a procedure, with all the geſtures of rage, and even made his complaint to the chief of the nation, who with a ſolemn accent, anſwered, that ſatisfaction ſhould be made, but that nothing could be done till the harveſt of the powder ; and that on the word of a ſovereign, he would then order a general hunt, and every ſkin of beaver, deer, or other beaſt, ſhould be delivered to him, as the firſt fruits of the important ſecret, for which they are indebted to his ingenious countryman.

THE Subſcriber intends to Open a School To-morrow, at his Houſe where Mr. Andrew Thomſon, formerly kept Store, he will teach, READING, WRITING, and ARITHMETICK. Thoſe Perſons that will ſend their Children, may depend, that he will uſe his utmoſt endeavours to learn them.

IT IS PROPOSED,

THAT the Act of Navigation, and all other Acts of Parliament made concerning America, be carefully reviſed and amended, ſuch as are found improper repealed, and, if practicable every thing relative to the connection and commerce between Great Britain and America, be reduced to one Act to take place on or before.

2. That the Parliament of Great Britain upon, or previous to the paſſing of the above Act, ſhall addreſs and impower his Majeſty, with the advice of his Council, to form a general plan of Government for Britiſh America, ſubject to the reviſion of parliament, in conſequence whereof, his Majeſty may obtain.

3. That all Colony or American Governors ſhall be appointed by the Crown, and be removeable at his Majeſty's pleaſure ; but that no Governor ſhall be continued in his Government longer than five years, nor be appointed to the ſame government a ſecond time.

4. That all American Governments, for the future, ſhall hold only of the Crown, and be ruled by one mode, or form of Government ; therefore all Charter and proprietary Governments ſhall be annulled and ſet aſide.

5. That the capital or principal town of each province or iſland, ſhall be made a City or Town Corporate to be Governed by a Mayor, Aldermen, &c. for which purpoſe his Majeſty [illegible] ſhall be judged proper, or be found agreeable.

6. That the Britiſh America ſhall be erected into a kingdom, and unalienably annexed to the Crown of Great Britain : the King of which, for the time being, ſhall, to his other titles, add that of King of North-America, and the Iſles.

7. That a Lord Lieutenant, or Governor General, be appointed with the ſame rank, authority, and power, as the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

8. That the Lord Lieutenant of America ſhall always be a Britiſh Peer, & changed every three years.

9. That a Chancellor, and other proper Officers of ſtate ſhall be appointed for North America and the Iſles, the ſame, or nearly the ſame, as in Ireland.

10. That an American Parliament ſhall be ſummoned and appointed by his Majeſty to meet and tranſact buſineſs in October under the Adminiſtration of the Lord Lieutenant of North America.

11. That a Parliament houſe and chapel, a fortified palace for the Lord Lieutenant, and other neceſſary buildings, ſhall be erected at or near Boſton, in New-England, as ſoon as poſſible.

12. That this Parliament, as thoſe of Great Britain and Ireland, ſhall conſiſt of an Upper and Lower Houſe.

13. That the upper Houſe ſhall be formed of a certain number of Gentlemen of the Council of the ſeveral Provinces and Iſlands to be nominated by the Crown, and hold their office for life.

14. That the Cities or Towns Corporate ſhall, by a Writ from his Majeſty, be impowered to elect a certain number of Repreſentatives, proportioned to the populouſneſs or commerce of each City or Town.

15. That the Aſſembly of each Province, or iſland, ſhall, by vote or ballot, elect a certain number of Repreſentatives, proportioned to the populouſneſs of every province, out of their own body.

16. That the Members of the Lower Houſe ſhall be Proteſtants, & properly qualified in point of fortune.

17. That an American Parliament ſhall ſit once in three years at leaſt, but not above three months at a time.

18 That vacancies occaſioned by death, or appointment to places, ſhall be filled up previous to the meeting of Parliament, by Writs of Election from the Governor of the reſpective Provinces or Iſlands.

19. That there ſhall be a new Parliament and, of courſe, a new Election of Members of the Lower Houſe, once in [illegible] years.

20. That all religions and ſects of religions, ſhall be tolerated in the ſame manner as in Great Britain, but no Teſt Act impoſed.

21. That no Roman Catholic chapels ſhall be allowed, unleſs licenſed by the Lord Lieutenant : and in ſuch as are licenſed, the Prieſts ſhall perform the offices of their church openly.

22 That North America ſhall be divided into three eccleſiaſtical diſtricts, or biſhoprics, in the following manner :

I. Boſton, or New England biſhopric, ſhall comprehend the Provinces of Maſſachuſets, New-Hampſhire, Connecticut, Rhode Iſland, and Providence, Nova Scotia, Canada, New foundland, and other Iſlands to the Eaſt of Boſton. II. Penſylvania biſhopric ſhall include Penſylvania, New York, the Jerſeys, Maryland, Virginia, & Bermudas. III. Carolina biſhopric ſhall comprehend North and South Carolina Georgia, Eaſt and Weſt Florida, and all the Iſlands belonging to Great Britain, commonly called the Weſt Indies

23. That a Biſhop for each of thoſe dioceſes ſhall be appointed by his Majeſty, and if judged proper the Biſhop of Boſton may be appointed Metropolitan.

25. That a proper number of Preachers, Readers, &c. ſhall be appointed to perform the duties of each Cathedral, and officiate by rotation as the Prebends do in England.

26. That all thoſe Eccleſiaſticks ſhall be maintained & provided for by grant of lands, private donations, and, if need be, out of the quit rents, and ſale of Crown lands in America.

27. That each Biſhop ſhall viſit his dioceſe once in ſix years and be allowed a yacht or other proper Veſſel, to tranſport him and his attendants, when, & where he ſhall think proper.

28. That the eldeſt Biſhop, or Metropolitan, ſhall rank next the Lord Lieutenant, the others with the Members of the Upper Houſe, according to their ſeniority.

29 That the Biſhops ſhall be allowed to ſit in the Upper Houſe ; but not to vote, or even ſpeak, except in matters of Religion.

30. That a proper number of yachts or other veſſels, ſhall be appointed, previous to the meeting of every parliament to conduct the diſtant Members of both houſes to the place of meeting, and to re convey them to the neareſt port of their reſpective reſidence, at the breaking up of each Seſſion.

31. That the ſeveral provinces and iſlands in Britiſh America ſhall continue to be governed by their reſpective Governors, Councils, and Aſſemblies, as heretofore.

32. That appeals in civil caſes may be made from the ſeveral Courts of Law, and the Governors, as Chancellors of the ſeveral provinces and Iſlands, to the Chancellor of America reſiding at Boſton, or the capital of America ; but the dernier reſort to be the Houſe of peers in Great Britain.

33. That the capital of every province and iſland ſhall be, ſo ſituate, as to be acceſſible to ſhips of war.

34. That the ſubjects of Great-Britain in America ſhall be allowed enſigns armorial and a diſtinguiſhing mark in their colours when at ſea.

35. That as free a trade, as is conſiſtent with the intereſt of Great Britain, ſhall be allowed to the inhabitants of Britiſh America, who, on all occaſions, ſhall be eſteemed and treated as freeborn fellow ſubjects ; the late undutiful behaviour of a few individuals forgiven, and all paſt offences buried in oblivion.

36 That due attention ſhall be had to the ſecurity, civilization, and converſion of the Indians, agreeable to the dictates of ſound policy, humanity, and religion.

37. That an Indian Council ſhall alſo be ſummoned to meet at the ſame time with the parliament, and the Indians of every nation allowed to ſend a certain number of Deputies, who ſhall be maintained by the Crown, and after a ſtay of one week, have leave to depart to their reſpective nations and ſettlements.

APPENDIX.

As the erecting of Britiſh America into a ſeparate kingdom, is an affair of the greateſt conſequence ; the ſtrongeſt attention will of courſe be required to adjuſt and eſtabliſh every thing relating thereto in the moſt proper and effectual manner.

So ſoon as this ſtep is determined upon, it ſhould ſeem proper to inform the American Agents there of it, in order they may convey the news to their Conſtituents.

That the American Governors, for the ſame reaſons, ſhould alſo be informed of it, and directed to tranſmit home the names of ſuch Members of the Councils, as they know to be properly qualified as to abilities, principles, and fortunes, for Members of the Upper Houſe, of [illegible] as ſhall be judged neceſſary to form a reſpectable body of men, who are to ſit as peers of America, although not ſuch in title.

It may alſo be right, that the firſt Lord Lieutenant ſhould have an American title, which would be extremely agreeable to the Americans, eſpecially if he is ſuch a man as they have known, or has been diſtinguiſhed by any ſervice done, or attachment ſhewn to America.

As the native Americans, who have never been in England, can have no notion of the magnifice and grandeur of royalty, or of the Britiſh Court, it ſhou'd ſeem requiſite to diſplay, as much as poſſible, of both on ſo important an occaſion.

A proper ceremonial ought to be fixed, and ſtrictly obſerved in all the public proceedings, eſpecially where his Majeſty is concerned, and appears by his Repreſentative.

All theſe things cannot fail of impreſſing a proper awe and reſpect, and, contribute to remove that levelling ſpirit which prevails ſo much in ſome parts of America.

It were alſo to be wiſhed, that the Lord Lieutenant ſhould be a man of a liberal turn of good addreſs, eaſy of acceſs, and occaſionally affable ; which would operate greatly upon peoples minds, and win their affections.

In the choice of biſhops, great care ſhould be taken to ſelect men every way well qualified, to be founders of a new eccleſiaſtical eſtabliſhment, ſo diſagreeable to many ; that they be men of great literary abilities, approved eloquence, and a truly Apoſtolical character.

The other Eccleſiaſticks ſhould, in every thing, reſemble their Biſhops ; and it ſhould ſeem proper, that at leaſt one half of them ſhould either be natives, or of ſuch as have lived long in America.

In founding this new eſtabliſhment, a proper opportunity would offer to reviſe the Articles of the Church of England, and make ſuch alterations therein as ſeems reaſonable in themſelves, are wiſhed for by many good men, and ſuitable to the Scripture doctrine, the ſimplicity, purity, and univerſal benevolence of true Chriſtianity.

Previous to the election of the Members of Parliament, a new Aſſembly ſhould be ſummoned in every American government.

If Clergymen are at all allowed to be elected as Repreſentatives in an American Parliament

POET'S CORNER.

Meſſ. GREEN & WATSON,

I Obſerv'd with Pleaſure, in your late Specimen for enlarging your Paper, that ſome Part of it would be devoted to the uſe of the Muſes, would therefore aſk the Favour of you to inſert the following in your Poet's Corner.

Verſes written by a Young LADY, on Women born to be controul'd.

HOW wretched is a Womans, Fate!
No happy change her Fortune knows,
Subject to Man in every State,
How can ſhe then be free from Woes?
In Youth, a Father's ſtern Commands,
And jealous Eyes controul her Will;
A lordly Brother watchful ſtands,
To keep her a cloſer Captive ſtill.
The Tyrant Huſband next appears,
With awful and contracted Brow;
No more a Lovers Form he wears,
Her Slave's become her Sovereign now.
If from this fatal Bondage free,
And not by marriage Chains confin'd;
But bleſs'd wih ſingle Life can ſee,
A Parent fond, a Brother kind.
Yet Love uſurps her tender Breaſt,
And paints a Phœnix to her Eyes,
Some darling Youth diſturbs her Reſt,
And painful Sighs in Secret riſe.
Oh! cruel Powers, ſince you'ved deſign'd
That Man, vain Man, ſhould bear the Sway;
To a Slave's Fetters add a ſlaviſh Mind,
That I may cheerfully your Will obey.

THE Miſſouris, a people of Louiſiana, were ſtrangers to the Europeans, till about 50 years ago, a traveller, or hunter, coming into their country acquainted them with fire-arms, and ſold them muſkets, powder and ſhot, by means of which their next hunt was very ſucceſsful; and of courſe, furniſhed them with a great quantity of ſkins. Some time after another adventurer went thither with amunition; but the ſavages, part of their ſtock being yet remaining, were not very eager to deal with him, ſo that to retrieve this diſappointment, he bethought himſelf of a pretty odd ſtratagem. The ſavages being naturally curious, aſked him in what manner gunpowder, which they call grain, grew in France; and he made them believe that it was ſown in the ſavannas, or fields, and reaped at certain times, like indigo and millet. The Miſſouris, overjoyed at this information, which ſeemed pregnant with ſuch vaſt benifits, fell to ſowing all their powder, and readily purchaſed that of the French trader, by which he got an immenſe profit in beaver and other ſkins. The Miſſouris went from time to time to ſee what appearance their powder made, and had placed a guard, that no beaſt might come and ſpoil this valuable crop; but they ſoon ſaw into the dealers knavery. Be it obſerved that the ſavages are to be cheated but once, and that they never forget the fraud. Accordingly they determined to make themſelves amends on the firſt Frenchman who ſhould come among them. A little while after the allurement of gain prompted the powder monger to ſend a factor thither, with ſuch goods as he knew would go off well amongſt the Miſſouris. They by ſome means or other come to underſtand that this Frenchman was ſent by the man who had impoſed on them; but inſtead of taking notice of that tranſaction, received him very courteouſly, and even lent him their common hut as a warehouſe. No ſooner were his goods ſpread abroad, and notice given of the ſale, than the Miſſouris ruſhed in, and all who had been ſo credulous as to ſow their powder, carried off a portion. The Frenchman inveighed againſt ſuch a procedure, with all the geſtures of rage, and even made his complaint to the chief of the nation, who with a ſolemn accent, anſwered, that ſatisfaction ſhould be made, but that nothing could be done till the harveſt of the powder; and that on the word of a ſovereign, he would then order a general hunt, and every ſkin of beaver, deer, or other beaſt, ſhould be delivered to him, as the firſt fruits of the important ſecret, for which they are indebted to his ingenious countryman.

THE Subſcriber intends to Open a School To-morrow, at his Houſe where Mr. Andrew Thomſon, formerly kept Store, he will teach, READING, WRITING, and ARITHMETICK. Thoſe Perſons that will ſend their Children, may depend, that he will uſe his utmoſt endeavours to learn them.

16. That the Members of the Lower Houſe ſhall be Proteſtants, & properly qualified in point of fortune.

17. That an American Parliament ſhall ſit once in three years at leaſt, but not above three months at a time.

18 That vacancies occaſioned, by death, or appointment to places, ſhall be filled up previous to the meeting of Parliament, by Writs of Election from the Governor of the reſpective Provinces or Iſlands.

19. That there ſhall be a new Parliament and, of courſe, a new Election of Members of the Lower Houſe, once in [illegible] years.

20. That all religions, and ſects of religions ſhall be tolerated in the ſame manner as in Great Britain, but no Teſt Act impoſed.

21. That no Roman Catholic chapels ſhall be allowed, unleſs licenſed by the Lord Lieutenant: and in ſuch as are licenſed, the Prieſts ſhall perform the offices in their church openly.

22. That North America ſhall be divided into three eccleſiaſtical diſtricts, or biſhoprics, in the following manner:

I. Boſton, or New England biſhopric, ſhall comprehend the Provinces of Maſſachuſets, New-Hampſhire, Connecticut, Rhode Iſland, and Providence, Nova Scotia, Canada, New foundland, and other Iſlands to the Eaſt of Boſton. II. Penſylvania biſhopric ſhall include Penſylvania, New York, the Jerſeys, Maryland, Virginia, & Bermudas. III. Carolina biſhopric ſhall comprehend North and South Carolina Georgia, Eaſt and Weſt Florida, and all the Iſlands belonging to Great Britain, commonly called the Weſt Indies.

23. That a Biſhop for each of thoſe dioceſes ſhall be appointed by his Majeſty, and if judged proper the Biſhop of Boſton may be appointed Metropolitan.

25. That a proper number of Preachers, Readers, &c. ſhall be appointed to perform the duties of each Cathedral, and officiate by rotation as the Prebends do in England.

26. That all thoſe Eccleſiaſticks ſhall be maintained & provided for by grant of lands, private donations and, if need be, out of the quit rents, and ſale of Crown lands in America.

27. That each Biſhop ſhall viſit his dioceſe once in ſix years and be allowed a yacht, or other proper Veſſel, to tranſport him and his attendants, when, & where he ſhall think proper.

28. That the eldeſt Biſhop, or Metropolitan, ſhall rank next the Lord Lieutenant, the others with the Members of the Upper Houſe, according to their ſeniority.

29 That the Biſhops ſhall be allowed to ſit in the Upper Houſe; but not to vote, or even ſpeak, except in matters of Religion.

30. That a proper number of yachts or other veſſels, ſhall be appointed, previous to the meeting of every parliament to conduct the diſtant Members of both houſes to the place of meeting, and to re convey them to the neareſt port of their reſpective reſidence, at the breaking up of each Seſſion.

31. That the ſeveral provinces and iſlands in Britiſh America ſhall continue to be governed by their reſpective Governors, Councils, and Aſſemblies, as heretofore.

32 That appeals in civil caſes may be made from the ſeveral Courts of Law, and the Governors, as Chancellors of the ſeveral provinces and iſlands, to the Chancellor of America reſiding at Boſton, or the capital of America; but the dernier reſort to be the Houſe of peers in Great Britain.

33. That the capital of every province and iſland ſhall be, ſo ſituate, as to be acceſſible to ſhips of war.

34. That the ſubjects of Great-Britain in America ſhall be allowed enſigns armorial and a diſtinguiſhing mark in their colours when at ſea.

35. That as free a trade, as is conſiſtent with the intereſt of Great Britain, ſhall be allowed to the inhabitants of Britiſh America, who, on all occaſions, ſhall be eſteemed and treated as [illegible] fellow ſubjects; the late unnatural behaviour of a few individuals forgiven, and all paſt offences buried in oblivion.

36 That due attention ſhall be had to the ſecurity, civilization, and converſion of the Indians, agreeable to the dictates of ſound policy, humanity, and religion.

37. That an Indian Council ſhall alſo be ſummoned to meet at the ſame time with the parliament, and the Indians of every nation allowed to ſend a certain number of Deputies, who ſhall be maintained by the Crown, and after a ſtay of one week, have leave to depart to their reſpective nations and ſettlements.

APPENDIX.

As the erecting of Britiſh America into a ſeparate kingdom, is an affair of the greateſt conſequence; the ſtrongeſt attention will of courſe be required to adjuſt and eſtabliſh every thing relating thereto in the moſt proper and effectual manner.

So ſoon as this ſtep is determined upon, it ſhould ſeem proper to inform the American Agents there of it, in order they may convey the news to their Conſtituents.

That the American Governors, for the ſame reaſons, ſhould alſo be informed of it, and directed to tranſmit home the names of ſuch Members of the Councils, as they know to be properly qualified as to abilities, principles, and fortunes, for Members of the Upper Houſe, of [illegible] as ſhall be judged neceſſary to form a reſpectable body of men, who are to ſit as peers of America, although not ſuch in title.

It may alſo be right, that the firſt Lord Lieutenant ſhould have an American title, which would be extremely agreeable to the Americans, eſpecially if he is ſuch a man as they have known, or has been diſtinguiſhed by any ſervice done, or attachment ſhewn to America.

As the native Americans, who have never been in England, can have no notion of the magnifice and grandeur of royalty, or of the Britiſh Court, it ſhou'd ſeem requiſite to diſplay, as much as poſſible, of both on ſo important an occaſion.

A proper ceremonial ought to be fixed, and ſtrictly obſerved in all the public proceedings, eſpecially where his Majeſty is concerned, and appears by his Repreſentative.

All theſe things cannot fail of impreſſing a proper awe and reſpect, and, contribute to remove that levelling ſpirit which prevails ſo much in ſome parts of America.

It were alſo to be wiſhed, that the Lord Lieutenant ſhould be a man of a liberal turn of good addreſs, eaſy of acceſs, and occaſionally affable; which would operate greatly upon peoples minds, and win their affections.

In the choice of biſhops, great care ſhould be taken to ſelect men every way well qualified, to be founders of a new eccleſiaſtical eſtabliſhment, ſo diſagreeable to many; that they be men of great literary abilities, approved eloquence, and a truly Apoſtolical character.

The other Eccleſiaſticks ſhould, in every thing, reſemble their Biſhops; and it ſhould ſeem proper, that at leaſt one half of them ſhould either be natives, or of ſuch as have lived long in America.

In founding this new eſtabliſhment, a proper opportunity would offer to reviſe the Articles of the Church of England, and make ſuch alterations therein as ſeems reaſonable in themſelves, are wiſhed for by many good men, and ſuitable to the Scripture doctrine, the ſimplicity, purity, and univerſal benevolence of true Chriſtianity.

Previous to the election of the Members of Parliament, a new Aſſembly ſhould be ſummoned in every American government.

If Clergymen are at all allowed to be elected as Repreſentatives in an American Parliament it might be proper that the Univerſities ſhould have the privilege by charter of electing ſuch.

The ceremonial of meeting, and the buſineſs to be tranſacted in the firſt parliament of Britiſh America, will be eaſily ſettled by thoſe who are acquainted with parliamentary proceedings, and properly inſtructed in the various intereſts of the parent country and its offſprings.

Some REMARKS, on a Plan propoſed, for the better Government of Britiſh America.

IN general I. No one can reaſonably object againſt, but be well pleaſed with, a Plan regularly propoſed, and really calculated for, the better Government of the American Colonies; if ſuch a one can be found.

II. In order hereunto, we are quite willing all anticommercial Acts and Laws, expedient & beneficial to Commerce, be enacted and made, for the ſtrengthening the Connection, and brightning the Chain betwixt Great Britain and America.

III. We are alſo willing his Britiſh Majeſty ſhould Form a general Plan of Government, for America, ſubject to the reviſal of Parliament: In Caſe it be alſo ſubmitted to, approved of and cordially accepted by the Colonies: But not otherwiſe.

IV. We are willing alſo, all our Governors ſhall be appointed by, and hold under the Crown, and removed at his Majeſty's Pleaſure, when we have all forfeited the Rights of Charter, own'd and ſubmitted to his Britiſh Majeſty, as an abſolute oriental Monarch: But not before.

V. We are willing too, our Colony Charters be made void, and annihilated, when we have violated the Condition on which they were given, and by which we hold them: But not till then.

VI. We are free each principal Town in the Provinces and Colonies, be made a City, with Mayor, Aldermen, &c. when we are large enough, rich enough, and need it: But not ſooner.

VII. We are willing to be made a Kingdom and unalienably annexed to the Crown of Great Britain, when our Governors are all broke, our Charters all took from us, and we all ſubject to Lordſhips—But not before, in the Form and Manner propoſed.

VIII. We will ſubmit to be under a Lord Lieutenant, as Ireland is, when conquered by Force of Arms, as Ireland was: But not 'till then.

IX. We will ſubmit alſo to an American Parliament, when our General Aſſemblies fail to anſwer the Deſigns of Government, and are finally diſſolv'd——But not ſooner.

X. We are willing all Religions be tolerated but ſuch only as are intolerable to Church and State, as Roman Catholicks, and the like.

XI. We are willing Biſhopricks, Metropolitan, Dioceſan, &c. be appointed, when our Lord ſhall repeal his Laws, Mat. 23. 8——13. And inſtead of ſaying "Ye are all brethren"——in the Miniſtry, ſhall ſay, "Some of you, ſhall be Lords, Metropolitans, &c. others Officials, Underlings, and the like;" But not till then.

XII. We are quite willing, and think it highly reaſonable, and even neceſſary, that the Articles, &c. of the Church of England be reviſed, and reduced to the ſacred Canaon, before any Plan of eccleſiaſtical Government be propoſed for North-America; And till this be done, and the Remarks above made, well conſidered, we muſt treat the Plan propoſed, as injurious to the Laws of Chriſt; contrary to good and ſound Policy; and even an high Affront to Reaſon and common Senſe.

Monday laſt arrived at Boſton the Brig Amherſt Capt. Dixcey, from London, by whom we have the following advices from the public prints, viz.

PETERSBURGH, (E. lon. 30. lat. 60. the Capital of the city of Ruſſia) Sept. 15.

THE garriſon of Bender ſtill defended themſelves with great bravery; ſince the 30th of July, when our troops opened the trenches before the city, to the 15th of Auguſt, they made ſeven unſucceſsful ſallies in which they loſt a conſiderable number of men.

Leghorn, (a port town of Italy) Sept. 15. The Ruſſians, after a vigorous defence, have taken the two caſtles on the Archipelago ſide of the Dardanelles, which are about 2000 paces from each other, and 130 miles from Conſtantinople. From thence they have penetrated into the canal, and Count Orlow is now battering the other two caſtles, called the New Dardenelles, in a part where the ſtrait is not above half a league broad, and where it is commanded by the cannon of both forts.

LONDON, October 12.

"Near twenty ſea officers yeſterday kiſſed his Majeſty's hand only on their arrival in town, which made the French ambaſſador look ſurprized, as he thought they had all got commiſſions.

Thurſday Morning, about two o'clock arrived at Prowis houſe, in Great Ormond Street, a courier from Madrid with diſpatches for the Spaniſh ambaſſador. It is ſaid that he brings no favourable anſwer to the Demands of the Engliſh court, with regard to Falkland Iſland. We hear that his Excellency communicated it on Thurſday to the ſecretary of ſtate. The courier ſet out from Madrid two days after Mr. Potter, one of his Majeſty's meſſengers, who arrived laſt Monday.

Mr. Potter is again ſet off for Madrid, and his Orders are even more peremptory than before. Quere, Whether a Fleet would not be the beſt Courier? The Elector Palatine carried his Points with Holland ſome few Months ſince by the Point of his Sword. He knew the Nature of Dutch deliberating, and therefore did not chuſe to let them think.

October 15, It is certain that the Earl of Chatham's advice has been aſked, and had, concerning the anſwer from the Court of Madrid. His Lordſhip was requeſted to wait upon the King, or to permit Lord North to wait upon him: for what reaſon we know not, but neither occurrence took place. The buſineſs itſelf was afterwards communicated to his Lordſhip in writing, and a written opinion was returned.

We hear that it has been propoſed to our Miniſtry by the Court of Spain, that Falkland's Iſlands, the matter now in diſpute, ſhall be evacuated by the preſent inhabitants, on condition that the Iſland be neutralized; that is, to be made no uſe of by either Power, but to remain in ſuch as if they had never been diſcovered.

We are informed that an augmentation of the army is now abſolutely determined on; and that orders were ſent to the War Office late on Saturday night for that purpoſe.

The following frigates of war were put into commiſſion on Saturday laſt, viz. The Venus frigate of 36 guns, commanded by George Belfour; the Pallas, of 36 guns, Capt. Laforey; the Diana, of 32, Capt. Onſlow; and the Juno of 32 guns, Capt. Stott.

A letter is received from a gentleman at Dunkirk, fully accounting for the report of the plague having made its appearance there, which was politically raiſed, in order to furniſh a pretext for re eſtabliſhing a principal guard at the mouth of the Harbour, which had been deſtroyed in conſequence of the late treaty of peace.

LONDON.

A Rope maker in Rothrithe has lately received orders from his Correſpondents in America, for cordage to the value of 5000l. whereas his orders only amounted to about 500l value, for the two preceeding Years.

October 17. Notwithſtanding all the reports of a peace between the Empreſs of Ruſſia and the Turks, ſhe is determined not to enter into any treaty till the end of the enſuing campaign.

It is confirmed that the Ruſſians have taken all the revenue that was ſending from Egypt to Conſtantinople and are ſo well ſupplied by proviſions taken from the Turks, as to ſtop all their contracts at Leghorn, &c.

Several private letters confirm the account that the plague has broke out in the Ruſſian army, and that there has been no general engagement between them and the forces of the Porte.

By the ſhips lately arrived from Bengal and China, we are informed that the French, in the Iſle of Madagaſcar have erected a fort upon the very ſpot where Captain Avery, Pirate, built a houſe, after he had carried away the Mogul's daughter, and, by his piracies, had rendered England, his native country too warm for him. The French ſettlement is in a flouriſhing condition, and the garriſon is numerous and ſtrong.

The 31ſt inſtant is the day appointed for a general meeting of the electors and Burgeſſes of Weſtminſter, for drawing up Inſtructions to their Representatives in Parliament. The Chairman is to ſit upon the upper ſtep leading to the Court of Common Pleas, and the Hall is expected to be exceeding full.

October 17. We are told that it was reſolved to increaſe the Navy if there had been no proſpect of a war. This reſolution might have been executed without impreſſing.

The Ruſſians have taken the Iſle of Lemnos, in which there is a very good port, and where it is probable their fleet will winter.

Private letters from Madrid mention that the Spaniſh nation is at preſent by no means diſpoſed for a war with England.

A certain diſtinguiſhed Nobleman is ſaid to be at the court of Madrid incog. gaining ſuch intelligence as it is imagined will prove of infinite advantage to the court of Great Britain, in a caſe of a war with Spain.

The following is ſaid to be a fact. When Mr. Potter left Madrid, he was accompanied by a meſſenger from that court who was to go to London with diſpatches to the Spaniſh ambaſſador. They kept together as far as Verſailles, where the Spaniſh meſſenger ſtopt to communicate ſome diſpatches to that court; after waiting a ſhort time there, he received an anſwer from the French Miniſtry, and bidding Mr Potter adieu, broke off his intended journey to London, and ſet off immediately back again to Madrid.

An Officer of ſtate is ſaid to have declared, that he has reſources, without taxing the nation to any great height, ſufficient to carry on a war for five years certain.

Yeſterday government contracted for 50 tenders to be immediately taken into their ſervice at 8s. per ton.

Notwithſtanding the preſſing, and bounty money, it is ſaid there are not yet 8000 men provided in all, to man a fleet of 20 ſail of the line.

It is now reported at the weſt end of the town, that M. de Choiſeul, the French miniſter does not approve of the hoſtile proceedings of Spain at Falkland Iſland, but yet is for ſupporting the honor of the houſe of Bourbon, at the expence of the honor of the Britiſh crown; and propoſes that Spain ſhall relinquiſh that Iſland, if Great Britain will give up their title to it and let it remain neutral.

In Aris's Brimingham Gazette of Monday is the following article. On Wedneſday night laſt died at Wolcot, in Shropſhire, the Right Hon. Lord Clieve, Knight of the Bath, and Member of Parliament for Shrewſbury.

LONDON, Oct. 18.

A ſtrong report prevails, that the plague has made its appearence at Ibrailow, a conſiderable Ruſſian port, on the confines of Turkey.

Oct. 19. It is ſpoke of, with ſome confidence, at the Weſt end of the town, that the anſwer lately received from the Court of Madrid, was, "That as they, as well as the Engliſh, were parties, they could not ſo properly determine their own affairs: therefore they were willing to refer it to ſome neutral power, to be hereafter agreed upon." This for ſome days ſeemed to ſatiſfy our pacific Miniſtry; but it was warmly remonſtrated by a noble Lord in the Council, as a piece of fineſſe to gain time.

A noble Lord, it is ſaid, has given it as his advice not to wait any longer for an anſwer from the Court of Spain.

So far from the intended departure to Spain of the Prince Maſſareno, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, his Excellency is in a dying ſtate.

By an authentic letter from Paris we are aſſured that neither the French King nor the Miniſter are for war.

Monday a moſt ſhocking ſcence was exhibited in Beard Court, near Long Acre: A woman who ſells Oyſters there, had a room always faſtened by a padlock, & which none of the neighbours ever ſaw opened. They knew ſhe had Children, and imagined ſhe concealed them there as they were never ſeen and for a long time were deferred from enquiring for fear of ill treatment from this termagant; but a number of them aſſembled, broke open the door, and diſcovered the moſt ſhocking ſpectacle they ever beheld, and which before was never perpetrated by the moſt unnatural mother. Three infants, the eldeſt about ſix years old naked as they were born, emaciated to Skeletons ſtood frightened at their approach; their colour, for want of food and common neceſſaries, was that of a Mulatto; their hair matted together, and ſtanding up to their ankles in ordure, &c. which produced ſuch an uncommon ſtench, that they all declared, the moſt offenſive ſmell they had ever before known was even grateful to this; and that if this happy diſcovery had not then been made, the poor babes could not have exiſted many hours longer. They were immediately ſent to St. Martin's Workhouſe, and properly taken care of, and the moſt inhuman parent to Bridewell.

By advices juſt arrived from Boſton dated the 29th of Auguſt, being the day on which Capt. Preſton was to be tried, we are informed that the trial was put off for three or four days.

PHILADELPHIA, December 10.

Capt. Conyngham, from Antigua, informs, that Commodore Mackinzie paſſed Antigua about the 15th of November, on his way to Jamaica, being appointed for that Station—That the Engliſh Inhabitants of Dominica being in fear of the great Number of French on that Iſland, if a War ſhould break out, have ſent to Commodore Man, on the Antigua Station, for a Ship for their Protection.

NEW-YORK, December 27.

"A large naval Armament is now preparing for Sea; the Cauſe aſſigned is, a Memorial preſented by the Spaniſh Miniſter, about 10 Days ago wherein he demands Falkland Iſland; complains of an Indignity offered to the King his Maſter, in an Engliſh News Paper, and of Spaniſh Deſerters being harboured on board the Britiſh Fleet, for which he demanded Satisfaction, and a categorical Anſwer, the anſwer given was by no means pleaſing——He immediately ſent off an expreſs to his Court, and has not ſince appeared at St. James's; The Return of his Expreſs is expected in ten Days, & it's thought it's Contents will determine either for peace or War."

Friday laſt arrived here the Schooner ——— Captain M'Aroy, from St. Euſtatia, in 18 Days. Who informs us, that he put into Antigua, where he was informed, that they had received freſh advices from London, and were in great expectation of a War: That the Merchants at Antigua were fitting out Privateers, and all other Naval Preparations were carrying on, which bare the aſpect of War.

BOSTON, Dec. 27.

By Paſſengers in Capt. Dixey, we are informed, that His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of this Province on his appointment to the chief Command, had a Salary of 1500l. Sterling a year annexed thereto.

The Hon. Andrew Oliver, Eſq; Secretary of the Province, is appointed Lieutenant-Governor, with a Salary of 300l. Sterling a Year.

We hear Sir Francis Bernard, Bart. has had the additional Sum of 400l. Sterling, to the 600l. granted him annually, until ſome Place offers.

Letters from London mention, that the Merchants there did not doubt of the Trade here ſoon following the Example of New York in ſending for Goods; and they were of opinion that it would be neceſſary, as the New York Merchants would have ſuch great Advantages in ſelling off their Goods. It is ſaid, that by a Computation made in England of the Value of the Goods ſent out to New York, from the time of their ſending Orders to the Month of October, amounted to Three Hundred & Fifty Thouſand Pounds Sterl.

It was ſuppoſed that both Houſes of Parliament would be the fulleſt ever known when they meet on the 13 of November.—American Affairs were to come on the firſt of the Seſſion.

The greateſt Naval Preparations were ſtill making,—a very large Squadron was fitting out at Spithead,—a Number of Cruizers were in the Channel,—and every thing had the greateſt appearance of War.—A Proclamation was iſſued giving a Bounty of 3l. to every able bodied Seamen and 2l. to every ordinary Seamen, who ſhould enliſt in the Service before the 30th of November, 1770. In the ſame Proclamation it is required that all ſea-faring Men that are in the Service of any Foreign States, forthwith quit ſuch foreign Service, and return home.

NEWPORT, December 17.

Captain Chriſtopher Champlin, who arrived here laſt Monday Night from the Weſt Indies, on the Firſt Inſt. ſpoke with a Brig, Capt Tolen 5 Weeks from London, for Cape Fear, who told Capt. Champlin War was declared in England 2 days before he ſailed.

NEW-LONDON.

Laſt Monday Morning departed this Life, in the 52d Year of his Age, Col. JOHN WHITING, who during the Laſt War, had a principal Command in the Troops raiſed in the Colony of Rhode-Iſland—from whence he removed in to this Town, ſome Years ago, for the Benefit of his health, having long laboured under a very painful Diſorder of the Lungs, during the Courſe of which he ſupported his Spirits with great Firmneſs, as well as a Chearfulneſs that made him an entertaining and agreeable Companion. In the laſt days of Life he behaved with the Reſolution of a good Chriſtain and honeſt Man and is much Lamented by all his Friends and acquaintance.

Wedneſday laſt Capt. Melally arrived here from the Weſt Indies; three days before his Arrival three of his Hands were by a Sea waſhed off the Bowſprit, one of which, Joſeph Lothrop of this Town, was drowned, the other Two were taken up.

Yeſterday ſet out for Boſton in order to embark for London, DUNCAN STEWART, Eſq; Collector of his Majeſty's Cuſtoms for this port. ——The good eſteem the Inhabitants of the town entertain for this Gentleman is apparent in their univerſally regretting his Departure.

We hear from the Weſt Indies, that at Antigua, Guadaloupe, Martinico, &c. they were all putting the Iſlands in good Order for Defence, daily expecting a Declaration of War.

HARTFORD, January 1, 1771.

One Day laſt Week, one Cornelias Seers of Middletown, about 16 Years of Age, as he was ſcating on the Ice, he accidentally fell into a Glade and was drowned

The Young Lady anſwered.

HOW happy is a Womans Fate,
Free from Care and free from Woe,
Secure of Man in every State,
Her Guardian God below.
In Youth a Father's tender Love,
And well experienced Eye,
Reſtrains her Mind too apt to rove,
Enamour'd with a Toy.
Suppoſe her with a Brother bleſs'd,
A Brother ſure is kind,
But in the Huſband ſtands confeſt,
The Father, Brother, Friend.
'Tis Man's to labour; toil and ſweat,
And all his Care employ,
Honour, or Wealth, or Power to get,
'Tis Woman's to enjoy.
But look we on thoſe halcyon Days,
When Women reign ſupreme,
While ſupple Man his Homage pays,
Full proud of their Eſteem.
How duteous is poor Strephon's Love!
How anxious is his Care!
Let gentle Zephyr's play too rough,
And diſcompoſe the Fair.
Then ſay not any Powers ordain,
That Man ſhould bear the Sway:
When Reaſon bids let Women reign,
When Reaſon bids obey.

PROPOSALS FOR PRINTING

A careful and ſtrict Examination of the external Covenant, and of the Principles by which it is ſupported.

A REPLY

IN this Piece is conſidered, The moral Character of God exhibited in the Law given to Adam: the moral Image of God, in which Adam; the nature of the depravity of Fallen Man; and it is inquired, whether the carnal Mind: and whether the Goſpel calls us to be reconciled to that Character of God againſt which we are at Enmity: and Whether the Law of God continues to bind man, ſince the fall, to obedience, as it did, before; the nature of the Covenant of Works, of the covenant of Grace, of the external Covenant: the Nature of the legal Conviction, of Regeneration, of a principle of Grace, of faith, of repentance: the nature of God's directions to unregenerate Sinners, and of Goſpel promiſes, and the reaſon there is no promiſes to the doings of the unregenerate, &c. &c. The whole in a conciſe and familiar manner, adapted to the loweſt capacities; deſigned, eſpecially for the direction of Awakened Sinners, and for the confirmation of young Converts, in the right way of the Lord.

By JOSEPH BELAMY, D. D.

The price, to the Subſcribers, if the book contains 12 ſheets, as it is expected it will, ſhall be 1s and 4d. lawful money; and ſo more, or leſs, in proportion, as it is larger or ſmaller. The Subſcriptions to be ſent to Meſſieurs GREENS, printers in New-Haven, by the firſt of May that it may be known how many books ſhall be ready for the Subſcribers at the next commencement in New-Haven.

Meſſieurs PRINTERS,

If you think this worthy a place in your paper, you may inſert it by particular deſire from one of your readers.

IT has been matter of no ſmall ſurprize to many, that when the ſociety at home for propagating chriſtian knowledge in foreign parts, has been of late years ſo loudly complained of, for appropriating the money committed to their truſt to a different end and turning it into a different channel from the true intent of their charter and charitable deſign of the donors; no notice ſhould be taken of any thing done by the diſſenters (from whom the alarm and general outcry, for ſo I think I may call it, has been made) however flagrant and notorious tho' of a worſe nature. Reformation as to faithfulneſs in public truſts ſhould be as general as poſſible among the ſeveral denominations of chriſtians, and as ſome efforts have been uſed for ſtopping the profuſe liberality of the ſociety at home towards improper objects, I ſee no reaſon why the reformation ſhould be partial, eſpecially why it ſhould not take place where there is moſt need of it.

Who the commiſſioners are in this country among the diſſenters who are intruſted with public money for the ſupport of miſſionaries among the heathen I have never yet had information. But whoever they may be, I think we may reaſonably demand a juſtification of their conduct to the world, in reſpect to their ſeeming unfaithfulneſs in the truſt committed to them. [illegible] is the miſſion that is and has been for many years been maintained at Stockbridge, with the ſole pretence of propagating chriſtian knowledge among the heathen there. What I ſhall now advance is not without credible evidence and ſatisfactory proof to the writer, yet as we are fallible, liable to miſtakes and deception, I would not have what is here written to be interpreted as being of the nature of a charge till the other ſide be heard, unleſs ſilence ſhould approve and confirm the truth of what is here ſaid. At Stockbridge there is a miſſionary maintained out of a charitable fund ſolely to be appropriated to propagate chriſtian knowledge among the heathen. He has eighty pounds per annum, allowed him for his ſupport, paid out of this fund, by the commiſſioners appointed to lay out this money to the beſt purpoſes for the accompliſhing the aforeſaid end. What could now be expected but that he ſhould ſpend and be ſpent in this glorious cauſe, and labour the whole of his time for this heavenly purpoſe. But inſtead of this contrary as I have been told to his repeated deſire, he preaches two diſcourſes every ſabbath to the Engliſh; and performs all the other duties of a paſtor among them; which muſt unavoidably take up almoſt all his time ſo that the Indians can reap but little benefit of his labours through the week, unleſs occaſionally or accidentally. So that in effect this miſſionary is ſupported to diſcharge the office of a miniſter among the Engliſh, who give him but a mere trifle, perhaps not more than ſix or eight pounds per annum.

Stockbridge is a rich flouriſhing town. The Engliſh inhabitants are much better able to ſupport a miniſter than many neighbouring towns, which honorably maintain them; yea, to conclude otherwiſe, muſt be a ſevere reflection upon their prudence and frugality, ſince they have had the advantage of the ſupport of the goſpel among them, without any conſiderable charge from their infancy. And have had an opportunity of increaſing their fortunes, and enlarging their poſſeſſions by their merchandize in Engliſh goods, and rum and cyder, whereby they have almoſt diſpoſſed the Indians; by which means many of them ſpend great part of their year out of town, out of the way of receiving any benefit from the inſtructions of their miſſionary, and ſo of neceſſity, become wandering pilgrims and dwellers in deſerts.

It has been offered as a reaſon why the miſſion ſhould be laid down, "it does no good," what ground of hope is there that [illegible] could, whilſt there can be but little pains taken with them, the labours of their miſſionary being chiefly confined to the Engliſh, who by ſubtilty and craft in all poſſible ways are endeavouring to get away what little they have left, and diſpoſſeſs them of houſe and lands. However laborious and induſtrious their miſſionary may be in that little time he can ſpare for them, in inſtilling chriſtian knowledge and pious ſentiments into them, and warning them againſt ſinful courſes, others have undone all with infinite eaſe, either by a mug of cyder or pint of rum.

I will not compute how much has been laid out from this charitable fund in order to ſupport the goſpel among the Engliſh at Stockbridge. It is enough to ſay it would take a long time to earn it by honeſt induſtry.—In the name of the public; in the name of the charitable dead and gone, I would therefore call upon ſuch as are concerned in this matter, to juſtify their conduct to the world, and let us know why a miſſionary is paid out of this charitable fund, made for their ſupport among the heathen to chriſtianize the Engliſh at Stockbridge. Shall public truſts be ſo unfaithfully executed! Shall the languiſhing dying remains of [illegible] charity be ſo ſacrilegiouſly improved! [illegible] of their penury and want would call a [illegible] into ſuch a fund that ſhould be thus exhauſted to maintain diſſenters in the wealth and grandeur, and increaſe their numbers, An [illegible] like this, without any pretence [illegible] equalled in [illegible]

An effectual diſcouragement to all acts of charity in ſuch a way.—I have only to remark, ſhould this evil be remedied, that good conduct for the future, will not make amends for paſt miſcarriages without reſtitution.

It has been ſo common for phyſicians and ſurgeons to publiſh their own performances of late, when they have thought them little extraordinary, that it has been ridicu'ed by ſome—but I believe there is not a better way to propagate the art of healing, than by giving an exact deſcription of the diſeaſe and the method that proved ſucceſsful in the curing of it; eſpecially when the method is new, and the ſucceſs extraordinary, it ſeems more eſpecially neceſſary in this country, where, for want of proper advantages and experience, they have not arrived to that degree of ſkill that they have in moſt of the old countries Therefore, for the benefit of thoſe that may be in the like diſtreſs, and at the deſire of many who have had ſome knowledge of the benefit that has accrued, I have ventured to publiſh the following Caſes.

SOMETIME after I began the practice of phyſic, obſerving how thoſe in the dropſy, eſpecially that of the aſcetical kind lived a diſtreſſed and miſerable life for a while, and that it always ended in death I ſet myſelf to inveſtigate the cauſe, and if poſſible to find out a more certain method of cure; and after ſearching every author of phyſic and ſurgery on that diſeaſe that I could find, and much deliberation, I fix'd on a method which I had great hopes would do; but then I met with great diſcouragement; for whenever I recommended this method, part of which was tapping, to the patients, they were greatly diſcouraged, their judgment was governed by experience, and would object to my propoſals, that the phyſicians had not had ſucceſs in that operation—that they had heard of very few or none that had recovered—that whenever there had been any relief, it was but ſhort, and many had died very ſoon after the operation, much ſooner than it ſeemed they would, if the diſeaſe had been left to nature——and it was to little purpoſe to tell them that I expected better ſucceſs ſince I had made no trial.——But ſince ſome have ſubmitted, and I have ſucceeded ſo well, that many have deſired my aſſiſtance, and the ſucceſs has been beyond my moſt ſanguine expectation. A few of the moſt remarkable caſes are as follows.

A child of Mr. Eliſha Hibbard of Windham, was taken with an aſcetical dropſy, at about a year old; I did what I could for it, but to no purpoſe; ſeveral other Doctors were called, but had no better ſucceſs; the dropſy went on increaſing until it was two years old, at which time it was pined away to a mere ſkeleton and of a very corpſy colour——made very little urine, and very coſtive, the belly ſeemed the biggeſt part of the child, and in the greateſt anxiety and diſtreſs for breath imaginable; at this time I was called to the child, when it ſeemed to be juſt expiring; I made an inciſion into the abdomen, and took away by eſtimation near ſix quarts of water, the latter part of which was very bloody;——after the evacuation of the water, there were diſcovered ſeveral tumors which were cyſts, or bags of water, containing in each I believe about a pint; the wound was kept open by a ſponge tent; the cyſts broke one after another, and diſcharged their contents out of the wound; their ſides digeſted away or collapſed, the child was treated with proper medicines & a ſuitable regimen, and in about nine months recovered to a perfect ſtate of health.

Mrs. Rejoyce Pinco, then of about 32 years of age, put herſelf under my care for the cure of the dropſy which ſhe had had fifteen or ſixteen years; ſhe had tryed many Doctors of note, and about twelve years before I ſaw her, ſhe had been under the care of the late celebrated Dr. Elliot, without receiving any benefit, I took thirty bear quarts of water at one time, and three quarts more [illegible] months after, and ſhe is per[illegible]

Miſs Abigail Root of Hebron, of about 16, had been troubled with an aſcitical dropſy about ſeven months, attended with ſome other diſorders. She was of a thin habit, and her fleſh much waſted, and looked like one conſumptive, but without any cough, her bowels were ſwelled very hard and tenſe, the biggeſt part of her ſwelling was above the abdomen, extending quite up to the breaſt, the tenſity of her bowels was ſo great, that by preſſing the midriff up far into the Thorax, it was with great difficulty ſhe breathed (eſpecially when in a recumbent poſture) and otherways greatly diſtreſſed, as her aſpect was conſumptive I was in doubt what to do; at laſt I determined on the operation, and took from her fourteen quarts of water. She endured the operation very well, and it gave her great relief, which together with other applications, has recovered her to health.

Mrs. Mahitabel Chamberlain of Plymton, in the 21ſt year of her age had had the dropſy between four and five years, had been much hurt by endeavouring to evacuate the water by phyſic, ſent for me. She was very much emaciated, and without any colour in her face. When I ſaw her I was ſurpriſed at the largeneſs of her ſize. She was not corpulent, but rather ſlender in her natural ſtate. The 20th of laſt April I took ten gallons and an half of a thick muddy fluid, of a bloody caſt from her at one time. I was much ſurpriſed at the appearance of the water; however ſhe recovered very faſt, and by the firſt of June ſhe came to my houſe. She has recovered a good ſtate, and has late been a viſit to her friends at Plymton, and Boſton and is but little ſwelled.

There are many other inſtances of recovery, but none quite ſo remarkable and ſuch has been the ſucceſs, that of about twenty times that I have performed the operation, there are but three perſons but what are now living, two of which were about 60, and all of them had other diſeaſes which of themſelves were incurable, and of which they died.

Upon the whole, the operation when properly managed by a ſkilful hand, is ſafe not tedious, and with other proper applications in perſons not too old, will ſeldom fail of a cure, unleſs in abſceſs's of the liver, or in an unſound viſcera, in which caſes it may be dangerous, and therefore requires to be managed by men of the beſt judgment and large experience.

LONDON. October 13.

We are at Liberty to aſſure the bublic, that the following Narrative was received on Thurſday Night by a Perſon of Diſtinction from his Friend at Paris.

"A Courier that lately arrived in eight Days from Peterſburg to Paris, brings an Account of a Battle, by which the Fate of the Turkiſh Empire ſeems to be determined. The Ruſſians had been for ſome Time ſtraiten'd in their Camp, and beginning to want Forrage, reſolved to leave Bender blockaded, and to make a vigorous Puſh with the main Army into a more fruitful and healthful Country; they therefore ſtruck their Tents, and begun their March towards Conſtantinople. This, as might be expected, alarmed the Divan. Four Baſſas of three Tails were immediately diſpatched with Orders to riſque a general Engagement. The old Vizier, who had hitherto commanded the Turkiſh Army, at Sight of this Order ſunk into Deſpair alledged, that as the Ruſſians were now far diſtant from their own Country, nothing more was required for their Deſtruction, but to cut off their Convoys, break up the Ways before them, haraſs them with mock Attacks, and wait till Winter ſhould do the reſt. The Baſſas told him that their Orders were peremptory, and that he muſt fight or reſign to thoſe who had greater Courage. The Vizier replied, that he was willing to die, tho' he was not willing to fight: That he would lead on the Army, and as he was reſolved never to live to apologize for his Defeat, he charged them to remember and to report his Opinion. The two Armies met upon a kind of Peninſulas, formed by a Confluence of the Neiſter and Danube. The Diſpute was very bloody, and the Event for ſome Time doubtful. They begun, as is the preſent Cuſtom, by a dreadful Fire of the Artillery, during which the Vizier's Horſe was ſwept from under him, and the Left hand of General Rotezinſky carried away. The main Battle ſoon joined, and the Impreſſion may by the Janizares, who, throwing away their Muſquets, charged with their Scimeters, was ſo dreadful and violent, that if they had been well ſeconded by the Spahis and Tarters, there is Reaſon to believe they would have gained the Day. The firſt Line of the Ruſſians was broken, and fell back in Diſorder upon the ſecond. The Janizaries preſſed on with Savage Clamour, but in the Ardour of Succeſs relaxed their Ranks: while the Ruſſians Right Wing having encountred and diſperſed 20,000 Tarters, wheeled round upon their Backs, and obliged them to make two Fronts to oppoſe the Ruſſian Foot on one Side, & their Horſe on the other. Juſtice requires us to declare, that the Janizaries thus ſurrounded defended themſelves with unexampled Bravery, but the Number of their Enemies was too great. They were at laſt overwhelmed, and the Vizier died in his poſt according to his Prediction.—Of thoſe that eſcaped the Sword, ſome periſhed in the Nieſter, and ſome in the Danube; and thoſe few of the Foot that remain'd, were generally made Priſoners, The Turkiſh Horſe, as they fought but little, did not ſuffer much. The exact Number of thoſe killed or taken is not yet known. Two of the Baſſas of Three Tails are among the Priſoners; and the Ruſſians confeſs the Loſs of ſix General Officers.—Such are the Calamaties of War, to which (however we may rejoice at the Succeſs of the Ruſſians) we hope an End will be ſpeedily made by Britiſh Mediation."

LONDON, October 15.

The Spaniſh infantry including 33 battalions of Militia, amounting to 25 000 men, are eſtimated at about 92.000 Their cavalry conſiſts of about 12 000 men, and their ſeamen are ſaid to amount to 47000, all of whom are badly cloathed, badly paid, and badly diſciplined.

Authentic accounts from Hamburgh ſay, that three young men had dropped down dead at the Cuſtom Houſe in Dantzick, that ſeveral people had died there after a few hours illneſs, with livid ſpots on their bodies, which had thrown the inhabitants into the utmoſt conſternation.

It is aſſured, that part of the baggage of the Spaniſh Ambaſſador is already put on board a ſhip in the river bound for Cadiz; and that the departure of his Excellency is fixed for this day ſe'nnight. He is to go by the way of Paris to Madrid, in order to negotiate ſome important buſineſs with the Court of France, which he is, by the diſpatches he received by the laſt courier, charged with before he returns home.

Octo. 16. By letters from Leghorn, of the 21ſt of Sept. we learn, that ſix Engliſh men of war are arrived in that port, and that ten more are daily expected.

Orders are given for ſeveral ſmall ſloops and armed cutters to cruize in the channel and on the Scotch coaſt, to prevent any ſhips putting into our ports, ſuſpected of being infected.

Orders are alſo ſent to Ireland to take the ſame neceſſary precautions is in England.

A letter from Scanderoon brings the following account.

"It is well known all over Europe, that the Baſſa, governor of Egypt, having paid very little regard to the orders of the Turkiſh Court, has been for ſome time, raiſing forces, as it was imagined, to maintain himſelf in a ſtate of independence. About the middle of June, having filled his magazines and collected carriages from all parts of the kingdom, he drew his troops together, and began his march towards Arabia, with a deſign, as was ſuppoſed, to plunder Mecca, or perhaps to make himſelf maſter of ſome of the provinces of that wide extended tract, where he might have enjoyed the pleaſures of royalty without the crime of rebellion. A band of Janiſſaries, which he had perſuaded to follow him, when they came to the edge of the deſert began to mutiny. This he had foreſeen, and for this he had prepared. He immediately aſſembled the reſt of the army round them, and ſeizing upon thoſe officers who had been [illegible] refractory, diſmiſſed them with their beards ſhaven and their robes cut ſhort; a puniſhment equivalent to that of being drumed out of a regiment in European ſervice. He then diſtributed money throughout the army, and all promiſed to go forward with him. When he had advanced fifteen days march into the deſert, a meſſenger arrived in his camp, with the following Letter from Niſſareddin, an Arbian Prince, the ſon of him who a few years ago intercepted caravan of pilgrims."

To the moſt illuſtrious and renowned Baſſa of Egypt.

"That thou haſt advanced thus far into countries through which neither thou nor thy maſter have a right to paſs, conſider as the effect of Niſareddin's clemency. I hoped that the ſight of the deſert would have taught thee wiſdom, and have therefore given thee time for reflection and retreat. The line of ſeparation is now, drawn; and within two days march is the camp of Niſareddin. If thou can'ſt ariſe into the air and fall upon the clouds; if thou can'ſt mingle with the waters and glide through the caverns, thou may'ſt then hope to view the regions beyond the deſert. But the ſurface of the earth is given to the ſtrongeſt Lance and to the ſharpeſt arrow; and he who dares to paſs further, muſt encounter that nation whoſe proweſs no man ever yet returned to tell."

"The Baſſa ſent no anſwer to this Letter, but, (according to the cuſtom of the barbarians) but cutting off the thumbs of the meſſenger. He then continued his march for three days, without any other notice of an enemy than the clouds of duſt for ſome time ſeen flying at a diſtance. But towards the evening of the fourth day, the Arabian horſemen began to harraſs him, and the night after aſſaulted his camp in all quarters. The Turks being now prepared, eaſily drew together and maintained their ground; and the Arabs, whether through terror or ſtratagem, retreated to a ſmall diſtance. The Turks purſuing their victory puſhed forwards, and left their baggage a little behind them; when a freſh party of the enemy from another point ſet fire on a ſudden to their carriages. Fire in a ſandy deſert is not eaſily quenched. The Turks thus entangled on all ſides, ſaw their proviſions and warlike ſtores almoſt totally deſtroyed: Nothing now remained but to return, and this was made very difficult by the interruption of their purſuers, and the want of water. About the third part of the army has periſhed, and the reſt have regained the frontiers of Egypt."

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27

Capt Brown informs, that the French at Martinico were ſo apprehenſive of a war that they are hurrying their produce to St. Euſtatia as faſt as poſſible; and that all the veſſels belonging to the French Iſlands that were able to carry guns, were fitted out as privateers, ſo that they will be able to put to ſea and ſeize our Ships immediately on the Declaration of War.—A Sloop from New York and another from Amboy, touched at St. Euſtatia a few Days before Capt. Brown ſailed, and went down to Leeward. About 17 Days ago off Sambraro, he ſpoke with Captain Jenkins, in a Sloop from this Port for Montſerat, all well.

NEW-YORK, January 3

Extract of a Letter from St. Euſtatia, Nov. 1770.

"I think it may not be improper to inform you, That Capt. Pace, in a ſhort Paſſage from Grenada, gave us this Morning the following Account. That juſt before he ſailed a Sloop arrived there who had been chaſed by two Frigates belonging to a French Fleet, which he ſuppoſed by their courſe were bound to Martinico: We have a Number of corroborating Circumſtances relative to an approaching War between the French & us."

Laſt Night came up the Ship New York, Capt. Jones, in about 10 Weeks from Briſtol, and 8 Weeks and 5 Days from Milford. We have ſeen no Papers by him, but all the private Letters ſpeak of War as inevitable. The America, Capt. ——, and the Prince George, Captain Stanton, both full of Goods, were to ſail for this Port in a Fortnight after Capt. Jones.

BOSTON, January 3.

Capt. Symmes on his Paſſage, ſpoke with Capt. Dixcy from Cadiz, bound to Marblehead, who informed him, that he ſailed from thence about the 10th of November, at which time War was not declared.—That the Spaniards were making great Naval Preparations, at that and other Ports in Spain, and had a Fleet of 12 or 15 ſail of the Line at Cadiz, ready for the Sea.

Capt. Symmes left Falmouth the 11th November at which Time war was not declared, but that greater Naval Preparations than ever were making at Portſmouth and other Places.

We are informed by a private Letter from London, of the 27th of October, "That altho' Preparations for War continue, yet it is believed Spain will make ſatisfaction and prevent a Rupture."

Other Letters ſay, that there was no doubt of a War.

We hear the Right Hon. Geo. Grenville lay at the point of Death when the laſt Veſſel left England.

It is ſaid there had been Orders from Ruſſia to purchaſe in England One Million Pair of coarſe Stockings for their Troops. It is alſo ſaid, that the Demands for Woolen Cloths from the North Country were very great, that all that could be obtained of the Manufacturers in Yorkſhire were purchaſed to ſend there.

"The War ſeems daily nearer to an open Declaration. From Circumſtances we have Reaſon to fear it will be general. The great and unexpected Succeſs the Ruſſians have had againſt the Turks has raiſed a Jealouſy in the Emperor of Germany and the King of Pruſſia: Perhaps as the Ruſſian Force will moſtly be employed with the Turks, the Opportunity may ſeem favourable to the two former Powers, who, it ſeems, now demand Part of Poland from the Empreſs, and the free Town of Dantzick. However, all theſe Schemes may as likely be for no other Purpoſe but to bring the Empreſs to an Accommodation with the Turks. It alſo happens, in the Courſe of ſuch Deſigns, that the Parties diſagree, and the natural Conſequence is War: Therefore, while we ſee Pretenſions of that Nature, we think for the Worſt."

HARTFORD, Jan. 8.

Laſt Friday died at Weathersfield of the Small Pox, Mr. William Woodhouſe, of that town, aged 50 Years.

Laſt Week one Joel Gay of Hebron was whipt, cropt and branded in this Place for Burglary.

Richard Steel, who has been whipt crop'd and branded in this town for Burglary, has ſince received the ſame Puniſhment in New-Haven for the ſame Crime; ſince which he broke Goal in that Place, and is advertiſed in the New-Haven Paper for breaking open and robbing the Shop of Joſeph Hopkins, Eſq; of Waterbury.

Whereas application has been made to me the ſubſcriber a juſtice of peace for the county of Litchfield, by more than a ſixteenth part of the proprietors of the townſhip of Manſfield, in the province of New-Hampſhire lying near Onion river, a townſhip lately granted by the governor of N Hampſhire, deſiring to warn a meeting of ſaid proprietors, in order to ſee if they will chooſe a committee to ſurvey, and bound out ſaid townſhip, and lay out a home lot or firſt diviſion to each right. THESE are therefore to notify and warn all the proprietors of ſaid townſhip, to meet together at the houſe of Mr. Jonathan Gillet innholder in Sharon, on the laſt Tueſday of January 1771, at one of the clock in the afternoon, for the purpoſe aforeſaid, and to do any other buſineſs that may be tho't proper to be done at ſaid meeting. Dated at Sharon, the 31ſt day of December, 1770.

DANIEL GRISWOLD, Juſt. Pacis.

WANTED, a Journeyman Weaver, who is well ſkilled in the Weaving buſineſs, and two apprentice boys, about 13 or 14 years of age, which boys will be inſtructed in all the branches of the Weaving buſineſs. For further particulars inquire of ROSWOLD WOTTLES, of Suffield.

POET'S CRONER.

From a late MAGAZINE.
On the Death of a Beloved Wife
Written by her Husband.

WHILE pining Anguiſh, wild Deſpair,
Increaſe my pangs, prolong my Care;
Depriv'd of all my Soul held dear,
Enchanting Joy, and Love ſincere.
While round the gloomy Scene's diſp'ay'd,
And Death ſtill deepens ev'ry Shade;
Sad, ſilent, dark, the Pomp of Woe!
Shall Sorrow's Eye forbear to flow?
Flow ſtill, ye Tears! ye Sighs complain?
—But Sighs and Tears alike are vain!
See there all pale and dead ſhe lies:
For ever flow my ſtreaming Eyes!
Fly Hymen with extinguiſh'd Fires!
Fly Nuptial Bliſs, and chaſte Deſires!
CLEORA's fled, the lovelieſt Mind;
Faith, Sweetneſs, Wit, together join'd!
—Dwelt Faith, and Wit, and Sweetneſs here?
O view the Change, and drop a Tear!
Once in theſe Eyes each Grace was ſeen,
And Love and Mildneſs ſhone ſerene:
Once ſoft Perſwaſion tun'd her Tongue,
As Truth ſincere, and ſweet as Song:
Once this cold Hand could touch the Lyre,
And ev'ry tender Tho't inſpire.
Now ſinking to its Parent Clay,
All chang'd the body ſeems to ſay,
—Thus Life, a Shadow, fleets away!
O whiſper ſtill, thou voice divine!
Thine be the Lore, Attention mine;
And while this awful Object lies
Expos'd before my weeping Eyes,
Teach me ſome Genius from on high,
Like her to live, like her to die;
To emulate the Paths ſhe trod,
All humane, gen'rous, great, and good!
Like her, the Rage of Death, to charm,
And ev'ry ſting of Pain diſarm!
Riſe, as ſhe roſe, a ſpotleſs Soul,
Who aim'd at Joys beyond the Pole;
And, raptur'd on the Verge of Day,
Smil'd to behold the ſhining Way.
But hark! the ſadly ſolemn Bell,
Sullenly ſounds my laſt Farewell.
Lo! round the Corpſe, the plaintive Throng,
Slow moving, ſilent walk along.
The Torch that lends its mournful Light,
The myſtic Pray'r, the Fun'ral 'Rite,
The weeping Friends, th' expecting Ground,
The ſilent Horror all around,
Have tempted Sorrow from her Cave;
And now ſhe hovers o'er the Grave:
Now ſinks our Harts, impearls our Eyes,
And bids a gen'ral Groan ariſe;
Exclaims that man was doom'd to mourn,
And ſits in Pomp to guard the Urn.
'Tis done!—Oh ever Dear, adieu!
Each tender Name is loſt in you.
Adieu! thou once kind, lovely Fair,
Soft Spring of Joy, Relief from Care!
O Reſt! may love with ev'ry Grace,
And ev'ry Virtue, guard the Place:
While me receives the lonely Bed,
Sad, Proſtate, ſilent as the Dead!
Reſtleſs, I preſs the well known Place,
And vainly ſeek the dear Embrace;
While ſlow and dreer the Minutes roll,
And Anguiſh racks my inmoſt Soul.

THE CONNECTICUT COURANT,

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic

From TUESDAY, January 8, to TUESDAY, January 15, 1771.

PETERSBURG, (the capital city of Ruſſia) September 18

THE day before yeſterday Lieutenant Potomkin arrived here, diſpached from Field Marſhel Count Romanzow, with an account and particulars of the taking of Kilia Nova. This fortreſs ſurrendered by capitulation after eight days ſiege. The garriſon, conſiſting of 4000 men under one Baſhaw of Three Tails, and one of One Tail has obtained leave to retire to Tutſcha, on the right ſide of the Danube. The artillery conſiſting of ninety one braſs guns, with all the ammunition and proviſions, are in our hands, the keys of the town were delivered to Prince Repnin, the 1ſt of September who took immediate poſſeſſion in the name of her Imperial Majeſty, and received the oaths of fidelity from the inhabitants who preferred living under the government of our gracious Sovereign, to the offer made them by the Turkiſh garriſon to follow them.

LONDON, September 29.

The fermentations internally in France, and the ſame in England, may perhaps give mutual reaſons for a war in each kingdom, in order to quiet the people, and prevent a farther fermentation.

It is ſaid a great promotion will be made in the navy, there not being any ſince the laſt peace, to the great diſcouragement of that corps, whilſt ſo many general officers and others are continually making in the land ſervice.

"It is thought that the [illegible] Sir George Pocock, will now be ſolicited to take upon him the command of the fleet, there being no other officer of any great rank but himſelf fit for a great command.

It is ſaid there are three additional colonels of marines to be made, three additional lieutenants and ſix majors, and that uſeful body of men to be augmented to their full eſtabliſhment with all expedition.

It is computed the creditors of the public funds are, at leaſt twenty millions poorer than they were a month ago.

It is the talk that many conſiderable perſonages, who not long ſince made a jeſt of the people's petitions and apprehenſions, are now actually trembling with fear of ſome legal grievances falling ſoon on themſelves.

It is reported, that three regiments of foot will ſoon be embarked for the Weſt Indies, to augment and ſtrengthen the different garriſons in the Britiſh iſlands.

A correſpondent ſays, the Falkland Iſlands were firſt diſcovered by Sir Richard Hawkins in 1593, the principal of which he named Maiden-iſland, in honour to Queen Elizabeth. The name of Falkland was given afterwards to ſome new diſcovered port thereon, by Capt. Strong by which the whole have been ſince generally known. As thoſe Iſlands lie at the diſtance of near 300 miles from the continent, and conſiderably more from any of the Spaniſh ſettlements in South-America, the public may eaſily judge upon what right we found our claim, and whether the driving our people from thence ſhould not be conſidered a commencement of hoſtilities.

DUBLIN, (the capital of the province of Leinſter, October 27.

We are ſorry to acquaint the public, that there are authentic accounts from London of the much lamented death of the moſt noble the Marquis of Granby.

A race for a conſiderable wager was run up the ſteps of Newhall market, which is computed to be fifty foot high, between a gentleman on horſeback and a gentleman on foot, the race was won by the former, in the preſence, and to the aſtoniſhment of a great number of ſpectators. Great bets and conſiderable odds were laid on the occaſion.

LONDON, October 15.

AT the Common Council at Guildhall, on Friday the Lord Mayor, after the minutes, of the laſt Court were read and confirmed, declared "That nothing particular had happened ſince the laſt Court, except his having ordered a Court of Conſervancy, in order to impannel a jury to enquire into the encroachments on the river Thames at Durham yard." Mr. Alderman Wilkes then ſaid, "That at the opening of the laſt Court of Common Council the Lord Mayor had been ſo obliging as to ſtate to them what had paſſed between the Lords of admiralty and himſelf, relative to the preſs warrants lately iſſued, and therefore he hoped that his Lordſhip would indulge them with an account of what had ſince occurred on that ſubject, which was certainly of the higheſt importance to the perſonal liberty of very many citizens who were under his Lordſhip's immediate protection."——The Lord Mayor replied, that he had received a requiſition in form from the Privy Council, to give his utmoſt aſſiſtance in the ſervice of the preſs warrants; and that in conſequence, he had backed thoſe warrants, and ſent to the ſeveral Conſtables and other city officers, to be aſſiſtant to the military in the execution of them." Mr. Alderman Wilkes then replied, "That there was now a ſuſpenſion of Magna Charta in the city by their chief magiſtrate, that a preſs warrant was expreſly contrary to the words of the Great Charter, N[illegible] liber homo capiatur, &c. niſi per lega[illegible] judicium parium ſuorum vel per legem terrae, [illegible] the firſt principles of [illegible] lamented the unjuſt and cruel fate of ſo many of their fellow citizens, torn from their families, who would be left, perhaps, deſtitute of the common neceſſaries of life, &c. That at the Durham yard committee, Mr. Alderman Oliver, and himſelf had fully given their ſentiments to the Lord Mayor on the plain illegality of preſs warrants, and their hopes that they would never have the ſanction of the chief magiſtrate of that city." The Lord Mayor then confeſſed the illegality of preſs warrants, but declared, "That in that emergency the fleet muſt be manned, and he could not riſque the danger of delay." Mr. Alderman Wilkes ſaid, "That he wiſhed to ſee the fleet ſpeedily manned, but in a way conſiſtent with liberty and humanity: that if inſtead of the paltry ſum of thirty ſhillings, five pound per man had been offered by government we might have had ſailors enough, promiſing likewiſe on the public faith, their diſcharge after a certain number of years; that this ought to have been done ſix months ago, that 50000 ſailors on this calculation would only have coſt 250 000l. that above twice the ſum had been ſquandered away at Kew, Richmond, & for moſt corrupt purpoſes; and voted without any accounts, that ſuch a method ought to have been firſt tried: but that now in the very capital, our fellow citizens were every hour the prey of lawleſs ruffians, &c." My Lord Mayor then ſaid, "He thought the occaſion juſtified his conduct; and that it was unfriendly in Mr. Wilkes to mention it; but however, he avowed having given all the aid of the civil to the military in the city." Mr. Wilkes, replied, "That it was a great public concern, that it was friendly to his country, and that ſhould always have the firſt place in his heart, as well as be the leading principle of his actions."

St. Jago de la Vega, (Jamaica) October 4.

His excellency the governor having received information on oath, that a malignant diſtemper was raging at Port au Prince in the iſland of Hiſpaniola, called the Charbon, and there deemed a ſpecies of the Plague, did order all veſſels coming from any part of the ſaid iſland, to perform quarantine until farther orders; and his Excellency having this day received more certain information on oath, that there is no ſuch diſtemper at Port au Prince, or any other part of the iſland of Hiſpaniola, doth therefore hereby remand all orders of quarantine iſſued as aforeſaid.

SAVANNAH, (in Georgia) November 21.

Extract of a letter from Mecklenburgh County North Carolina, Oct. 27.

"Our old Regulators of Orange County in this Province, have been all in a flame lately, for, at the ſitting of the General Court at Williamſburgh, and in the time of it, they, with force and arms, broke into the Court-Houſe, dragged the Judge from the bench, flogged him confoundedly, ſeized upon the Lawyers, and lambaſted their carcaſſes almoſt to death, and flogged all their (the Lawyers) abettors. What will be the upſhot the Lord knows."

CHARLESTOWN, (S. Carolina)

Oct. 9. Laſt week 14 German families arrived here from Rotterdam, laſt from Cowes, in order to ſettle in this province.

Yeſterday the hon John Stuart, Eſq; Superintendant of Indian affairs, arrived here from holding a congreſs with Colonel Donaldſon, Major Lacy, and other Gentlemen of Virginia, and the Cherokee Indians. All the principal head men and chiefs attended. The number of Indians preſent was upwards of a thouſand. We hear the Boundary-line between Virginia and the Cherokees, which was the principal object of the congreſs, is ſettled to the ſatiſfaction of all concerned.

Nov. 20. About three weeks ago, there were only two Spaniſh ſhips of war in the Havanna, and not the leaſt hoſtile appearance, yet it is ſtrongly aſſerted, that the Spaniards have a fleet of fourteen or fifteen ſail of the line ſomewhere in the Weſt-Indies.

"Sept. 24th. We have the mortification to houſe the whole of the St. George's cargo, to avoid the new impoſitions levelled chiefly at the Britiſh ſubjects; the Conſul expects ſpeedy redreſs."

Oct. 4th. We are yet deterred from offering our imports for ſale and begin to dread it will be a long day before the unhappy diſpute will be decided."

Nov. 27. A Letter to a Gentleman in Trade here from his Correſpondent, dated Hamburgh, Sept 21ſt, 1770. ſays, "If we may judge from Appearances a War cannot be far off. The King of Pruſſia, who has already an Army of One hundred and eighty thouſand Men, has given Orders to augment each Company with forty Men, which makes the Augmentation Fifty thouſand Men; the Emperor had done the ſame; and it is ſaid thoſe two Powers intend to attack France, in order to conquer Alſace, Lorraine and Bar and that the King of Pruſſia is to have Poliſh Pruſſia and Swediſh Pomerania: His Brother Prince Henry is now in thoſe Parts and is ſoon to proceed to Peterſburg. I ſaw in the Arſenal of Berlin Arms for Fifty thouſand Horſe and Foot, and all the King's Arſenals are equally well provided. The Plague is in Poland, and the moſt rigorous Edicts are iſſued, and the greateſt Care taken to prevent its getting into Germany. The Ruſſians continue the War againſt the Turks with incredible Succeſs by Sea and Land, and they will, it is thought, drive them from Conſtantinople, and entirely out of Europe."

December 11. The Diſturbances in North-Carolina are not yet ſettled: On the 19th paſt, his Excellency Governor Tryon iſſued the following proclamation, viz. "WHEREAS information having been received, that ſome evil minded perſons did in the night of Monday the 12th inſtant, in the county of Granville, maliciouſly and clandeſtinely ſet fire to, and conſumed the barn and ſtables of Richard Henderſon, Eſq; one of his Majeſty's aſſociate juſtices of the ſaid province, together with ſeveral horſes, and a large quantity of corn therein; and alſo in the night of Wedneſday the 14th inſt. did maliciouſly and clandeſtinely ſet fire to, and conſume the late dwelling houſe of the ſaid Richard Henderſon, in the county aforeſaid: In order therefore to bring the offenders to juſtice, I have thought fit, by and with the advice, and conſent of his Majeſty's council, to iſſue this my proclamation, hereby requiring all civil officers within this government to be aiding and aſſiſting in diſcovering and apprehending the ſaid offenders. And hereby promiſe the ſum of one hundred pounds, proclamation money, to any one who ſhall apprehend the ſaid offender or offenders, and alſo his Majeſty's moſt gracious pardon to any one of the ſaid offenders, who ſhall make a diſcovery of his accomplice or accomplices, ſo that he or they may be proſecuted to conviction."

NEW-YORK, January 3.

On Monday Evening, the laſt Day of the Year, The following dreadful and ſurpriſing Accident, happen'd at a Houſe in Diviſion-Street, in this City, One Hannah Bradſhaw, [who on Account of her large Size, robuſt Appearance, and bold Behaviour, was) commonly known by the Name of Man of War Nance, (ſaid to be about 30 Years of Age, has lived a Dozen Years or more in this City, was a healthy likely looking Woman, remarkably induſtrious and neat in her Perſon and Manner of Living.—but bore a bad Character with Reſpect to Chaſtity and Sobriety] living in an upper Room, which had no communication with Rooms below, occupied by a Family, on the Evening of the 31ſt of December, ſhe deſired a young Woman, who work'd for her, and was going home, to come again early the next Morning, and about 7 o'clock the ſame Evening, another Acquaintance of hers parted from her, at which time ſhe ſeem'd to have drank a little too freely. No Perſon lived with her, and ſhe was generally alone in her Room, She was neither heard nor ſeen again till the next Day, when the young Woman came to work, who after knocking and calling, and having waited till paſt Eleven o'Clock, with the Aſſiſtance of the Man who lived below, ſhe got thro' a back Window into the Room, and open'd the Door, when looking with a Screen, which went quite acroſs the Room, and was fitted to reach to the Ceiling, ſhe beheld the Remains of the unhappy Hannah Bradſhaw, the moſt ſhocking Spectacle imaginable. The Body, or, rather the Bones were lying near the Middle of the Floor, wherein a Hole of about 4 Feet Diameter was burnt quite away and the Bones lying on the Ground, which was about a Foot beneath that Part of the Floor,—The Fleſh was entirely burnt off the Bones of the whole Body and Limbs, except a ſmall Part on the Scull, a little on one of the Shoulders, the lower Part of the right Leg and Foot, which was burnt off at the Small, almoſt as even as if cut off, and left lying on the Floor; the Stocking burnt as far as the Leg and no farther: The Bones, ſome of which were black and others white, like a Pipe Stem, were ſo thoroughly burnt that they might be crumbled to Duſt between the Fingers——the Bowels remained unconſumed. One of the Sleepers which lay under the Shoulders was burnt almoſt through: Part of the Head lay on the Planks at the Edge of the Hole, and near it a Candleſtick with Part of a Candle in it, thrown down, but did not appear to have touch'd the Body, or to have ſet any Thing on Fire. The Tallow was melted off the Wick, which remain'd unſcorched by the Fire, as alſo the Screen which almoſt touch'd the Hole. The Leg of a Ruſh bottom'd Chair, and about half the Bottom were burnt, ſo far as they were within the Compaſs of the Hole in the Floor and no farther. The Ceiling of the Room, which was white waſh'd Plaiſter, was as black as if cover'd with Lamblack as alſo Part of the Walls and Windows, and the Heat had been ſo great as to extract the Turpentine from the Boards of the Wainſcot,——after all theſe Opperations the Fire went entirely out, ſo that when the Body was found, not a Spark remained. It is extremely ſurpriſing that with ſuch an intenſe Degree of Heat as was neceſſary ſo entirely to conſume the Floor, &c. with the Body and to calcine the Bones, the Fire ſhould have ſtopped of itſelf without burning the Houſe, or ſcorching the Screen—which is hardly conceivable, if the Fire had blazed, and if it did not, it is equally inconceivable, that the Heat ſhould have been ſo intenſe. As there was a chimney in the Room, and a Cellar under Part of the Floor, with which the Fire open'd a Communication, it could not have ſtopped for want of Air. It is ſaid the Perſon who was laſt in Company with this woman at parting, told her he ſhould ſee her no more till another Year, little thinking as it was ſo near, that ſhe wou'd not live to ſee it, that ſhe was then on the brink of Eternity, and that before the Morning Light her Soul would be required of her.

Meſſr's Green & Watſon,

GENTLEMEN,

If you'll give the following a place in your News Paper, the public ſhall be welcome.

CONNECTICUT POLITIC'S for the preſent Day.

POOR N. York by their Connecticut brethren and humble ſervants, were juſt now call'd a pack of rogues, villains, and daſtardly apoſtates from the united agreement of all the colonies, ſtrugg'ling to raiſe up and reſtore liberty which was falling down. Yet poor N. York by their Connecticut brethren and humble ſervants, were call'd a great many ſuch hard names, and not only ſo, but a rod of correction was prepared for their villany; they were to have no more Connecticut beef and pork, all were in arms to ſtarve them out, to have no more dealings with theſe tories, they were no longer to be treated with common hoſpitality when they paſſed through the land, but were to depend upon their packs for food, and abide all night in the ſtreet, or where they cou'd find a covert: with a monumental ſigh they were ready to write an inſcription for her urn.

But this was word's not blows N. York: if Connecticut birds are to old to be catch'd with chaff yet good wheat will trap any of them; and you had nothing to fear from their big threats knowing yourſelves to be poſſeſs'd of the proper bait, or at leaſt had it importing from Europe, it has ſometime ſince arriv'd and wonderful its transforming influence! they became at once your fellows, and are proud to be caught in your toils.

When one reflects, if he don't ſhrink from the light, it muſt raiſe to his view an image like to that in ſacred writ. magna parvis componere, the world wondered after the beaſt.

No ſooner had N. York veſſels by order of their owners returned home loaded with Britiſh goods, but the high blown reſentment of Connecticut merchants had got to quite an ebb tide; the promiſing juncture for trade and gain allow'd them no more power to reſent——inſtead of a New-Haven convention united and vigourouſly oppoſing this threatening and moſt deteſtable of evils, theſe very men we ſee haſting with quick diſpatch to N. York, emulous who ſhou'd take off the greateſt quantity of their forbidden fruit, and ſooneſt fill their ſtores from thence. What N. Yorker laughs in his ſleeve at the farce [illegible] N. York your heroiſm in breaking the ice has made Connecticut merchants your greateſt admirers, faſteſt friends and moſt humble ſervants.

But not only upon Connecticut merchants does this burden lie, they have the teſtimony of a good conſcience from the countenance of the people, the people manifeſt as much readineſs to be dupes and humble ſervants to them, as they to the Yorkers, though a high advance, an uncommon profit ſhould be put on goods, yet the people grown hungry by a little while's abſtinence, take them off greedily at almoſt any lay. Thus from the merchants the heroes for liberty, every occaſion of ſhame and bluſhing is remov'd, and they with the people ſeem to have gone all together over the dam: are now united to oppoſe the common good as juſt now they were the common evil.

I mean not to ſhew myſelf an enemy to a well regulated trade, honourably manag'd, that I view important and worthy to be countenanc'd by every lover of his country. I have only hinted a few remarks, ſuch as the current of commercial affairs at this uncommon period naturally ſuggeſt, and from ſuch an inſtructive ſcene we may warrantably make the following reſolves.

Reſolve 1. That ſelf intereſt is irreſiſtable.

Reſolve 2 That liberty and public good can ſtand no chance among men when ſelf intereſt is its rival.

Reſolve. 3. That ſelf intereſt recommends the moſt underhanded ſchemes to every mans good conſcience.

Reſolve 4. That the human race muſt be a very degenerate ſpecies of being.

Reſolve 5, That their make is naturally ſuited to ſlavery.

Reſolve 6 That they act quite unnaturally in ſtruggling, for liberty.

ISSACHAR.

TO be ſold by the Select-men of Salisbury, 28 acres of good land all under improvement, well watered, and well proportioned for plowing, mowing and paſturing; has two young orchards on it; with a good new brick houſe and a barn, and is ſituate about two miles and half from the meeting-houſe, and about one from the furnace, lies in a corner where two public roads croſs, is very convenient for a trader, tradeſman or tavern keeper.

N. B. There is about 45 acres of good land, adjoining to the premiſes, formerly part of the ſame farm, which it is likely may be purchaſed at a reaſonable price.

The Treaſurer of the COLONY of CONNECTICUT,

HEREBY gives Notice to the Conſtables, and Collectors of the TAX 1770, that he expects they reſpectively pay off their arrearages, by the thirtieth day of January next, otherwiſe he ſhall think it his duty to ſend out his warrants of diſtreſs indiſcriminately, againſt thoſe that ſhall then be delinquent. Thoſe perſons alſo, that are indebted to the colony by bond, are deſired to diſcharge their obligations. The reſpective Sheriffs of the colony, are likewiſe directed to make returns of the executions committed to them by the Treaſurer The Agents——Kings Attornies are likewiſe called upon to ſettle with the Treaſurer. The collectors of duty on Goods, that remain in arrears to the government, are alſo notified to come and ſettle their accompts with the Treaſurer, on or before the firſt day of February next, which will effectually prevent his taking thoſe meaſures that will be expenſive to them, as well as diſagreeable to him.

Treaſury-Office, 21*ſt December* 1770.

CASH given for clean Cotton and Linen RAGGS of any Kind, by the Printers hereof.

WILLIAMSBURG, in Virginia, December 20.

We learn from Norfolk, that laſt week they had the good fortune to detect a gang of thieves and houſebreakers that have infeſted that borough and neighbourhood theſe many years paſt, to the unſpeakable damage of the merchants and other people of property there. Several houſekeepers, as well as negroes, are already committed, and warrants iſſued for apprehending of others. In the houſe of one of the perſons committed, was found a great quantity of dry goods and wearing apparel, concealed under the plank of the chamber floor; and the ſteps of the ſtairs leading to the ſame were very ingeniouſly converted into drawers, in which were found abundance of ſilver ſpoons, rings, ear rings, and other articles of value, beſides a large ſum of money. The garret room had the appearance of a ware houſe, being full of iron pots, blankets, rugs, loaves of ſugar, and other bulky goods of various kinds.

NEW-YORK. January 10.

Late laſt Night arrived the Harriot Packet, Capt. Lee, in 7 Weeks from Falmouth, by whom we have the Papers to the 7th of November, but as we could not receive them till near ten o'Clock, juſt as this Paper was going to the Preſs, we have no time to mention the Particulars, nor indeed to look over the Papers.

"The Opinion among the trading Part in general is, that a War will take Place; but till it is more certain, they decline making proper Inſurances, and yet fear to ſhip their Goods for foreign Exportation, at a Hazard, which Occaſions a ſtagnation in Trade"

"It is currently reported, that all Differences will terminate amicably between Gr. Britain and her Colonies, and that Trade will ſpeedily revive to its priſtine Vigour"

The Account is confirmed of the Ruſſians having taken Bender from the Turks, the Garriſon conſiſted of 30 000 men 4000 Cannon, were found in the Town beſides an immenſe Booty.

The Boſcawen, Jacobſon, from Boſton, and the Golden-Fleece, Goſely, from Virginia, are arrived at Dover. It is ſaid that Lord Chatham has a Plan for accommodating all domeſtick Differences, which he will read in the Houſe of Lords at the opening of the enſuing Parliament. The Right Honourable Earl of Egmont is dangerouſly Ill at his Houſe in Pall-Mall.

The Right Honourable George Grenville has had a Relapſe and is again very Ill.

It was reported in London, by a Gentleman juſt arrived from America, that the American Company of Commedians under the Management of Mr. Hallam, going from Jamaica to North America. The Ship was ſet on Fire by the Careleſneſs of a Boy who went to draw ſome Rum; that moſt of them periſhed in the Flames, and the reſt were drowned.

This Account muſt be Falſe, and probably took its riſe from an imperfect Relation of the Accident that happened a Year or two ago, to a Veſſel going into Newport from Jamaica.

At a Meeting of the Electors at Weſtminſter, held at Weſtminſter Hall the 31ſt of October, in order to draw up a Remonſtrance and Petition to his Majeſty it was mov'd that their members ſhould be inſtructed to impeach Lord North in Parliament. This motion was over ruled but they agreed upon the Copy of the Petition and Remonſtrance to his Majeſty.

We have juſt heard that the Packet has bro't ſome Papers to the 17th of Nov. that the Parliament met on the 13th, That the Papers contain the King's Speech, which ſeems altogether pacific—mentioning that the taking of Falkland Iſland was without any Order or Knowledge of the Spaniſh Court, which diſclaimed any hoſtile Intentions, as did alſo the French.—But a Fleet of 40 Sail of the Line, ready for the Sea, were lying at Ferrol, beſides many in other Ports of France and Spain. The Speech we ſhall not be able to obtain in Time for this Paper.

The Turks have loſt ſeveral important Places and the Grand Signor had taken the Field in Perſon. Letters from Cadiz of the 5th and from Liſbon of the 14th of Nov. mention, that there are at thoſe Places the greateſt Preparations for, and Expectations of a ſpeedy War.

BOSTON, January 10.

Veſſels that arrive to the Southward generally agree, that in the Weſt India Iſlands they are in Expectation of a War, by the accounts that arrive there from Old Spain and France. That the French at Martinico were ſo apprehenſive of it, that they were hurrying their Produce to St. Euſtatia as faſt as poſſible; and that all the Veſſels belonging to the French Iſlands, that were able to carry Guns were fitted out as privateers ſo that they will be able to put to Sea and Seize our Ships immediately on the Declaration of a War.

SALEM, January 1. 1771.

Laſt Sunday Captain Benjamin Calley arrived at Marblehead from Cadiz, which Place he left the 5th of Nov. and informs, that the Spaniards are making great Preparations for a War with Great-Britain, which they expected would commence very ſoon: That Troops are in Motion, and the Fortifications of Cadiz are receiving great Repairs and Additions: That two Engliſh Men of War lately at Cadiz lay upon their Quarters for ſeveral Nights, expecting to be boarded by the Spaniards, but had left the Place before he ſailed: That the Court of London had demanded Six Millions of Dollars of the Spaniards, as a Reimburſement for the Expences which their late Infraction has occaſioned, and for compleating the Manilla Ranſom: That the Court of Madrid would pay no more than half that Sum, viz. Three Millions; on which the Perſon ſent from London to make the Demand had left Madrid, having waited only nine Hours for an Anſwer.

It is ſaid the French were uſing their Influence to bring about a Reconciliation between Great-Britain and Spain.

NEWPORT, December 31.

Laſt Friday Morning about 5 o'Clock, a terrible Fire broke out in a row of buildings on the ſouth ſide of Queen ſtreet in this town; which burnt with ſuch fury that, notwithſtanding the utmoſt vigilance and endeavours of the inhabitants, it entirely deſtroyed three conſiderable dwelling houſes by ſun riſe——His Majeſty's Cuſtom houſe, adjoining the weſtermoſt of thoſe burnt, actually took fire, and was ſo given over that all the books, papers, furniture, &c. were removed to other houſes, and the windows and doors taken out in good order, and the houſe muſt unavoidably have been conſumed had it not been for the extraordinary activity of the people in working the engines, &c. favoured by weather remarkably mild and calm for the ſeaſon, by which the fire was prevented doing it any conſiderable damage.

NEWPORT, January 7.

Laſt Saturday arrived here Capt. Iſaac Jeden in the ſchooner Polly after a paſſage of 43 days from Montego Bay, in the Iſland of Jamaica, by whom we are informed that one Yarth in a large white bottom'd Bermudas built ſloop, had turned pirate and captur'd a French ſchooner with 3000 dollars and a large quantity of hides, and alſo [illegible] another:—That an armed veſſel was equipped and diſpatched in queſt of the pirate and had retaken the French ſchooner and ſent her into Montego Bay, with 12 of the pirates on board who were immediately committed to goal:——That a frigate was alſo ſailed from Port Royal in Purſuit of Yarth, who it was ſuppoſed had gone towards the Bay of Honduras.

HARTFORD, Jan. 15.

A Letter from a Gentleman in New-York, to his Correſpondent in Farmington, dated Jan. 10, ſays,—"The Packet arrived laſt Night, and brings Accounts that we may depend on a WAR.—"

Laſt Sunday Night died at Farmington, of the Small Pox, Mrs. Abigail Hart, Wife of Mr. Stephen Hart, jun. of that Place.

The Diſturbances in North Carolina are not yet ſettled.

The Governor of Maryland has diſſolved the General Aſſembly of that Province.

ALL The houſhold goods, furniture and perſonal eſtate of Captain John Coleman deceas'd, among which are beds and bedding, chairs, tables, braſs, pewter, books, 4 volume Chambers dictionary, &c. and a riding chair, with a variety of other things too tedious to enumerate.

THE creditors to ſaid eſtate, are once more deſired to exhibit their accounts and claims to Meſſ. Thomas Seymour, Iſaac Sheldon, & James Church, the preſent commiſſioners thereon, who will meet to adjuſt the ſame, on the laſt mondays of January, February and March enſuing, at the dwelling houſe of the ſaid Thomas Seymour in Hartford, when their commiſſion expires.

January 15th 1771.

Saliſbury Furnice

BEING now thoroughly rebuilt and in blaſt, all perſons may be ſupplied with ware of the following kinds, viz. Forge hammers and anvils, found upon repeated trials, to be equal to any imported. Pot-aſh kettles, eſteemed the beſt of any made in America. Potts and kettles of all ſizes, Sugar boilers, Skillets, Bake pans, Pye-pans, Spiders and Griddles of all ſizes, Calcining and Clothier's plates, Hatter's Baſons, Rims and Arms for Forge hammers, Trundle heads for Griſt Mills, plain and ornamented Chimney backs, Smoothing Irons, finiſhed in the neateſt Manner, all kinds of Boxes for Carriages, Half Hundred and ſmaller Weights, with a variety of other Articles.

The Proprietor of ſaid Furnice alſo keeps a large and general Aſſortment of Europeān and India Goods, which are ſold for Caſh or Country Produce, at the loweſt Rates.

January 1, 1771.

WE the ſubſcribers being appointed by the hon. court of probate for the diſtrict of Hartford, commiſſioners on the eſtate of Eliſha Burnham, late of Hartford, deceas'd, repreſented inſolvent, to adjuſt the claims of the creditors to ſaid eſtate, &c. And ſaid court hath allowed the creditors three months from the 27th day of December inſtant, for them to exhibit their reſpective claims. Theſe are therefore to notify all concerned that we ſhall attend ſaid buſineſs, at the dwelling houſe of Mr. Joſeph Fagg, innholder in Hartford, on Monday the 7th day of January next, and on Mondays the end of every fortnight after, during the ſaid three months. And as but a ſhort time is allowed the creditors to exhibit their claims againſt ſaid eſtate, it is deſired that all thoſe that purpoſe to do the ſame to do it as ſoon as convenient. As no accounts will be accepted after the end of ſaid three months; and a ſpeedy ſettlement thereof, will without doubt be advantageous to the creditors, as well as to ſaid eſtate.

WANTED,

A Journeyman GOLDSMITH. Any Perſon that is Maſter of that Buſineſs, and is out of Employ, may find a Place by applying to MILES BEACH, of Litchfield.

Whereas application has been made to me the ſubſcriber, a juſtice of peace for the county of Litchfield, by more than a ſixteenth part of the proprietors of the townſhip of Manſfield, in the province of New-Hampſhire, lying near Onion river, a townſhip lately granted by the governor of N. Hampſhire, deſiring to warn a meeting of ſaid proprietors, in order to ſee if they will chooſe a committee to ſurvey, and bound out ſaid townſhip, and lay out a home lot or firſt diviſion to each right. THESE are therefore to notify and warn all the proprietors of ſaid townſhip, to meet together at the houſe of Mr. Jonathan Gillet innholder in Sharon, on the laſt Tueſday of January 1771, at one of the clock in the afternoon, for the purpoſe aforeſaid, and to do any other buſineſs that may be tho't proper to be done at ſaid meeting. [Remainder of the Poem began in our laſt.]

BUT ſee! what Heav'nly Power ſerene
Darts genly thro' the gloomy Scene?
'Tis She! ingliding from above;
The ſame her Form, the ſame her Love!
" Weep'ſt thou my Deareſt? Weep no more!
" The tranſient Scenes of Life are o'er;
" New Worlds now open to my view;
" Bliſs, Knowledge, Virtue boundleſs, true,
" Where Souls with ſocial Raptures glow;
" While Sin and Vengence reign below.
" Hence nightly I, thy Guardian Pow'r,
" For ever conſcious of the Hour,
" That join'd our hearts deſcend to keep
" My deareſt Charge: to watch thy Sleep;
" Hint ſofter Dreams; to chaſe away
" Black Error's Miſt, and bright diſplay
" The Form of Virtue to thy Sight;
" Dart o'er thy Soul a ſtronger Light;
" In Reaſon's Voice to whiſper ſtill;
" To purer Bliſs direct thy Will;
" A beamy Cloud around you throw,
" And viewleſs guide you as you go.
" Lo! few ſhort Moments roll'd between,
" I preſent change the darkſome Scene,
" Diſpel the awful Shades of Death;
" And gently eaſe your parting Breath;
" Glad hail you to the Realms above,
" Dear, bleſt immortal, as our Love.
" Thus while we leave thy lifeleſs Clay,
" To ſome bright Orb thy Soul convey,
" Where Virtue, Truth and Pleaſure join;

" See there you happy Shades employ
" Their Hours in bliſs and ſocial Joy;
" High rais'd on Virtue's Eaglet Wing,
" The Patriots act, the Poets ſing;
" With purer Fires the Lovers glow,

Die Martis, 13° Novembris, 1770

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled, return your Majeſty our humble thanks for your moſt gracious Speech from the throne.

We beg leave to offer your Majeſty our very ſincere congratulations on the ſafe and happy delivery of the Queen, and the Birth of a Princeſs; and to aſſure your Majeſty of our unfeigned joy at the increaſe of your domeſtic happineſs; and that we conſider every addition to your illuſtrious houſe, from which theſe kingdoms have received the moſt important benefits, as a further ſecurity to our religious and civil liberties

We are too ſenſible of the bleſſing of peace, not to feel the greateſt concern at any event which threatens to interrupt its continuance, and defeat your Majeſty's wiſe and gracious purpoſe to maintain it. But, grateful as we are for this proof of your Majeſty's paternal regard to the repoſe and happineſs of your people, we owe your Majeſty no leſs thanks for your anxious vigilance over the honour of your crown, and the intereſts of your people.

We return your Majeſty our moſt thankful acknowledgments, as well for the immediate demand, which your Majeſty has been pleaſed to make from the Court of Spain, of ſatisfaction for the injury received, as for the inſtant preparations that your Majeſty made to do yourſelf juſtice, in caſe, your requiſition ſhould fail of procuring it. And we are exceeding happy to be aſſured, that your Majeſty will think it expedient to continue prepared to aſſert the honour of your crown, and the ſecurity of the rights of your people, upon an event ſo deeply affecting both, until the injury ſhall be properly repaired, and ſatiſfactory proof be given of the ſincere reſolution of other powers to preſerve the general tranquility of Europe. We, on our part, beg leave to aſſure your Majeſty, that we will not fail to make the utmoſt efforts in our power, to maintain objects ſo juſtly dear to us, as the dignity of your Majeſty's crown, and the ſecurity of the national rights.

We are very happy to be informed, that the people in moſt of your Majeſty's colonies in North America are departing from thoſe combinations, which were calculated to diſtreſs the commerce of this kingdom; and we hope ſoon to ſee an entire end of thoſe unwarrantable practices which have ſo long oppreſſed your Majeſty's ſubjects in one of thoſe provinces.

We are highly ſenſible of your Majeſty's goodneſs and care in taking ſuch precautions to ſecure this country againſt the viſitations of that fatal calamity, which has of late appeared in ſome of the diſtant parts of Europe; and we ſhall always be ready to concur, in any meaſures that ſhall be found neceſſary to the ſupport of your Majeſty's endeavours for ſo ſalutary a purpoſe.

We have the moſt grateful ſenſe of your Majeſty's favourable opinion of our conſtant endeavours to promote the true intereſt of this country. We will, in all our deliberations upon points of a domeſtic nature, exert ourſelves for the extenſion of our commerce the improvement of the Revenue, and the maintenance of order and government; And we flatter ourſelves, that your Majeſty will not be diſappointed in the gracious expectations you have formed of our zeal, in the ſupport of your Majeſty's crown, and the reputation and proſperity of your kingdom.

His Majeſty's moſt Gracious ANSWER.

My Lords.

"IT gives me great ſatisfaction to find that you entertain ſo juſt a ſenſe of the importance of peace, while that deſirable object can be maintained conſiſtently with the honour of my crown, and the rights of my people. You may depend upon my beſt endeavours to preſerve that ineſtimable bleſſing, ſo long as it is compatible with objects ſtill more eſſential to the happineſs and proſperity of my kingdom.

"The affectionate part you take in the happy delivery of the Queen, and the increaſe of my family, gives me much pleaſure."

The humble ADDRESS of the Houſe of Commons to the King.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign.

WE, your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament aſſembled return your Majeſty our humble thanks, for your moſt gracious Speech from the Throne.

We beg leave to offer to your Majeſty our congratulations on the happy delivery of her Majeſty, and on the birth of another Princeſs; eſteeming every increaſe of your Majeſty's royal family an additional ſecurity for the continuance of that happineſs we have already experienced under its auſpicious government

Among the many proofs we have received of your Majeſty's conſtant attention to the welfare & proſperity of your people, your Majeſty's earneſt deſire to continue to us the bleſſings of peace could not fail to inſpire us with ſentiments of gratitude and affection: But we could have reaped little real ſatiſfaction from the enjoyment of thoſe bleſſings, had we not at the ſame time been able to place the juſteſt confidence in your Majeſty, that you would never be induced, by a miſtaken tenderneſs for the preſent eaſe of your people, to ſacrifice their moſt eſſential, and more laſting intereſts. Theſe we cannot but conſider as having been dangerouſly ſtruck at, by the violence lately committed by a Spaniſh Governor upon one of your Majeſty's poſſeſſions. Under theſe circumſtances, your Majeſty's determination to make an immediate demand from the Court of Spain of ſuch ſatiſfaction as you had a right to expect, and at the ſame time to direct the neceſſary preparations to be made, without delay, for enabling your Majeſty to do yourſelf juſtice in caſe your requiſition to the court of Spain ſhould fail to procure it, demands our moſt hearty acknowledgments; and we rejoice to find that your Majeſty will not diſcontinue theſe preparations until you ſhall have received proper reparation for the injury, as well as ſatiſfactory proof that other powers are equally ſincere with your Majeſty in the reſolution to preſerve the general tranquility. In the proſecution of this your Majeſty's purpoſe, Your Majeſty will not be diſappointed in your expectation of receiving from your faithful Commons every degree of ſupport which in the progreſs of this very important buſineſs ſhall become requiſite: With this view, we will enter without delay into the conſideration of the ſupplies for the enſuing year; and whatever extraordinary expences the public ſervice ſhall require, we will chearfully provide for, in ſuch manner, as may be leaſt burthenſome to your Majeſty's ſubjects.

In conſidering the ſtate of your Majeſty's Colonies in North America, we will neglect no means of ſecuring the commercial intereſts of this Kingdom, or of providing for the protection of your Majeſty's good ſubjects there, from every degree of violence and oppreſſion,

We return your Majeſty our unfeigned thanks, for the timely precautions you have uſed, for guarding againſt the introduction of that fatal contagion which has of late appeared in ſome of the diſtant parts of Europe. And while, with your Majeſty, we place our ultimate reliance upon the Divine Providence for our preſervation from ſo great a calamity, we ſhall conſider it as our indiſpenſable duty to make uſe of every reaſonable precaution which human foreſight can ſuggeſt to us.

We aſſure your Majeſty, that we will apply ourſelves with all due diligence to the diſpatch of the public buſineſs; in which we will not fail ſteadily to purſue thoſe great ends recommended to us by your Majeſty in your Speech from the Throne, as well as by your royal example. And if any hopes ſhould have been conceived, or it may have been any where ſurmiſed, that among your Majeſty's people there were any ſuch differences ſubſiſting, as could in the leaſt degree abate the ardour of their affectionate attachment for your Majeſty, or prevent their joining as one man, in ſeconding your Majeſty's views, for maintaining unſullied the luſtre of your Crown, and preſerving undiminiſhed the rights of your people, we doubt not, by our proceedings, to convince the world how falſe and injurious are all ſuch ſurmiſes; and to make it manifeſt, that whenever we are called upon in the cauſe of our King and country, there will be but one heart and one voice among your faithful Commons.

LONDON, Nov. 2.

The following is a correct Copy of the Remonſtrance, agreed to by the Electors of Weſtminſter, at their meeting on Wedneſday the 31ſt October, and afterwards preſented to his Majeſty.

To the KING's moſt excellent Majeſty.

The humble Addreſs, Remonſtrance, and Petition, of the ELECTORS of the City and Liberty of WESTMINSTER.

" May it pleaſe your Majeſty.

"AS long as we have any confidence left in the integrity of your Majeſty's intentions, and in the ſincerity of your declarations, we cannot ceaſe moſt humbly, though earneſtly, to implore your royal interpoſition in behalf of a loyal and much injured people. We have already petitioned your Majeſty for a diſſolution of the preſent Parliament. That power is wiſely and inconteſtably placed by the conſtitution in your Majeſty, for the benefit of your people. There are but two ſituations in which it can be exerciſed——either when the people are diſſatisfied, or when they are ſatisfied with the conduct of their Repreſentatives. If your Majeſty means wholly to decline this power, as irreconcilable with the principles of the conſtitution, the people will loſe a conſtitutional remedy. If your Majeſty means to retain it, and to exerciſe it only in the latter caſe, as it has been very recently, and without any ſcruple, exerciſed over the American Aſſemblies, it can never be a benefit, but on the contrary, muſt be a grievous injury to your ſubjects. Your faithful City and Liberty of Weſtminſter, do therefore moſt earneſtly implore your Majeſty to exert it now, when the whole kingdom is moſt juſtly and generally offended with the conduct of this Parliament.

"With the moſt dutiful reſpect to your Majeſty, and with the moſt inviolable attachment to your royal Perſon and Family, we beg leave to repreſent to your Majeſty, that the redreſs of every grievance, the ſecurity of all our violated rights, the relief of all our ſufferings, the prayer of every petition of unanimity, harmony, and peace (ſo often recommended by your Majeſty from the Throne) are all intirely in your Majeſty's power to beſtow; for the injuries we have ſuſtained, and the evils of which we complain have been voted and produced by your Majeſty's own Miniſters, officers and ſervants, by thoſe Members of Parliament, eſpecially who are under the immediate influence of the Crown.

"Your Majeſty has long been ſo happily ſituated as to have a choice of means to give redreſs and contentment to your people; either by removing ſuch of your ſervants who have done the wrong (inſtead of diſmiſſing thoſe who refuſed their concurrence) or by diſſolving the preſent Parliament: That ſo, ſince no adequate proviſion has hitherto been made to prevent the Crown and its Miniſters from chooſing all their ſervants and dependants from amongſt the Repreſentatives thoſe who ſhall not be the ſervants and dependants of the Crown and its Miniſters.

"By the choice of independant, unbiaſſed, and real repreſentatives of the people and by the meaſures which ſuch men will naturally take for our ſecurity, we truſt, under the good Providence of God, that we ſhall not continue to ſee in this kingdom Electors denied the Right of Election, Juries denied the Right of Judgment, and Petitioners denied the right of Complaint."

Extract of a letter from Peterſburgh.

"The joy produced by the ſucceſſes of the Ruſſian arms, againſt the Turks, has, on a ſudden, been eclipſed by a cloud that overſpreads the Court, and covers all the tranſactions of the Imperial Palace with impenetrable darkneſs. Nothing yet has paſſed to the public, but a vagrant and confuſed report of ſomething diſcovered. Nothing is pretended to be certainly known but that in the night of the 4th of Oct. the Counteſs Czernikoff and the Counteſs D'Algarotti, were each ſeized at midnight in their own apartments, and carried priſoners to different fortreſſes, where none are permitted to know their fate. On the next morning ſeveral of the Ladies attending on the perſon of the Empreſs were ordered to retire from the Court, and confine themſelves either at their own houſes in diſtant parts of the Empire, or in different towns named by her Imperial Majeſty. Such a ſudden revolution in many of the principal families has given riſe to different conjectures and reports. Some hold that a very dangerous correſpondence has been intercepted between the Counteſs D'Algarotti and the King of Pruſſia, while others no leſs confidently aſſert, that it happened between her and Prince Heraclius. Some whiſper, that the Swedes had formed a deſign to ſeize the Empreſs and enforce the reſtitution of Livonia and Finland. However this be, the guards have been changed, and the regiments which for ſome time paſt have done duty at the Palace, are deſtined to garriſon the forts on the frontiers of China. Some declare openly that the Counteſs Czernikoff, having received the knout, has confeſſed that ſhe has been privy to propoſitions for depoſing the Empreſs. Others add ſtill a blacker crime, that ſhe had treated for a reward to poiſon her. But ſince whatever the Counteſs has confeſſed or denied, was ſaid to particular Commiſſioners, with every precaution of ſecrecy, it is apparent that theſe reports can be conſidered as nothing more than ſuch gueſſes as curioſity and ignorance will always produce. But as no man knows the crime of thoſe that are now in cuſtody, ſo no man knows what may in a few days be charged up on himſelf; and a general dejection and diſmay is viſible through all the attendants on the Court. The affections of the people for their Imperial Miſtreſs is pourtrayed in the univerſal ſolicitude that clouds every face, where the report of her danger has been heard. It is hoped, however, by thoſe who judge moſt coolly, that the utmoſt crime of the Ladies has been only the diſcovery of ſome ſecrets of State, and that none of them have been ſo flagitiouſly corrupt, as to attempt the ſacred perſon of their Sovereign."

LONDON, Nov. 2.

A Gentleman of this City was a few days ago called on to give his reaſons for refuſing to pay the land tax, for his eſtates in a certain county, or ſuffer his tenants to pay it; he anſwered, that he will never pay a farthing till he is legally repreſented in Parliament, and that if his tenants pay the tax he will not allow it them again.

A letter from Portſmouth dated Oct. 26 ſays, "A perſon who arrived here yeſterday from Roſcof, near Breſt, has been to Admiral Lord Edgecomb, and made oath, that he left Breſt laſt Wedneſday, where the French were working night and day (Sundays not excepted) to fit out their fleet. This news the Admiral diſpatched by expreſs to the Admiralty laſt night."

Private advices from Paris ſay, that the Court had given orders for the utmoſt diligence to be uſed in fitting out for ſea every ſhip of war in the royal navy of France.

Nov. 3. We have it averred to us, that a certain Nobleman (againſt whom the proceedings of Wedneſday, at Weſtminſter were particularly pointed) happening juſt after the breaking up of the aſſembly, to meet in Saville-row, a patriot commoner of great fortune, his Lordſhip cried out, "Well, Sir, what have been the motions of the ragamuffins in Weſtminſter hall?"—"Why, my Lord, the ragamuffins have unanimouſly carried a motion to have no impeachment till they are ſure of ſecollation."

We hear Vice Admiral Sir W. Burnaby will have the command of a ſquadron of men of war deſtined for the Jamaica ſtation.

The ſhip London Packet, Capt James Cook, is arrived in the river from Philadelphia, and brings a confirmation of the account lately received of the Merchants of that Place having come to a reſolution to import goods as uſual (tea excepted); in conſequence of which ſhe immediately began to load for that place.

Some letters received yeſterday by the New-York packet, mention that moſt of the principal American Colonies are torn with inteſtine diviſions, which are not ſoon likely to be at an end.

The following promotions are immediately to take place in conſequence of the Duke of Argyle's death:

An elegant houſe is taken in Hill ſtreet, Berkeley ſquare for the reception of Dr. Lucas, the Iriſh Patriot, who is ſpeedily expected in this capital.

His Majeſty has been pleaſed to appoint William De Grey, Eſq; (Attorney General) to be Lord Chancellor of Great Britain; and laſt night he was ſworn into that high office, before his Honour the Maſter of the Rolls.

Mr. Thurloe is appointed Attorney-General, and Mr. Wallace Sollicitor General.

Mr. De Grey is to have a Peerage, for which the patent is now making out.

Orders are given for detachments of the royal Regiment of Artillery to be in readineſs to embark for the iſlands of Guernſey and Jerſey.

Yeſterday ſummonſes were iſſued for a court of Common Council to meet at Guildhall next Thurſday, to conſider of a proper bounty to be given by the Corporation to able bodied ſeamen; his Lordſhip being of opinion, that the fleet will be more expeditiouſly manned by that ſalutary method than by impreſſing. Some other intereſting matters will alſo come under the conſideration of the court.

PHILADELPHIA, January 17

Copy of a Letter from Cadiz, dated Nov. 6.

SIR,

"I take the liberty to inform you, as acting Conſul for his Majeſty here, and being largely employed as a Factor for many of his Majeſty's ſubjects concerned in the trade of the colony which you preſide over, and there is for the preſent the ſtrongeſt appearance of a rupture betwixt Great-Britain and Spain, which may be a means of many veſſels arriving from his Majeſty's Plantations in North-America, in the different ports of this kingdom, after a war may be declared, and conſequently be made prize of: I have taken every precaution which occurred to me, towards preventing ſuch veſſels as may be on the way, from coming into this port, or others in Spain, ſhould a rupture actually happen; and I give you this notice, that you may make ſuch uſe of it as your prudence may ſuggeſt towards preventing other veſſels being diſpatched to theſe parts, until after accounts being received of theſe clouds being diſſipated, which I ſincerely wiſh they may be, favourably and ſoon, ſo as to enable his Majeſty's ſubjects trading this way, to purſue and re-aſſume their trade with ſecurity and ſafety. I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient, and moſt humble Servant,

To the Hon. JOHN PENN, Eſq; JAMES DUFF.

Extract of a letter from Cadiz, dated Oct. 9.

"I am ſorry to tell you, that I think things ſtill look embroiled, and I much fear that they may come to ſome extremity; the greateſt ſecurity againſt it is, that poor condition this country is in, they have neither men nor money to go to war with: ſo that, if they are brought into it, it will be very reluctantly; and I believe them to be diſpoſed to make any kind of conceſſions to avoid it; of which I hope our Rulers in England may make a proper advantage. The affair which has happened in South America, has undoubtedly been a blunder on the part of their Governor and others there; and in caſe of an accomodation, which I have ſtill ſanguine hopes of, they may be brought to a ſevere account."

Extract from the ſame dated Oct. 23.

"Things are exceedingly embroiled, though I am ſtill not without hopes that they will be adjuſted, but it is good to guard againſt the worſt; in caſe of war, the Portugueſe are likely to be brought in, and I am of opinion, that Spain means either to attack them or Gibralter; ſhould the Portugueſe take part with the Houſe of Bourbon, they will of courſe experience our reſentment, and you will do well to be cautious how you adventure cargoes to theſe parts of Europe for ſome time to come."

Extract of a letter from St. Kitts, dated Dec 8.

"There are 30 ſail of privateers at Martinico and Guadaloupe, ready to put to ſea. The French have bought up all the powder and ſhot that was at St. Euſtatia; ſhould a war be declared, our ſeas will be full of privateers."

Extract of a Letter from London, Oct. 31, 1770.

"I think there is good reaſon to ſuppoſe that the duty on tea will be repealed this ſeſſions in which caſe I hope things will again ſubſide into that regular channel which they flowed in before the eruption of theſe diſcontents. What has paſſed will no doubt excite a conſtant jealouſy in the Americans, of any future encroachments of arbitrary power, and will I truſt be a leſſon to miniſters to avoid the agitation of ſo dangerous a queſtion, as that of an American Revenue."

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman in London, dated November 7, 1770.

"By the laſt accounts from Philadelphia I am informed, you have agreed to receive all goods but tea, ſhipped after the 15th of January next; I am in hopes the duty may be taken off in time, to include that article alſo, having ſome aſſurances of it.

"The Parliament meet next week, when we expect to be more fully informed, whether we are likely to have a war, which ſtill remains uncertain:—Moſt in the miniſterial intereſt, ſay, we ſhall have no war."

Extract of a letter from London, dated Nov. 13.

"I have juſt come from the Houſe of Commons, where I heard the King's Speech, it is too general to form any opinion from; but from the manner of debating it, on the Court ſide, a war will take place, if it can be done with any propriety."

Extract of a Letter from London, Nov. 7, 1770.

"With regard to our Diſpute with Spain, you may be aſſured, from good Authority, it is now reduced to a mere Punctilio, and that there is no Doubt of their Submiſſion. The French Court too, dread nothing ſo much as breaking with us at preſent. Theſe important Particulars you may depend on. But if, contrary to all reaſonable Expectation, the preſent Miſunderſtanding ſhould at length occaſion a War, our Fleet is in excellent Order. Eighteen Ships of the Line, with a great Number of Frigates, are already manned, and can put to Sea in a Week; Fifty more can be ready in a few Months; and the whole Engliſh Nation are quite alive & alert, in contemplation of a Rupture with their antient Enemies.

"As for our Finances, you may alſo be aſſured (and from good Authority likewiſe) that the Sinking Fund this Year (viz. from Michaelmas 1769, to Michaelmas laſt) amounts to £.2,833,860, which is juſt £.421,074 more than it was laſt Year; a Sum, which, together with an additional Shilling Land Tax, is ſufficient to carry on a naval War without laying any further Burthen upon the People. A Situation this, which our enemies know, and tremble at.

"Next Week the Parliament aſſembles, when we ſhall ſoon ſee what Turn public Affairs will take. It is thought the Parliament will not take off the Duty on Tea, nor give up the Right of Taxation in America. I moſt ſincerely wiſh this, and every future Diſpute, may be conducted, ſo as beſt to promote the Proſperity & Happineſs of the Whole. I can never be brought to think our Intereſts are, or ought to be, ſeparate."

Extract of a letter from London, Nov. 9.

We are fluctuating between peace and war, our miniſters know not which. They have roſe in their demands upon Spain, when they found the French adviſing that Court to peace. This may diſguſt the Spaniards ſo much as to make them determine upon war—we ſhall know in a very few weeks."

Yeſterday Capt. Roſs arrived here from St. Croix, with whom came Paſſenger Captain Marſhall, who informs that about the 19th of December, a Spaniſh Sette arrived at Porto Rico from Cadiz, in 22 Days, the Captain of which reported, that War was expected to be declared in a Day or two after he ſailed; upon which the Governor ordered all the Engliſh off the Iſland; and they immediately ſet to Work in erecting new Batteries, mounting Guns and making the greateſt Preparations for War imaginable.

Capt. Bedford, in eight weeks from Cadiz, informs that a French regiment was arrived there, that the Spaniards were in daily expectation of a war, and were fortifying every place that was poſſible. A ſhip from London was the only Engliſh veſſel there, and the Houſe that ſhe was conſigned to, were in the utmoſt fear of her being ſeized.

Capt. Wilſon, from Hiſpanola, informs that the Spaniards were heaving down their veſſels, and making the utmoſt expedition in fitting them out as privateers. They were in ſuch expectation that many of them told Capt. Wilſon, that they would have him among the firſt of their Captures.

BOSTON, Jan. 24.

Laſt Friday being kept as birth-day of our moſt gracious ſovereign Queen Charlotte, the ſame was obſerved here, by the diſplay of colours and the firing of cannon, from his Majeſty's Caſtle William and ſhips in this harbour, and from the batteries in town.

On Friday Evening laſt, an aſſembly was opened at Concert Hall, for the Winter Seaſon. It is ſaid a large Number of the principal Gentlemen of the Town who have been of very different Sentiments in the late Party Diſputes are Subſcribers, and that the aſſembly was propoſed, in order to reſtore Peace, Harmony and the bleſſings of ſocial life.

A correſpondent has ſent us the following.—"An odd and ſad accident lately happened to a Gentleman, who has a conſiderable poſt in the——. This Gentleman had the misfortune to fall deeply in love with another man's wife—ſhe was adverſe to his importunities for a long while, at length, tired of them——ſhe informs the huſband—he adviſes her to make an appointment with the Gentleman—this ſhe does. The wife is put out of the way—the huſband equipped in the wife's cap, &c. at the time appointed goes to bed—the Gentleman gets in at a window, and ſoftly makes his way into the room where his ſuppoſed miſtreſs lay—he undreſſes for bed—where, behold, juſt as he was entering, madam with the cap on, gave a whiſtle, when three or four ſturdy rogues burſted out from a neighbouring cloſet, ſeized my Gentleman, who met with an irreparable loſs, and is now under the care of ſkilful ſurgeons."

NEW-HAVEN, Jan. 25.

On Tueſday the 15th Inſtant, the Hon. ROGER NEWTON, Eſq; departed this Life at New-Haven, where he was attending the County Court, aged 86.

He was endowed, by the great Author of Nature, with ſtrong natural Powers, both of Body and Mind; early in Life was he call'd to the Exerciſe of thoſe Powers in the Service of his Country.

When a Youth, he went out repeatedly for the Defence of the New-England Frontiers; in the Expedition formed againſt Canada, Anno 1709 he had a Lieutenant's Commiſſion, and the following Year the Command of a Company at the taking of Port Royal. Thoſe early Betruſtments he ſuſtained with Fidelity and Honour, diſcovering a good Judgment, a forward Activity, and an intrepid Fortitude of Mind.

Soon after, he was called to Civil Improvement in the Colony: More than Forty Years he was Member of the Honorable General Aſſembly, & near Thirty of them one of the Council: More than Forty Years he was one of the Judges, and Thirty-three Years Chief Judge of the County Court, and more that Twenty Years chief Colonel of the Second Regiment of Militia, which two laſt Offices and Truſts he ſuſtained at the Time of his Death, retaining the Powers of his Mind to ſuch a Degree, that he was able to Diſcharge thoſe important Truſts to general Acceptance, and, conſidering his advanced Age, to univerſal Admiration.

In the Town of Milford, where he lived, he has been for Fifty Years one of their leading Men, and a ſucceſsful Inſtrument of maintaining good Order and Peace in the Place, and in particular, had a conſiderable Hand in effecting the late very peaceable and happy Re-ſettlement of the Goſpel Miniſtry over the Church and Society to which he belonged; aſſerting ſteadily and conſcientiouſly the Right of the People to chooſe their own Miniſter, and their own Council.

In all the Variety of his public Improvements, he maintained the Character of underſtanding and judicious, ſteady and firm, upright and faithful; an undaunted Soldier, a wiſe Senator, and an able, important Judge.

Nor was he leſs diſtinguiſhed in his religious, and in his more private Character; he appeared to be governed by the Principles and Laws of the Chriſtian Religion, which he had early profeſſed, exemplifying well the chriſtian Virtues—perſonal, ſocial and divine. And in his laſt Sickneſs he had not only a comfortable Hope, but Joy unſpeakable and full of Glory. "Mark the perfect Man, & behold the Upright, for the End of that Man is Peace."

His Funeral was attended on Thurſday the 17th Inſtant; when the Court of which he had long been Preſident (then ſitting) with it's Officers, and all the Gentlemen of the Bar, went into Mourning.

The Corpſe was carried, at the Deſire of the Court, to the State-Houſe; the whole Court walking in Proceſſion as Mourners; there a Prayer was made, and an Oration delivered very ſuitable to the Occaſion. From thence the Corpſe was conveyed to Milford, where his Interment was attended by a very general Collection of the People, with all proper funeral Solemnity and the moſt expreſſive Marks of Reſpect.

On Tueſday laſt, the 22d Inſtant, departed this Life, in the 27th Year of her Age, Mrs. Hannah Williſton, Conſort to the Rev. Noah Williſton, of Weſt-Haven.

HARTFORD, January 29.

On the 16th inſtant, one Elijah Alford about 38 years of age, of Beeket, in the evening going up on a ſcaffold in his barn, his foot ſlip'd and he fell from the beam, and fractured his ſkull in ſuch a manner as that he died in a few minutes.

POET'S CORNER.

Elegiac Reflections upon the News of the Death of the Honorable ZEBULON WEST, Eſq; who, after a few Months of diſtreſſing Sickneſs, died December, 1770.

'TIS true, the ſad, th' unwelcome news is true
Th' unwilling mind muſt yield each flatt'ring hope,
Various accounts atteſt the mournful truth,
And leave no room to doubt: theſe ſigns of woe,
The penſive look, the ſadd'ned countenance,
This general air of grief concur to prove it.
Our Weſt is dead, the lov'd and honor'd Weſt,
Has left our ſphere; the fel diſeaſe, that ſeiz'd
His fleſh, and ſorely threaten'd his dear life,
Has baffl'd all the healing arts, and ſpoil'd
His man'y form, the well conſtructed clay,
His earthly houſe, and lodg'd it in the grave.
He is no more! the places that have known him
With much delight, ſhall never know him more:
Nor feel the happy influence of his preſence.
How great the loſs! how mournful are the tidings:
The chriſtian, patriot, husband, father, judge,
The cordial friend, the lover of mankind,
And all the virtues, that did well adorn
Theſe public and domeſtic characters,
Are loſt in him, by an untimely death.
Well may his country, well the county mourn,
Well may the general, and the inferior court,
(To which he was ſo bright an ornament)
Well may his town, his diſtrict and his church,
And his bereaved family and friends
Lament their loſs with deep and painful ſorrow.

All his acquaintance will condole the loſs
Of ſuch true worth intire and uſeful virtue,
Such moral goodneſs, ſocial and divine,
The ſource, the life, the baſe of humane weal.
O Hartfordſhire! O the bereaved county!
How does this mournful providence renew,
A painful ſenſe of our late ſore bereavments!
(Wolcott's & Pitkin's, Edwards Wells & others,
Ariſe to thought upon this ſad occaſion)
How many of our Princes are no more!
Men of great ſocial and religious worth,
The light, the joy, the glory of their ſpecies;
Judges and ſenators and rulers chief:
Who late were, with us, in their various ſpheres
Of happieſt influence on their country's weal,
Now ſunk in death and ſhine on earth no more.
O could the wiſh of friendſhip and eſteem,
Or more extenſive love to human nature,
(Succeeded by kind heaven's all powerful aid)
Perpetuate their mem'ries and examples:
Ages to come ſhould know their heavenly worth,
Behold the charms of their ſuperior virtues,
And feel the force of thoſe attractive charms,
And be what they behold; then would their names
Be ſtill remember'd in the happieſt manner,
By virtues copied from their great examples
Still bleſſing, while they're bleſt by future ages—
As long as time ſhall roll his courſe, and bear
His fleeting ſons into th' eternal world——
Where the ſame virtues, in a better ſoil,
Free from the mixtures that alloy them here:
Beneath the beams of the great ſource of light,
Shall flouriſh, ripen and improve their bliſs
In every moral good, divine and ſocial,
Reſembling more their great original,
In new acceſs of glory and delight,
In endleſs progreſs with eternity——
Circling the throne ſupreme with ceaſleſs praiſe,
And warmeſt love to God and his Meſſiah,
The ſpring and means of all this good to man,
Ill-meriting, by ſovereign grace beſtow'd.

An EPITAPH for his TOMB.

His nobleſt worth, to heaven alone,
His chriſtian heart, was fully known.
But ſtrangers and the age to come,
May know, when they behold this tomb,
For powers and truſts all well improv'd,
He liv'd much honour'd and belov'd.

Ten Dollars Reward!

STRAYED or ſtolen from Samuel Palmer, out of a ſtable at the foot of Weſtfield mountains, on Glaſcow road, on the morning of the 11th inſtant, a dark brown MARE, ſix year old paſt, about 14 hands and half high, a ſtar in her forehead ſome white on all her feet, no brand, ſhod all round when ſhe went away, paces and trots. Whoever ſhall take up ſaid Mare and thief if ſtolen and return them to Stephen Sacket of Weſtfield, ſo that he may be brought to juſtice, ſhall have Ten Dollars reward, if only the Mare, Five Dollars.

Wheras my perfiduous wife MARY, on the 23d day of October laſt, wilfully eloped from my bed and board and I am told is now in the town of Suffield, in the colony of Connecticut, and am apprehenſive ſhe may run me in debt. Theſe are therefore to forbid all manner of perſons from truſting the ſaid Mary, on my credit, on any pretences whatſoever, for I ſhall utterly refuſe paying any debts contracted by the ſaid Mary.

PROPOSALS FOR PRINTING

A careful and ſtrict Examination of the external Covenant, and of the Principles by which it is ſupported.

A REPLY

IN this Piece is conſidered, The moral Character of God exhibited in the Law given to Adam: the moral Image of God, in which Adam was created; the nature of the depravity of Fallen Man; and it is inquired, whether the carnal Mind is Enmity againſt God, merely conſidered as our enemy; or only againſt miſtaken Ideas of God; or againſt God's true and real Character: and if ſo, wherein lies the Contrariety between the holy nature of and the carnal Mind: and whether the Goſpel calls us to be reconciled to that Character of God againſt which we are at Enmity: & Whether the Law of God continues to bind man, ſince the fall, to obedience, as it did, before; the nature of the Covenant of Works, of the covenant of Grace, of the external Covenant: the Nature of the legal conviction, of Regeneration, of a principle of grace of faith, of repentance: the nature of God's directions to unregenerate Sinners, and of Goſpel promiſes, and the reaſon there is no promiſes to the doings of the unregenerate &c. &c. The whole in a conciſe and familiar manner, adapted to the loweſt capacities; deſigned, eſpecially for the direction of Awakened Sinners, and for the confirmation of young Converts, in the right way of the Lord.

By JOSEPH BELAMY, D. D.

The price, to the Subſcribers, if the book contains 12 ſheets, as it is expected it will, ſhall be 1s and 4d lawful money; and ſo more, or leſs, in proportion, as it is larger or ſmaller. The Subſcriptions to be ſent to Meſſieurs GREENS, printers in New-Haven, by the firſt of May that it may be known how many books ſhall be ready for the Subſcribers at the next commencement in New-Haven.

Strayed or ſtolen,

FROM the ſubſcriber, about the beginning of November laſt, a ſmall red rone Horſe about 13 and half hands high, four years old, branded on the near ſhoulder with A and on one of his fore hoofs with 10, with ſome white in his face, a natural pacer. THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic.

From TUESDAY, JANUARY 29, to TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1771.

TOULON, a port-town of Provence in France. September, 2.

THE ſquadron ſent before Tunis has had the deſired effect, by producing a peace between that Regency and France, which it is feared they was forced to agree to by the [illegible] of the [illegible].

Warſaw, (in Poland.) Oct. [illegible]. Some letters from Walachia, adviſe, that a body of Ruſſians has been detached to inveſt Oczakow, at the entrance of the Boriſthenes, which is defended by ſeveral [illegible], and where the Turks generally keep a number of gallies, to prevent the incurſions of the Coſſacks on the Black Sea. They add that General Berg has advanced to the Peninſula of Crimea, with intent to inveſt Caffa, a very rich city in the Black Sea. As this place is defended by only two caſtles, they flatter themſelves that they ſhall ſoon be in poſſeſſion of it.

LEGHORN, (a Port town of Italy.) Octo. 4. [illegible] of the Engliſh frigates which were in [illegible], have ſailed from thence for Smyrna, with a deſign to get together all the ſhips of their nation. The reſt of the Engliſh ſhips are alſo ſailed, ſo that none remain here but the Pembroke, commanded by Commodore Proby.

[illegible] Octo. 6. The Preliminaries of peace between the King and the Regency of Tunis, which are ſigned, conſiſt of eight articles; [illegible] the Bey acknowledges the union of Corſica to France, and engages to deliver up before the ſignature of the formal treaty, all the ſubjects of that iſland, that were taken under French colours, and to reſtore their veſſels and effects or pay an equivalent; alſo to renew the French right to the fiſhery on their Coaſt and to pay the Company the damage ſuſtained in driving them from the ſaid fiſhery.

VIENNA, (the capital of the circle of Auſtria, and of the German empire.) Oct 10.

Our Court is employed, in concert with that of Berlin, to bring about a ſpeedy accommodation between the Ruſſians and the Porte.

CADIZ, (a city and port-town of the Province of Andaluſia, in Spain.) Octo 9.

This morning one of the King's Tartans, a packet-boat, a Brigantine, and ſix barks, ſailed from this bay, under convoy of the Emerald and Roſaire men of war. Theſe ſhips are bound to Carthagena in the Weſt Indies, and have on board the firſt battalion of the Regiment of Savoy, a company of artillery, ſtores of all ſorts.

Genoa, (in Italy.) Octo 13. The maſter of a veſſel arrived from Spain reports, that the Algerines have made themſelves maſters of three Spaniſh ſhips, which they have carried into Algiers.

The appearance of an Engliſh ſquadron in the Mediterranean has cauſed our governors, according to cuſtom, to place artillery on our ramparts. The preparations are as great on the ſide of Spain, as on that of England. The Spaniards have actually embarked 2000 ſoldiers at Cadiz for America.

The laſt letters from Madrid, ſay, that ſeveral members of the Spaniſh miniſtry are ſtrongly inclined for declaring war againſt England, but that the contrary party, which is at preſent the moſt numerous, and his Catholick Majeſty, were entirely for pacifick meaſures.

If we may credit private letters from Madrid, the Court of Spain is not in the leaſt intimidated by the warlike preparations of England, and is reſolved not to yield to any of their pretenſions, which makes it thought that a war is inevitable.

Madrid, (Spain,) Octo 15. Our Court having reſolved to reinforce the garriſons in America, has juſt given orders for 11 battalions to be embarked immediately for Carthagena, Porto Rico, the Havanna, Carracas, and Campeachy.

Paris, (in France.) Octo. 2. We learn by Letters from Conſtantinople, dated the 3d of Sept. that the Ruſſians have poſſeſſed themſelves of the iſle of Thaſos, which will be very uſeful for their ſubſiſtence, as it is very fertile, abounding with Corn, Wine, &c.

Oct. 6. The Miniſters are at preſent employed entirely on ſome affairs of ſtate, which become more and more intereſting. War, which [illegible] near, muſt neceſſarily have an influence on the means for raiſing the ſupplies. We are told, that the Intendants of the finances have been ſent for to Fontainbleau, to be conſulted. It is pretended, that the King every evening on returning from the chace, after [illegible] ſhuts himſelf up for an hour or an hour and a half with the Comptroller general and the Duke of Villiere, and is indefatigably employed with theſe two Miniſters on ſome very ſecret affairs.

LONDON, October 23.

His Sardinian Majeſty has given orders for twelve line of battle ſhips to be fitted out with all expedition.

Letters by the William and Mary, Captain Dickinſon from [illegible], ſay, that ſeveral Engliſh ſhips of war are arrived there; and that the [illegible] to [illegible] the line, beſides frigates. [illegible] the Spaniſh and French [illegible] appeared. [illegible] that ſeveral ſhips are arrived there from America, with corn and other proviſions, ſo that there is great plenty in the town and garriſon.

Some letters in town poſitively affirm, that the Ottoman Porte hath accepted the mediation of the Emperor and the King of Pruſſia.

A letter from Paris mentions, that near 40 000 ſailors are now on actual duty in the ports of France, with 10 000 marines.

The neceſſary diſpoſitions are to be made to prevent any infectious diſtemper being communicated to the Britiſh American colonies, by means of the numerous ſhipping which now trade from thence to the mediterranean.

We are aſſured that the preparations now making in the ordnance office, &c. in the Tower, give great reaſon to believe that the preſent peace will be of ſhort duration.

Octo. 27. On Wedneſday night a meſſenger arrived at Lord Weymouth's office who was immediately diſpatched to his Majeſty at Richmond, with advices of great importance from the French Court, and yeſterday in the afternoon, Mr Coates, his Majeſty's meſſenger, ſet out expreſs for France, with anſwers to the ſaid advice.

An evening paper ſays, an accommodation we are from the beſt authority aſſured, is near at hand, between England and Spain, without the interpoſition of any other power.

The late diſpute between two members of the Privy Council is likely to occaſion a diviſion in the M——y.

Mr Wilkes was yeſterday at Guildhall, and on being on the rota, acted as ſitting Alderman. An impreſſed man was brought him and diſcharged.

On Thurſday 1000 beds and blankets were ſent in divers waggons for Portſmouth, for the uſe of the fleet, now fitting out there.

Letters received by this day's mail from Conſtantinople dated Sept. 3d. inform us, that the Grand Signor hath conſented that the Divan ſhall make peace with the Ruſſians, if they would give him an acquittance that he ſhould not be reproached with having made a ſhameful peace for the empire; which was immediately complied with, ſigned and ſealed by the general aſſembly conſiſting of 1500 perſons. The miniſtry were for making uſe of the mediation, of the Houſe of Auſtria, on this occaſion; but the people, on the contrary, demanded that of England; ſo that it is imagined it will be done in conjunction by theſe two Powers.

They write from Gibraltar, that the Spaniſh garriſon of St. Roche, near that place, has lately been reinforced by a number of troops, drawn from the internal provinces of Grenada, Murcia, &c.

Within theſe few days there have been held divers private meetings of the miniſtry, both in town and country, which were always conducted with the greateſt ſecrecy.

It is ſaid, that ſome private letters from Liſbon mention, that the prime miniſter has publickly declared, that it is of little concern to the nation whether Portugal trades any longer with the Engliſh or not, and he even wiſhes, that all commercial connections between them were diſſolved.

They write from Gibraltar, that four Ruſſian tranſports had fallen into the hands of the Algerines, who have a numerous fleet now cruiſing in the Mediterranean.

It is reported that all preſs warrants will ſpeedily be recalled without however taking off the bounty for ſeamen for ſome time.

Hely Hutchinſon, Eſq; previous to his ſetting out for Ireland, received ſome important inſtructions which it is imagined, will tend to [illegible] the diviſions now ſubſiſting in that kingdom.

OCTOBER 30.

Extract of a Letter from Dublin, October 23.

"At a general aſſembly held at the [illegible] of this city, on the [illegible] [illegible] was agreed to, and made an act of that aſſembly;

'Reſolved, That it would be a very ſalutary and conſtitutional proceeding in the corporation of the city of Dublin, to preſent a petition to the King expreſſive in the moſt grateful terms, of that zeal and loyalty which warms the breaſts of his majeſty's faithful citizens of Dublin; and at the ſame time in the moſt humble and dutiful manner to preſent to the throne the many grievances ſuſtained by this kingdom in general, and city in particular, by the late prorogations of Parliament.

A Gentleman who landed from the Continent, laſt Wedneſday, ſays, that the French King, ſo far from ſaying (as mentioned in the papers) "Let me have no war; let me have no war;" gave theſe orders fourteen days ago, "Let all my fleets be ready, and every regiment that can be ſpared, be within four miles of my ſhores." He adds, that the French are poſſeſſed of plenty of money without any new tax.

Nov. 1. Col. Boyd, Deputy Governor of Gibraltar, has informed the Miniſtry, that a very large body of Spaniſh troops have drawn freſh lines behind Gibraltar. The regiments now embarking in Ireland are ſuppoſed to be deſtined for that ſtation, though others imagine they are intended for the defence of Jamaica.

All the troops in Scotland have received orders to begin their march towards Plymouth.

Extract of a letter form Portſmouth, Oct. 26.

"A perſon who arrived here yeſterday from Roſcof, near Breſt, has been to Admiral Lord Edgcombe, and made oath, that he left Breſt laſt Wedneſday, where the French were working night and day (Sundays not excepted) to fit out their fleet. This news the Admiral diſpatched by expreſs to the Admiralty laſt night.

It is reported that diſpatches arrived in town from Peterſburgh, ſaid to be relative to ſome overtures made to that court on the part of the Grand Signior; and that this morning the Ruſſian Ambaſſador had a conference on the ſubject, with the Earl of Rochfort.

It is alſo rumoured that letters have been received from Peterſburgh, mentioning that the Ottoman Porte had agreed to ſurrender up to the Ruſſians forever the iſlands of Candia, Rhodes, Scio, and Patmos, together with part of the Grecian Peloponneſus, on condition of procuring a ſpeedy peace.

The Empreſs of Ruſſia, we are told, has declared, that ſhe will not make peace with the Turks, without procuring certain privileges and immunities for the Greek nation.

According to private advices from Paris we learn, that the Court had given orders for the utmoſt diligence to be uſed in fitting out for ſea every ſhip of war in the royal navy of France.

They write from Jamaica, that the Spaniards had lately landed ten regiments of infantry from on board ſome men of war and tranſports, at the Havanna.

A Correſpondent ſays, "a certain great Lady upon her arrival, being preſſed, it is ſaid, to give her opinion on ſome meaſures adopted in the preſent ſituation of affairs, very prudently declined it, and further declared, that ſhe would henceforward forbear to concern herſelf with matters of ſtate."

His royal highneſs the Duke of Glouceſter will be ſhortly nominated to the poſt of maſter general of the ordnance.

Among other regulations which the Emperor of Germany has introduced for the good of his people, one is, that he has ſet apart one day in every week, for the receiving petitions, & hearing grievances; at which time he has ſtrictly commanded that no ſubject, however mean, ſhall be refuſed admittance to his preſence.——An example this, well worthy the imitation of every ſovereign prince in Europe.

The following extract from a private letter, lately written by his Excellency, Mr. Murray, at preſent our ambaſſador at the porte, to one of his Friends in London, ſeems to countenance the report now circulating in Holland, that the Grand Signor has been depoſed, and his brother Muſtapha raiſed to the throne. "I never in my life knew, (ſpeaking of the Grand Signor) a more gentlemanlike and ſenſible man; and, to all appearance, he is one of the moſt humane. Since the abſence of the Grand Vizir, I have generally the honor of ſeeing him once or twice a week. The day before yeſterday I converſed with him above half an hour, without a druggoman, which, though he ſpeaks Italian perfectly well, is an inſtance of great affability. I was amazed at the eaſe with which he talked of his preſent ſituation; he called the empreſs of Ruſſia a female Alexander. He told me he had thoughts of putting Sultan Muſtapha, his brother, at the head of one of his armies. This I tho't very extraordinary, as he has been often preſſed to put the prince to death, who is a ſort of favourite with the Janiſſaries.

They write from Vienna, that the Court of Iſpahan appears greatly alarmed, at the rapid progreſs of the Ruſſian arms againſt the Turks.

Advice is juſt received, of a ſhip bound to England from the South Seas, having been denied the uſual ſupplies of refreſhment at Rio Janeiori, a Portugueſe ſettlement in that quarter.

It is reported, that letters are received from Peterſburgh, which mention, that it was with the utmoſt difficulty ſome great perſons could be ſaved from the fury of the populace, when the guards were conducting them to priſon, being accuſed of treaſon againſt the ſtate and the empreſs.

Another account ſays, Mr. Sawbridge in his ſpeech obſerved, that it would be rediculous and nugatory to impeach Lord North now he is raiſed to the fulleſt extent of power. To impeach a Premier before a certain aſſembly would be riſible, nugatory, and abſurd. In fact Lord North would there impeach Lord North, and conſequently ſuch meaſure would be only giving him greater ſtrength and credit with his ſovereign.

His Excellency the Ruſſian Ambaſſador has received, by yeſterday's mail from Holland, advice from Warſaw, which confirms the taking of Bender, by the Ruſſian army, by ſtorm. The greateſt part of the beſieged were put to the ſword, and the confuſion was ſo great, that a few Baſhaws only, with their retinue, eſcaped with the utmoſt difficulty.

Nov. 3. Thurſday morning Alexander Cruden, M. A. was found dead on his knees, at his lodgings in Camden-ſtreet, Iſlington: He had complained for three or four days of a ſhortneſs of breath. Mr. Cruden was a very worthy perſon, and much eſteemed by his acquaintance, but more known to the world as the compiler of a laborious and excellent work, in one volume quarto, intitled a complete concordance to the Holy ſcriptures of the old and new teſtament and the Apocrypha.

Nov. 6. A letter from Minorca mentions, that the French have lately landed a great number of ſhip-carpenters in Corſica, to be employed in building ſhips of war in the ports of that iſland.

On Thurſday a woman in the Old Baily received the following letter from her huſband, who was gone to his garden near Iſlington.

"Dear wife, before this reaches you I ſhall be no more: The weight of my misfortunes, which I have brought upon myſelf by my criminal intercourſe with Mrs. D——, I am unable to bear any longer, and am therefore determined to quit a life that for ſome years has been but of little uſe to you or my children. Farewel, for ever, from him who was once an indulgent huſband."——The poor woman got a friend, and went immediately to the place, where to their great concern, they found him hanging in the ſummer-houſe, quite dead.

Extract of a letter from Venice dated October 6.

"Advices from Cairo mention, that Ali Bey has been proclaimed Sultan of Egypt: the manner how this renowned Gentleman mounted the throne is as follows: "Ali Bey, to accompliſh this his view, firſt joined himſelf to the Divan of Egypt, in order to releaſe that powerful kingdom from the Ottoman yoke. Two years ago he forbid the Baſſa whom the Porte ſent, and who had the higheſt authority in the Divan, to enter the country: This luckily ending in his favour, he ſet the Divan itſelf aſide; and being ſupported by the nation he was proclaimed chief. In this new ſtation he has raiſed a great number of troops, and put them under brave commanders, and has made himſelf maſter of Jemen and the other provinces of Arabia, particularly Mecca; alſo the ports of the Red Sea, and of Gila, the moſt capital place for the Eaſtern trade on that ſide."

By Capt. Griſt arrived at Marblehead, and the Brig Belvadere, Capt. Farrel, arrived at New-York laſt Monday, both from Falmouth, we have advice to the 5th of December.

By them it appeared a War was inevitable: The Spaniards had actually formed three Encampments, one in Andaluſia, another in Galicia, and a third in the Province of Murcia.—That Letters from the Engliſh Conſul and Merchants in Barcelona, to England were ſtopped in Spain, and opened for intelligence.

The SPEECH of Lord C——m.

LONDON, December 6.

HE who has Ears to hear, let him hear. He who regards the Honour and Safety of his Country, let him attend.

THE Duke of Richmond having on the 22d of laſt month moved that an Addreſs might be preſented to the King, that his Majeſty might give orders for laying before the Houſe, all letters and papers received by the Miniſtry, between the 12th of September, 1770, and this being oppoſed by the Miniſtry upon the ground of the impropriety of it, while the matter in queſtion was the ſubject of a negotiation with the Spaniſh Ambaſſador; and that infinite regard and tenderneſs ought to be ſhewn to the delicacy of the Spaniſh Honour, and the punctilios of that Court. And Lord Hi——gh having ſpoken in a very exalted tone on the occaſion, the Earl of Ch——m roſe up and ſpoke as follows:

MY LORDS.

I riſe to give my hearty aſſent to the motion made by the noble Duke; by his Grace's favour, I have been permitted to ſee it before it was offered to the Houſe. I have fully conſidered the neceſſity of obtaining from the King's ſervants a communication of the papers deſcribed in the motion, and I am perſuaded that the alarming ſtate of facts, as well as the ſtrength of reaſoning with which the noble Duke has urged, and inforced that neceſſity muſt have been powerfully felt by your Lordſhips; what I mean to ſay, upon this occaſion, may ſeem perhaps to extend beyond the limits of the motion before us. But I flatter myſelf, my Lords, that if I am honoured with your attention, it will appear that the meaning and object of this queſtion are naturally connected with conſiderations of the moſt extenſive national importance. For entering into ſuch conſiderations, no ſeaſon is improper; no occaſion ſhould be neglected. Something muſt be done, my Lords, and immediately, to ſave an injured, inſulted, undone country. If not to ſave the State, my Lords, at leaſt to mark out, and drag to public juſtice thoſe ſervants of the Crown, by whoſe ignorance neglect, or treachery, this once great, once flouriſhing people, are reduced to a condition as deplorable at home, as it is deſpicable abroad. Examples are wanted, my Lords, and ſhould be given to the world for the inſtruction of future times, even though they be uſeleſs to ourſelves. I do not mean, my Lords, nor is it intended by the motion, to impede, or embarraſs a negociation, which we have been told is now in a proſperous train, and promiſes a happy concluſion.

In the diſtreſs and weakneſs of this country, my Lords, and conſcious as the Miniſtry ought to be how much they have contributed to that diſtreſs and weakneſs, I think a tone of modeſty, of ſubmiſſion, of humility, would become them better; quædam cauſæ modeſtiam deſiderant. Before this country they ſtand as the greateſt criminals. Such I ſhall prove them to be; for I do not doubt of proving to your Lordſhips ſatisfaction, that ſince they have been entruſted with the conduct of the King's affairs, they have done every thing that they ought not to have done, and hardly any thing that they ought to have done. The noble Lord talks of Spaniſh punctilios in the lofty ſtyle and idiom of a Spaniard. We are to be wonderfully tender of the Spaniſh point of Honour, as if they had been the complainants as if they had received the injury. I think he would have done better to have told us, what care had been taken of the Engliſh honour. My Lords I am well acquainted with the character of that nation, at leaſt as far as it is repreſented by their Court and Miniſtry, and ſhould think this country diſhonoured by a compariſon of the Engliſh good faith, with the punctilios of a Spaniard. My Lords, the Engliſh are a candid, an ingenuous people; the Spaniards are as mean & crafty as they are proud & inſolent. The integrity of the Engliſh merchant, the generous ſpirit of our naval and military officers, would be degraded by a compariſon with their merchants, or officers. With their Miniſters I have often been obliged to negociate, and never met with an inſtance of candor or dignity, in their proceedings; nothing but low cunning, trick and artifice; after a long experience of their want of candor and good faith, I found myſelf compelled to talk to them in a peremptory deciſive language. On this principle I ſubmitted my advice to a trembling council for an immediate declaration of war with Spain. Your Lordſhips well know what were the conſequences for not following that advice. Since, however, for reaſons unknown to me, it has been thought adviſeable to negociate with the Court of Spain I ſhould have conceived that the great and ſingle object of ſuch a negociation, would have been, to have obtained compleat ſatisfaction for the injury done to the Crown, and people of England. But, if I underſtand the noble Lord, the only object of the preſent negociation is to find a ſalvo for the punctilious honour of the Spaniards. The abſurdity of ſuch an idea is of itſelf unſupportable: But, my Lords, I object to our negotiating at all, in our preſent circumſtances. We are not in that ſituation, in which a great, and powerful nation is permitted to negotiate. A foreign power has forcibly robbed his Majeſty of a part of his dominions. Is the iſland reſtored? Are you replaced in ſtatu quo? If that had been done, it might then perhaps have been juſtifiable to treat with the aggreſſor upon the ſatisfaction he ought to make for the inſult offered to the Crown of England. But will you deſcend ſo low, will you ſo ſhamefully betray the King's Honour as to make it matter of negociation whether his Majeſty's poſſeſſions ſhall be reſtored to him or not? I doubt not, my Lords, that there are ſome important myſteries in the conduct of this affair, which, whenever they are explained, will account for the profound ſilence now obſerved by the King's ſervants. The time will come my Lords, when they ſhall be dragged from their concealments. There are ſome queſtions which, ſooner or later, muſt be anſwered. The Miniſtry, I find, without declaring themſelves explicitly, have taken pains to poſſeſs the public with an opinion, that the Spaniſh Court have conſtantly diſavowed the proceeding of their Governor; and ſome perſons I ſee, have been ſhameleſs and daring enough to adviſe his Majeſty to ſupport and countenance this opinion in his ſpeech from the Throne. Certainly, my Lords, there never was a more odious a more infamous falſhood impoſed on a great nation. It degrades the King's honour. It is an inſult to Parliament. His Majeſty has been adviſed to confirm and give currency to an abſolute falſhood. I beg your Lordſhips attention, and I hope I ſhall be underſtood, when I repeat, that the Court of Spain's having diſavowed the act of their Governor is an abſolute, a palpable falſhood. Let me aſk, my Lords, when the firſt communication was made by the Court of Madrid, of their being apprized of the taking of Falkland Iſlands, was it accompanied with an offer of inſtant reſtitution, of immediate ſatisfaction, and the puniſhment of the Spaniſh Governor? If it was not, they have adopted the act as their own, and the very mention of a diſavowal is an impudent inſult offered to the King's dignity. The King of Spain owns the theif, while he leaves him unpuniſhed, and profits by the theft; in vulgar Engliſh, he is the receiver of ſtolen goods, & ought to be treated accordingly.

If your Lordſhips will look back to a period of the Engliſh hiſtory, in which the circumſtances are reverſed, in which Spaniards were the complainants, you will ſee how differently they ſucceed. You will ſee one of the ableſt men, one of the braveſt officers this, or any other country ever produced (it is hardly neceſſary to mention the name of Sir Walter Raleigh) ſacrificed by the meaneſt Prince that ever ſat upon this Throne, to the vindictive jealouſy of that haughty Court. James the Firſt was baſe enough, at the inſtance of Gondomar, to ſuffer a ſentence againſt Sir Walter Raleigh, for another ſuppoſed offence to be carried into execution almoſt twelve years after it had been paſſed. This was the pretence. His real crime was, that he had mortally offended the Spaniards while he acted by the King's expreſs orders, and under his commiſſion.

The remainder of this Intereſting Speech will be in our next.

LONDON, Nov. 29.

The Duke of Richmond aſſerted in a certain aſſembly, that upwards of two thouſand of the beſt Engliſh ſailors are at this time rotting in the jails of Spain, having been ſeized on frivolous pretences, many of them on no other charge than that of having a ſingle dollar in their pockets.

We can from undoubted authority aſſure the Public, that a Council held Yeſterday, War was determined on.

A few days ſince, Lord Weymouth told the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, that if he did not give in a ſatisfactory anſwer before the end of this week, he ſhould be aſk'd no more queſtions, but that immediate recourſe would be had to the ultima ratio regum.

Yeſterday [illegible]0 000 ſeamen were voted for the [illegible] year 1771 30 000 of which to [illegible] regiſtered. The expence for 1 year will be 2 millions.

This day the inſurance of merchant ſhips outward bound to the Weſt-Indies, was advanced at Lloyd's, from 4 to 10 per cent.

Extract of a Letter from Dartmouth.

NEW-YORK, January 31.

We hear that when Capt. Farrel left Falmouth, four Packet Boats were lying there ready to ſail, ſuppoſed to be detained that the Declaration of War might be ſent out by them. ——One of theſe was the Packet for New-York, which was expected to ſail in three or four Days. A Veſſel was arrived there from Cadiz in ſeventeen Days, the Maſter of which Reports, that he came away by Stealth, the Engliſh Veſſels in that Harbour being detained, and that a Declaration of War there, was every Day expected. Private Letters by Capt. Farrel of the 5th December, mention, War as inevitable. From the public papers, the Probability ſeems rather to preponderate for War than Peace, and yet there are ſo many contradictory circumſtances that no certain Concluſion can be drawn,—notwithſtanding the Buſtle of Preparation, the Miniſtry and their Party ſeem neither well prepared, nor heartily diſpoſed for War; and they carry every queſtion as they pleaſe, in both Houſes, by Majority of Votes. The Speeches of Lord Chatham, Col. Barre, Mr. Burke, Mr. Dowdeſewell, &c. were extremely ſevere againſt the Miniſtry, who in their Turn retorted with Spirit and Keenneſs; but made no tolerable Figure in Point of Argument. On the 21ſt of November, the Mayor, Aldermen, & Commons of the City of London, preſented and read to his Majeſty, another Addreſs, Remonſtrance and Petition, of the ſame Purport as thoſe before preſented, and in much the ſame Style, complaining of Grievances, praying the Removal of evil Miniſters, & the Diſſolution of Parliament, &c. The following is ſaid to be his Majeſty's Anſwer.

"As I have ſeen no reaſon to alter 'the Opinion expreſſed in my Anſwer to your laſt Addreſs upon this 'Subject, I cannot comply with the 'Prayer of your Petition.'

HARTFORD, February 5.

On Saturday the 19th ult. departed this life in Eaſt Windſor, Mrs. Esther Edwards, the widow and relict of the Rev'd and Pious Mr. Timothy Edwards, late paſtor of the church of Chriſt in that place in the 99th year of her age. She was the daughter of the late venerable Solomon Stoddard, paſtor of the church of Chriſt in Northampton, having been married to the late Rev. Mr Timothy Edwards, paſtor of the church of Chriſt in that place; ſhe had by him ten daughters and one ſon, the late eminent and learned Jonathan Edwards, preſident of the college in New-Jerſey, during the courſe of a life drawn out to ſo uncommon a length ſhe exhibited a bright example of every female virtue. She was a perſon of ſingular prudence and diſcretion, having a mind endowed with accompliſhments beyond moſt of her ſex, which were all crowned with an unaffected piety. She retained her underſtanding, and all her intellectual abilities in a very uncommon manner, 'till a ſhort time before her death, and when this laſt enemy made his approach, She enjoyed a calmneſs and ſerenity of mind, ſuch as the principles of chriſtianity thoroughly imbibed and exemplified, in a long courſe of ſerious practical religion, has a natural tendency to produce and at laſt fell aſleep in Jeſus, and is gone to receive her reward.

Laſt Saturday, as Eliphalet Nichols, of Chatham, was ſcating on the ice, near Capt. Cheney's building-yard, he accidentally went into a glade and was drowned, but ſoon after taken up by cutting a hole thro' the ice, about ten rods below.

Theſe may certify all whom it may concern. That whereas there has been a report ſpread abroad, that Joſeph Bidwell of Glaſtenbury, did in the month of May, in the year A.D. 1769 by whipping, or ſome other way, make way with one David Brewer a ſervant boy to ſaid Bidwell, (a lad of about 14 or 15 years of age) and ſaid boy has not been ſeen nor heard of ſince. And that ſaid Brewers apparition has appeared to Charles Riley, and told him his body was under the floor. And the ſaid Riley on the 28th day of January, A.D. 1771, apply'd to us the ſubſcribers, juſtices of the peace for Hartford county; that he had ſeen ſaid Brewers apparition, on the friday before at noon day, within about twenty rods of ſaid Bidwell's barn. We knowing ſaid Riley to be a man not to be depended upon, but to ſatiſfy people abroad, we went on ſaid 28th day, with about twenty judicious men, and pulled up ſaid Bidwell's barn floor, and dugg in ſeveral places, and found no appearance of any brackage of earth, until we were all ſatiſfied there was no perſon there, and there has five perſons of lawful age, teſtified under oath, that they have ſeen ſaid David Brewer ſince he run away from ſaid Bidwell.

The Thief is Caught!

And was laſt thurſday bro't to this town and again committed to goal. He is perhaps the moſt notorious one that ever infeſted this colony, was laſt September before the hon. Superior Court, held in this place, convicted of Burglary, by the name of Richard Steele, and in conſequence thereof crop'd and branded, not long after which he broke goal, and eſcaped, but purſuing his trade, was again taken for Burglary committed in Derby, and indicted at New-Haven before the adjourn'd Superior Court in December laſt, for the ſecond offence, and again crop'd and branded, and very ſoon after eſcaped from that goal, and has ſince (perhaps) committed more Burglary's than ever the notorious Fraſier, who was hanged at Fairfield, ever did in ſo ſhort a time. He is now put in irons in very cloſe confinement, leaſt he ſhould again eſcape, would that the world might know him, obſerve, that he is a young man of about 20 years old, rather of a ſlender make, and about or little more than midling for ſtature, his face finely pitted with the ſmall pox, has a keen black eye, wears his own hair, of a very dark colour, pretty well down on his forehead in order no doubt to hide his ſcars, is a very lively active man and I be[illegible] when at liberty, very ſociable and familiar. He had on him now when taken, a light coloured ſurtout, of a cloth call'd bearſkin or coating, which is probably ſtolen from Mr. Ingerſol of Wethsfield; a ſtrait bodyed coat, ſtolen from Dr. Hooker of this town, trim'd with ſilver buttons, on each of which was engrave at large, Sept. 2d, Daniel Hooker 1764; alſo 2 ſummer jackets ſtolen out of Mr. Mattock's ſhop, a barber in this place, from whom alſo it is ſuppoſed, he took at the ſame time 2 wiggs, not yet found; had alſo with him, two ſilver watches; one of which ſtolen from Mr Jonah Gillet of Wintonbury, the other with a China face, ſeems to anſwer the diſcription of one advertiſed to be ſtolen from ſomebody in Stratford; alſo 5 pair ſilver ſhoe buckles; 2 gold neckbeads; 2 pair ſtone jewels ſet in gold; 2 ſmall rings with 3 ſtones ſet in each; 3 watch ſeals ſet in ſilver; one pair gold ſleeve buttons; one chain ditto, marked within ſide B W; one worſted purſe with a mill'd dollar, marked G R and ſundry other pieces of ſilver money; 4 very good black Barcelona handkerchiefs, with a paper pin'd on one of them marked 91; a hatt crape; one braſs inker with penknife and caſe, marked D, a ſcale for a womans finger; a bodkin, and a ſmall gimblet; ſaid to be owned by Jonathan Burney of Union, where he was now apprehended, and whereabouts it is ſuppoſed he has diſpoſed of a conſiderable quantity of valuable goods.——The foregoing articles are now lodged with the Sheriff of this County, and may be ſeen by any claimers this week at the Court Houſe in Hartford, and any time afterwards before the ſetting of the ſuperior court, in March next at his own houſe in Weathersfield.

Theſe are to notify ſaid creditors, that we will attend on ſaid buſineſs, on Wedneſday every week until the 20th of March next, being the laſt day allow'd by the judge of probate for that purpoſe, at the dwelling houſe of Joſeph Flagg in Hartford. What accounts are not bro't within ſaid term, will not be accepted, for we intend to finiſh within the time prefixed.

To a FRIEND.

NE'er judge my Friend, the man is Rich,
Who dazzled with his Golden Store,
Admires himſelf, and proudly thinks,
The only meanneſs to be poor.
Nor yet conclude the other bleſs'd,
Who fond, of a tranſmitted name,
Boaſts of his anceſtors, but taints
Their glorious actions with his ſhame.
That man is deſpicably mean,
Who, little in himſelf, won'd crown,
His falſe pretentions with the glare
Of merit that is not his own.
Shall I, when glit'tring knaves deride,
Fair virtue! ſhun thy heav'nly face,
And to deluſive grandeur run
From thy extatick, kind embrace?
'Tis virtue god-like and divine
That fills with real joy the breaſt,
Nor can the ſplender of a crown,
Without it make the monarch bleſs'd.
Live but from care, and vices free,
Bleſs'd with enough, and ſweet content,
You'll all the happineſs enjoy
That e'er for man on earth was meant.

LONDON, November 13.

A few evenings ago, at a Coffee houſe not far from Temple bar, a countryman of Dr Lucas, the Iriſh Patriot, ſpeaking of that Gentleman as a great Orator, the following is the ſpeech verbatim, which he delivered his opinion on the occaſion: "Upon my conſcience, he ſpeaks with the tongue of an Angel; for when I firſt heard him, I thought the Devil was in the man."

By a letter from Cales, we hear, that the French Ambaſſador at Madrid has been preſented with a memorial relating to the preſent diſpute between the Engliſh and the Spaniards, complaining to the following purport.—— That their attempting to make up the breach was a groſs inſult on Spain, as they were the principal adviſers of their making a claim of Falkland Iſlands, and at the ſame time promiſed, if any rupture enſued from it, that they would join them to ſubdue the Engliſh; that after ſpending an immenſe ſum in equipping a large fleet and reinforcing their army, they had altered their minds, and adviſed them to compromiſe matters with the Engliſh, by reſtoring Falkland Iſlands, and paying all the expences they have been at in fitting out ſo large a fleet, &c.——However, they were determined not to follow their advice, and deſired an immediate anſwer whether they would abide by their former promiſe. The letter further ſays, the Ambaſſador has not yet given any anſwer, but has diſpatched a courier to his Court for inſtructions.

Letters from Italy, and other parts of the continent affirm, that a quadruple alliance has lately been concluded between the Courts of Vienna, Berlin, Turin, and London, which was projected by Lord Bute, and intended to counterpoiſe the weight of the family compact in the affairs of Europe.

So far from a certain military agent being a loſer by the death of a late noble commander, we are aſſured he has underwrote his life from quarter to quarter for ſome time paſt.

We hear that a late governor of the province of Maſſachuſetts Bay, is to be brought into parliament the firſt opportunity.

It is ſaid Mr. Wilkes's conduct in the City in his magiſterial capacity, in regard to the light in which he holds preſs warrants, and his procedure thereupon, has given great diſguſt at C——.

The extraordinary magazines which the French have already raiſed, and are daily raiſing in the three eccleſiaſtical Electorates on the Rhine, have occaſioned ſuch a ſcarcity, that the inhabitants are become very riotous, and it is imagined they will ſeize upon ſuch magazines, and convert them to their own uſe.

SALEM, January 1.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman at Liſbon, dated November 14.

"The war ſeems daily nearer to an open declaration. From circumſtances we have reaſon to fear it will be general. The great and unexpected ſucceſs the Ruſſians have had againſt the Turks has raiſed a jealouſy in the Emperor of Germany and the King of Pruſſia: Perhaps as the Ruſſian force will moſtly be employ'd with the Turks, the Ruſſian force will moſtly be employed with the Turks, the opportunity may ſeem favourable to the former powers, who, it ſeems, now demand part of Poland from the Empreſs, and the free town of Danizick. However all theſe ſchemes may as likely be for no other purpoſe but to bring the Empreſs to an accommodation with the Turks. It alſo happens, in the courſe of ſuch deſigns, that the parties diſagree, and the natural conſequence is war: Therefore, while we ſee pretenſions of that nature, we think the worſt."

A REPLY

IN this Piece is conſidered, The moral Character of God exhibited in the Law given to Adam: the moral Image of God in which Adam was created; the nature of the depravity of Fallen Man; and it is inquired, whether the carnal Mind is enmity againſt God; merely conſidered as our enemy; or only againſt miſtaken ideas of God; or againſt God's true and real Character; and if ſo, wherein lies the Contrariety between the holy nature of and the carnal Mind: and whether the Goſpel calls us to be reconciled to that Character of God againſt which we are at Enmity: & Whether the Law of God continues to bind man, ſince the fall, to obedience, as it did, before; the nature of the Covenant of Works, of the covenant of Grace, of the external Covenant: the Nature of the legal Conviction, of Regeneration, of a principle of Grace, of faith, of repentance: the nature of God's directions to unregenerate Sinners, and of Goſpel promiſes, and the reaſon there is no promiſes to the doings of the unregenerate, &c. &c. The whole in a conciſe and familiar manner, adapted to the loweſt capacities; deſigned, eſpecially for the direction of Awakened Sinners, and for the confirmation of young Converts, in the right way of the Lord.

Meſſieurs GREEN & WATSON,

IN your paper the 8th of January 1771, No. 315. In reading ſaid paper, I obſerved a very ridiculous, ungenteel, and immodeſt piece inſerted, relative to the miſſion, founded many years ago, and ſtill ſupported at Stockbridge. By ſome means it ſeems, the author of ſaid piece, has extended his knowledge ſo far, as to know, that there is a miſſion maintained at that place; [illegible] appears to be greatly troubled. He is full of zeal for the reformation of [illegible] but is empty of knowledge in the matter he has undertaken to expoſe. He is manifeſtly [illegible] that muſt belong to a man, and the apprehenſion of his own merit, has prompted him to [illegible] to write concerning that he has no [illegible] knows nothing about. [illegible] reading the piece, I [illegible] of ſome Epiſcopalian [illegible] money ſpent for preaching [illegible] not proſelyting to the church [illegible]; what at firſt had [illegible] was his exclamation, being introduced [illegible] popery, as he calls it [illegible] ſociety, for propagating the goſpel in foreign parts; which, if this writer may be credited, have been traduced by diſſenters, as being ignorant of the deſign of their incorporation, charter, and proper uſe of the donations put into their hands.) Upon a careful peruſal of this ſcurrilous piece, I changed my mind, and from the weakneſs of the performance, rather judged it to proceed from the miſguided zeal, and ignorance of ſome diſſenting clergyman, who by his introduction, deſign'd to diſguiſe and conceal himſelf, and leave no means to come at him, but to ſmoke him out of his hole.

I dont intend to reproach the generality of the diſſenting miniſters, far be it from me; I know they are many of them, gentlemen of the beſt ſenſe, and of very amiable characters, and I heartily wiſh they were all of them ſuch; (and it is likely I have to aſk the forgiveneſs of the Epiſcopal clergy, for ſuſpecting any of them; could be guilty of publiſhing ſo weak, falſe, and unchriſtian an accuſation, againſt any of their neighbours, or any ſociety of people) But there are ſome, for want of competent abilities, are obliged to mew up in holes and corners, in little places of obſcurity, to gain a livelihood. Yet ſome ſuch have an ambition to be accounted as lights ſhining in the world, and rather than not be ſeen and admired, will blow up ſuch a fire, as St. James informs us, is kindled by an unruly tongue.

Solomon juſtly brands the man with folly, who determines a cauſe before he has heard it; this inconſiderate and falſe accuſer is the very man. For he acknowledges he had not ſuch teſtimony of the matter, he publiſhes as to be ſure, even upon moral evidence, that what he wrote was the truth; and indeed it is impoſſible he ſhould, for many things he has ſet forth, are falſe. But thus it is, ſilly men who under the pretence of zeal, to reform mankind, but only in reality deſign their own honour and glory; —will, right or wrong, true or falſe, career after the, will with a whiſp or jacklanthorn, till they are plunged in dirt and mire.

I am well acquainted in the town of Stockbridge, perhaps as well as the author of the piece I am writing againſt. But as I am not called upon by one, who has a right to demand an account of the conduct of the honourable and reverend commiſſioners, the miſſionary or the town of Stockbridge, ſo that I ſhall not now trouble the public with that affair, and only deſire that ill reports, unſupported and groundleſs, might not gain credit. But if this anonymous author will put me upon a rejoinder, & make himſelf known, I will do the ſame, that the combat may be on even ground. I have a real averſion to controverſy, but a greater to detraction and falſhood, and had it not been to detect and prevent that, I would not have troubled the public nor myſelf with this; but the author of the piece I am conſidering, has determined that unleſs his miſrepreſentations be anſwered, they muſt and ſhall paſs for truth, wherefore if he is not incorrigible I hope to convince him of his error by this.

This buſy body acknowledges he does not know who the commiſſioners in this country are, and I dare venture to ſay, he knows as little of the reaſons of their conduct as he does of their perſons; but I will inform him, that they are a number of honourable and prudent gentlemen as any in the province, and have their eye ſteadily on the miſſion at Stockbridge, and without his information, have proper knowledge of the ſtate of it, and dont need to be told that of late years, there is an increaſe of the Engliſh inhabitants, and a decreaſe of the Indians, and have conducted the affair of the miſſion accordingly. And if the honourable and reverend commiſſioners, in their wiſdom and prudence, ſhould not turn every thing upſide down, ſo ſuddenly as this complainer wiſhes. 'Tis to be hoped he will exerciſe patience while they are conducting their own affairs, and not ſound his trumpet to alarm the dead, and to convene the commiſſioners, the miſſionary, and the town of Stockbridge, to give an account to us; (for the public have not yet called for an account) Where have this mighty us, erected their awful tribunal? from what monkiſh cell, has this barbariſm of language proceeded? from what bewildered brain, and viciated mind came that ſtrange ſentence? that a better conduct can't excuſe, unleſs there be a refund of money, and if there ſhould, I am ſatisfied no part (however he may hope) will come to him. For although he has ſpent a great deal of gall upon the miſſion; I dare venture to aſſure the public he has not ſpent a mite of any thing elſe towards ſupporting it. Therefore he muſt expect to receive the ſame only, for what meaſure he metes to others, the ſame he muſt expect will be meaſured to him again.

This news monger tells the public, that Stockbridge is a flouriſhing town. And what then? why he ſays they are as well able to maintain a miniſter as other towns; and I dont believe the miniſter of Stockbridge, has complained to him, or any body elſe, that he is not maintained as well as the miniſter of other towns. And certain it is, that other towns do not diſable themſelves from maintaining their own miniſters, by contributing to the ſupport of the miniſter of Stockbridge. Other towns made their own contracts, and it is their duty to ſee them fulfilled. The people of Stockbridge ought, and I hope will fulfil theirs. But the people of Stockbridge, this writer inſinuates, wallow in wealth and luxury. This is not true; ſome live comfortably and decently, and are hoſpitable and charitable to thoſe in want, and there are many poor in Stockbridge, that need aſſiſtance beſides the Indians, who are a very improvident people. The miſſionary he ſays, has eighty pounds a year from the commiſſioners, and what if he has? and but ſix or eight pounds a year from the town. This is not true.—— And if the miſſionary is in affluent circumſtances by a comfortable fortune of his own, and a ſalary for his ſervices, and further ſupport, why ſhou'd any one be envious, eſpecially ſince he enjoys it on a fair footing, and underſtands how to uſe it as a chriſtian and a gentleman. But the people of Stockbridge, he ſays, increaſe their riches by cheating the Indians with a mug of cyder, and a pint of rum, and ſo with infinite eaſe, undo at once, all that the miſſionary can do in the little time he has to ſpare, to inſtruct them in the principles of religion, and to inſtil religious habits. Indians do love to drink cyder and rum, but this is not peculiar to the Indians—ſome other people beſides Indians, love it too; and people that live out of Stockbridge. [illegible] that the Indians are impoſed on in ſuch ways; I cannot ſay but there may be people in Stockbridge, who are blame worthy, for the aboveſaid practice; but I have reaſon to believe that other towns are not leſs blameable in this reſpect.

I know of no ſhopkeeper of Engliſh goods in the town of Stockbridge. There are two taverns in the town, and they are judged to be needful. But the court of general ſeſſions of the peace, put them under bonds, at the taking out their licences, as alſo all the inn holders in the neighbouring towns, that they might not abuſe the Indians, by ſelling them ſpirituous liquors. How far the innholders of the town of Stockbridge, or other towns, have obſerved and regarded thoſe injunctions, it is difficult to know. But however that may be, it is a heavy charge, and undoubtedly groundleſs, to caſt this odium on the body of the people of the town, if there is any foundation to charge it on any individuals. But I will conclude, and only obſerve the advice of Solomon, who directs us to anſwer a fool according to his folly, leſt he be wiſe in his own conceit.——But if this inaccurate wrangler, ſhould ſound a ſecond falſe alarm, to deceive the living, and diſturb the dead; which I am inclined to think, will give equal attention to his declaration; I ſhall take the other part of the ſame wiſe man's advice, and not anſwer a fool according to his folly, leſt I ſhou'd be like unto him.——And as I have no particular intereſt in the miſſion at Stockbridge, ſo it will not behove me to defend it. But when I am convinced it will be any ſatisfaction to the public, to be informed of the riſe, progreſs, declenſion and preſent ſtate of the miſſion at Stockbridge, I ſhall be ready to gratify them herein.

LONDON, Dec. 4, 6, 8.

YESTERDAY at noon ſome foreign diſpatches arrived at the Queen's Palace, which detained the King from going to chapel, but his Majeſty afterwards appeared in the drawing room.

Friday laſt a Council was held at Lord Weymouth's and immediately after it broke up, a meſſenger was ſent off to Ireland, to lay an embargo to prevent the exportation of any proviſions from that kingdom.

A ſpirited Gentleman (Col. B.) on Thurſday laſt, in a public company, cloſed his ſpeech with the following apoſtrophe: "And tell me, ye ſages of the Council, what was the amount of all Potter's negotiations?——Alas! what was it, but a ſeries of meaſures trifling and abſurd. He was diſpatched to warn the Spaniards to get ready for war, and to tell them we ſhould certainly fall upon them, as ſoon as they ſhould be ready to receive us."

It is ſaid the land-tax for the enſuing year will be 4s. in the pound.

The Remonſtrance from Ireland is to be tranſmitted from thence to his Majeſty by the Lord Lieutenant of that kingdom, and not to be preſented by Dr. Lucas.

LONDON, Dec. 15.

Wedneſday there was a great debate in the Lower Room of the Robinhood Society, upon the Land Tax. Mr. S--m-r moved, to put it off till after Chriſtmas. The M-n-ſt-y, contrary to the previous declarations, were determined to bring it on, and to encreaſe it to four ſhillings in the pound. L-d N-th altered his tone about war: he ſaid, "a war was but too probable." That the French and Spaniards were making great preparations upon all their coaſts; and that the money wanted this year would be at leaſt ſix millions; he would not be certain. Sir E. H--ke ſaid the navy was in a very proper ſtate, and that 18 ſhips of the line were ready for ſea. He was contradicted by the Admirals K-pp-l and S-nd-s; who ſaid if 18 ſhips were ready for ſea it was unpardonable to leave Gibraltar and Jamaica wholly expoſed to the Enemy, and that the garriſon of Gibraltar was lower now than in the peaceable time of Sir Robert Walpole. Many very ſevere things were ſaid of the Miniſtry; and, in ſhort, they were attacked from all ſides of the Room. When the queſtion was put, there appeared 121 for the adjournment, and 199 againſt it.

The debate in the other Room, the day before, was very ſpirited. L-d C--n attacked L-d M--d. He ſaid his L--p's paper, given to the clerk the day before [Monday laſt] he conſidered as a challenge to himſelf; that his L--p had thrown down the glove, and he was determined to take it up. He then propoſed to L-d M--d three queſtions, and demanded anſwers to them. L-d M--d replied, it was unfair; that he was taken by ſurprize; and ſaid, that he would not anſwer interrogatories. L-d C--n preſſed that a day might be appointed, and ſaid, he was ready to meet the noble L-d upon his ground of law; and L-d M--d, after ſome time, was brought to pledge himſelf to the Room, that the matter ſhould be diſcuſſed. The D-- of R--d then congratulated the Room upon the noble L-d's having pledged himſelf to the point. This brought L-d M--d up again; he ſaid, he did not pledge himſelf to the Room, he only ſaid, that he ſhould hereafter give his opinion.

The D-- of M--r then went on with his motion, which had cauſed the riot the day before. He ſhewed the naked ſtate at home; & all our poſſeſſions abroad, and our defenceleſs ſtate at home; and all this was owing, he ſaid, to the incapacity and puſilanimity of the K--'s --s, who were abhorred at home, and deſpiſed abroad. L-d C--, in a fine ſpeech confirmed this melancholy ſtate of our affairs; and added, that he had received intelligence, of a plan being formed to attack Gibraltar.

The minority in the Lower Room were joined on Wedneſday night by the L-ds H--y and G--le; the two Mr. D--k-s; Meſſrs. H--w--d, V-nſ-tt-rt, L-th--l-r, C-g-r-ve, Q--gl-y, S--thw--ll, Sir J--n--Rs, &c. &c.

LONDON, December 13.

A letter from Plymouth, dated Dec. 9 ſays, "Orders are received at this yard for fitting out for ſea the following men of war, viz the Queen, Dublin, Burford, Kent, and Bienfaiſant, and another ſhip of 80 or 90 guns."

Dec. 15. On Wedneſday laſt Sir E----d H----ke, being called upon in the Room, informed the Society, that our navy is now in a much better condition than it was in the year 1755, when the late glorious war began; that we have at preſent 20 ſhips of the line full manned and fit for action, and likewiſe 20 more in commiſſion who have got 3000 ſeamen towards their complement, and will ſoon be ready for ſervice; that (without interrupting the outward bound trade) we have actually 33,000 ſeamen in pay, which is only 7000 wanting of the full number voted by parliament.

A few days ago, when the augmentation of the army was under conſideration in an auguſt aſſembly a patriotic Member propoſed (as the quickeſt method of raiſing recruits) that each pariſh ſhould be obliged to furniſh one Man. There are 10,000 pariſhes in Great-Britain; ſo that by this method 10,000 recruits might be raiſed immediately, without diſtreſſing any branch of manufacture, or draining any particular part of the country.

All the officers ſtationed in the Weſt-India iſlands, and on the continent of America, are ordered to join their reſpective regiments immediately.

The augmentation, when compleated, for all the regiments on the Britiſh eſtabliſhment, we hear, will amount to about 21,000 men.

Sir G----e S----e upon a complaint of their not being men ſufficient to carry on the war, aſſured a reſpectable aſſembly a few days ſince, that he could raiſe immediately 4000 able fellows on his own eſtates, and the parts adjacent to them in Scotland, and that he did not doubt, but 40,000 ſoldiers might be enliſted in the ſpace of a few weeks.

"Late laſt night (ſays the Printer of a morning Paper) we received the two following paragraphs from an anonymous Correſpondent.

"On Sunday an expreſs arrived at the Admiralty, with an account of the French fleet from Breſt having ſailed, conſiſting of the following ſhips of the line and frigates: Duke of Burgoigne of 80 guns, Conquerant 74, Defenſeur 74, Gloriex 75, Diademe 78, Guerrier, 74 Magnifique 74 Robuſte 74 Dauphin Royale 70. Palmier 74 Vierge de Roſair 64 Solide 64 Vengeur 64, Actiſe 64 Protecteur 64. Le Galliard 36. L'Arathuſe 32, La Cheval Marin 32, and La Couvette 20.

"It is a certain fact that Capt. Gower of the Pearl, and Capt. Jarvis of the Alarm, both ſlipped their cables and got off by night out of the bay of Cadiz having an order ſent them ſo to do; telling them at the ſame time the deſigns of the Spaniards againſt Gibralter were no longer a ſecret, and that 25,000 French troops were arrived that day and the day before at Ferrol, with ſome of the beſt Engineers of France."

The following affidavit was ſtuck up at New Lloyd's Coffee houſe, in Pope's Head Alley.

An authentic Copy of an Affidavit made on Tueſday the 27th of Nov. 1770, by Capt. John Pitts, relative to the Engliſh Ships being detained in Spain.

"John Pitts, Maſter of the Schooner Catherine, left RivaDios the 15th of November 1770, and ſaith, that he waited on the Governor the 15th inſtant to demand his clearance in order to ſail that day, the Governor replied he would give no clearance until he ſhould have an anſwer from Madrid, where he ſhould write for that purpoſe by that day's poſt: This deponent being then detained until the 25th of November, on which he apply'd to the Conſul for advic he told him, that a war now ſeemed inevitab and would adviſe this deponent to take the f opportunity of the night to eſcape, for that the ſaid Conſul had received intelligence fr Henry Banks, Eſq; the Britiſh Conſul at Cor na, that the Spaniards had detained the Eng ſhips there, and unſhipped their rudders to p vent their eſcape: That this deponent follo ing the ſaid Conſul's advice at Riva Dios, a eſcaped in the night of the ſaid 25th of Nove ber unſeen by the Spaniards, and arrived at A within the Port of Plymouth the 23d of N vember."

Lord C------- in a public comp ny lately ſaid,—"The difficulty o the criſis demands a wiſe, a firm an a popular adminiſtration. The di honorable traffic of places has engaged us too long. Upon this ſubjec my L----s, I ſpeak without intere or enmity. I have no perſonal ob jection to any of the King's ſervant I ſhall never be Miniſter, certain not without full power to cut awa all the rotten branches of govern ment. Yet, unconcerned as I trul am for myſelf, I cannot avoid ſeein ſome capital errors in the diſtributio of the royal favour. There are men my L----, who, if their own ſervi ces were forgotten, ought to have a hereditary merit with the houſe o Hanover: whoſe anceſtors ſtood fort in the day of trouble, oppoſed the perſons and fortunes to treachery an rebellions and ſecured to his Majeſty family the ſplendid power of reward ing. There are other men, my L----s (ſhaking his fiſt at L---d M-------d who, to ſpeak tenderly of them, were not quite ſo forward in the demonſtrations of their zeal to the reigning family; there was another cauſe, my L---s, and a partiality to it, which ſome perſons had not, at all times, diſcretion enough to conceal. I know I ſhall be accuſed of attempting to revive diſtinctions. My L---s, if it were poſſible, I would rather aboliſh all diſtinctions. I would not wiſh the favours of the crown to flow invariably in one channel. But there are ſome diſtinctions which are inherent in the nature of things. There is a diſtinction between right and wrong—between Whig and Tory."

At the Board of Admiralty held yeſterday, ſeveral ſhips were commiſſioned, and the officers who attended received their commiſſions.

Advices are ſaid to have been received here on Tueſday, that 24 ſhips of war, with a number of troops, tranſports, &c. had ſailed lately from Spain for the Weſt-Indies.

In one of our late Papers, under New-York Head, is a ſtrange Account of a Woman being burnt to death in her Chamber without ſetting Fire to the Houſe, which is looked upon by ſome to be quite fabulous.—Therefore to convince ſuch that there have been ſimilar Inſtances, pleaſe to give the following a place.

An Account of the Death of the Counteſs Cornelia Bardi, of Celena who was conſumed by a Fire, kindled in her own body; with an Enquiry into the cauſe.

THIS Lady was in her 62d year, and well all day till night, when ſhe began to be heavy; after ſupper ſhe was put to bed, and talked three hours with her Maid, at laſt falling aſleep the door was ſhut. In the morning the Maid going to call her, ſaw her Corps in this deplorable condition; four feet diſtant from the bed was a heap of aſhes, two legs untouch'd, ſtockings on, between which lay the head, the brains, half of the back part of the ſkull, and the whole chin burnt to aſhes, which had this quality, that they left in the hand a greaſy and ſtinking moiſture. The air in the room had ſoot floating in it; a ſmall oil lamp on the floor, was covered with aſhes, but no oil in it. Of two candles on the table, the tallow was gone, but the cotton left; the bed undamaged; the whole furniture ſpread over with moiſt aſh colour'd ſoot, which penetrated the drawers, and fouled the linen, and a bit of bread covered with this ſoot, was refuſed by ſeveral dogs. In the room above, the ſaid ſoot flew about and from the windows trickled down a greaſy, loathſome, yellowiſh liquor, with an unuſual ſtink. The floor of the chamber was thick ſmeared with a gluiſh moiſture, not eaſily got off, and the ſtink ſpread into other chambers.

The fire was cauſed in her entrails by inflamed effluvia of her blood, by juices and fermentations in the ſtomach, and many combuſtible matters, abundant in living bodies, for the uſes of life; and laſtly, by the fiery evaporations, which exhale from the ſettlings of ſpirits, wine, brandy, &c. in the tunica villoſa of the ſtomach, and other membranes, engendering there a kind of camphor, which in ſleep, by a full breathing and reſpiration, are put into a ſtronger motion, and ſo more apt to be ſet on fire.

Her aſhes, found at four feet diſtance from her bed, is a plain argument, that ſhe by natural inſtinct, roſe up to cool her heat, and perhaps was going to open a window.

A ſimilar inſtance happened to one Grace Pett, a fiſherman's wife of Ipſwich, who going down into the kitchen, when ſhe was half undreſſed, was found there the next morning, extended over the hearth, with her legs on the deal floor; her body appeared like a block of wood, burning with a glowing fire with flame; the trunk covered like charcoal, with white aſhes, and her head and limbs much burnt, there was no fire in the grate, the candle was burnt out of the ſocket; a child's cloaths on one ſide of her and a paper ſcreen on the other, were both untouched, and the deal floor was not diſcolour'd, though the fat had ſo penetrated the hearth, as not to be ſcower'd out.

NEW-HAVEN, February 15.

Laſt Saturday, about 9 o'Clock in the Morning, (the Wind about N. E.) came on a Storm of Snow and Hail, which ſoon changed to Rain, and the Wind veering to the S. E. encreaſed till about ſix o'Clock, and brought into the Harbour, the fulleſt Tide ever known, which ebb'd and flow'd two or three Feet in a few Minutes; and at the Time, when it was expected to be low Water, the Tide was above High Water Mark. At about 11 o'Clock, the Wind ſhifted to S. S. W. when it blew a moſt violent Gale. A Brig and Sloop from the Long-Wharff and a Sloop from her Anchors were drove aſhore in different Parts of the Harbour.——The Sloops it is hoped will be got off without much Trouble and Expence, but the getting off the Brig, it is expected will be attended with a good deal of Coſt and Trouble. Great Quantities of Lumber was floated from the Wharves, and drove to different Parts of the Harbour, and mix'd, ſo that it was impoſſible for the Owners to diſtinguiſh their own Property.——The Rain occaſioned a conſiderable Freſhet, which deſtroyed a Quantity of Sugar, Salt, &c. in ſome Cellers, at a Diſtance from the Water Side.

We hear that a Veſſel belonging to New-London, drove a-Shore in the above Storm, at Sachem's Head, and it is fear'd that ſhe will be loſt with Part of her Cargo.

HARTFORD, February 19.

On Tueſday evening laſt, the following ſurpriſing accident happened at Southington, a pariſh in Farmington, Mrs RHODA LEE, the wife of Jared Lee, Eſq; ſitting up ſome time after the reſt of the family were a bed, was found fallen into the fire, and her cloaths & even fleſh incircled in the flames, exhibiting a moſt amazing ſpectacle to her conſort, who being wak'd (probably by the unuſual light and noiſe of the fire) was the firſt who ſaw the affecting cataſtrophe; it ſeems moſt probable upon conſideration of all the circumſtances, that having prepared to go to bed, undreſſed herſelf in part, buryed up the fire carefully, ſet back the chairs, &c. ſhe was ſiezed with ſome fit as ſhe was riſing from her ſeat to go bed, and fell forward upon a quantity of hot coals, and there lay without any conſiderable ſtruggle, as her ſhoes were only ſlip'd on, were found on her feet, which ſeems to indicate that ſhe died inſtantly.

In her were united the characters of a kind and faithful wife, tender and affectionate mother, obliging and benevolent neighbour, and cordial friend—was ſtrict in her morals, obſervant of her duty, circumſpect, conſcientious and exemplary in her behaviour, had the good will and reſpect of her acquaintance while living, and at her death greatly lamented.

By this ſudden and ſurpriſing death, we are reminded of the uncertainty of human life and of the importance of being always ready to make our final exit, ſince death may come without giving the leaſt previous notice.

"Thus mans death, dread commiſſion, ſtrike
" but ſo
"As moſt alarm the living by the dead.
—"Moſt happy they! whom leaſt his arts
" deceive,
"One eye on death, & one full fix'd on heaven,
"Becomes a mortal, and immortal man."

A QUESTION.

IN Hartford on a certain time, (of which I remember no more but that it was ſome time between the winter ſolſtice 1770, and the ſummer ſolſtice following) I chanced to ſee in my looking-glaſs the reflection of the ſun, the glaſs hung vertically, at the weſt end of the room, facing the eaſt directly, the center of the image was 7 feet, perpendicularly diſtant from the horizontal floor of my chamber, and 8 feet from the ſouth ſide of the room, in which the windows were; my eye at the time of obſervation was 4 feet above the floor, (for I was ſitting) 15 foot perpendicularly from the aforeſaid ſouth wall, and 24 feet from the weſt end or rather from the plane of the looking glaſs, meaſured by a perpendicular thereon. I deſire to know the month, day, hour and minute of the obſervation.

⁂ We hope our Cuſtomers will excuſe our publiſhing this weeks Paper, on this ſmall ſize, as paper of the uſual ſize was not on any terms to be procured at the Paper Mill.

¶ No Poſts this Week.

Whereas my infamous falſe huſband, ELIJAH METCALF, has been pleaſed to ſay in your former papers, that I wilfully eloped from his bed, which is altogether falſe, for with his approbation I came from home, which I can prove by Capt. Pratt and Wife, of Kent, and Mr Hopſon of Colcheſter, and as the ſaid Elijah, by a ſeries of bad and abuſive conduct, has not only ruined my character, but ſpent my eſtate. I do therefore forbid all ſtrumpets truſting the ſaid Elijah or any how trading with him as afore time, for I utterly refuſe letting him have any more of my eſtate to ſpend in ſuch a manner.

These are to warn all the proprietors of the townſhip of STOW, and MANSFIELD, near Onion river, lately granted by the governor of New Hampſhire, that have not paid the firſt purchaſe, and thoſe that have not paid for laying out ſaid townſhip, and the home lots, that they pay the moneys to me the ſubſcriber, before the firſt tueſday of March next, and if not, then ſaid rights or ſuch part of them are to be ſold to the higheſt bidder, to pay ſaid purchaſe, and all coſt that hath been for laying out ſaid townſhips and home lots, and the coſt of ſaid vendue, which will be at the houſe of Jonathan Gillet in Sharon, at one of the clock afternoon on ſaid tueſday, per

Sharon, Feb. 4, 1771.

This may certify that February 12th, A.D. 1771, the proprietors meeting of the townſhip of Tinmouth (lying on Otter Creek) is adjourn'd to their annual meeting, to be held on the ſecond Tueſday of March A.D. 1771, at 10 o'clock A. M. at the houſe of Mr. John Wyatt, inkeeper in Farmington, in Hartford county &c. It is deſign'd by the proprietors to conſult meaſures at ſaid meeting to compleat the ſettlement of ſaid townſhip the following ſummer. Teſt,

EBENEZER FISK Proprietors Clerk.

These may certify all whom it may concern. That whereas there has been a report ſpread abroad, that Joſeph Bidwell of Glaſtenbury, did in the month of May, in the year A.D. 1769, by whipping, or ſome other way, make way with one David Brewer a ſervant boy to ſaid Bidwell, (a lad of about 14 or 15 years of age) and ſaid boy has not been ſeen nor heard of ſince. And that ſaid Brewers apparition has appeared to Charles Riley, and told him his body was under the floor. And the ſaid Riley on the 28th day of January, A.D. 1771, apply'd to us the ſubſcribers, juſtices of the peace for Hartford county; that he had ſeen ſaid Brewers apparition, on the friday before at noon day, within about twenty rods of ſaid Bidwell's barn. We knowing ſaid Riley to be a man not to be depended upon, but to ſatisfy people abroad, we went on ſaid 28th day, with about twenty judicious men, and pulled up ſaid Bidwell's barn floor, and dugg in ſeveral places, and found no appearance of any breakage of earth, until we were all ſatisfied there was no perſon there, and there has five perſons of lawful age, teſtified under oath, that they have ſeen ſaid David Brewer ſince he run away from ſaid Bidwell.

POET'S CORNER.

The PROSPECT of WAR.

AWake BRITANNIA's guardian Power,
Each riſing danger wiſely view;
BRITONS thy wonted aid implore,
And wholly ſeek ſupport from you.

When threatning dangers moſt appear,
How oft are firmeſt treaties broke!
When no reſtraints there are to fear,
To keep thoſe treaties——'tis a joke.

But ceaſe, and view yon ancient wall,
Thoſe floating bulwarks on the main;
Then fear, thou too aſpiring GAUL,
Then dread, thou haughty coward SPAIN.

No more upbraid the watchful Pow'r,
Nor deign to drop one ſingle tear!
She ſtill protects, this happy hour,
Nor have you, BRITONS, ought to fear.

'Tis true, a while ſhe ſeem'd to ſleep,
Whence barb'rous foes might better know,
That ſtill BRITANNIA rules the deep,
Nor fears united force her foe.

LONDON, November 29.

Sir William Draper arrived in London from New York the 26th of November. The 28th 40 000 ſeamen were voted for 1771. 30 000 to be regiſtred: The expence for one year will be two millions; at 4l. per month.——Inſurances to the Weſt Indies was advanced at Lloyd's Coffee houſe from 4 to 10 per cent——Polices have been opened at the Coffee houſe, to give 9 guineas to return 100 if war is not declared in 7 days; and 40 to receive 100 if declared before the 31ſt of December.

The Preſs continues very hot.

It is ſaid a great Perſonage coincides in opinion with a noble Earl, that the Spaniards are certainly preparing to ſtrike a capital blow in the Weſt; and the French in the Eaſt Indies.——It is ſaid a certain ambaſſador has aſſured the M——y that no attack has been made by the King his Maſter's ſea or land forces, either upon Gibralter or Jamaica.

Dec 4. Damages to the amount of 100,000l. are computed between Shrewſbury and Worceſter, by the late floods. A very heavy ſnow fell about 25th November, whereby a great number of ſheep and hogs were loſt: and the poor ſuffered conſiderably at Richmond in Yorkſhire. Great Damage has been ſuſtained in France and Italy by the late inundations.

It is very currently reported, that his Grace the Duke of Bedford has cauſed it to be ſignified to all his tenants who ſuffered by the late great floods on his eſtates, that he for forgives all rents now due by them to his Grace, and has ordered a conſiderable ſume of money to be diſtributed among his poorer tenants, who have ſuffered by the ſaid floods.

The audience at Mr Foot's Theatre at Edinburgh, calling out repeatedly for the Minor, and not acquieſcing to the firſt excuſe, Mr. Foote himſelf made his appearance, and in Latin intimated to the houſe, that the principal ſubject of ridicule having paid nature's great debt, he humbly ſubmitted to their reflection, whether ſuch an exhibitation would be ſeemly.

The ſtate Lottery began drawing in November: On the 15th December the Price of Tickets aroſe to 21l. 10s. One of the high Prizes drawn, viz 20 000l. was the property of Capt. Towry, of Iſleworth.

Among the ſix malefactors executed at Tyburn on the 12th of December, was the unhappy Man convicted of Beaſtality with a ſhe-Aſs: He chiefly excited the attention of the populace: He ſhewed great marks of ſincere repentance, and wept bitterly; yet numberleſs uttered execrations at the gallows againſt him. He had a Wife and one Child, and eſteemed among his Neighbours as a very ſober Man.

The Committee of Council of the City of London, Reſolved and ordered, the Sum of 40s. for every able Seaman, and 20s. for every ordinary Seaman, who ſhall enter at Guild hall, into the Service of his Majeſty's Navy, over and above the Bounty granted by his Majeſty. The town of Hull, give a Bounty to every bodied Seamen that ſhall enter.—Great Numbers have entered on theſe Encouragements,—428 in one month at Guildhall.

An Advertiſement is publiſhed in the Dublin Gazette, giving Notice that by a moſt extraordinary and unexpected demand for money at the Bank of Sir George Colebrook and Company the caſh of ſaid Bank has been ſo far exhauſted, as to make it neceſſary to forbear payments in ready money for a few days. The proprietors requeſt the Creditors not to be impatient or uneaſy, as they will pay all notes under 30l. before Chriſtmaſs, and have no doubt of being able to pay the other in a ſhort time after.

It being apprehended that there might be a diffidence in the other Banks at Dublin, the Lord Lieut. the Nobility, Gentry, principal Merchants, and Traders of that City, being ſenſible of the ſecure foundations of the houſes of Meſſrs David Latouche and Sons, Meſſ. William Glendowe and Co. Meſſ. Thomas Finley and Co. and Meſſ. John Dawſon, Coates and Partrick Ludlow, have advertiſed that they will continue to take the Notes of the ſaid Houſes as caſh, in all payments made to them.

LONDON, December 13.

Proceedings in the Lower Room of the Robinhood Society on Monday laſt.

On Monday General C——y, after the eſtimates of ordnance expences were read by Mr. C——ke addreſſed himſelf to the Preſident:

SIR,

"I DO not know whether it is neceſſary to ſay any thing in ſupport of the expences for the year 1771. Nor will I trouble the committee, till ſome objections are made. My honorable friend, who opened the buſineſs, has obſerved the ſums wanted for the repairs of the different garriſons of Gibralter and Minorca. As to the former, it is needleſs to point out the neceſſity of keeping it in repair, particularly upon the eve of a war: As to the latter, every military Gentleman, the leaſt acquainted with the fortreſs of St. Phillip's knows how dangerous the ſuburbs are, in caſe it is attacked by an enemy as plainly appeared in the late war, when, though the garriſon did their duty, the ſucceſs of the enemy was facilitated by their erecting their batteries under cover of the ſuburbs. The other place which requires defence is the dock-yard at Portſmouth; every body knows it is not fortified, but that Goſport which is oppoſite is: Theſe, Sir, and the 8000l. for fortifying Newfoundland, I preſume no Gentleman will object to:

"It is alſo propoſed, Sir, to add a battallion, conſiſting of eight companies, to the artillery, with one Colonel Commandant and Lieutenant Colonel. As a ſcarcity of Field officers has been much complained of particularly in Germany, where there was only one, though an Officer of the greateſt merit, yet the artillery were often left to the care of a Captain.

"And it is propoſed to add four pence per diem to the pay of Lieutenant Fireworkers, and make them ſecond Lieutenants. I do mean this augmentation merely on the ſuſpicion of a war, but to have it an eſtabliſhment; which will ſave this honorable Houſe the trouble of conſidering it annually. I wiſh it to be an eſtabliſhment in time of peace as well as war.

"It is alſo, Sir, propoſed to reduce the number of Gunners, which are ten, to eight; and as Gunners are allowed four-pence per diem more than a Matroſs, in their room to add two Matroſſes. Now, Sir, by adding the eight companies, it will be an honourable retreat for officers worn out in the ſervice. By this means we can more conveniently ſpare the other battalions upon foreign ſervice; and it is needleſs to mention how well that corps behaved in the late war; the variety of ſervices they were upon produced greater difficulties to them, and they did more ſervice than any one corps.

Lord G. G——e. "The Honourable Gentleman, who communicated the eſtimate of the ordnance expences, ſaid very little; but the other Honorable Gentleman, whoſe immediate province it is, has gone more largely into particulars, and given us a detail.——I ſhould be very ſorry to object or differ from him, but in ſome particulars I muſt diſſent. As to the repairs of the different garriſons, I confeſs them, though very great yet extremely neceſſary, eſpecially at Minorca, as we are now on the commencement of a war. As to that part of the expence for Newfoundland, I can have no objection; I am only ſurpriſed it is ſo trifling. Why, Sir, 8000l. is barely ſufficient for your fiſhery, and never can be meant to fortify the whole iſland.—We all can remember how ill provided it was laſt war, when the enemy took it and how happily it was retaken by an Honorable Gentleman behind me, (Colonel Amherſt) without waiting for orders from home. I can only imagine, the 8000l. is meant to ſecure a particular harbour, and not to put the whole iſland in a ſtate of defence againſt any attacks from an enemy.——The Hon. Gentleman did not enter into particulars; I have therefore no objections to offer; I ſuppoſe the ſupply demanded is juſt, and it is our duty to ſee the money is not miſapplied. As to the propoſed augmentation of the artillery, I muſt differ from the Hon. Gentleman. At the time of the reduction, the army were reduced from 100 to 50, but the artillery had three battalions preſerved; and the augmentation propoſed of eight companies, I conſider only as an additional expence to the people. I would not wiſh to be underſtood, that I object to the rewarding of merit, by oppoſing it: No, Sir, I am ſenſible that this corps have great merit, and that they have not been rewarded as they deſerved; but I can by no means conſent to the rendering of an additional battalion permanent, as the Honorable Member hinted. If it is to be a war, let us proceed regular.

THE Lower Room of the Robinhood Society, took it as an inſult on them, in not being ſuffered to be in the Upper Room, whilſt they were ſitting; and therefore were of opinion that they ought to do juſtice to themſelves upon this proceeding.

It was moved by Mr. D——g, that a Committee ſhould be appointed to ſearch the Journals of the Houſe of L——ds, of that day, as to what proceedings and reſolutions were therein, with relation to the not permitting any perſons to be preſent in any part of the ſaid Houſe, during the ſitting thereof.

Col. B——re, ſaid, "It is to the outrageous and daring Behaviour of certain Members of the Upper Room, who truſt to their Majority, that they are indebted for this inſult on this room——It was a conduct that ſhocked the honeſt part of that noble aſſembly. They acted like themſelves; they withdrew, rather than give their ſanction to ſuch an unworthy and unprecedented behaviour. I myſelf was preſent, and will affirm that no C——t of B——r——g——n ever equalled the horrid indecency I was there a witneſs to. Sir, we give up the rights of our C——nſt——t——nts, and of our own honor, if we do not reſent this uſage, or if we only make ſo tame a return to it, and ſo diſgraceful a one, as to act as improperly as they have done. I am for the motion, and hope it will go further."

L——d N——h, ſaid, "It ill becomes the Dignity of this houſe to ſuffer ſuch a language to be held as that uſed by the above Gentlemen, by diſcriminating what he calls the honeſt part of the room. Their conduct I condemn as any body; and therefore agreed with a Motion made by my Right Hon. friend who ſits near me, [Right Hon. G—— O——w] to have this Room exert its power over them, exactly as the Upper Houſe had theirs over us. Retaliation is all that is in our power, and all we ſhould think of. The Members of the Upper Room have not infringed any privilege of ours; they have not injured us; they have not inſulted us, &c. Searching the J——n——ls of the Upper Room will be uſeleſs and nugatory, and therefore diſgraceful and unworthy of us."

THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic.

From TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, to TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1771.

LONDON, November 27.

YESTERDAY came on at the Court of Common Pleas, before Lord Chief Juſtice Wilmot, and the reſt of the Judges of that Court, a motion for a rule, to ſet aſide the verdict in the caſe of the Right Honourable George Onſlow againſt Mr. Horne.

Serjeant Whitaker, Council for Mr. Onſlow, opened the pleading, by obſerving, "That though there could be no immediate damages proved, that Mr. Onſlow might have ſuffered, as thoſe places he poſſeſſes are places of honour, not of profit, yet the reflections made uſe of, were aſperſive on his character as a gentleman, and he muſt ſuffer very ſenſibly for them, as they reflected on that good name and probity that every perſon would wiſh to ſuſtain in his rank in ſociety; that if Mr. Horne could even make out his reflections to be true, there may be ſome colour in his vindication; but as he had not even diſtantly attempted to prove them on the trial, he hoped the verdict would be confirmed." He was ſupported on the ſame ſide by Serjeant Leigh, who added, "That if Acts of Parliament were ſo provident in ſupport of the characters of inferior officers, there could be no doubt, but that the more reſpectable character of a member of Parliament and Privy Counſellor, ſhould be more ſo." He aſked, "What imputations could any honeſt man put upon thoſe words of Mr Horne: 'As for inſtructing 'George Onſlow, you may as well inſtruct the 'winds, the water, or the eath; he may pro'miſe you but I do not expect him to keep 'it?" Do they not imply, in the ſtrongeſt manner poſſible, a want of common probity and honour? Do they not attempt to rob him of his good name in ſociety, and ſtamp him with the character of double dealing, and incapable of belief?" He then quoted ſome precedents, and concluded in the firm perſuaſion of the verdict's being confirmed.

"I ſhall conſider this action as it is brought on the ſecond COUNT; which is, that Mr. Horne is charged with ſaying 'He may pro'miſe (ſpeaking of Mr. Onſlow) but I do not 'expect him to keep it.' Now, my Lords, I ſhould be glad to be informed, by either of my brothers how ſuch a charge is actionable? My brother Whitaker has obſerved, 'That if Mr. 'Horne could make out his reflections to be 'true, there may be ſome colour of defence.' Now, I would aſk him upon reflection, whether he does not believe Mr Horne could fully prove what he aſſerted; that is, 'That 'twas only his 'opinion, or that he expected Mr. Onſlow would 'not keep his word.' Certainly, my Lord, he could, if he has not changed his mind, for as 'twas only a matter of opinion, all neceſſary to prove it, is to ſwear that he thinks ſo.

"But, my Lord, let us conſider the nature of this meeting; it was on the legal, laudable purpoſe of inſtructing the Members of their county; where freedom of debate, and freedom of inveſtigation and inquiry were not only allowable, but conſtitutionally neceſſary; where the efficacy or inefficacy of inſtruction was to be truly pointed out; and let me aſk How was it poſſible this could be done, if the open opinions of the freeholders were not delivered? I agree with my brothers, that defamatory words ſpoken againſt men in trade or office, when theſe words reach the character of the parties, there an action is legal, becauſe their credit is affected, and a man may break and loſe his employment in conſequence; but in the preſent caſe, no ſuch thing happens; not even the danger (allowing it to be an office) of Mr Onſlow's loſing his ſeat in Parliament; and I appeal to my brothers, whether they have the leaſt doubts on their minds of their client's ſuffering in that manner. Let us examine this matter in ſome of the lower departments of office; the election of a church-warden for inſtance; if I know a perſon propoſed for that office, that I think not ſafe to be truſted with the public money, I have a right to declare it, and give my reaſons, and no action will lie, becauſe, as a pariſhioner attending the veſtry, I have a right to deliver any opinion that may tend to parochial utility. If the freedom of debate and inquiry is thus ſtopt, by being actionable, we ſhall never know on what grounds to proceed; we ſhall not know whether a candidate is worthy or not of the office he ſues for, a man's barely ſaying, "I don't approve of him," and no further, will bear the conſtruction of private pique and reſentment and will never have the leaſt prevalence with his brother elector (let the candidate be ever ſo unfit a perſon;) ſo, by this doctrine, a county meeting would reſemble an aſſembly of Quakers, with this difference, the freeholders would be ſilent through fear. But to put this matter at once to a ſhort iſſue, I do aver that in all our books, from Crook down to the lateſt reporter, will not be one inſtance found where defamatory words ſpoken againſt a Member of Parliament, merely in that capacity, have been found actionable; if ſo, I hope Mr. Onſlow's caſe will not be the firſt."

Serjeant Jephſon corroborated Serjeant Glynn's arguments, in a number of precedents ſtrongly in point: one in particular in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, where a Juſtice of the Peace was called 'a blood-ſucking villain, and that the child unborn would rue the day that he was born;' which words ſtrongly implied every thing that was bad; yet all the Judges of that time, except two, were clearly of opinion it amounted to nothing. So that, ſays he, reflecting or defamatory words are only actionable when they affect a man's temporal concerns, or where a perſon is charged with an action for which, from the nature of his office, he is puniſhable then indeed it is very reaſonable that the law ſhould provide redreſs but not otherwiſe.

Serjeant Whitaker cloſed theſe pleadings which continued from eleven o'clock till two, with a ſhort remark on Serjeant Jephſon's precedent of the Juſtice of the Peace that was called a blood-ſucker, by ſaying, "The opinion of the then Judges were no authority; that he remembered many reports, where Judges as well as other men, had done wrong things; and that he looked upon the two diſſenting Judges, in that caſe, to be extremely right, and that the others ought to be aſhamed of their opinion."

"As ſo many caſes have been quoted, and "ſo many arguments advanced, it is rather too "late in the term to give judgment; it muſt "therefore lie over till the next term."

Meſſieurs PRINTERS,

Serious reflections on extraordinary occurrences in the courſe of divine Providence, and compaſs of human obſervation, frequently with much propriety, claim and occupy a place in the News Paper, and particularly ſome memoirs, or anecdotes of a life or death, very eminent or ſingular. And foraſmuch as the righteous ſhould be in perpetual remembrance, & nothing almoſt more ſenſibly uſeful to ſurvivors, than a careful review of the diſtinguiſhing characters and exemplary conduct of departed friends, & agreeable peculiarities of the faithful ſervants of the Moſt High. Diſclaiming laviſh encomiums, or extravagant panegyricks on former acquaintances, merely becauſe removed to an incapacity of ſounding their own praiſes, and having long expected ſomething on the ſubject better calculated to pleaſe the public, and do juſtice to the memory of the dead.—I here preſent you with a compoſition which however imperfect otherwiſe you may be aſſured contains nothing more than truth, and which if ſufficiently recommended to a publication in your uſeful Courant, will be agreeable to Litchfield, February 1771.

Your FRIEND.

ON the 4th day of November 1768, died at Litchfield, MARY BUELL, widow of John Buell, Eſq; deceas'd, aged about ninety years. She was born in Windſor, where ſhe was married at about ſeventeen years of age and thereupon removed to Lebanon, where ſhe lived with her huſband in the moſt agreeable manner, till the year 1720, when they removed with their family to Litchfield, being a moſt reſpectable part of the firſt ſettlers of this townſhip.——Where, continuing in all the ordinances of the Lord blameleſs, they enjoyed abundant proſperity, friendſhip and happineſs, even amidſt the unavoidable hardſhips and fatigues incident to the firſt and principal planters in ſuch a remote wilderneſs——and where, having long ſuſtained, and ever diſcharged with honor and fidelity, ſeveral important offices in church and ſtate, anno 1746 He patiently ſubmitted to a painful illneſs, and exulting in a bleſſed hope of aſſurance of a glorious immortality beyond the dark curtain of diſſolution—chearfully leaving his well beloved wife and children in poſſeſſion of a goodly inheritance together with the more valuable legacy of ſharing largely in thoſe peculiar bleſſings which ſeldom fail to attend and follow the footſteps of the righteous, even down to poſterity——In his life, and at his death frequently inculcating, and perſonally exhibiting a lively ſpecimen of the truth of that important obſervation on ſacred record, that "godlineſs "is profitable to the life that now is and that "which is to come." Whom ſhe ſurvived, a conſpicuous pattern of patience and benevolence, a ſhining example of piety and devotion, and amiable mirror of every chriſtian grace, every ſocial, relative and practical virtue till ſhe could enumerate 410 of her own offſpring, whereof 336 ſurvived her.

DEATH, like an over-flowing flood,
Sweeps all the human race away;
The old and young, profane and good,
Become his equal eaſy prey.
But though the tyrant o'er mankind,
May his extenſive victories boaſt;
Yet every gracious ſoul ſhall find
His bitterneſs is ſmall at moſt
Yea, his dread form is comely grown,
His ghaſtly horrors all diſpell'd;
To thoſe in whom true grace is ſown.
For though they fall, they win the field!
Faith can triumphant, meet the foe,
Though fleſh and ſenſe reluctant prove,
How ſaints rejoice, when call'd to go
To regions of immortal love!
To ſuch, death comes a welcome Friend,
His meſſage they receive with joy;
Here all their ſorrows have an end,
Hence pleaſures flow which never cloy!
What though the preſent ſtate ſoon ends?
What though 'tis full of toil and care?
Eternity will make amends
For all the righteous feel or fear.
Then weep not for thoſe precious few,
Who liv'd to GOD——though turn'd to clay;

Their corpſes ſhall (as GOD is true)
All-glorious riſe another day!
But mourn for ſuch as ſtill ſurvive,
Trifling in ſin with all their power,
Who painful lives uſe to contrive
To put far off the evil hour!
Whilſt faith through grace in exerciſe,
Makes all its ſubjects truly bleſs'd,
Makes this fair life a paradiſe,
And renders death a welcome gueſt.
Diſarms the monſter of his ſting.
Converts to bleſſing all his curſe,
Pleaſure in pain will always bring,
And reconciles the kindred duſt.
Who would regret to lay life down,
For ſure and certain hope to riſe,
Through the dark entrance of the tomb,
To endleſs joys beyond the ſkies?
Thus let me live, thus let me die,
Author of life natural and new!
Thus my creator glorify,
As is my duty and thy due.

LONDON, Dec. 15.

From the General Evening-Poſt

Sir William M—d—b's Speech in the Robinhood Society, on the 27th ult.

THERE is ſomething pleaſant in the language, as well as in the train of reaſoning adopted by our Miniſters. They perſuade themſelves that their meaſures will be cordially ſupported by the people, while the people are at varience with them and their meaſures. They expect that there will be no conteſt but that of diſplaying a ſuperiority of zeal in ſupport of the common cauſe, forgetting that the nation can never make a common cauſe with thoſe, whom it has found to be common enemies. It ſeems they are reſolved to be conſiſtent, and not deviate on this occaſion from the ſame prudential maxims which have hitherto directed their conduct, and rendered their plan of politics ſo ſucceſsful and ſatisfactory. The hearty concurrence of the kingdom they deem a juſt reward for having violated its moſt eſſential rights. Nor is this ſurpriſing in men of their principles and talents. Their paſt adminiſtration being only a tranſcript of the meaſures purſued by Charles the Firſt, why ſhould we wonder that they ſhould preſerve the ſame character to the laſt, and compleat the tragedy.—Servetur ad imum qualis ab incepto proceſſerit, et ſibi conſtet. Charles while openly invading the franchiſes of his people, had the temerity to engage in a war. What was the conſequence? The injured people would not fight, and thus brought diſgrace and ruin upon the head of the deluded and devoted monarch. Men will never diſcover ſpirit or valour, when they have no confidence in their leaders. Much more will this be the caſe, when they dread greater calamities from their leaders, than from the very enemies whom they oppoſe. Domeſtic ſlavery is no leſs terrible than a foreign yoke, even where that yoke is certain. What then will it be, where a foreign yoke is but barely poſſible? The danger with which we are threatened by France & Spain is diſtant and uncertain; but the blow aimed by our Miniſters at the vitals of liberty, the moſt precious of all poſſeſſions, is imminent and undoubted. Can it then be expected that Britons can ſally forth, like Quixottes, in queſt of diſtant enemies while foes more formidable, becauſe inſiduous friends, remain behind in poſſeſſion of the city, of the citadel, and every palladium of the conſtitution? Never believe it. They cannot exert their native gallantry in defence of that liberty, which no longer exiſts. Being deprived of the character of citizens, they will not expoſe their lives for a maſter. Accuſtomed to fight for themſelves, they will beware of encreaſing the power of a deſpot, and forging their own chains.

Recollect the fate of King John, abandoned by his Engliſh ſubjects, becauſe they ſpurned at oppreſſion, he loſt his tranſmarine dominions, and laid the foundation of all his future misfortunes. Call to mind the cataſtrophe of Edward the Second. In his war with the Scotch, fortune did not turn her back upon him, till he had firſt provoked his ſubjects to deſertion. A people of a generous and free ſpirit diſcover in ſuch circumſtances leſs valour than confirmed ſlaves. Their ſouls diſtracted between hope and fear are unmanned by the anxiety of ſuſpence, The Romans, oppreſſed by their Decemvirs, refuſed not only to fight, but to conquer. They fled before thoſe foreign enemies, who durſt not face them, when they had once quelled their domeſtic foes. Such are the effects produced by the dread of loſing liberty!

Of theſe truths all our great Princes were ſo fully convinced, that, before they embarked on the perilous ocean of war, they ſaw all the ſtorms of civil commotion laid, and internal peace and union reſtored to all their dominions. Thus ſupported by the love and united ſtrength of his ſubjects, Edward the Firſt conquered Scotland. Thus ſupported, Edward the Third victoriouſly traverſed France, and annexed Calais to the crown of England. Thus ſupported, Henry the Fifth quartered the lilly with the roſe, and left the poſſeſſion to his ſon.

But why ſhould I expatiate farther on a point ſo manifeſt in itſelf, that it hardly needs the teſtimony of hiſtory, which is ſo explicit in its behalf? Nothing but the perverſe obſtinacy and unenlightened politics of our preſent rulers could ſtand in need of any admonition on this head. Had they not avowed it both in the ſpeech, and in the addreſs, no ſober man could have ſuſpected that they would count upon the concurrence of the nation, till our deciſion of the Middleſex Election was reverſed. The grievance is ſo enormous and intolerable, that none, who deſerve not a cell in Bedlam, can reaſonably hope for ſuch an event. Of this truth I have ſo ſtrong a conviction, that though I know what little weight I have with the Miniſters, I cannot help conjuring them to take away this evil thing, this ſtumbling block, from among the people. If they will be deaf to the voice of reaſon, to the call of juſtice, and the requeſt of the nation, yet let them make this ſacrifice to their own ſecurity, and to the ſtability of the throne. Though you ſhould have no compaſſion on the preſent age, nor ſhew any regard to Poſterity, at leaſt conſult the ſafety of your own heads: and once in your lives do an act, which may prove your attachment to that maſter, and that family, of whoſe intereſts you pretend to be ſo tender.

LONDON, November 20 and 21.

"Gentlemen, I thank you for this very dutiful and affectionate Addreſs: and for the freſh mark you give of your attachment to me and my family, in your Congratulations on the happy delivery of the Queen and the birth of another Princeſs.

"Your ready concurrence in my ſentiments, and your chearful aſſurances of ſupport, afford me the higheſt ſatisfaction. You may be aſſured of the continuance of my endeavours to preſerve to my kingdoms the bleſſing of peace; but I ſhall conſider it as a bleſſing ſo long only, as it can be enjoyed conſiſtently with the honour of my Crown, and without prejudice to the rights of my people."

LONDON, Nov. 22.

The King's Order in Council, of the 16th inſtant, in Saturday's Gazettee, after expreſſing his Majeſty's deſire to prevent all obſtruction to trade, enjoins, that all ſhips and veſſels, already arrived, or that ſhall hereafter arrive from America or the Weſt-Indies, with rags or cotton wool on board the produce of thoſe places, be not laid under any reſtraint whatſoever on account of quarentine.

They write from Gibralter, that the garriſon is ſupplied with a great quantity of proviſions in caſe of a ſiege, which from the diſpoſion of the Spaniards from the land ſide, ſeems actually mediating.

Letters from Brimingham, Sheffield, Manſfield, Nottingham, and other manufacturing towns, mention, that they cannot get hands ſufficient to compleat the very extenſive orders now executing for North-America.

Dec. 8. Advice are received from Senegal, that the French ſtill continue to erreſt forts on the coaſt of Africa, and that freſh ſupplies of troops arrive daily to garriſon them.

The motion made by Serjeant G—n in the L——r A——y on Tueſday, was, "That a Committee be appointed to enquire into the adminiſtration of criminal juſtice, and the proceedings of the Judges in Weſtminſter hall, particularly in caſes relating to the Liberty of the Preſ's and the conſtitutional power and duty of juries." The Serjernt was ſeconded by Ald. Oliver & Townſend, who pointed out by name a certain Judge, preſident of one of the Courts of Juſtice as the grand culprit. The ſpeakers in behalf of the motion were Mr. Burke, Sir Joſeph Mawbey, (who complained greatly of Baron S—'s conduct in trying the Serjeant at the ſummer aſſizes at Guildhall) Mr. Sawbridge, Mr. Cornwall, Mr. Dunning, Mr. Wedderburne, Col. Barre, L G. Germine, and Sir G. Saville, Speakers againſt the motion: Mr. Onſlow (who defended the conduct of Baron S--- at Guildhall) Lord Clare, C. Fox, the Attorney General, Sir Gilbert Elliot, Mr. Forreſter, and the Solicitor General, ſeventy-ſix of the company were for the enquiry, and 184 againſt it. Mr. D———g ſpoke for two hours and upwards. The ſtate has already incurred a very great expence, and appearances are ſtrong on the ſide of war. Should nine millions be wanted for the coming ear, or even ſix, moſt of them it is to be ſuppoſed, there may be a view of funding; but then where to lay the taxes will become the queſtion. Thoſe of the landed intereſt will probably be averſe to the bearing of any further part of the burthen than the increaſe of the land tax; and labour can bear none, the poor being hardly able to ſubſiſt already. To impoſe a new tax on the latter, therefore, in one way, will only prove the means of leſſening perhaps in a greater degree what they already pay in others: and to tax any neceſſary of conſumption will be likely to lay the burthen perhaps ten-fold on land and labour. To afford time, therefore, for forming plans for carrying on a war, without increaſing burthens to degrees that might prove ruinous, can better means be thought of than the alienation of crown lands by ſale, with the abolition of Rangerſhips which are burthenſome to the Crown? This would be a great improvement of national property, and at the ſame time ſerve to ſupport puplic credit as to make the ſtocks probably riſe, while it might greatly extend taxation, without adding to preſent burthens, and likewiſe afford ſcope for an increaſe of population. The meaſure would moreover make Government very popular, and cauſe the turning of much money from miſchievous to ſalutary purpoſes.

It cannot be ſuppoſed the French and Spaniards are not fully apprized of the declining ſtate of our national circumſtances, and of courſe of the precarious ſituation of public credit; from which cauſe they may ground their ſtrongeſt hopes: ſo that diſappointment therein will beſt ſerve to intimidate them from their hoſtile intentions. The Miniſtry, therefore, cannot be too cautious of affording them any ſuch kind of encouragement by their modes of taxation.

LONDON. Dec. 18.

The following is a copy of the queſtions L—d C——n put to L—d M——d in the Upper Room of the Robinhood Society laſt Tueſday, in anſwer to the paper L—d M——d left with the Clerk of the Room the day before. As L—d M——d refuſed to anſwer theſe queſtions, (ſaying he would not anſwer Interrogatories) they are alſo left with the clerk of the Room.

1. Does the opinion mean to declare, that upon the general iſſue of Not Guilty, in the caſe of a ſeditious libel, and Jury have no right by law to examine the innocence or criminalty of the paper, if they think fit, and to form their virdict upon ſuch examination?

2. Does the opinion mean to declare, that in the caſe above-mentioned, when the Jury have delivered in their verdict Guilty, that this verdict has found the fact only, and not the law?

3. Is it to be underſtood by this opinion, that if the Jury come to the bar, and ſay that they find the printing and publiſhing, but that the paper is no libel, that in that caſe the Jury have found the defendant guilty generally, and the verdict muſt be ſo entered up?

4. Whether the opinion means to ſay, that if the Judge, after giving his opinion of the innocence or criminalty of the paper, ſhould leave the conſideration of that matter, together with the printing and publiſhing, to the Jury, ſuch a direction would be contrary to law?

5. I beg leave to aſk, whether dead and living Judges, then abſent, did declare their opinions in open Court, and whether the noble L---d has any note of ſuch opinions?

6. Whether they declared ſuch opinions, after ſolemn arguments, or upon any point judicially before them?

[The Lord Mayor backed the preſs-warrants that were granted by the Lords of the Admiralty for impreſſing of Seamen in the City of London, and ſent one warrant to the Conſtable of each ward, with this reſtriction, not to carry any perſon impreſed to the regulating Captains, before they were examined by a Magiſtrate. Several were carried before Alderman Wilkes, when ſitting Juſtice at Guildhall, who without heſitation diſcharged them, declaring at the ſame time, that according to his opinion, the warrants were illegal, and that he would take proper ſteps, as far as lay in his power, to ſtop their further proceedings.—Mr. Alderman Sawbridge and another Alderman proceeded in the ſame Manner. The Lord-Mayor at a meeting of the Common-Council confeſſed the illegality of preſs-warrants, but declared that in that emergency the fleet muſt be manned, and he could not riſque the danger of delay.]

A Writer in the London Chronicle of the 13th of Oct. after ſetting forth the alarming Situation of England under the preſent M——y concludes thus:

It is the Duty of every good Subject to ſpeak his Sentiments plainly: Lord Chatham has once already ſaved this Country. There is no Room now for the little Intrigues of the Cabinet. He muſt be called upon; the Nation expect it: He muſt be Miniſter. To day it might be made an Act of Voluntary Grace and Favour to the People: To-morrow it will be neceſſary; the next Day unavoidable. A WHIG, and an ENGLISHMAN.

A committee of the clergymen of Maryland, lately held at Annapolis, hath directed an application to the crown, for the nomination of a Biſhop in that province, that the ſtudents in divinity in the American univerſities, may not be obliged to the expence of a voyage to England before they can obtain orders; and that the profligacies of the clergy, too numerous in America, may not, as hitherto, paſs uncenſured.

NEW-YORK, February 14.

A Letter from Charleſtown, South Carolina, dated the 24th of January, from a Perſon lately from Port au-Prince, to his Freind in this City, adviſes, that at Port au-Prince there was the greateſt Apprehenſions of War, a Frigate juſt arrived from France, reported, that War was proclaimed both in France and Spain, againſt England, where 40 Tenders were conſtantly employed in preſſing Men, that the Spaniards made Prizes of all the Engliſh Veſſels they could take; and that in Conſequence of theſe Advices, they were uſing the utmoſt Dilligence to repair the Fortifications, mounting Guns in the Forts, and were loading Veſſels with Guns and other Military Stores, to ſend to the outer Ports.

Two days before Capt. Aſkey left Euſtatia, arrived a Brig and a Schooner from New England, and a Sloop, Capt. Wheaton, from New York, they had all been in bad Weather, the Brig and the Schooner had loſt their Fore-maſts, and the Sloop her Bowſprit. Capt Wheaton brought in a Molatto Man, whom he took from the Wreck of a Veſſel foundered at Sea, one of the other Veſſels alſo brought in the Capt. and a Foremaſt Man, whom he took from the Wreck of another foundered Veſſel and were all that were ſaved from theſe two Veſſels, a third veſſel ſhared the ſame Fate, and every Soul periſhed. Theſe three foundered veſſels belonged to New England, but their Names not remembered.

It was reported at Euſtatia, that 14 or 15 ſail of French or Spaniſh veſſels with Forces on board, were lying at Porto Rico, where they ſeemed to expect an Attack from the Engliſh, were preparing for Defence, and had taken Meaſures for evacuating the Town on the approach of the Engliſh.

Pleaſe to inſert the following anecdote in your Poet's Corner, and you'll oblige one of your conſtant cuſtomers.

IN the county of Eſſex, in England, a certain number of gentlemen, enter'd into a written agreement not to drink any Green or Bohea Tea for a limitted time——the practice there being judg'd injurious to health, and a detriment to the public Among thoſe that entered into this covenant was a certain Miller; a man of conſiderable eſtate, but none of the beſt of characters. And as he was the moſt forward to promote the agreement, ſo he was the firſt that broke it, and gloried in the violation of it Being call'd to account for his conduct by a committee appointed for that purpoſe, he (at the firſt) denied it, but the fact being afterwards fully proved, he ſent in the following apology in metre.

Will you hear the excuſe of an old wicked ſinner
That has broken his vow, and drank Tea for his (dinner?
As ſoon as the news of my late reſolution,
Had reached my houſe, they were all in confuſion.
My daughter's you know, they are apt to be (ſaucy.
They call'd me a fool, and they teaz'd with ut (mercy.
Their eyes darted fire, their voices were ſhrill,
And their tongues moved faſter than the clack (of my mill.
I thought I could order and govern my houſe,
But they ſoon let me know that I was but a (mouſe;
I ſwore in a paſſion and began for to caper,
But they ſaid I was drunk when I ſigned the (paper.
I own'd I lov'd flip, and ſometimes felt foggy,
But never ſo much as to be down-right groggy;
To eaſe their reſentment and ſtill their loud (thunder,
I was forc'd to ſubmit and compell'd to knock (under.
Thus you ſee my hard caſe, I muſt live in the (fire,
Or turn like the ſow, to wallow in mire
If I ſet up for order they'll nothing but rail,
So inſtead of being head I own I'm the tail.
I hope you will pity my woful condition,
And grant me at once a final diſmiſſion.
And if you'll forgive me for what has been paſt,
I will own I'm a liar from the firſt to the laſt.

Hague, (in Holland) Nov. 22. Extract of a letter of Prince Gallitzin, Miniſtier from the Court of Peterſburg, to the States General, dated Oct. 30.

THE Chan of the Tartars being deſirous to go into Crimea with part of his troops, and the Turks which he kept with him after the defeat of the Grand Vizir, was attacked by land by Gen. Berg, and on the Dnieper by the Caſſacks Saporaſkys. He had upwards 20,000 horſes. &c.

Conſtantinople, (in Turkey) October 17. We have received advice that on the 9th of this month, Haſſan Bey put himſelf at the head of 3400 men, and ſailed from the Dardenelles to relieve the caſtle of Lemnos; that the troops had ſafely landed in that iſland; that he marched up to the beſiegers, both Greek and Ruſſians, cut them all to pieces, took the cannon employed in the ſiege, and delivered the caſtle. The garriſon had given hoſtages that very day, and was to have evacuated the place the next day. This affair has coſt the Ruſſians 2500 Greeks, which they had at Lemnos, and about 400 men of their own.

The laſt letters from Iſacktcha adviſe, that the Grand Vizir was making diſpoſitions to attack the Ruſſians in flank, on the ſide of Walachia, where there are two Baſhaws with 20,000 men, and a body of 20,000 Tartars; they add, that a detachment of 10,000 men, commanded by Dagueſtan Ali Baſhaw, was to form an attack on the right.

Trieſte (in Iſtria) Nov. 3. We learn from the Levant, that General Orlow was beſiging Tenedos, in the iſland of that name, which town was ready to capitulate. Admiral Elphinſtone, is ſtill in the neighbourhood of the Dardanelles. There are near Scio two Ruſſian Ships, the men of which intend to dive for the 500,000 rubles that were loſt when the Admiral's ſhips was burnt.

After cenſuring the three doubting Aldermen who diſcharged the impreſſed men his Lordſhip took occaſion to paſs the following encomiums on the late Lord Mayor:[*] "I ought "not to omit doing juſtice to a cha-"racter, which has ſuffered upon this "occaſion the united attacks of the "inſolent, the envious, and the ma-"licious. I have always conſidered "the late Lord Mayor as an able & "upright Magiſtrate, an amiable pri-"vate gentlemen, an honeſt man, & "an honour to the City."

[* TRECOTHICK.]

Enquiry has been made whether there was no Reply to Lord C——m; we can at preſent find only the following:

In anſwer to the ſentiments of this great patriot, another orator, well known under the title of a remarkable impeaching character in the Beggar's opera, remarked, "That tho' he never remembered to have heard the noble Earl's ſentiments coincide ſo nearly with him in ſome points, as they did on the preſent occaſion; yet he could not help conſidering his aſſertions in general to be mere ipſe dixits, or matters of opinion; for," continued he, "We have been told this day, that the preſent adminiſtration is a very unpopular one; that the people are quite diſſatiſfied; that we are not in a ſituation to defend ourſelves from foreign attacks; nay, that we have not even twelve ſhips of the line ready for ſervice. Now, as I have not the honor to be of the adminiſtration, I cannot ſpeak preciſely as to the truth of theſe declarations; but I have a right to give my opinion as well as the noble Earl; and my opinion is, we are in a ſituation to defend ourſelves againſt all our enemies; that the preſent adminiſtration is not an unpopular one; and that the people are not diſſatiſfied. I think the preſent oppoſition are ten thouſand times more unpopular, I ſee it every day—I ſee it in the laſt Weſtminſter remonſtrance—I ſee it in the common council—I ſee it in every part of the kingdom—In ſhort, it is nothing but remonſtrance, inſtructions, and impeachment, or, in other words, it is all Wilkes and Eldridge, noiſe, nonſenſe, and confuſion."

Whereas my infamous falſe husband, ELIJAH METCALF, has been pleaſed to ſay in your former papers, that I wilfully eloped from his bed, which is altogether falſe, for with his approbation I came from home, which I can prove by Capt. Pratt and Wife, of Kent, and Mr Hopſon of Colcheſter, and as the ſaid Elijah by a ſeries of bad and abuſive conduct has not only ruined my character, but ſpent my eſtate. I do therefore forbid all ſtrumpets truſting the ſaid Elijah or any how trading with him as afore time, for I utterly refuſe letting him have any more of my eſtate to ſpend in ſuch a manner.

MARY METCALF.

This may certify that February 18th, A.D. 1771, the proprietors meeting of the townſhip of Tinmouth (lying on Otter Creek) is adjourn'd to their annual meeting, to be held on the ſecond Tueſday of March A.D. 1771, at 10 o'clock A. M. at the houſe of Mr. John Wyard, inkeeper in Farmington, in Hartford county &c. It is deſign'd by the proprietors to conſult meaſures at ſaid meeting to compleat the ſettlement of ſaid townſhip the following ſummer.

Teſt, EBENEZER FISK Proprietors Clerk.

These may certify all whom it may concern That whereas there has been a report ſpread abroad, that Joſeph Bidwell of Glaſtenbury, did in the month of May, in the year A.D. 1769, by whipping, or ſome other way, make way with one David Brewer a ſervant boy to ſaid Bidwell, (a lad of about 14 or 15 years of age) and ſaid boy has not been ſeen nor heard of ſince. And that ſaid Brewers apparition has appeared to Charles Riley, and told him his body was under the floor. And the ſaid Riley on the 28th day of January, A.D. 1771, apply'd to us the ſubſcribers, juſtices of the peace for Hartford county; that he had ſeen ſaid Brewers apparition, on the friday before at noon day, within about twenty rods of ſaid Bidwell's barn. We knowing ſaid Riley to be a man not to be depended upon, but to ſatiſfy people abroad, we went on ſaid 28th day, with about twenty judicious men, and pulled up ſaid Bidwell's barn floor, and dugg in ſeveral places, and found no appearance of any breakage of earth, until we were all ſatiſfied there was no perſon there, and there has five perſons of lawful age, teſtified under oath, that they have ſeen ſaid David Brewer ſince he run away from ſaid Bidwell.

TO THE PUBLIC.

BY the late London papers you are favoured with a ſpeech made in the houſe of L—ds, by a noble L—d, who is revered and eſteemed by all true friends of liberty & the Britiſh conſtitution.—When this noble L—d ariſes, who is not ſilent—when he ſpeaks who is not attentive—and when the ſound echos acroſs the wide atlantic, whoſe tongue is not applauding.

But I am not a little ſurprized that, when ſo many are applauding the ſpeech, ſo few are alarmed at the danger diſcovered by it.—Indeed I have heard ſome ſay, that Britain is moſt in danger; and, ſay they, ſhould Britain fall, America may ſtand and proſper. That may poſſibly be the Caſe: But is their not great danger that the enemies of Britain may think they have a very particular advantage from a ſuppos'd diſaffection in the colonies occaſion'd by the cruel treatment they have for a number of years had from her? And has not this province been the butt of miniſterial reſentment? Is there not reaſon to expect they will fancy that a people who have for too long time been contending againſt chains and fetters, will not be ſo ſollicitous about the names of their maſters, or their places of reſidence as to trouble themſelves much to oppoſe a new one? Does not this, however chimerical it may be in the mind of a Frenchman or Spaniard, afford ſufficient ground for this province to be alarm'd at the approach of war? And have we reaſon to expect that we ſhall have ſo many ſhips of war and troops to protect us THEN, as now lie before our Capital, and have been poſted there to protect Commiſſioners and others in a time of profound peace!

My countrymen be wiſe, in time, you have ſeveral times heretofore, had the importance of military diſcipline laid before you. But what effect has it had?—At preſent the ſound of war grows louder and louder, and ſeems almoſt inevitable.

Permit me therefore once more to Addreſs you on this important ſubject. And, my Countrymen, important it is—for it is more than probable that the ſalvation of this country (under Heaven) will ſooner or later depend upon a well regulated militia—Conſidering then that your lives, your fortunes, your wives, your children, your religion, your all, is ſo much concerned in this matter, I earneſtly intreat your attention. And, to make you a little ſerious, only look back to your worthy anceſtors, who firſt ſettled this land, and ſee at what a dear rate they purchaſed the fair towns, the pleaſant gardens, the fruitful fields which you now enjoy.—See them, in a rigorous reign for the ſake of liberty, civil and religious, leaving their native land—See them toſſed on a boiſterous ocean——See them at length arrive at this then howling wilderneſs——See them ſurprized at the howlings of ſavage beaſts and more ſavage enemies—See hunger and cold ſtaring them in the face, and mortal ſickneſs ſweeping them away—See them erecting little hutts to ſecure their tender wives and harmleſs babes from the inclemency of the climate——See them ſubduing a ſtubborn ſoil, with a weapon in one hand fearing leaſt an enemy ſhould ſpring from his ambuſcade and deſtroy them——See them full of anxiety, leſt while abſent, ſome ſavage monſter ſhould aſſault their little cottages (which was often the caſe) and carry into doleful captivity their tender wives or daſh their harmleſs babes againſt the ſtones——See them when ſcorched with ſummers drought, ſlacking their thirſt at the purling ſtream——See them at mid day repairing to their little cottages, and there ſatisfying their appetites with the moſt coarſe fare——See them on Lord's days attending public worſhip with their weapons in their hands, leaſt heathens ſhould attack them at their worſhip. Thus much, my dear countrymen, may ſuffice to ſhew at what a dear price this land was purchaſed. And ſhould you, through careleſsneſs, or inattention loſe it, how will you anſwer it?—You are generally ready to ſay "we will ſpill the laſt drop of blood in our veins, before we will give it up"——But, my friends, words only will not ſave it.

Permit me, therefore, to lay two ſituations of a people before you. In the firſt place, I will lay before you what I think would be the natural conduct of a wiſe prudent and politick people who are ſenſible of the bleſſings they enjoy.—If they lie on the ſea coaſts, view them on that ſide; there you'll ſee forts and caſtles erected in the moſt important places; look within their walls, there you'll ſee implements of war of all kinds laid up in ſtore not only for immediate uſe, but to ſupply the places of diſabled ones.——Direct your courſe inland, there you'll ſee magazines erected in various places; for a prudent people will not truſt the whole of their ammunition or ſtores in one magazine, well knowing that they are not only ſubject to accidents but that an enterprizing general will always have his eye upon them.—View the militia of the ſtate, this, you'll ſee, well regulated, the regiments and companies well officer'd, the officers ſtudiouſly careful to make themſelves maſters of their duty, and diligently inſtructing all below them. Turn your eyes on the ranks, and ſee them in beauteous order ranged, the ſoldiers well armed, their eyes fixed, and they attentive, obedient and ready, at the word of command, to fly ſwift as Eagles, fierce as Lions; view the crowd around, who are exempt from adding to the numbers in the ranks, ſee them encouraging and applauding the manly behaviour of the armed men, ſee emulation catching from corps to corps, and each ſtriving to excel the other. I might next go on to their civil order, but as the military is what I have now in view, I ſhall omit it.

In the next place, let us reverſe the ſcene, and take a view of a people, who ſeem ſecure and live at eaſe, and are unconcerned. If you ſhould traverſe their ſea coaſts, there you'll ſee their forts and caſtles tumbling down, or, perhaps, ſomething as bad, never erected. Next turn your eyes inland and ſearch for magazines, but where are they? Next caſt your eyes on the militia of the ſtate; there you'll ſee regiments and companies without officers; or, if they have them, generally careleſs, unconcerned and ignorant of their duty; and ſo, of courſe, incapacitated to inſtruct thoſe under them. See the ranks in confuſed order, the ſoldiers ill arm'd, inattentive, diſobedient, talkative when they ſhould be ſilent. See the croud around inſtead of frowning on diſorders, at leaſt, laughing at them, and the diſciplining of ſoldiers treated as a matter of contempt and ridicule.

And now, my countrymen, which of theſe characters, or whether a middle one is neareſt the true condition of this people, I leave the candid reader to determine If you can claim the firſt, it is a very good one, you will in ſuch caſe be always ready to defend yourſelves; be careful that you fall not into ſecurity; be ever on your guard; your enjoyments are too precious to be neglected.

Should the laſt character neareſt reſemble your preſent condition, it is, my dear countrymen, a very unſafe one. Arouſe, and ſhew yourſelves men.—The God of nature has given you as much courage, ſtrength and genius, as any of your enemies.——New England has heretofore been famous for men of military genius for ſoldiers valiant in fight, in the wars in which they have been engaged—But you muſt remember the mode of fighting muſt be altered; your former dexterity, and what you now ſeem to build upon is your firing from ambuſcade; this, is of the utmoſt importance in cloſe woody places where you have trees rocks, logs, &c to ſcreen you, which heretofore was the ſituation of this country. But you are all ſenſible how much the country is altered in that method of attack which heretofore made you formidable, is now inſufficient; this mode of fighting will do on the frontiers; but ſomething more regular and uniform muſt be performed on the ſea coaſt, and in the old ſettled towns. Suppoſe a body of reguler troops ſhould land on any part of your ſea coaſt, ſuppoſing them to have a number of light field pieces, and to be well provided with ammunition and ſtores, how could you make head againſt them? I know there are ſome who boaſt what great things they would do; I requeſt ſome of thoſe to lay before the public a plan of operation, that ſo the militia might practiſe a little upon it, not knowing how ſoon we may be called to it. For my own part, I cannot conceive at preſent, how they cou'd be oppoſed without diſciplined troops. A ſcattering fire at a diſtance (and ſuch the fire of undiſciplined troops will always be) can never ſtop them. Could you reaſonably ſuppoſe that a body of regular troops would always keep the high road (without advance flank or rear guards to ſcour you from your lurking places) and when they came within one hundred yards of you, ſhould there halt, and ſo continue, and your markſmen lay well ſecured; in that caſe you would deſtroy a great many of them while their platoons would do you but little harm. But this ſuppoſition is ſo weak, that I am almoſt aſhamed to mention it, and am heartily ſorry that any build upon it. I would beg leave to recommend to ſuch as do, to read the King of Pruſſia's inſtructions to the Generals of his army, to be obſerved by them, when marching thro' woody or mountainous countries.

My countrymen, the art of war is an art that requires no ſmall care and pains to be maſter of it, although ſo many look upon it as trifling. Therefore be convinced of the importance of it.

Lemnos, and about 400 men of their own

mon council—I ſee it in every part of the kingdom—In ſhort, it is nothing

And ſhou'd it be thought proper, by thoſe whoſe right it is, to ſee that the ſeveral regiments within this province eſpecially thoſe that are within 30 or 40 miles of the ſea coaſt be well diſciplin'd, and each regiment furniſhed with two light field pieces, good ſtore of ammunition provided and properly depoſited, the arms of the militia kept in good order (and let me intreat all to unite in this matter) you will then have regiments able to face an enemy in the field and, while the diſciplined troops are attaking the enemy in front (ſhould you ever be called to it) your choſen markſmen poſted on their flanks will pick away their officers, and ſorely gall their ranks After having thus done your duty, you may reaſonably hope for a bleſſing to crown your arms with ſucceſs; and that your enemies will be ſcattered and deſtroyed before you; and that you will ſtill maintain & enjoy this good land, and your poſterity after you until time ſhall be no more; which is the ardent wiſh, and hearty prayer of

A Military Countryman.

Thurſday there was a general muſter of the Penſioners belonging to Greenwich hoſpital, when a draught was made conſiſting of three diviſions, who were ordered to be in redineſs on the firſt notice to go on board the guard ſhips at their diferent ports.

Dec. 1 Letters from the North, yeſterday, give moſt diſagreeable accounts of the floods; they mention, that the corpſe of the late Duke of Argyle was driven down by the ſtrength of the current and the coachman, horſes and ſeveral perſons attending the corpſe were drowned.

In a certain place on Tueſday laſt, Lord H——x and the Duke of Ri——m——d, had very hot words, in conſequence of an aſſertion of the latter reſpecting the former; no leſs than the lie indirect paſſed between them:——However, the affair was adjuſted before they left the room, by the interpoſition of ſome friends.

Nov. 24 It was ſaid to a miniſter, the other day, "My Lord your enemies will certainly never ceaſe till they have forced you out of power," and it was replied. "And that will certainly never be, my Lord Duke, till they have forced me headlong to the Tower."—"I ſuppoſe your Lordſhip means by Impeachment" "Your Grace may be aſſured I do not mean by remonſtrance." The converſation is a fact; it was before half a ſcore witneſſes.

Dec. 15 When the Spaniſh Commander in Chief after declaring his maſter's meſſage to the Engliſh fort on Falkland Iſland landed his men on ſhore he declared to the Engliſh inhabitants, "That he had orders from his Court to drive them from it three years before but could not find the harbour out, till the Spaniſh frigates diſcovered it" There were ſeveral Engliſh Scotch, and Iriſh ſeamen on board the Spaniſh fleet: ſome of them declared in confidence to their countrymen that it was with the greateſt difficulty the Governor of Buenos Ayres was able to raiſe 500 ſoldiers, and that he compelled merchants and others, who had above 60,000 dollars property, to bear arms in the expedition.

Kilkenny, Nov. 7. Our letters from the county of Tipperary informs us that the White Boys have again made their appearance in that country On Wedneſday night laſt, a party of miſcreants armed, ſuppoſed to amount to 300 or upwards, all mounted, went to the houſe of James Fennin in the ſuburbs of Carrickon Suir, whom they took out of his bed; and being an old infirm man, they threw him acroſs an horſe, naked as he was, and carried him to the Fair-Green of that town, whipping him all the way; they then with ſavage cruelty threw him into the river ſeveral times, and hauled him out immediately. After which they preambulated the whole town, firing ſeveral ſhots as they went; and brought the unhappy man four miles from the town, repeating their barbarity all the way, of which cruel treatment he died next day. We hear that the only reaſon alledged for this unhuman murder is, that the deceaſed had agreed to give 3d. per tail for the tythe potatoes of the Deer Park of Carrick more than the Welders.

The RAMBLER, N° 204.

Nemo tam divos habuit faventes,
Craſtinum ut poſſit ſibi polliceri. Seneca.

SEged Lord of Ethiopia to the inhabitants of the world: To the ſons of Preſumtion, humility and fear; and to the daughters of Sorrow, conſolation and acquieſcence. Thus in the twenty ſeventh year of his reign, ſpoke Seged, the monarch of forty nations, the diſtributer of the waters of the Nile; At length, Seged, thy toils are at an end; thou haſt reconciled diſaffection, thou haſt ſuppreſſed rebellion, thou haſt pacified the jealouſies of thy courtiers, thou haſt chaſed war from thy confines, and haſt erected fortreſſes in the lands of thy enemies. All who have offended thee, tremble in thy preſence; and where ever thy voice is heard, it is obeyed. Thy throne is ſurrounded by armies, numerous as the locuſts of the ſummer, and reſiſtleſs as the blaſts of peſtilence. Thy magazines are ſtored with ammunition, thy treaſuries overflow with the tribute of conquered kingdoms. Plenty waves upon thy fields, and opulence glitters in thy cities. Thy nod is as the earthquake that ſhakes the mountains, and thy ſmile as the dawn of the vernal day. In thy hand is the ſtrength of thouſands, and thy health is the health of millions. Thy palace is gladdened by the ſong of praiſe, and thy path perfumed by the breath of benediction. Thy ſubjects gaze upon thy greatneſs, and think of danger or miſery no more. Why, Seged, wilt not thou partake the bleſſings thou beſtoweſt? why ſhouldſt thou only forbear to rejoice in this general felicity? why ſhould thy heart be heavy with fear, or thy face be clouded with anxiety, when the meaneſt of thoſe who call thee ſovereign gives the day to feſtivity, and the night to peace? At length, Seged, reflect and be wiſe What is the gift of conqueſt but ſafety, or why are riches collected but to ſecure happineſs?"

Seged then ordered his houſe of pleaſure, built in an iſland of the lake Dambia, to be prepared for his reception. "I will at leaſt retire, ſays he, for ten days from tumult and care, from counſels and decrees. Long quiet is not the lot of the governor of nations, but a ceſſation of ten days cannot be denied me. This ſhort interval of happineſs may ſurely be ſecured from the interruption of fear or perplexity, of ſorrow or diſappointments I will exclude all trouble from my abode, and remove from my thoughts whatever may confuſe the harmony of the concert, or abate the ſweetneſs of the banquet. I will fill the whole capacity of my ſoul with enjoyment, and try what it is to live without a wiſh unſatisfied."

In a few days the orders were performed; and Seged haſted to the palace of Dambia, which ſtood in an iſland cultivated only for pleaſure, planted with every flower that ſpreads its colours to the ſun, and every ſhrub that ſheds fragrance in the air. In one part of this extenſive garden, were open walks for excurſions in the morning; in another, thick groves, and ſilent arbours, and bubbling fountains for repoſe at noon. All that could ſolace the ſence, or flatter the fancy; all that induſtry could extort from nature, or wealth furniſh to art; all that conqueſt could ſeize, or beneficence attract, was collected together, and every perception of delight was courted by its object.

Into this delicious region Seged ſummoned all the perſons of his court, who ſeemed eminently qualified to receive or communicate pleaſure. His call was readily obeyed; the young, the fair, the vivacious and the witty, were all in haſte to be ſated with felicity. They ſailed jocund over the lake, which ſeemed to ſmooth its ſurface before them. Their paſſage was cheered with muſic, and their hearts dilated with expectation.

Seged landing herewith his band of pleaſure, determined from that hour to break off all acquaintance with diſcontent, to give his heart for ten days to eaſe and jollity, and then to fall back to the common ſtate of man, and ſuffer his life to be diverſified, as before, with joy and ſorrow.

He immediately entered his chamber, to conſider where he ſhould begin his circle of happineſs He had all the artiſts of delight before him; but knew not whom to call, ſince he could not injoy one, but by delaying the performance of another. He choſe and rejected, he reſolved and changed his reſolution, till his faculties were harraſſed, and his thoughts confuſed; and he returned to the apartment where his preſence was expected, with languid eyes and clouded countenance, and ſpread the infection of uneaſineſs over the whole aſſembly. He obſerved their depreſſion, and was offended; he found his vexation increaſed by thoſe whom he expected to diſſipate and relieve it He retired again to his private chamber, and ſought for conſolation in his own mind. One thought flowed in upon another; a long ſucceſſion of images ſeized his attention; the moments crept imperceptibly away through the gloom of penſiveneſs; till at laſt, having recovered his tranquility, he lifted up his head, and ſaw the lake brightened by the ſetting ſun. "Such ſaid Seged ſighing, is the longeſt day of human exiſtence; before we have learned to uſe it, we find it at an end"

The regret which he felt for the loſs of ſo great a part of his firſt day, took from him all inclination to enjoy the evening; and after having endeavoured, for the ſake of his attendants, to force an air of gaiety, and to excite that mirth which he could not ſhare, he reſolved to defer his hopes of pleaſure to the next morning; and lay down upon his bed, to partake, with labour and poverty, the bleſſing of ſleep.

He roſe early the ſecond morning, and reſolved now to be happy. He therefore fixed upon the gate of the palace an edict, importing, that whoever, during nine days, ſhould appear in the preſence of the King with dejected countenance, or utter any expreſſion of diſcontent or ſorrow, ſhould be driven for ever from the palace of Dambia.

This edict was immediately made known in every chamber of the court, and bower of the gardens Mirth was frighted away; and they who were before dancing in the lawns, or ſinging in the ſhades, were at once engaged in the care of regulating their looks, that Seged might find his will punctually obeyed, and ſee none among them liable to baniſhment.

Seged now met every face ſettled in a ſmile; but a ſmile that diſcovered ſolicitude, timidity, and conſtraint. He accoſted his favourites with familiarity and ſoftneſs; but they were afraid to ſpeak without premeditation, leſt they ſhould be convicted of diſcontent or ſorrow. He propoſed diverſions, to which no objection was made, becauſe objection would have implied uneaſineſs, but they were regarded with cold indifference by the courtiers, who had now no other deſire than to ſignalize themſelves by clamorous exultation. He offered various topics of converſation; but obtained only forced jeſts, and laborious laughter; and, after many attempts to animate them to confidence and alacrity, was obliged to confeſs to himſelf the impotence of command, and reſign another day to grief and diſappointment.

He at laſt relieved his companions from their terrors; and ſhut himſelf up in his chamber, to aſcertain, by ſome different meaſure, the felicity of the ſucceeding days. At length, he threw himſelf on the bed, and cloſed his eyes; but imagined in his ſleep, that his palace and gardens were overwhelmed by an inundation; and waked with all the terrors of a man ſtruggling in the water. He compoſed himſelf again to reſt; but was diſturbed by an imaginary irruption into his kingdom; and ſtriving, as in uſual in dreams, without ability to move, fancied himſelf betrayed to his enemies, and again ſtarted up with horror and indignation.

It was now day; and fear was ſo ſtrongly impreſſed on his mind, that he could ſleep no more. He roſe; but his thoughts were filled with the deluge and the invaſion; nor was he able to diſengage his attention, or mingle with vacancy or eaſe in any amuſement. At length his perturbation, gave way to reaſon, and he reſolved no longer to be harraſſed by a dream; but before this reſolution could be compleatly formed, half the day had elapſed. He felt a new conviction of the uncertainty of all human ſchemes, and could not forbear to bewail the frailty and weakneſs of that being, whoſe quiet could be interruped by vapours of the fancy. He at laſt diſcovered, that his grief and his terrors were equally vain; and that to loſe the preſent in lamenting the paſt, was only to protract a melancholy viſion. But the third day was now declining, and Seged again reſolved to be happy on the morrow.

QUEBEC, January 24

"I arriv'd here laſt Saturday Morning, after much fatigue.——On Thurſday laſt I found the body of Donald Moriſon, in the pariſh of the Bai Du Fevre, about 12 leagues from this Place, who was moſt inhumanly murdered on Sunday Morning the 30th Ult. by one Jean Baptiſte Dufourt, Native of France, by a Blow he gave him on the right Side of his Head, with a Stone of a Pound and Half weight, which ſuck into his Scull.——The Body was carried by the atrocious Murderer, on the ſame Night, into a Wood behind his Houſe, where he inter'd it, about two and an Half feet under Ground: Myſelf and another Perſon apprehended the Murderer, who ſhew'd us where he had conceal'd the Deceas'd's Merchandize, for the Sake of gaining which, and the Caſh the Deceas'd had about him (of which £93-17-0 has been found) he perpetrated his wicked Deſign; he alſo delivered the Stone with which he did the Execution——He is ſent Priſoner to Montreal, where no doubt he will be puniſhed according to his Crime."

Montreal, Jan. 14. The Face of Affairs is now greatly changed——Dancing, Feaſting and Meriment, go ſwingingly round——The greateſt Harmony and the beſt Underſtanding now ſubſiſts between both Sexes——The Black and White mingling together in Nocturnal Aſſemblies form an undiſtinguiſhed Band, where, throwing off the painful Reſtraint of Ceremony, our Youth freely unbend their Minds from the Labour of the Day, by indulging themſelves in innocent and inoffenſive Diverſion.——A ſmart young Lieutenant t'other Day (according to the galant Mode) ſaluted his ſable Partner with, "How do you feel E this Morning, after your laſt night's Fatigue?"—So much for Montreal News.

IF all Things ſucceed, as already decreed,
And immutable Impulſes rule us,
To Preach and to Pray, Is but time thrown away,
And our Teachers do nothing but fool us
And if we by hard Fate, are drove this Way (and that,
As the Carman with Whip drives his Horſes,
Then no Man can ſtray, but muſt go the right Way,
As the Stars that are bound in their Courſes.
But if by Free Will, We can go or ſtand ſtill,
As beſt ſuits each preſent Occaſion ——
Then fill up the Gaſs and conclude him an Aſs,
Who preaches up Predeſtination.

Meſſ. Green & Watſon,

GENTLEMEMEN,

Pleaſe to inſert the following in your papers, and you will oblige ſome of your beſt cuſtomers.

SINCE it is almoſt an unpardonable crime for a phyſician (let his attainments be ever ſo ſmall) not to appear in public, I ſhall make no apology for my ſudden appearance. I think there has been no mention made by any of our aſtronomers this year concerning Comets, but notwithſtanding their ſilence, I have obſerved one paſs through our hemiſphere marked in the Connecticut Courant N°. 315, with D. Adams. Now I ſuppoſe the ingenious will demand what intelligence I have received from it; to which I anſwer, as ſuch kind of bodies are not very luminous ones, ſo it was hard for me who am but little ſkilled in the occult ſcience, to conjure much from it. But if I have any ſkill in gueſſing, its genius is not to ſpread true medical knowledge in the world. But to manopolize ſome parts of the buſineſs of phyſic, by a ſpecious pretence of inventing a new method to cure an aſcitical dropſy, as he pleaſed to call it, which he ſays partly conſiſts in tapping. Now it looks as romantic to me, that he ſhould call this method new, and that it coſt him much ſtudy and deliberation to find out, as it would to tell me that he has encloſed in his head mount Æ*t*na or Veſuvius, ſince it has been many years made notoriouſly plain by a very luminous body.* What the portenſions of ſuch bodies are, I leave for thoſe to determine who are more ſkilled in prognoſtications of this kind. Only would obſerve, the initial letters of its ſubſcription, inſtead of D. A. might be inverted, & would well ſignify Ambitious Deluſion.

On the morning of January 2d. 1767 it was 19 and half Degrees in Extreme Cold, by the Thermometer in this Place, which was generally remarked thro' the Country, as being uncommonly cold. It is ſeldom more than about 16 17, or 18 Degrees in Extreme Cold, as our Thermometer is graduated; and many Winters paſs without its riſing to that Degree of Cold I have not obſerved it to be more than 14 Degrees in Extreme Cold for three Winters paſt. The general State of the Weather this winter is as follows, viz. Somewhere about the 23d of December it was 4 or 5 Degrees in Extreme Cold for two Mornings. Thro' the Month of January it was not once in Extreme Cold. Feb 6th, 4 Degrees in Extreme. 13th 14th. 3 Degrees in Extreme 16th. 2 Degrees in Extreme 19th, 1 Degree Extreme 20th, 11 and half Degrees Extreme. 21ſt it was 21 Degrees in Extreme. 22d, 18 Degrees in Extreme. By a Gentleman from Danbury we are inform'd, That the inhabitants there have lately been under not a little Conſternation from mad-dogs About five weeks ſince a dog in the night run round into ſeveral incloſures in that town, and bit a number of cattle, ſwine and dogs. Ten or twelve days after this, the cattle which were bit, were infected with the diſorder, and run mad. None of them could be made to eat or drink any thing. They diſcovered a wildneſs and fierceneſs in their looks; and ſome of them a diſpoſition to run at every thing which came in their way. They continued an inceſſant lowing (the moſt doleful he ever heard) till they died. Eight cattle and ſome hogs have died in this manner, all of them, as it is thought by bite of this dog, tho' upon ſome there did not appear any external wounds.

A few nights ago another ſtrange dog mad as was ſuppos'd, went through the town and bit a number of hogs poultry &c. He was purſu'd, but made his eſcape. In Bethel, the next pariſh, he bit near 20 cattle, hogs and dogs, and finally went off without being killed

OBSERVATOR, [N°. IV.]

IT is now ſometime ſince I promiſed the public, that in my next, ſome extracts from the Hiſtory of Wiggs ſhould be in inſerted.—— Having publiſhed no paper ſince, am not chargeable with a breach of promiſe; yet can by no means proceed in further publications of this paper, without giving the reaſons for my delay in exhibiting the promiſed ſamples of this moſt rare, and extraordinary work.——In the firſt place then (for I ſhall proceed methodically, gentlemen) method; (pardon the digreſſion) is of the laſt importance in buſineſs, does no harm to a ſenſible diſcourſe, if moderately uſed, and helps greatly to dignify nonſenſe, (eſpecially of the ſolemn kind) you who have never attempted hiſtory, can ſcarcely imagine how laborious the taſk, and how often a writer, let him have made the beſt diſpoſition, and arrangement poſſible of his materials, will be deceiv'd in the term of time the completion will coſt him.—— This is common, where the hiſtorian has every thing ready provided to his hand by thoſe who have gone before him on the ſubject; and conſequently has little more to do, than to make judicious additions, or trimmings off of luxuriances, ſhortning their prolixity, and interſperſing pertinent remarks, or digreſſions by way of embelliſhment.——But, good Sirs, where the ſubject like this, is entirely new, of great importance to the world, where ſcarce any records are extant, and little more than oral tradition, to throw light before the honeſt ſeeker, after the truth, of the facts he relates—there the labour becomes difficult, aye, and arduous, beyond the imagination, not only of thoſe who have never attempted, but even of thoſe, who for the good of their fellow men, and for the enlightening of poſterity, do attempt works of this nature— This I promiſe, by no means to prejudice opinion, in favour of the hiſtory, (which I have the pleaſure to inform the public, is in great forwardneſs, and will to the preſent period, be included in two portable volumes, the firſt of which will be publiſhed, ſome time in September next, probably at the commencement)—— But as excuſe, Firſt for not giving a ſpecimen of the work earlier—Secondly, it is well known, that the preſent clerical, or magiſtratical Wigg, has of late increas'd its ſize, or nucleus with a rapidity, equal'd by nothing among the modern phœnomena, that I recollect, except the Comet that appear'd laſt ſummer.——There is, (I aſk pardon, of all profeſſors of aſtronomy) a greater ſimilarity between a wigg and a comet, both in progreſs and portent, than they have had leiſure to calculate, or perhaps ever to think of at all. ——Of this, I ſhall treat at large in the twentieth chapter of the firſt volume; ſo diſmiſs it here, and obſerve, what the moſt ſhort ſighted of my readers, have I dare ſay anticipated, that the critical obſervation of this, has taken up no ſmall part of my time——It would have been the higheſt injury, to poſterity at leaſt, to have committed a blunder here, as well as a moſt laſting diſgrace to the author, had he been any way deficient, in his diſcription of, and diſſertation on, one ſo remarkable, ſo figurative, ſo emblematical——and his cotemporary.

This hiſtory will be divided into chapters, not intirely to comply with the mode, but for a weightier reaſon; to have the greater conveniency for introducing digreſſions, and phyſical diſſertations, with new and curious remarks, hiſtorical, political, &c.——In the firſt volume among many other important chapters, there will be one taken up with a learned diſſertation on ſpirit and matter, ſhewing their cloſe, and almoſt inſeperable connection, and relation, with the viſible mutual effects they have on each other in every thing, particularly dreſs.

Another with a demonſtration that the local reſidence or ſeat of the ſoul in the human body, ſo long ſearch'd after by the literati of all ages, is in the head—the fixing of which, conſequent upon the preceding diſſertation, opens a very extenſive field for ingenious ſpeculation on the ſubject of the hiſtory——ſeveral chapters will be hiſtorical, in which, their will be exhibited to the ſenſes of mankind, in an appeal to the experience, of different ages, and inconteſtable facts, the higheſt proof of the truth of this ſyſtem——the round formal cut of the hair, the ſtiff ruff and band, of Charles the firſt's day, and the principles, and manners of thoſe times correſpondent, when no ſuch prodigy of dreſs had appear'd as a wigg.

The huge fleecy perriwiggs, long ſwords, high heels, &c. introduced by Charles the ſecond, and the diſſolute morals attendant, will be held up in proper contraſt, and ſuitably obſerv'd on— New England was ſettled without the aſſiſtance of a ſingle wigg —How juſt are the complaints men in years make of the degeneracy of the riſing generation? (Haud creditis poſteri.) Theſe worthy men liv'd to ſee a wigg imported, and introduced even into the pulpit——This high violation, however, to their honor, did not paſs unnoticed, but was properly treated, and ſeparation made as will be ſeen in the tenth chapter ——I ſhould gladly give further hints of the contents of this new hiſtory, but think I have been ſufficiently copious, either for one weeks Obſervator, or a preface, which by the bye, I mean this ſhould be to the work, deſigning no other——as to a dedication, I will not promiſe, ſeveral Barbers of eminence, having already treated with me on the ſubject.

N. B. As the preſent party writers, (many of them at leaſt) have made a ſurpriſing improvement in controverſial writing, in this; that they appear as capable of anſwering a book, without ſeeing, or knowing more of it, than the title page, as if they had thumb'd and thumb'd it over, ever ſo often—Now, I generouſly give them notice, that if any of them, will oblige the world, with either an anſwer, reply, remarks, or even a dialogue on this true hiſtory—I will, provided it be prepared ſeaſonably, have it bound in the ſame volume——which hint improv'd, may be of ſpecial ſervice, as the reader will thereby have the whole pro and con before him at one view.

A QUANTITY OF,

Choice Goſhen PEASE,

To be ſold at the Printing-Office.

From the London Evening Poſt.

In conſequence of the article which appeared in this paper on Tueſday laſt, concerning the report of Gibraltar being taken, the Printer has received the following intereſting letter.

To the Printer of the London Evening Poſt.

SIR,

AN article appeared in your paper (which is now remarkable for falſhood) on Tueſday night laſt. That Gibraltar was taken by the French and Spaniards. And it has been aſſerted, within theſe few days, that Jamaica is, alſo taken by the ſame powers. Certain it is, that Count Chatelet (the French Ambaſſador here) ſet out on Monday laſt, in the dead of the night, for Paris. The middle of the night is not the time for an honeſt man to depart. The wiſh of France to deprive us of Gibraltar, appears by nothing more ſtrong than a fact, which is but little known. Before the invaſion of Minorca laſt war, it was deliberated in the French cabinet. Whether they ſhould attack Gibraltar or Minorca; the former was determined upon, and that, when it was conquered, it ſhould be given to Spain. But Ferdinand, the then King of Spain, refuſed to accept of their propoſal; ſo the French changed their plan, and attacked Minorca. That obſtacle is now removed. The preſent King of Spain is in the ſtricteſt and firmeſt alliance with France by the family compact; and is moreover under the abſolute direction of the French Miniſter. The view of France is now, the ſame that it was then: for a proof of it, we need go no further back than the recent conqueſt of Corſica; which to uſe the remarkable words in the King of Sardinia's laſt memorial, relative to Corſica (that lay for ſeveral weeks at our Court without an anſwer) is, To acquire the Empire of the Mediterranean Sea. Theſe words require no comment. The deſign is hoſtile to England and Ruſſia.

Whatever truth there may be in the reports concerning Gibraltar and Jamaica, it is certain they are both in imminent danger Three times upon his legs, this ſeſſion of Parliament, has Col. Barre told the miniſtry of the weak condition of Gibraltar. But the Miniſtry, who are only the vindictive agents of Carlton Houſe, attend to nothing but the perſecutions of their fellow-ſubjects; and every honeſt man, who has ſpirit enough to OFFER TRUTH TO HIS SOVEREIGN, is to be brought before Lord Mansfield; is to be ruined by an expenſive proſecution, a ſevere impriſonment, and a heavy fine—We ſhall never enjoy domeſtic happineſs, until the venom and influence of Carlton-Houſe are totally removed——We have miniſterial authority, that a black cloud is gathering thick over this country;—for Sir Edward Hawke, when the ſeamen for 1770 were voted, declared, "That let who would be Miniſter next year, he (the next year's Miniſter) would require an addition of ſix thouſand ſeamen."—Yet this Courtly Houſe of Commons, or rather our Carlton Houſe Miniſtry, who are, upon every occaſion, very complaiſant to the French and Spaniards, did not think proper to make an addition of only two thouſand ſeamen this year; which occaſioned Sir Edward Hawke (in the warmth of his chagrin) to make the above declaration. Diſguſted, however, as he muſt be, at finding his opinions ſlighted and contemned, yet he meanly ſubmits to drop the preſent ruin us, corrupt, and. in every reſpect, ſcandalous ſyſtem of government. —Such likewiſe is the influence of the Miniſtry over another aſſembly, that when two patriotic Lords moved for an addreſs to his Majeſty, to deſire he would put his Royal Navy on a more reſpectable footing, which was ſupported by the dignity and eloquence of the Earl of Chatham, yet the Charlton Houſe flat being ſhewn againſt it, the polite majority put a negative on the motion.

Having, I hope, ſhewn you the contempt with which our rulers treat the ſafety of this kingdom, I will give you a ſhort, but true account of the preparations which our enemies are making for war.

At the concluſion of the laſt war, France had not ten ſhips of the line fit for ſervice. She has now ſeventy-two ſhips of the line, beſides frigates, and others which are building. She has at leaſt forty thouſand ſeamen. She has no leſs than ſeventeen thouſand men employed in the Newfoundland fiſhery which is her great nurſery for ſeamen. During the laſt five years only, ſhe has expended no leſs than twenty ſix millions ſterling upon her navy. (The annual revenues of France are eighteen millions: The French Clergy, who uſed to give eight millions to the King now give fourteen millions; and the miniſtry had abridged the King's private expences 400-000l annually; all which ſums they have employed in encreaſing their fleet and army.) There are ſix and twenty ſhips of the line at Breſt; there is a fleet at Toulon; and the Spaniards have a very large fleet at Ferrol. The French have at leaſt eight thouſand men at the Mauritius, ready to ſtrike in the Eaſt Indies. And the French and Spaniards together have, in the Weſt-Indies, five and twenty ſhips of the line, beſides frigates, and at leaſt four and twenty thouſand troops. This force is ſufficient to ſeize the iſland of Jamaica; a conqueſt which the Spaniards have very much at heart.

Theſe are but a few particulars of the preparations made by our enemies to commence hoſtilities. Whether Gibraltar or Jamaica, or both, be taken, a little time will ſhew. Certain it is they are both in the greateſt danger. And Count Chatelet's ſtealing, or running away, in the dead of the night (which is now a notorious fact) naturally leaves a diſagreeable alarm. In the mean time our Miniſters are conſidering of nothing but offering an hecatomb of Engliſhmen, to glut the vengeance of Carlton Houſe. They are neither willing nor capable of providing for the ſafety of Great Britain and her dependencies.——When the danger is become ſo apparent, that it can no longer be concealed from the common eye, then and not till then, will his Majeſty have permiſſion to ſolicit the aſſiſtance of thoſe able and honeſt men, who enjoy the confidence of the people.

Captain Bartlet in a Schooner belonging to Marblehead, left Falmouth in England the 25th of December: Laſt Sabbath Morning in the Snow Storm was ſtranded on Chelſea Rocks: the Veſſel and part of th Cargo loſt: Capt Bartlet was 40 Days between the Banks of Newfoundland and Marblehead.

We are favoured with ſome London Papers to the 20th of December, from which the following Paragraphs are extracted, viz.

St. J A M E S's, December 15.

HIS Majeſty has been pleaſed to appoint the Right Hon. Earl Cornwallis to be Conſtable of the Tower of London, and Lieutenant of and in all the Hamlets of the ſame; and alſo to the Cuſtus Rotulorum of the Tower Hamlets, in the Room of John Lord Berkley of Stratton.

L O N D O N December 18 1770.

The Rev'd Mr Berridge of Everton near Cambridge, preaching on the Death of the Rev. Mr George Whitefield, from the firſt verſe of the twelfth Pſalm, took occaſion to give the following account of Mr. Whitefield's worth in money. "The fifteen hundred pounds of which he died poſſeſſed, was left him in ſeveral ſeparate legacies lately. Eight hundred pounds came to him by the death of his wife: one three hundred one two hundred, and two of one hundred pound, have been bequeathed to him by friends not long deceaſed."

We hear that Lord Chatham will make a motion in a few days in a certain Aſſembly, for immediately introducing an American Repreſentation.

We are informed that matters reſpecting the appointment of perſons to act as Conſuls in the different Colonies, will ſhortly be the ſubject of Conſideration.

The M——y were never in a more critical ſituation than at preſent; they ſeem to be greatly afraid that Gibraltar or Minorca is beſieged, and perhaps in poſſeſſion of our enemies: If this ſhould prove true, they know they muſt make a diſgraceful and precipitate retreat from poſts which the nation will then look upon them by no means qualified to fill.

This day the Admiralty Seſſion ended at the Old Bailey, before Sir Thomas Saliſbury, when Capt. Ferguſon, for the murder of a Negro Boy about 13 years of age, was capitally convicted, and received ſentance to be executed on Thurſday next.

The tryal of John Shoals, for the murder of Allan M'Cay, on board the Black Prince, and for running away with the ſhip, was put off till next Admiralty Seſſions.

L O N D O N, December 20.

The Spaniſh ambaſſador, we hear, has delivered a memorial within theſe few days, demanding why we are making ſuch vigorous preparations at preſent? The anſwer that has been given to him we are told, was two fold, "Firſt to defend our own rights and properties. And Secondly, becauſe we had a right to do as we pleaſed."

Yeſterday the Earl of Sandwich kiſſed his Majeſty's hand on being appointed Secretary of State for the Southern Department, in the room of Lord Weymouth.

The ſame Day Lord Weymouth kiſſed Hands on being appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in the Room of Lord Townſhend.

The ſame day Henry Frederick Thynne kiſſed his Majeſty's hand on being appointed joint Poſt Maſter General, in the room of Lord Sandwich.

It is ſaid that Lord Viſcount Townſhend will be appointed Maſter General of the Ordnance, ſoon after his arrival here from Ireland.

It is ſaid that the true reaſon of L W—— h's Reſignation was owing to his Lordſhip's differing in opinion with the reſt of the M——y, in regard to the negotiation now depending with the court of Spain. He declared that he was in a reſponſible office, he never could conſent to any ſhameful and infamous conceſſions on the part of our nation; and has ſtrongly forewarned whoever may ſucceed him againſt coming into any meaſures ſo derogatory to the honor of Great Britain. Yet are our M——rs ſo fearful of loſing their places and emoluments that it is confidently reported that a French patched work'd peace will be the termination of theſe delays; and it is more to be apprehended as L. N—— h has given out amongſt his friends that he ſhall have no occaſion for a further ſupply and yet diſcharge a conſiderable part of the national debt.

Yeſterday the trial of Mr Robinſon, for publiſhing one of Junius's letters came on at Guildhall. Whilſt the Judge was giving his charge, one of the jury ſtarted up, and cried out You need not ſay any more, for I'm determin'd to acquit him. On which the Attorney General moved to have that man removed from the jury; but this was objected to by Serjeant Glynn, on which the trial was put off till next term.

It is ſaid the B—— of C—— has been offered to take his choice of any place he ſhall think proper, together with appointments for a certain number of his friends; but the propoſal was rejected on account of the latter part of it.

We hear many grand national objects both domeſtic and foreign, have been ſome time before Lord North for conſideration, by which he will be enabled to extricate this nation from its preſent embarraſſments.

A letter from Genoa ſays, "According to our letters from Spain, the Court of Madrid finds the demands of the Britiſh Court too high; and therefore the former begins ſeriouſly of putting herſelf in a condition to enforce the reſolutions of her cabinet."

It was whiſpered, that in order to induce the Spaniards to reſtore Falkland Iſland an equivalent will be offered by Portugal, for which the latter is to have a compenſation from Great-Britain.

The expences for ſupporting his Majeſty's forces in the Plantations for the enſuing year, we are informed, will amount to 479,170l.

S A L E M, March 5.

We hear from Methuen, That Ebenezer Barker, Eſq; a Juſtice of the Peace for this County, on Tueſday Evening laſt, was at the Houſe of Mr. Tyler, in Andover, on an Arbitration; and after finiſhing the Buſineſs, between 9 and 10 o'Clock was about to return Home to his Houſe in Methuen; but it being very ſtormy, and having Merrimack River in his Way to croſs on the Ice, he was perſuaded by one of the Company, who lived in Andover, to accept of a Lodging at his Houſe: Accordingly they ſet off; but on the Way Mr. Barker altered his Mind, and ſaid he muſt go Home; his Companion ſtrongly urged him not to think of it, as the tempeſtuous Weather would probably render it dangerous croſſing the River: But all Perſuaſions being ineffectual, Mr. Barker turned about, and purſued his Way, on Horſe-back, towards the River, in croſſing which a Perſon on Foot was about to accompany him. On entering upon the Ice the Foot Perſon took Hold of Mr. Barker's Horſe's Tail——They proceeded in this Manner not far, when the Perſon on Foot, feeling the Ice give Way, fell upon his Back, and thereby laved himſelf from falling through the Ice. The Horſe having broke quite through, Mr. Barker remained upon his Back, and ſeemed to hold faſt to the Mane. He was repeatedly called upon to throw himſelf off the Horſe's Back upon the Ice, and as often ſaid he could not. In this ſituation he kept gradually ſinking, till he and his Horſe were, by the Current, both carried away under the Ice, and periſhed.

The Storm of Rain, laſt Tueſday Night, occaſioned ſuch remarkable high Freſhets, that the Rivers, Brooks and Ponds, in different Parts of the Country, flowed to an uncommon Height, carrying away many Bridges, Mill-dams, &c whereby a great Number of Perſons have ſuſtained conſiderable Damage.

Capt. Alcock, from St. Euſtatia, which he left the 1ſt of February, and arrived here laſt Week, informs, That Capt. Joſeph Cordis, of Boſton was arrived at Dominica, with the loſs of his Deck Load: That Capt George Bartlet of Charleſtown, had loſt his Main Mainmaſt, and was arrived at Barbados: That Capt Gill of Halifax, after being blown off the Coaſt and loſing his Jibb and Foreſail, arrived at Dominica: That Capt Green, of Marblehead, from Cadiz, was blown off this Coaſt, broke his Rudder Irons, and was arrived at Barbados: And that Capt John White, of this Place, was arrived at St. Euſtatia, with the Loſs of his Mainmaſt.

Capt Mugford, in a Schooner of 90 Tons from Marblehead to St Euſtatia, was caſt away on Barbuda, Veſſel and Cargo loſt, but the Men ſaved.

Capt John Hodges, jun and Mr. Ebenezer Tozar, his Mate, both of this Place, on the Paſſage from hence to the Weſt Indies, were waſhed overboard, and both drowned. The Veſſel was arrived at Dominico before Capt. Alcock left 'Statia.

One of Capt. Alcock's Hands accidentally fell overboard on the Paſſage home, and was drowned.

Capt. Waters arrived here laſt Week from St. Euſtatia, which Place he left the 2d of February, and informs, that Capt. Porter, in a Veſſel from Cape Perſae, bound to Newbury-Port, was arrived at St. Euſtatia before he failed, having been blown of this Coaſt: That Capt. Boden of Marblehead was alſo arrived there, diſmaſted, and had loſt one of his men on the Paſſage, who was waſhed overboard by a Sea; That ſeveral Veſſels from New-London, &c. was alſo arrived there, diſmaſted.

Capt. Waters further informs, that a little before he failed, a Letter was received at 'Statia from Martinico, giving an Account of the arrival of a Veſſel in 5 Weeks from France, with Intelligence that Gibraltar was taken by the Spaniards. But this News gained little credit at 'Statia.

The News of great Preparations for War, making by the French and Spaniards in the Weſt Indies, is confirmed by the Veſſels arrived here from St. Euſtatia.

A Shock of an Earthquake was felt in this Town, Marblehead, &c. laſt Sunday Morning. The Shaking was but juſt perceptible.

B O S T O N, March 7

The Fourth Day of April next is appointed by Authority as a Day of Faſting and Prayer throughout this Province.

We hear that a ſmall Coaſting Veſſel, ſuppoſed to belong to Newbury Port, was caſt away in the late Storm at Cape-Ann, and all the People periſhed, one of the Men was found froze to Death in the Snow.

Tueſday laſt being the Anniverſary of the melancholy Fifth of March, 1770, when Meſſi. Gray, Maverick, Caldwell, Carr and Attucks, were killed by a Party of Soldiers in King-ſtreet: The Bells of the ſeveral Congregational Meeting-houſes, were tolled from XII o'clock at Noon till I.——In the Evening there was a very ſtriking Exhibition at the Houſe of Mr. Paul Revere, fronting the Old North Square, ſo called:—At one of the Chamber Windows was the Appearance of the Ghoſt of Chriſtopher Seider, with one of his Fingers in the Wound, endeavouring to ſtop the Blood iſſuing therefrom; near him his Friends weeping;——at a ſmall diſtance a monumental Pyramid, with his Name on the Top, and the Names of thoſe killed on the 5th of March round the Baſe: Underneath the following Lines.

Seiders pale Ghoſt freſh bleeding ſtands,
And Vengeance for his Death demands.

In the next Window were repreſented the Soldiers drawn up, firing at the People aſſembled before them—the Dead on the Ground—and the Wounded falling, with the Blood running in Streams from their Wounds. Over which was wrote Foul Play. In the third Window was the Figure of a Woman, repreſenting America, ſitting on the Stump of a Tree, with a Staff in her Hand and the Cap of Liberty on the Top thereof.——one Foot on the head of a Grenadier lying proſtrate.——Her Finger pointing to the Tragedy.

The whole was ſo well executed that the Spectators, which amounted to ſome thouſands, were ſtruck with ſolemn Silence, and their Countenances covered with a melancholy Gloom. At Nine o'clock the Bells tolled a doleful Peal, until ten, when the Exhibition was withdrawn, and the People all retired to their reſpective Habitations.

NEW-YORK, February 28

Laſt Friday Evening, a Highway Robbery was commited between New Rochelle and Maroneck, on a poor Oyſterman, whoſe Boat was laid up by the Ice, and who was returning to his Family. He ſtopt at a Tavern in New-Rochelle where he got a little Refreſhment and proceeded,——but he had not travelled far before he was overtaken by three Men and a woman whom he recollected to have left drinking at the Tavern, and before whom, in paying the Reckoning, he had exhibited the Strength of his Pockets, which conſiſted of between Seven and eight Dollars. They joined Company, and travelled together till they came to a convenient Spot to perpetrate their Deſign, when one of the Men demanded his Money, and threatened to blow out his Brains upon his not immediately complying, put his Hand in his Boſom as feeling for a Piſtol. The poor man terrified at his repeated Threats, dropped his Money on the Ground, when the wretch inſiſted on his picking it up and putting it into his Hand, damning him for a Raſcal, did he think he would ſtoop for his Money! He ſtripped him of a Shirt and Handkerchief and what Money he had about him, and then made off—The Oyſterman proceeded to the next Houſe, where getting Aſſiſtance, he perſued them, overtook two of the Men and the woman who were carried before a Juſtice of the Peace and committed to Goal at the White Plains——One of the Men has turned King's Evidence.

NEW HAVEN, March 8.

Laſt Sunday arrived here, in 32 Days from the Weſt-Indies, the Brig Frederick, Francis Brown Maſter. By Capt. Brown we are informed of a violent Gale of Wind, which happened on the 25th of December laſt, near the latitude of 26 and of the Damage that ſeveral veſſels ſuſtained thereby, viz.——Capt Timothy Ward, in the Sloop Vine, belonging to Killigworth, as he was ſcudding, over-ſet, by which Accident he loſt his Mate and five Hands, himſelf, and two others were ſaved, and taken off the Wreck two Days after, by a Ship belonging to New-Hampſhire, and carried into Antigua. Capt. Ward came Paſſenger in Capt Brown. The Schooner Dolphin, belonging to Connecticut River, met the ſame Fate, the Capt. whoſe name was Jonathan Wickham the Mate, Samuel Drake, of Hartford, and all the Hands, except an Indian, were loſt. The Indian remained on the Wreck, five Days, when he was taken up by Capt. Schemerhorn of New York, and carried into Euſtatia. Capt. Stilman from New London, in the Sloop Garland, loſt all his ſtock, off Deck, but 6 Horſes, and arrived at Antigua. Capt. Henry Billings of Norwich, was diſmaſted, and loſt all his Stock except 5 Horſes, and was arrived at Euſtatia. Capt. Wait Goodrich, in a Schooner, was ſpoke in the Lat. of the Iſlands, having loſt his Foremaſt, and 44 Horſes. Capt. Andrew Perkins, in a Brig from Norwich, loſt one of his Hands, and 28 Horſes; arrived at Granada. Capt. Chriſtopher Hews, of this Port, loſt 5 or 6 Horſes, and was very leaky when he arrived in the Weſt-Indies.

HARTFORD March 12.

St. Euſtatia, January 28, 1771.

S I R,

"WE arrived at St. Vincents, Dec. 28th, after 26 days paſſage, from thence we arrived here after ſix days paſſage, all well on board. We have daily accounts of our northward veſſels being loſt and diſmaſted. Capt. Ward, from Guilford, loſt veſſel and cargo and all the people except himſelf and two hands, which were taken up in his boat. Capt. Wickham from Middletown, loſt his veſſel and cargo, and all periſhed except an Indian fellow, taken from the wreck after being there five days. He gives us the following account, about ſunſet the gale came on at N. E. and blew very freſh, and about twelve at night ſhe overſet, the Capt. and one Royce were at helm, and went off the firſt ſea, Mr. Samuel Drake of Hartford, who, the Indian ſays, was mate of the veſſel, went after them in about ten minutes, and the reſt ſhared the ſame fate, ſoon after Capt. Allen Stilman of Wethersfield diſmaſted and loſt his horſes, his brother Samuel Stilman, ſhared the ſame fate, Capt. Billins from Norwich diſmaſted and loſt his horſes, the ſloop that brought in the aforementioned Indian, loſt her bowſprit, a brigg and ſchooner juſt came to an anchor, both loſt their main maſts, many others have ſhared the ſame fate. War is hourly expected here, there are two French veſſels lying in this harbour, who have got their commiſſions on board for privateers, their owners have given large ſecurities that they ſhall not commit any hoſtilities until war is abſolutely declared,

At Barbadoes, the Capts. Williams, Bill, Buckland, Groſs, Seymour, Robards, Smith, Olcott and Butler——And at St. Chriſtophers, the Capts. Caldwell and Burnham, all from N. London.

POET'S CORNER.

An ELEGY,

Compoſed on hearing of the ſudden and ſurpriſing Death of Mrs RHODA LEE, the amiable Conſort of JARED LEE, Eſq; of Farmington.

MUST every human excellence be made,
A ſacrifice, a trophy to death's ſhade?
Muſt death the tyrant, ſweep us off the ſtage,
Without diſtinction or of ſex or age?
By ſad experience we find it ſo,
But will death ſoon make me a victim? No,
Saith the profane, I may reſign my breath
Some ages hence, e'er then prepar'd for death,
I ſhall be free from care and trouble ſoon,
Now there are other duties muſt be done,
I cannot yet, a ſaviour's call attend,
More bliſs I find, in making man my friend:
Not ſo the good, who all but ſuch deſpiſe,
As may with them aſcend above the ſkies,
And intimate with none but whom they ought,
And kind to all, as wiſe Enoch taught,
Each generous ſentiment, her boſom fill'd,
The beſt inſtructions from her lips diſtill'd,
Examples, precepts, there were join'd in one,
Who vies, the beſt purſue, all evil ſhun,
And like her, be prepar'd for ſudden fate,
Belov'd in this, and bleſt in future ſtate;
This moment now is your's, but fleets in haſte,
'Tis gone! improve the next! perhaps the laſt!

EPITAPH.

There fled unſhaken virtue, and each kind
Of grace attractive that adorns the mind.

The WISH.

WOuld Heaven but grant me my deſire,
A ſmall requeſt I would require,
A decent houſe and a good fire.
A pot of beer to give a friend,
And wealth enough for to extend
My charity to the abject poor,
And drive penury from my door.
But join to this a loving wife,
A ſtranger to conjugal ſtrife,
My happineſs would be compleat,
I'd envy not the rich and great,
But ſpend my days exempt from care,
Or anxious thought, of 'proaching war,
And quiet ſleep under my roof,
And aſk no more——think this enough.

The RAMBLER, No. 205.

—Volat ambiguis
Mobilis alis hora, nec ulli
Præſtat velox fortuna fidem. Sen.

ON the fourth morning, Seged roſe early, refreſhed with ſleep, vigorous with health, and eager with expectation. He entered the garden attended by the princes and ladies of his court; and ſeeing nothing about him but airy chearfulneſs, he began to ſay to his heart, "This day ſhall be a day of pleaſure." The ſun played upon the water, the birds warbled in the groves, the gales quivered among the branches. He roved from walk to walk as chance directed him; and ſometimes heard the virgins ſinging in the ſhade; ſometimes mingled with the dancers on the lawn; ſometimes let looſe his imagination in flights of merriment; and ſometimes uttered grave reflections and ſententious maxims, and feaſted on the admiration with which they were received.

Thus the day rolled on without any accident of vexation, or intruſion of melancholy thoughts. All that beheld him, caught gladneſs from his looks; and the ſight of happineſs, conferred by himſelf, filled his heart with ſatisfaction. But having paſſed three hours in this harmleſs luxury, he was alarmed on a ſudden by an univerſal ſcream among the women; and turning back ſaw the whole aſſembly flying in confuſion. A young crocodile had riſen out of the lake, and was ranging the garden in wantonneſs or hunger. Seged beheld him with indignation, as a diſturber of his felicity, and chaſed him back into the lake; but could not perſuade his retinue to ſtay in the ſame place, or free their hearts from the terror which had ſeized upon them. The princeſſes incloſed themſelves in the palace, and could yet ſcarcely believe themſelves in ſafety. Every attention was fixed upon the late danger and eſcape, and no mind was any longer at leiſure for gay ſallies or careleſs prattle.

Seged had now no other employment than to contemplate the innumerable caſualties which lie in ambuſh on every ſide to intercept the happineſs of man, and break in upon the hour of delight and tranquillity. He had, however, the conſolation of thinking, that he had not been now diſappointed by his own fault; and that the accident which had blaſted the hopes of the day, might eaſily be prevented by future caution.

That he might provide for the pleaſure of the next morning he reſolved to repeal his penal edict; for he had already found, that diſcontent and melancholy were not to be frighted away by the threats of authority, that power could not regulate the preceptions, and that pleaſure would only reſide where ſhe was exempted from controul. He therefore invited all the companions of his retreat to unbounded pleaſantry, by propoſing prizes for thoſe who ſhould on the following day diſtinguiſh themſelves by any feſtive performances; and the tables of the antichamber were covered with gold and pearls, and robes and garlands, decreed the rewards of thoſe who could refine elegance or heighten pleaſure.

At this diſplay of riches every eye immediately ſparkled and every tongue was buſied in celebrating the bounty and magnificence of the Emperor. But when Seged entered in expectation of uncommon entertainment from univerſal emulation, he found, that any paſſion too ſtrongly agitated, puts an end to that tranquillity which is neceſſary to gaiety; and that the mind that is to be moved by the gentle ventilations of mirth, muſt be firſt ſmoothed by a total calm. Whatever we ardently wiſh to gain, we muſt in the ſame degree be afraid to loſe, and fear and pleaſure cannot dwell together.

All was now care and ſolicitude. Nothing was done or ſpoken but with ſo viſible an endeavour at perfection, as always failed to delight, though it ſometimes forced admiration; and Seged could not but obſerve with ſorrow, that his prizes had more influence than himſelf. As the evening approached, the conteſt grew more earneſt; and thoſe who could not but allow themſelves excelled, began to diſcover the malignity of defeat, firſt by angry glances, and at laſt by contemptuous murmurs. Seged likewiſe ſhared in the anxiety of the day: for conſidering himſelf as obliged to diſtribute with exact juſtice the prizes which had been ſo zealouſly ſought he durſt never remit his attention; but paſſed his time in balancing different kinds of merit, and adjuſting the claims of all the competitors.

At laſt, knowing, that no exactneſs could ſatisfy thoſe whoſe hopes he ſhould diſappoint, and thinking, that, on the day ſet apart for happineſs, it would be cruel to oppreſs any heart with ſorrow, he declared they had all pleaſed him alike, and diſmiſſed all with preſents of equal value.

Seged ſaw his caution had not been able to avoid offence. They who had believed themſelves ſecure of the higheſt prizes, were not pleaſed to be levelled with the croud: and tho' by the liberality of the King, they received more than his promiſe had intitled them to expect, they departed unſatisfied; becauſe they were honoured with no diſtinction, and wanted an opportunity to triumph in the mortification of their opponents. "Behold here, ſaid Seged, the condition of him who places his happineſs in the happineſs of others." He then retired to meditate, while the reſt were repining at his diſtributions, and ſaw the fifth ſun go down in diſcontent.

The next dawn renewed his reſolution to be happy. But having now learned how little he could effect by any ſettled ſcheme or preparatory meaſures, he thought it beſt to give up one day entirely to chance, and left every one to pleaſe and be pleaſed his own way.

This relaxation of regularity diffuſed a general complacence through the whole court; and the Emperor imagined, that he had at laſt found the ſecret of obtaining an interval of felicity. But as he was roving in this careleſs aſſembly with equal careleſſneſs, he overheard one of his courtiers in a cloſe arbour murmuring to himſelf, "What merit has Seged above us that we ſhould thus fear and obey him; a man whom, whatever he may have formerly performed, his luxury now ſhews to have the ſame weakneſs with ourſelves?" This charge affected him the more, as it was uttered by one whom he had always obſerved among the moſt abject of his flatterers. At firſt his indignation prompted him to ſeverity; but reflecting, that what was ſpoken without intention to be heard, was to be conſidered only as thought, and was perhaps but the ſudden burſt of caſual and temporary vexation, he only invented ſome decent pretence to ſend him away, that his retreat might not be tainted with the breath of envy; and, after the ſtruggle of deliberation was paſt, and all deſire of revenge utterly ſuppreſſed, paſſed the evening, not only with tranquillity, but triumph, though none but himſelf was conſcious of the victory.

The remembrance of this clemency cheered the beginning of the ſeventh day; and nothing happened to diſturb the pleaſure of Seged, till, looking on the tree that ſhaded him, he recollected, that under a tree of the ſame kind he had paſſed the night after his defeat in the kingdom of Goiama. The reflection on his loſs, his diſhonour, and the miſeries which his ſubjects ſuffered from the invader filled him with ſadneſs. At laſt he ſhook off the weight of ſorrow, and began to ſolace himſelf with his uſual pleaſures; when his tranquillity was again diſturbed by jealouſies which the late conteſt for the prizes had produced, and which, having in vain tried to pacify them, by perſuaſion, he was forced to ſilence by command.

On the eighth morning, Seged was awakened early by an unuſual hurry in the apartments; and inquiring the cauſe, was told, that the Princes Baikis was ſeized with ſickneſs. He roſe; and calling the phyſicians, found that they had little hope of her recovery. Here was an end of jollity. All his thoughts were now upon his daughter; whoſe eyes he cloſed on the third day.

Such were the days which Seged of Ethiopia had appropriated to a ſhort reſpiration from the fatigues of war, and the cares of government. This narrative he has bequeathed to future generations, that no man may imagine the happineſs of a day in his own power.

"Qui tranſtulit, ſuſtinet"
——Motto of Connecticut Arms.

WHO firſt introduced heraldry is undetermined by the literati, and may properly remain to be agitated by ingenious ſpeculatiſts, with the many queſtions in the ſolution of which, the world are no way intereſted—whilſt the deſign and uſe of the invention is obvious to all.——Heraldry if not ſo antient, undoubtedly took its riſe from the Egyptian hieroglyphicks, and has already, in many inſtances undergone the ſame fate.——The Egyptians ſinking into luxury and effeminacy, ignorance and ſuperſtition enſued, as their natural conſequence, and finally prevailed to that degree, that loſing ſight of the thing ſignified, by the hieroglyphic, or ſymbol——they reverenced, and adored, the ſenſible object, though often of the meaneſt order of reptiles, or even vegitables.—the moderns, (many of them) are utterly unable to decypher the arms they bear, or give to the world the leaſt intelligible account of their original deſign, or how they at firſt came intituled to them, tho' at the ſame time if they do not reverence and adore they at leaſt conſider them as their chief diſtinction and ornament.——This is leſs ſurpriſing in thoſe antient coats, the owners of which, have undergone all the viciſſitudes of affluence and penury, honor and infamy; in the many centuries elapſed, ſince their firſt inſtitution, than in thoſe of later date. The Arms of Connecticut, referred to, are but little more than a century ſtanding, and though for ingenuity, delicacy, and at the ſame time, manly piety, in their deſign and expreſſion, they equal, if not exceed any; yet they have been ſo little attended to, that I preſume, they are at this day miſunderſtood, or wholly diſregarded by the greater part of the colony.—I am far from mentioning this with the aſperity of cenſure, on the greater part of my countrymen, who from their ſituation and circumſtances in life, have had their attention neceſſarily directed, to the uſeful, rather than the ſpeculative——but in part, to juſtify myſelf, from the charge of officiouſneſs, in explaining the deſign of theſe arms, and holding up to view, at once the good taſte and undiſſembled piety, of the worthy founders of this colony, in this public teſtimonial.——True greatneſs of ſoul, and ſincere virtue, as well as abjectneſs of ſpirit, and hypocriſy are oftner diſcouraged, from the minute actions, and to appearance caſual expreſſions of men, than from their glaring atchievments in the field; or ſtudied harangues, in Temple or Senate.——Every one knows theſe arms, are nothing more, than three vines laden with cluſters, and properly ſupported, with this motto——Qui tranſtulit ſuſtinet, "He who tranſplanted it hither, will ſupport, or ſuſtain."

A vine was very early in the world, and very naturally made the emblem of fruitfulneſs——when the meſſengers returned from ſpying out the land of Canaan, to give the moſt favourable idea of the country, they brought back cluſters of grapes, ſo large and weighty, that it is ſaid, they bear them on a ſtaff between two——It is a common obſervation of ingenious travellers, that no country appears more naturally adapted, to the culture of the vine, than America, and in evidence, appeal to the vines every where growing ſpontaneouſly; and producing though wild, a grape of an agreeable flavor and richneſs, even without the aid of cultivation; and from this, ſome have ſuppoſed, the vines to theſe arms, to have a ſignificant reference either to the fruitfulneſs of the country, or the probability of its being a wine colony—were either ſuppoſition true, it would reflect no diſhonor, on the ingenuity of the firſt founders——but the leaſt attention to the motto will convince every one, both are ſhort, as well as wide of the original deſign.——Whoever would carefully, and candidly enter into the hiſtory of theſe times, ought previouſly to be informed that a certain ſcriptural ſtyle and alluſion expreſſion and manners, ran through, and gives the colour and complexion to the whole of that early period.——In the new teſtament the church is frequently deſcribed under the ſimilitude of a vine——The clergy, and pious of that day, as well as many ſince uſed in prayer this expreſſion, "this vine which thine own right hand hath planted."——A vine though fruitful, is weak without ſupport. The firſt planters of this colony had for their objects civil and religious liberty——for this they relinquiſhed what, at preſent I am unable to deſcribe, or eſtimate; at this pure ſhrine they made a ſacrifice, which unſupported by facts, well atteſted, might juſtly paſs as incredible. And encountered what equals the antient Romantic heroiſm, realized—in this light, what an affiance on, what an appeal to, or what a ſacred claim, and challenge, do they here in their then weak unprotected, and diſtreſs'd ſituation make on the almighty aid? "Thou! who haſt tranſported, or tranſplanted us, this vine will ſupport it, will be its ſtay, ſhelter and defence——I have exceeded the bounds of a ſingle paper, but am very ſhort, of exhauſting the ſubject——many pages might I am ſenſible be wrote on it to advantage in a moral way—for myſelf, when I review the extraordinary ſeries of events in which the Almighty protection of heaven has been viſibly exerted in our favour; from that early period down to the preſent——a ſeries of events though not the moſt full of noiſe, and bluſter yet of pith, and moment equal to any——I can but conſider my motto, as a kind of ſacred prophecy fulfilled, and fulfilling; on which as I have acted the part of an expoſitor, it is time to cloſe in the ſtile of a ſermon, and ſay, "GOD grant we may never diſhonor "thoſe whom we call fathers."

NEWBERN, North-Carolina, Dec. 7, 1770.

At the Opening of the General Aſſembly of this Province on Wedneſday laſt, after the Choice and Acceptance of the Speaker, His Excellency Governor Tryon made the following SPEECH, viz.

Gentlemen of His Majeſty's Honorable COUNCIL, Mr. SPEAKER, and Gentlemen of the HOUSE of ASSEMBLY.

NOTHING can be more ſeaſonable or more grateful to me than my meeting you at this time, in ſo full Aſſembly, while objects the moſt intereſting to this country wait your deliberations. On this occaſion I purpoſe to declare my mind with much freedom, conſidering that I am now ſpeaking to every freeholder in the province, through their Repreſentatives, on matters of the higheſt importance to them.

Setting aſide therefore every leſſer conſideration for the preſent I ſhall confine myſelf chiefly to theſe four points, which in the moſt urgent manner, I offer for your conſideration.

The abuſes in the conduct of the public funds, the general complaints againſt public offices and officers; the evils ariſing from the circulation of counterfeit money; and the injuries offered to his Majeſty's government at and ſince the laſt Hillſborough Superior Court.

The papers and depoſitions I have received reſpecting the late outrages at Hillſborough, which I ſhall lay before you, are the proceedings of a ſeditious mob. Men, who, regardleſs of the Royal clemency for former treſpaſſes and in open contempt of the admonition given them by a reſolve of your Houſe laſt ſeſſion, have (accompanied with circumſtances the moſt inſolent and inhuman) torn down juſtice from her tribunal, and renounced all legiſlative authority. Were theſe men, who have thus broken through all the bounds of human ſociety and trampled under foot the laws of their country would be deplorable indeed. Social liberty muſt then yield to brutal licentiouſneſs, and the honeſt of all conditions become a prey to the wicked. I am told theſe inſurgents are determined in the proſecution of their profligate deſigns. Admit it to be ſo; government has already ſhewn itſelf able to controul them and when armed with your manly determinations ſufficient force, under the providence of God, effectually to ſuppreſs theſe dangerous commotions to puniſh the ringleaders and to bring back the deluded to the duty of good citizens and good ſubjects. For the attainment of theſe deſirable ends I am bound in juſtice and duty to recommend to you to provide for the raiſing a ſufficient body of men, under the rules and diſcipline of war to march into the ſettlements of theſe inſurgents, in order to aid and protect the magiſtrates and civil officers in the execution of thoſe laws now exiſting or ſuch others as may at this critical juncture be found expedient for reſtoring the public tranquility of the whole colony.

You have here my unreſerved ſentiments of the preſent ſtate of your public affairs. I have much to wiſh they may penetrate into your hearts with the ſame warmth of ſenſibility that they flow from mine; and that you, with a becoming ſpirit, ſtand forth to vindicate the inſulted honor and dignity of his Majeſty's ſacred perſon and goverement, in juſtice to your own violated rights, and in humanity to the duties you owe your much injured countrymen, who, from the very nature and obligation of civil ſociety claim from the legiſlature full ſecurity and protection in their perſons and properties. And I have alſo much to wiſh you may wipe away the ſtain thrown, by theſe deluded people and their ſeditious ringleaders upon an adminiſtration that has been unwearied in every poſſible attention towards the advancement of the proſperity and perfection of this community.

I gladly embrace this opportunity offered me of making my grateful acknowledgments to the country for their gift of this very elegant and noble ſtructure, for the reſidence of myſelf and ſucceſſors in adminiſtration. A Palace, that is a public ornament and credit to the coſony, as well as an honor to Britiſh America. A conſtruction, I am perſuaded, from the ſtrength and choice of its materials, the integrity, diligence, and ability, of the architect, with the ſkill of the ſeveral artificers employed, will remain a laſting monument of the liberality of this country. I have the ſatisfaction to acquaint you the money already voted, and which has been taken up, will be ſufficient to carry the plan into execution, and that too within a few months. The diſburſements for carrying on this work are ready to be laid before you; whenever you have leiſure to inſpect them.

Gentlemen of the HOUSE of ASSEMBLY,

I am to apply to you for a continuance of the preſent eſtabliſhment of Fort Johnſton, and to make immediate Proviſion of powder and lead, for his Majeſty's ſervice and the public ſafety. Let us not longer remain unprovided with articles ſo eſſential to our defence, againſt the attempts of a foreign enemy, who may poſſibly at this day be in a ſtate of war with Great-Britain, the guardian of our commerce, and protector from hoſtile invaſion.

I am directed to lay before you a memorial from ſome merchants in London, to one of his Majeſty's Secretaries of State, reſpecting the packing and ſhipping of naval ſtores to the Mother country; therefore I hope you will give due attention to the regulations recommended in the ſame.

If theſe times had permitted, I ſhould have recommended to you to eſtabliſh a public ſeminary in ſome part of the back country of this colony, for the education of youth. An inſtitution of this ſort, and in thoſe parts, would be very beneficial, by inſtructing the riſing generation in the principles of religion and virtue, in that healthy and fertile climate. Poſſibly you may not looſe ſight of this object, on a more favourable opportunity.

Gentlemen of his Majeſty's Honourable COUNCIL, Mr. SPEAKER, and Gentlemen of the HOUSE of ASSEMBLY,

It is a pleaſing conſideration to me to reflect I have been happy in the favourable attention of this country. I confeſs I feel an ardent deſire to experience the like teſtimony at this important criſis, and that we may with candour, ſincerity, and firmneſs, co operate in meaſures for the public good. Believe me the cauſe before us is not the cauſe of an individual, or an oppoſition merely to adminiſtration, but to the conſtitution. If therefore theſe ſeditions are not ſpeedily ſuppreſſed, they may ſpread their contagion through the continent, and diſturb the internal tranquility of every colony in his Majeſty's American dominions. Suffer not then the malicious humours of dark deſigning malice, nor the intrigues of ſedition, to turn us from the road of juſtice, or ſtagger us in the path honor. Theſe are the invaluable rights of honeſt men, and lead to virtues, which caſt the brighteſt luſtre on acts of legiſlation.

I ſhall detain you no longer than to inform you, as his Majeſty has been graciouſly pleaſed to indulge me with leave of abſence from this government, I ſhall eſteem myſelf honourably rewarded for my invariable endeavours to diſcharge the duties of my ſtation, in promoting the welfare of this province, if I have the happineſs on my return to England, to give my Royal maſter the aſſurance, that by your wiſdom and vigour, I have been enabled to give ſtability, and a permanent regularity to the interior police of this country, and to reſtore among you the bleſſings of peace.

The Council and Houſe of Aſſembly in their reſpective humble Addreſſes to him, acknowledge the Importance of thoſe objects recomeneded to them by his Excellency, and expreſs their indignation at the Outrages committed at Hillsborough. They concur with the Governor in his ſentiments with reſpect to the Situation of their public Affairs: The Council concluded their Addreſs as follows:

Your Excellency's intended abſence from this Government, by leave from his Majeſty, would be more unfavorable to our wiſhes, if we did not hope it would be attended with the perfect re-eſtabliſhment of your health; but however providence may diſpoſe of you, Sir, we ſhall always retain the moſt grateful remembrance both of your public and private virtues, and we ſhall ever moſt chearfully bear teſtimony that your Excellency has omitted no part of the duties of your ſtation to render ſtable and permanent the peace and good order of this country. And from hence we have the ſureſt confidence that your Excellency will receive from his Majeſty that approbation which he ever beſtows on good and virtuous actions.

His Excellency in Anſwer to the Council ſays, That he ſhall take a ſenſible plaſure, on every proper occaſion, to acknowledge that much of the ſucceſs of his public endeavours has been owing to their counſel and advice.

[The Aſſembly's Addreſs concludes thus.] Your approaching departure from your government is a circumſtance truly detrimental to the intereſts of this province, and is juſtly lamented. It is a misfortune peculiar to this country, that as ſoon as its Governor is become acquainted with its conſtitution, and the temper of its inhabitants, he is by ſome ill fated means or other, removed from us. Nothing, Sir, on this affecting occaſion, can afford us conſolation, but a firm alliance that the well known benevolence of your diſpoſition, and friendly concern for the welfare of mankind, will diſpoſe you to uſe that influence your merit and ſtation juſtly intitled you to, in favour of the conſtitutional liberties of North-America in general, and the intereſts of this province in particular.—Your ſteady and uniform endeavours to render every ſervice to this country, have a juſt claim to the warmeſt return of gratitude and reſpect; and whitherſoever you may go, you have the united and unfeigned wiſhes of this people for the peace and happineſs of yourſelf and family.

RICHARD CASWEL, Speaker.

To which his Excellency was pleaſed to return the following ANSWER.

Mr. SPEAKER, and Gentlemen of the HOUSE of ASSEMBLY,

I THANK you for your truly loyal, ſpirited, and affectionate addreſs. The highly honorable teſtimonies you give me, of your approbation, of the ſeveral matters I have offered for your conſideration, with your reſolution to purſue vigorous and deciſive meaſures in ſupport of government, give new life to my hopes, and reanimate my zeal for your ſervice.—You cannot too much cheriſh and cultivate the liberal ſentiments you have at this juncture embraced; ſentiments nobly generous towards our King and country, and moſt honourable to yourſelves.

I receive with ſenſations of gratitude and eſteem the aſſurance you give me of the unfeigned wiſhes of the people of this province, for the felicity of my family. Though many powerful conſiderations require my return to England, you may reſt in confidence, that in whatever circumſtances I may be placed, or whatever part of his Majeſty's dominions may be my reſidence, I ſhall be happy to take part, as far as the narrow ſphere of my influence may reach, in favour of the true liberties of his Majeſty's ſubjects in America, and the peculiar intereſts of this province. Neither time nor diſtance can efface from my mind the juſt ſenſe of the obligation I owe you for your favourable opinion of my public ſervices, and aſſurances of ſupport againſt the ſecret and open abetters of the inſurgents.

That very elegant and noble ſtructure the PALACE, which has been erected here by this province, for the reſidence of his Excellency the governor, and his ſucceſſors in office, being now very near compleatly finiſhed; the opening of the ſame, together with the King's birth day, were celebrated here on Wedneſday laſt: At noon a royal ſalute was fired from the battery, and in the evening his Excellency gave a very grand and noble entertainment and ball at the Palace, at which were preſent the hon. his Majeſty's Council of this province, the Houſe of Aſſembly, a very great number of Gentlemen and Ladies from different parts of the Country, and the principal Gentlemen and inhabitants of this town. About eight in the evening the company were entertained with a very grand & ſurprizing exhibition of fire works, which were played off in the back yard of the Palace, a bonfire was alſo lighted up, and great plenty of liquor given to the populace.

BOSTON, March 14.

Laſt Friday arrived here the Ship Boſcawen, Capt. Robſon, and the Ship Marquis of Rockingham, Capt. Whitewood from LONDON, by whom we have the following Advices to January 4th.

LONDON, Dec. 15.

WE are aſſured, that in caſe of a War, Sir Francis Bernard will be appointed to a very conſiderable Poſt in North America.

Dec 15. It is whiſpered that the command of the Britiſh Army is intended to be offered to Prince Ferdinand.

It has been propoſed in parliament to augment the land forces in Ireland with the Roman Catholick ſubjects, of that kingdom, under certain reſtrictions, and which will take place ſhould our preſent negociations with Spain terminate in a war.

Dec 16 It was ſtrongly aſſerted on Tueſday night, at a Coffee Houſe at the weſt end of the town, that a Meſſenger was arrived at the Spaniſh Ambaſſador's, from the King of Spain, with propoſals for accommodating the differences reſpecting Falkland's Iſland; but that they were rejected by our Miniſtry, and returned with aſſurances that the Britiſh Crown would not accept ſuch trifling Conceſſions for the material injuries it has lately received from his Catholic Majeſty. Notwithſtanding which, ten to one was laid by a Perſon of Rank, that no War would commence with either France or Spain within twelve months.

There is a ſtrong Report that moſt of the P—y C—l are now for a War, and that it is particularly enforced by L— N—.

We are told that orders are ſent to Admiral Geary at Portſmouth, to attend the Board of Admiralty To morrow on Affairs of Importance.

On the Trial of Capt. Ferguſon, on Wedneſday at the Admiralty ſeſſion, for the Murder of his Cabbin Boy, it appeared, that ſix or ſeven Leagues from Cape Charles, on the Coaſt of Virginia, on their return home on the 2d of January laſt, the Captain knocked the Boy down and ſtamped upon him, becauſe he came on deck with only one Stocking on; and afterwards for further puniſhment, he confined him almoſt an hour to the Weather-Side of the Long Boat, expoſed to the ſeverity of the weather, which at that time was extreme, inſomuch that it broke the ſhrouds of the ſhip. Afterwards, in going down to the cabin by the companion he trod on him with both his feet, and perpetrated divers other ſeverities, of which he died the next day.

Dec. 27. They write from Madrid, that the King of Spain has made a great promotion in his military eſtabliſhment, as a war with the Engliſh appears inevitable.

Capt. Saltonſtall, from New London with Sugar, is loſt on Eyzeland, on the coaſt of Holland.

A Letter from Paris, ſays, their laſt advices from Spain are, that Don Bucarelli, Governor of Buenos Ayres, the ſame who conſtrained the Engliſh to evacuate Falkland iſlands, is arrived at Cadiz.——They alſo add, that the Spaniards have 100.000 men on foot, and in America 25,000 regular troops and a fleet of 34 ſhips of the line.

Dec 22. Letters from Havre de Grace inform, that ten regiments of infantry had lately arrived there from the interior provinces, ſaid to be deſigned for embarkation.

Wedneſday night there was a general Preſs, at one and almoſt the ſame hour in every part of Great-Britain.

Friday night 275 men were preſſed from on board the outward bound veſſels, ſaid to be deſigned for Adm. Howe's ſquadron.

By the return made at the Admiralty office, it appears, that 16000 men were collected in the different parts of Great-Britain on Wedneſday laſt, in conſequence of the general Preſs.

Dec. 25. We are aſſured that the M—y are poſitively determined, and that we are now at the eve of a war.

An embargo is expected every day to be laid on the outward bound trading veſſels whence it is concluded a rupture is at no great diſtance.

Private letters from France make mention of a prevailing rumor there, of an intended invaſion on the Engliſh territories.

Lord C——m, we hear ſtill continues to ſupport the declaration he made ſometime after the opening the preſent ſeſſion of Parliament, that we ſhould not be a nation two months from that time.—The expiration of this prediction happens on the 22d of January next, upon which account many perſons are under great apprehenſions.

It is ſaid to be in agitation to recall Capt. Preſton from Boſton, and to confer honors on him.

Laſt Friday there was the hotteſt Preſs at Portſmouth ever known there in the memory of man.

Jan 1. We hear there is not likely to be any War, at leaſt with France; for the King of France ſaid to the Duke de Choiſeul, "Why do you mention War? I told you I would not hear of War?" His Majeſty immediately ordered him from Court into the country, and ſent to the Duke de Noailles to ſucceed to the Premierſhip.

In caſe of a war with France and Spain, many viſionary politicians ſeem to apprehend, that the Colonies will throw off their dependence on the mother country; but even ſhould that be the caſe, the conſequence would be, that they muſt fight their battles ſingle handed, which would bring upon them ſuch a yoke as neither, they, nor their children would be able to bear; and reduce the people of America to the moſt miſerable condition of all men.

Our correſpondent from Paris remarks, that when the King came to hold a bed of juſtice, all the members of parliament went out, and left the King alone to enregiſter his edict, and the moment the King went out at one door, all the members entered at the other, and entered a formal proteſt againſt enregiſtering the ſaid edict.

The ſame correſpondent adds, that orders had been ſent for 20,000 trops immediately to ſurround the city of Paris, in order to quell if poſſible, the preſent inſurgents; and that it was thought the military on this occaſion would not act offenſively againſt the mutineers, provided they were headed by the Parliament; ſo that when this letter came from Paris, all was anarchy and confuſion there.

Sunday arrived from Boſton in New England Capt. Preſton, who was lately tried on account of a riot in that town, and acquitted.

Jan. 2. We are aſſured that the final determination from the court of Madrid is expected by the laſt meſſenger ſent there, whoſe return is fixed for the 2d of February, at which time the important point of Peace or War will be finally ſettled.

It is reported that Lord Townſhend has conſented to remain another year in his preſent ſtation in Ireland.

Jan. 3. Lord Weymouth it is aſſerted, moved in the Privy Council, that our miniſter at the Court of Madrid might be immediately recalled, and all negociations broke off; which not being adopted, his Lordſhip reſigned.

It is confidently ſaid, that Lord Towſhend has requeſted a reinforcement of 6000 troops, having received intelligence that the Spaniards intend to pay a viſit to Ireland.

New-York, March 7.

Some of the Letters received by the Packet mention War as doubtful, while others ſay it's inevitable, however we hear a Company of Light Infantry is to be added to all the Regiments in America, and 20 private men to each company; alſo that another Battalion is to be added to the Regiment of Artillery; and that moſt of the Line of Battle Ships in the Engliſh Navy are put in Commiſſion.

March 14. A Gentleman that left Gibraltar the 11th of December, acquaints us, That when he came away the Garriſon of that Place conſiſted of ſeven Regiments and 400 of the Royal Regiment of Artillery and that three Regiments more were daily expected there from Ireland, but left only one Frigate in the Harbour, having ſailed in Company with Capt. St. John, in the Edgar, of 64 Guns, bound for Liſbon in order to get Caſh to pay the Garriſon: that the Spaniards had in the neighbourhood of St. Roke, and Algezara, about 8 Miles from Gibraltar, between 20 and 30 000 Men; that he himſelf ſaw many Thouſands of them, having obtained a Paſs to go a few Miles into Spain, and that the moſt of the Spaniſh Troops were ordered to their Sea Ports, as they were apprehenſive in Caſe of a Rupture with England, of being viſited by a Britiſh Fleet.

BOSTON, March 11.

In Capt. Robſon from London arrived his Majeſty's ſeveral Commiſſions appointing,

The Hon. Thomas Hutchinſon, Eſq. Governor and Commander in Chief in and over this Province.

The Hon. Andrew Oliver, Eſq; Lieutenant Governor.

The Hon. Thomas Flucker, Eſq; Secretary.

It is ſaid that the two former of theſe Gentlemen are to have Salaries annually paid to them out of the American Revenue independent of the People of the Province, which if it be true, is a Novelty which claims the ſerious Attention of this and the other Colonies. Of this; for although the Salaries are not paid out of the Treaſury, yet the Money is to be rais'd out of the Pockets of the people, not with their own or their Repreſentatives conſent, by an act of Parliament which has been juſtly complain'd of as a moſt violent Infraction of the natural Rights of all Men to diſpoſe of their own Money—It is all a jeſt then to ſay that the People of this Province will be altogether eas'd of the Burden of ſupporting the Governor. Beſides, as this Revenue is forc'd from us by the Britiſh Parliament, ſo there is a Power exerciſed by the King to diſpoſe of as much of it as he pleaſes to his Governor—Conſequently no check in the Hands of the People over the Governor—Conſequently an arbitrary deſpotic Power in the Governor—It ought alſo to be ſeriouſly conſidered by the Siſter Colonies; for, what reaſon is there that they ſhould be obliged to bear their Part in ſupporting the Government of Maſſachuſetts Bay, when they always have, and are ſtill willing to ſupport it themſelves.

Capt. Whitehead from London left Dover the 6th Day of January, by whom we learn, that nothing had been done in Parliament relative to American Affairs, and that they had adjourned to the 22d of January:—For all what the great Patriot has ſaid there are mighty Preparations for War, and the Preſs as hot as ever, the Protections being no ſecurity, not even to Greenland men: A Matter of 20 Sail of the Line lay at Spithead ready for the Sea, ſome of them it is ſaid are fully manned: but that notwithſtanding theſe great Preparations, it was thought by many that there would be no war, as the Court of France had declared they would take no part in the diſpute between Great Britain, and Spain:——And that an extraordinary Meſſenger arrived from Madrid the Day before he failed.

The 4th of April, which in laſt Thurſday's Gazette, was ſaid to be the Day appointed for a public Faſt, being Eaſter Week, his Honor the Lieutenant Governor, with the Advice of Council, hath ſince been pleaſed to appoint Thurſday the 18th Day of April next, and a Proclamation has been iſſued Accordingly.

Salem, March 10.

"Yeſterday arrived a veſſel from the Weſt Indies, who 8 days ago met on George's Banks a ſhip's mainmaſt which had been cut away.——The maſt and top and top maſt, with the yard and top ſail yard————the topſail was furl'd ſnug, the mainſail partly furl'd—a red pendant in the top. The maſt was woulded with five wouldings, by all which it appears to be ſome man of war, perhaps the Beaver.

HARTFOD, March 19

On Saturday the 9th Inſt. as Mr. Jacob Merrells of Weſt Hartford was loading a Cart with Hay from a Mow in his Barn, he accidentally ſlip'd and fell on a Pitchfork that ſtood leaning againſt the Mow, the Handle of which entered at the lower Part of his Groin, and penetrated near 10 Inches into his Body, by which Accident he was ſo much wounded that he died the Monday following. He was about 46 Years of Age, of a fair Character, and his Death is much lamented.

We hear from the Nine-Partners, that a Griſt-Mill, and Saw-Mill, were ſwept off by the late Flood, and the Owner of them drowned, as he was attempting to give the Water Vent.

We hear from New-Fairfield, that about ten Days ago, as two Lads were trying which of them could ſhoot an Arrow the higheſt; one of them by the Fall of the other's Arrow pierced through his Skull, and expired in a few Moments.

Laſt Saturday ended the ſetting of the Hon. Superior Court in this Place. During the Term, the notorious Richard Steel (as has been mention'd) was had upon Trial for a Third Offence of Burglary, and after a very lengthy Hearing, both on the Part of the Crown and the Priſoner, the Caſe was committed to the Jury, who, after a Conſultation of two Days, return'd a Verdict, Not Guilty.

Laſt Week a Mulatto Girl owned by Mr. Daniel Judd of Colcheſter, was delivered of a Child unknown to any of the Family, a few rods from the Houſe, which ſhe moſt inhumanly murdered, by beating a large Hole in its Skull with a Stone. The Body was ſoon after found under a Hog ſtye, where ſhe had conceal'd it. A Jury of Inqueſt was immediately impannel'd, who found a Verdict, Wilful Murder; and upon Examination ſhe confeſſed the Fact. She is now under Keepers, and will be committed to Priſon as ſoon as her Health will permit.

Arrived at Barbados, Capts. Pratt and Danes, and at Jamaica, the Capts. Anderſon and Williams, all from New London.

ALL perſons indebted to the ſubſcriber for the Connecticut Courant for the year 1770, are once more deſired to ſettle their accounts immediately, for as he is call'd on by the Printers to pay for the ſame, ſo he is obliged to call on his late cuſtomers for that purpoſe; and deſires that they will not omit doing it immediately, for if they ſhou'd, it would put him to the diſagreeable neceſſity of calling on them in ſome other way, and they be put to coſt——Alſo, all other perſons indebted to the ſubſcriber for books, &c. are deſired to diſcharge their debts, as he is ſoon about to remove into another province, it is abſolutely neceſſary that all his other accounts be ſettled ſoon, which will much oblige the ſubſcriber, KNIGHT SEXTON.

POET'S CORNER.

Meſſ. PRINTERS,

You having generouſly afforded a place in your uſeful paper, for the entertainment of your poetical correſpondents——Pleaſe to inſert the following in your next.

IT has long been the received opinion, in the learned world that there are nine muſes, & no more. We are ſenſible that for us to depart from the opinion of antient and modern poets, ſo far, as to introduce a tenth muſe, may diſcover a ſpecies of arrogance, which won'd ruin our credit as authors, unleſs we adduce the beſt authority, and cleareſt evidence, to prove our hypotheſis. We propoſe, therefore, to make it as evident, that there are ten muſes, as that there are nine. This we propoſe to do, by giving a ſpecimen of our inſpiration, merely by invoking Sappho, our tenth muſe, whoſe aid, we only, (though paſſionately) implore.

Reader, if thou can'ſt read, read on—
Death is the man, deny't who can,
That never ſpareth none? SWIFT.

NOT the fam'd nine Urania and the reſt,
Can warm our ſouls, or raiſe our rapture'd (breaſt;
'Tis glorious Sappho melts us all away——
Her charms like fate command us to obey.
Whilſt others court without, the ſacred nine,
We hope, by Sappho's aid alone to ſhine.
What heavenly rapture did inſpire her breaſt,
When with the force of love her ſoul oppreſs'd,
She flung herſelf into the flowing tide,
And in the glorious leap immortal dy'd?
How gently kind her eaſy numbers flow——
Pathetick ſweet and ſoft as mortals know,
Nature and art, in happy union join,
And grow ſpontanious in her every line.
She wrote out what ſhe felt, & felt much more,
Than all her ſons has felt, ſince or before.
And yet ſhe not a muſe——bluſh human race!
Who can ſuſtain the ſhock? Oh wretched caſe!
Now let our poets court fair Sappho's ſhrine——
Approve her notes, and in her beauties ſhine.
Than not a mad-dog's death or woman's power,
Or man's controut con'd make us waſte an hour,
In the Sonnets—not a Magazine, (ſpleen,
Cou'd warm our thoughts, or make us court the
Nor cuſtomers lampoon, with warm deſire,
Won'd make us kindle at ſo low a fire—
This is our firſt—the next will far tranſcend,
All that has in this paper yet been pen'd.

DESCRIPTION of a wonderful OLD MAN.

There was an old Man, & tho' it's not com- (mon,
Yet, if he ſaid true, he was born of a woman;
And though it's incredible, yet I've been told,
He was once a mere infant but age made him o'd.
Where'er he was hungry, he long'd for ſome (meat,
And if he cou'd get it, 'tis ſaid he won'd eat:
When thirſty, he'd drink, if you gave him a pot,
And his liquor moſt commonly ran down his (throat,
He ſeldom or never cou'd ſee without light
And yet I've been told he cou'd hear in the (night,
He has oft been awake in the day time, 'tis (ſaid,
And has fallen aſleep as he lay in his bed.
'Tis reported his tongue always mov'd when he (talk'd,
And he ſtir'd both his arms and his legs as he (walk'd,
And his gait was ſo odd, had you ſeen him you'd (burſt,
For one leg or t'other wou'd always be firſt.
His face was the oddeſt that ever was ſeen,
For if 'twas not waſh'd, it was ſeldom quite (clean;
He ſhew'd moſt of his teeth when he happen'd (to grin,
And his mouth ſtood acroſe 'twixt his noſe and (his chin.
When this whimſical Chap had a river to paſs,
If he cou'd not get over, he'd ſtay where he was:
'Tis ſaid, he ne'er ventur'd to quit the dry (ground!
Yet ſo great was his luck that he never was (drown'd
Among other ſtrange things that befel this good (Yeoman
He was married, poor ſoul! and his wife was a (Woman,
And unleſs by that liar, Miſs Fame, we'er be- (guil'd,
We may roundly affirm, ſhe was never with (child.
At laſt he fell ſick, as old Chronicles tell,
And then as folks ſaid, he was not very well.
But what is more ſtrange, in ſo weak a condition,
As he cou'd not give fees, he could get no Phy- (ſician.
What wonder he died! yet 'tis ſaid, that his (death
Was occaſion'd at laſt by the want of his breath.
But peace to his bones, which to aſhes now (moulder,

LONDON, December 12.

A great Perſonage lately cenſured his brother very ſeverely for his irregular courſe of life; and particularly on account of his unbridled paſſion for intrigue. You ſee, ſays he, what a ſum I am to pay for you; you are ſenſible of the diſgrace you bring on the family, and how unworthy it is not to follow our better example. The young buck, with his uſual levity, turned round upon his heel, whiſtled; (for he is fond of muſic) and then left the room, humming to himſelf, My Mother did ſo before me.

Laſt week a woman, of the pariſh of Leigh, having been ill for ſome time before, and at laſt ſuppoſed to be quite dead, a perſon was ſent to beſpeak a coffin, and, among other preparations for her interment, an old woman came up into the room to lay out the corpſe; but leſt the deceaſed might have been carried off by ſome epidemical diſorder, to prevent being infected, ſhe entered the room with a lighted pipe of tobacco in her mouth, and then proceeded to buſineſs: but while ſhe was in a ſtooping poſture, placing the head of the corpſe, and the fumes of the tobacco copiouſly iſſuing from the pipe, the ſuppoſed dead woman ſuddenly ſtarted up, in a violent paſſion, with this expreſſion, Curſe that pipe of tobacco! which ſo terrified the old ſmoaker, that, beſides breaking her pipe into numberleſs ſhatters in the hurry of her flight, ſhe had like to have broke her own neck down the ſtairs.

Extract of a Letter from Edinburgh.

—"AT Cannon-mills, near this city, where it is the cuſtom of the Millers ſervants to watch the Mills nightly by turns, one of them was lately married to a handſome young girl.—Two or three nights after the marriage, it happening to be his turn to watch, he requeſted one of his companions to do his duty for him, and he would repay him another time in kind, as it was hard to be ſhut out from a young wife ſo ſoon. His friend very readily conſented, and home went the bridegroom, happy in the conceit of agreeably ſurpriſing his ſpouſe with his unexpected company.—His bride, ſenſible her huſband was on watch, reſolved, it ſeems, not to ſpend the night alone, and had, at that inſtant, a young Gentleman in bed with her.—It is the cuſtom, at that place, to keep the houſe door open, when the huſband is out, that he may have free acceſs at all times.—She being awake at his entrance, ſcreamed out violently that ſhe was like to die of a cholick, and that nothing could cure but a dram of Holland gin. He did not pay great attention to her at firſt, but pulled off all his cloaths, and was ſtepping into bed, when ſhe redoubled her cries, that ſhe ſhould die, if he did not immediately run for the gin. He in vain recommended to her ſome whiſky, that was in the houſe; but nothing but the gin would eaſe her; having cured her before ſhe ſaid.—Thus alarmed with her intreaties, he huddled on his cloaths haſtily, and ran out for the dram. On procuring it he threw down the price, and ſet out on his return with expedition; but he was called back by the honeſt publican, and acquainted that he had thrown down ſix ſhillings inſtead of three pence. The Miller would not believe him, telling him he was not worth ſo much, and could not be convinced on being offered back the money, till, putting his hand again into his pocket, he found a purſe, containing twenty-ſeven guineas and ſome looſe ſilver; and, upon farther inſpection, a pair of handſome new breeches, and a gold watch.—What paſſed between him and his ſpouſe, upon his return, we are not informed; but, it is ſaid, he conſiders himſelf ſufficiently recompenſed for the infidelity of his bride, and wiſhes ſhe may have the cholick, attended with the ſame circumſtances, every night. The ſtory has occaſioned much pleaſantry here, every one aſking his neighbour, if he has loſt his breeches?

HUDIBRASS.

THERE is no topic for converſation, which in every age, and among every rank of mankind, is more univerſal, than the faults, and misfortunes, the follies or the vices of our fellowmen.——To ſuppoſe men take pleaſure in expatiating on a ſubject in itſelf ſo diſagreeable, without ſome ſelf-intereſt at the bottom is abſurd;——and the queſtion at once is how are they affected or intereſted? Is it from the noble, and generous principle of benevolence, or good will to their fellowmen, that in order to reform, and amend them, they are thus continually holding up to view the dark ſide of their character?——For the honor of mankind, one might wiſh it were ſo, but as theſe lectures are read not in the hearing of the perſons whoſe conduct is cenſured, not communicated to them with the private tenderneſs of friendſhip, nor even thro' a third perſon, the friend of the calumniated, but to their enemies, or at beſt to thoſe indifferent to them—we muſt ſearch for the true ſource of this prevailing paſſion elſewhere.—As advice naturally implies ſuperiority in the adviſor, and as it coſts us nothing, all mankind are extremely liberal of it——ſo cenſure or reproof as neceſſarily ſuppoſes, a rectitude in the reprover, wanting in him that is cenſured, on which imaginary ſuperiority, they who view things partially, are fond of pluming themſelves, and thus become deeply intereſted in the invectives they utter, though in reality they are neither in perſon or eſtate affected with the conduct they cenſure. Self-love, and a love of fame are the firſt, and moſt univerſal paſſions in human nature——every one, even the greateſt ſtoic, or devout hermit, that ever religion, or philoſophy produced, are at bottom ſlaves to theſe paſſions, & in fact much more ſo, than the thoughtleſs, gay, & volatile part of mankind. Every one has ſomething on which he peculiarly values himſelf, and foibles, which he in ſpite of human vanity, is conſcious of, and would wiſh to caſt into ſhade——effectually to do this, nothing appears more practicable, than to draw the attention of mankind, and fix it, on thoſe failings of his neighbours, of which he is not guilty, and from his time, or ſituation in life will never have the temptation to.——that there has been in the world at all periods much the ſame quantity, or proportion of vice and folly in reality, only differently modified, in different ages; every one who attentively reviews the hiſtory of mankind, muſt allow, yet in every age, it has been the complaint of men in years, that the riſing generation were much degenerated, ſince their youth——which if true in fact, and it certainly is as likely to be univerſally true, in every age ſince the flood, as in any individual one, mankind muſt long ſince have reached the perfection of human wickedneſs; but experience ſhews the contrary, & that the degeneracy complain'd of in youth, by thoſe in years, is generally nothing more than thoſe vices and follies in vogue, and prevalent in their day, new formed, and faſhioned by their ſucceſſors, tir'd of ſameneſs, and fond of variety——Thus the miſer, who wiſhes to diſguiſe a conduct, which is the higheſt diſgrace to human nature, by commending frugality and œconomy, virtues to which his vices bear ſome diſtant likeneſs at firſt view; and declaims with all the bitterneſs and ſeverity poſſible, at the profuſeneſs of the prodigal; that by condemning the character, the direct reverſe of his own, he implicitly paſſes his own panegyric or at leaſt, as my motto very ſenſibly expreſſes it; compound for his favorite vice, by damning its oppoſite——ſome inſtances of this kind, within my obſervation, are too ſtriking to paſs unnoticed by an impartial obſervator.——Mr. Graſpland is now riſing of ſixty, for more than forty years paſt, he has with a moſt undeviating, and ſucceſsful perſeverance, been accumulating, or adding field to field; during which period, his hand has held ſo ſtrongly what he gained, as never to relax, either to the calls of public, or private diſtreſs.——He values himſelf on all occaſions for the punctuality of his paying all demands upon him, and is eloquent in the hiſtory of the riſe, progreſs, and preſent ſtate of his fortune, nor leſs ſo in comparing himſelf with thoſe of his age, who began the world on as good a footing as himſelf, but who either through want of ability or indolence, or deſirous of enjoying life as it paſs'd, have not made any addition to, or perhaps have decreas'd their firſt ſtock——Graſpland is temperate, frugal, punctual in his dues to church and ſtate, is he not then perfectly right in valuing himſelf on thoſe nominal virtues which he confeſſedly has, and ſinking the foible of covetuouſneſs, of a continued anxious ſolicitude, which has during his life, prevented his vacant ſlumber of peace and content, and imbittered the bread of pleaſantneſs, by holding up to view, the misfortunes or diſgrace of thoſe who purſued a different courſe——and in declaiming againſt thoſe vices or follies which neither his intereſt, or ruling paſſion permitted him to purſue. Both in the pulpit and out, we continually hear of the crying vices of the times, and the judgments they have occaſioned and ſtill threaten——aſk any individual to particularize, and experience will almoſt univerſally evince the truth of my motto and obſervations——among the ſuperſtitious no calamity happens to a neighbour either in his perſon, character or eſtate, but they can immediately point out the crying ſin, of which the unfortunate mortal had ſome time previous, been guilty of, and which occaſioned the misfortune by way of judgment.——I have for ſome time paſt ſet down thoſe, to which different perſons of different characters have, both publickly and privately attributed the public grievances of which America complain, and ſhall in ſome future paper, publiſh them, for the reformation of the age.——

"To know ourſelves diſeas'd, is half our cure."

Mr. WATSON,

Be pleaſed to inſert in your next, the following ſober and candid remarks, on a piece contained in the beginning of your paper, No. 321 for February 19th 1771, and you will once more oblige one of your readers.

THE author of this piece, though a perſon of mental powers and abilities, does not appear to have uſed them to the beſt advantage, nor wiſeſt purpoſe in the cauſe he has eſpouſed. His piece plentifully abounds with invectives and is full of ſpirit, but greatly defective of argument. He appears to write in great heat, and like the man Solomon ſpeaks of, who ſcatters firebrands, arrows and death, hither and thither, and that in good earneſt too, which ſeems plainly to indicate conſcious perſonal guilt, and however he ſuppoſes himſelf to have no particular intereſt in the matter, yet the truths contained in that piece have ſufficiently nettled him, and ſet him all on fire.

He is careful to obſerve he has no particular intereſt in the miſſion, and yet vehemently exclaims againſt the writer he has undertaken to anſwer, as being a buſy body, and writing concerning that he has no buſineſs with. The firſt column is chiefly taken up with an account of his laboured inveſtigation of the author, which together with deſperate reproaches, is the ſum and ſubſtance of what he has wrote. To give a particular anſwer to every exceptionable ſentence and hard word, a ſmall volume would ſcarcely contain the remarks which might juſtly be made. I ſhall content myſelf with one or two general remarks.

My deſign is not to render railing for railing; nor ſhall I pretend to match him in keen invectives and bitter reproaches, nor do envy him the honor or pleaſure of them.——His language is worthy of obſervation. A flying attack appears through the whole performance. And here and there he throws out many hard words. I ſhall ſelect ſome of them in order to come at the purity of his ſtile, the excellency of his ſpirit, and whereby it may be ſeen how free he is of that gall with which he charges the writer. Theſe words are ſcattered about in his piece as he finds uſe for them. Ridiculous—ungenteel—ſcurrilous—ſmoke him out of his hole——weak—falſe—mewed up in holes and corners—ſilly—buſy-body—monkiſh cell—barbariſm——bewildered brain—vitiated mind—news-monger—wrangler and fool.—He appears to be greatly out of temper, and the paroxyſm ſeems to be incurable. But a thouſand hard words will not amount to an argument nor deſtroy a fact. They never fail to beget in the reader a ſuſpicion that the cauſe is not good, when the writer is obliged to have recourſe to ſuch weapons or none. Truth ſeems to irritate him to the laſt degree, which affords a ſtrong preſumption that he is not ſo diſintereſted in the matter as he would be thought to be, but ſome way acceſſory to the preſent declention of the miſſion.

Indeed he ſeems expert in quoting ſcripture, and applies thoſe words to the writer, with what meaſure ye mete to others, the ſame ſhall be meaſured to you again, but appears wholly to forget to apply them to himſelf.

In the tranſport of his zeal he enquires where have this mighty us erected their awful tribunal or tribunals and judgment ſeats, ſeem to be freſh in his mind, as though mankind might not make obſervations upon the unreaſonable conduct of one another without aſſuming the prerogatives of the moſt high——as though they were under no obligations to let their light ſhine before men. And as though ſome men were ſo reſpectable in their perſons, ſo infallible in their procedures as to be above human obſervations, and in need of nothing to rouſe their attention.

He introduces various things foreign to his purpoſe, and beſide the preſent queſtion. He aſſures the public that the writer has not ſpent a mite of any thing towards ſupporting the miſſion.——That other towns do not diſable themſelves from maintaining their miniſters, by contributing to the ſupport of the miniſter of Stockbridge.——That he knows how to ſpend the means of his ſupport as a chriſtian and a gentleman, and ſuch like things. Theſe eccentric obſervations I ſhall leave with him to apply to the ſupport of his cauſe.

He is careful to publiſh "that ſome other people love to drink cyder and rum beſides Indians and people that live out of Stockbridge too," this has not been denied; as he ſeems to ſuggeſt ſo it may doubtleſs be true, that ſome people in and ſome out of that town, may have been to blame by letting them have ſtrong drink. A very melancholy conſideration! to be lamented in tears of blood! but ſomething further than all this is contained in thoſe words by ſtrong implication, and he undoubtedly had another thing in view, if he had, I will leave him to the painful reflections of his ungrounded aſperſions in his ſober moments.

I am a hearty friend to the town of Stockbridge, their pious miſſionary and this venerable writer. His ſevere invectives I ſhall impute to the warmth of his ſpirit, and ſtill retain my idea of his dignity, juſtice and virtue. I do not conceive it any way neceſſary to publiſh my name, neither can I conceive on what better footing he might expect to be by letting the world know his name, unleſs he expects that will make up what elſe is wanting to make his cauſe good, neither can I perſuade myſelf he would be willing to father ſuch a piece as this.

He ſeems to ſpeak as tho' the venerable commiſſioners of late years had begun to make ſome amendments in the regulation of the miſſion, but is careful not to tell us what they be, nor aſſert that the people of Stockbridge, do bear their proportionable part in the miſſionaries ſupport.

He alſo informs, there is not a trader in the town of Stockbridge, & where elſe has there been of late years; or what need of any now the Indians money and lands are chiefly gone. And but two taverns licenced perſons, as though no others could let them have rum & cyder there, and in adjacent towns too.

After all the main point remains unreſolved, to which every thing elſe ſaid in that piece, were but appendages, viz. Wherein appears the juſtice of that conduct that maintains a miſſionary to preach to the Indians, who ſpends more than half of his time in diſcharging the duties of a paſtor among the Engliſh, ſince they have not and do not bear their proportionable part of his ſupport? This matter he has left undone, and ſaid many things that he ought not to have ſaid, and but little that he ought. If any thing I have wrote, ſhall in the iſſue, be a means of God's glory, I ſhall have my ends fully anſwered in his praiſe.

I ſhall leave this writer with my beſt wiſhes, and patiently wait for his rejoynder, or hiſtory of the riſe, progreſs, declention, and preſent ſtate of the miſſion, and hearken to the divinely inſpired writer. Make no friendſhip with an angry man, and with a furious man thou ſhalt not go, leaſt thou learn his way, and get a ſnare to thy ſoul.

LONDON, January 1, 1771

Extract of a Letter from Boſton, Nov. 2. 1770.

THE principal news ſince my laſt is the trial of Capt. Preſton, which began on Wedneſday October 24th, and was continued from day to day, Sunday excepted, 'till Tueſday the 30th, when the Jury returned their verdict, finding him Not Guilty. He was immediately diſcharged, and is now at the Caſtle. I employed a ſhort hand writer to take down the trial, which I ſhall ſend you by the next veſſel. The witneſſes examined on both ſides amounted to about fifty. The lawyers for the Crown were Mr. Paine and Mr Samuel Quincy; for the Priſoner Mr. Auchmuty and Mr. John Adams. Each of them ſpoke near three hours at leaſt. About Monday noon the Judges began their charge. Judge Trowbridge, who ſpoke firſt, entered largely into the contradictory accounts given by the witneſſes, and declared that it did not appear to him that the priſoner gave orders to fire; but if the Jury ſhould think otherwiſe, and find it proved that he did give ſuch orders, the queſtion would naturally be, what crime is he guilty of?—They ſurely could not call it murder.——Here he explained the crime of murder in a very clear, diſtinct manner, and gave it as his opinion, that by law the priſoner was not guilty of murder; obſerving, that the King had a right to ſend his troops here; that the commanding officer of theſe troops had a right to place a centinal at the Cuſtom houſe; that the centinel placed there on the night of the 5th of March was in the Kings peace; that he durſt not quit his poſt; that if he was inſulted or attacked, the Captain of the guard had a right to protect him; that the priſoner and his party who came there for that purpoſe, were in the King's peace; that while they were at the Cuſtom-houſe, for the protecting the centinel, it was plainly proved, they had been aſſaulted by a great number of people; that the people aſſembled there were not in the King's Peace, but were by law conſidered as a riotous mob, as they attacked the priſoner and his party with pieces of ice, & clubs, and that even one of the witneſſes againſt him confeſſed he was armed with a Highland broad-ſword; that the rioters had knocked down one of the ſoldiers of the party, laid hold of ſeveral of their muſkets, and that before the ſoldiers fired the cry was, Knock them down, Kill them, Kill them; that all this was ſworn to by the witneſſes, and if the jury believed them, the priſoner could not be guilty of murder. He then proceeded to explain what the law conſidered as manſlaughter, and obſerved, as before, that if they gave credit to the witneſſes who teſtified of the aſſaults made on the priſoner and his party, they could not find him guilty of manſlaughter: and concluded with ſaying, that if he was guilty of any offence, it could only be excuſable homicide; that this was only founded on the ſuppoſition of the priſoner's having given orders to fire; for if this was not proved, they muſt acquit him.

Judge Oliver, who ſpoke next, began with repreſenting, in a very nervous and pathetic manner, the inſults and outrage which he, and the Court through him, had received on a former occaſion (meaning the trial of Richardſon) for giving his opinion in a point of law; that notwithſtanding, he was reſolved to do his duty to his God, his King, and his country; that he deſpiſed both inſults and threats; and that he would not forego a moments peace of conſcience for the applauſe of millions. He agreed in ſentiments with the former Judge, that the priſoner was not guilty.

Judge Cuſhing ſpoke next, was but ſhort, and agreed entirely with the other two, with regard to the priſoner's caſe.

Judge Lyndes concluded. He ſpoke a conſiderable time, and was of the ſame opinion with the other Judges.——Towards the cloſe of his ſpeech, he ſaid "Happy I am to find, that after ſuch ſtrict examination, the conduct of the priſoner appears in ſo fair a light; yet I feel myſelf at the ſame time deeply affected, that the affair turns out ſo much to the diſgrace of every perſon concerned againſt him, and ſo much to the ſhame of the town in general."

Great Numbers attended during the whole trial which was carried on with a ſolemn decency.

At the Town Meeting laſt Tueſday, was read an elegant and pathetic Letter from the famous Dr. Lucas, in Dublin, in anſwer to one ſent him by the Committee appointed to tranſmit the Account of the Maſſacre to Europe. In this Letter the Doctor ſympathizes with his American Fellow Sufferers, and enumerates ſo many Inſtances of Military Barbarity, Inſolence and unbounded Licentiouſneſs, as demonſtrates that Law is the Will of the Miniſtry, for that Kingdom. He laments the Ignorance, Difference in Religion, and conſequent Want of Unanimity in the People which render them an eaſy Prey to any Kind of Force that would enſlave them, Profeſſes a high Eſteem for America, and ſtill hopes the unanimous Efforts of her wiſe and virtuous Children will have much Effect towards a general Reſtoration of conſtitutional Liberty.

Twenty Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the Subſcriber, (living in Second Street, between Market and Arch Streets) about the latter end of laſt June, a negro fellow named Toby, about 24 years of age, 5 feet 6 or 8 inches high, a likely well ſet fellow, very talkative and complaiſant, eſpecially when in liquor, has been brought up to houſe work. He was taken up in New York, the 19th of Aug. laſt, and made his eſcape from goal the ſame day. It is ſuppoſed he is there got on board ſome veſſel bound to the Weſt-Indies, or went towards Albany or New-England. Any Perſon who ſhall take up ſaid Negro, ſo that his maſter may get him again, ſhall be entitled to the above reward and all reaſonable charges.

SUTTONIAN INOCULATION.

MR. LATHAM, Surgeon to the King's (or 8th) Regiment of Foot, acquaints the Inhabitants of this province, as alſo thoſe of New England, that he has open'd convenient Houſes for the Reception of Patients, who chooſe to be inoculated after the Suttonian Syſtem, where the greateſt Attention will be obſerved, and every Thing neceſſary provided.

Mr. Latham likewiſe informs the Public, that he is the only Perſon who can inoculate, or who can authoriſe Perſons to inoculate after this approved, eaſy, and ſucceſsful Method, in any Part of America, North of Philadelphia: while Doctor Shuttleworth (Brother in Law to Mr. Sutton) is the only Perſon that can inoculate, or can cauſe to be inoculated in the ſame Method, South of Philadelphia. As the New-England People ſuffer ſo ſeverely by the natural Small-Pox, Mr. Latham aſſures them, that he will wait upon any ſufficient Number aſſembled together to be inoculated; and as his Deſire is to be of as much Service to Mankind as he poſſibly can, he will do every Thing in his Power to bring the Suttonian Syſtem to as great Utility and Practice in America, as it is now in England, Scotland, and Ireland; where Mr. Sutton has ſeveral Partners in each country.

Mr. Latham has inoculated in Canada, lately three Hundred Perſons, belonging to Maſſachuſett's-Bay and Connecticut Governments, who were never confin'd from doing their uſual Occupations. For further Particulars, Application to be made to Mr. Latham, at his Houſe in Broad Street.

column is chiefly taken up with an account of his laboured inveſtigation of the author, which together with deſperate reproaches, is the ſum and ſubſtance of what he has wrote. To give a particular anſwer to every exceptionable ſentence and hard word, a ſmall volume would ſcarce y contain the remarks which might juſtly be made. I ſhall content myſelf with one or two general remarks.

My deſign is not to render railing for railing; nor ſhall I pretend to match him in keen invectives and bitter reproaches, nor do envy him the honor or pleaſure of them.——His language is worthy of obſervation. A flying attack appears through the whole performance. And here and there he throws out many hard words. I ſhall ſelect ſome of them in order to come at the purity of his ſtile, the excellency of his ſpirit, and whereby it may be ſeen how free he is of that gall with which he charges the writer. Theſe words are ſcattered about in his piece as he finds uſe for them. Ridiculous—ungenteel—ſcurrilous—ſmoke him out of his hole——weak—falſe—mewed up in holes and corners—ſilly—buſy-body—monkiſh cell—barbariſm——bewildered brain—vitiated mind—news-monger—wrangler and fool.—He appears to be greatly out of temper, and the paroxyſm ſeems to be incurable. But a thouſand hard words will not amount to an argument nor deſtroy a fact. They never fail to beget in the reader a ſuſpicion that the cauſe is not good, when the writer is obliged to have recourſe to ſuch weapons or none. Truth ſeems to irritate him to the laſt degree, which affords a ſtrong preſumption that he is not ſo diſintereſted in the matter as he would be thought to be, but ſome way acceſſory to the preſent declention of the miſſion.

Indeed he ſeems expert in quoting ſcripture, and applies thoſe words to the writer, with what meaſure ye mete to others, the ſame ſhall be meaſured to you again, but appears wholly to forget to apply them to himſelf.

In the tranſport of his zeal he enquires where have this mighty us erected their awful tribunal or tribunals and judgment ſeats, ſeem to be freſh in his mind, as though mankind might not make obſervations upon the unreaſonable conduct of one another without aſſuming the prerogatives of the moſt high——as though they were under no obligations to let their light ſhine before men. And as though ſome men were ſo reſpectable in their perſons, ſo infallible in their procedures as to be above human obſervations, and in need of nothing to rouſe their attention.

He introduces various things foreign to his purpoſe, and beſide the preſent queſtion. He aſſures the public that the writer has not ſpent a mite of any thing towards ſupporting the miſſion.——That other towns do not diſable themſelves from maintaining their miniſters, by contributing to the ſupport of the miniſter of Stockbridge.——That he knows how to ſpend the means of his ſupport as a chriſtian and a gentleman, and ſuch like things. Theſe eccentric obſervations I ſhall leave with him to apply to the ſupport of his cauſe.

He is careful to publiſh "that ſome other people love to drink cyder and rum beſides Indians and people that live out of Stockbridge too," this has not been denied; as he ſeems to ſuggeſt ſo it may doubtleſs be true, that ſome people in and ſome out of that town, may have been to blame by letting them have ſtrong drink. A very melancholy conſideration! to be lamented in tears of blood! but ſomething further than all this is contained in thoſe words by ſtrong implication, and he undoubtedly had another thing in view, if he had, I will leave him to the painful reflections of his ungrounded aſperſions in his ſober moments.

I am a hearty friend to the town of Stockbridge, their pious miſſionary and this venerable writer. His ſevere invectives I ſhall impute to the warmth of his ſpirit, and ſtill retain my idea of his dignity, juſtice and virtue. I do not conceive it any way neceſſary to publiſh my name, neither can I conceive on what better footing he might expect to be by letting the world know his name, unleſs he expects that will make up what elſe is wanting to make his cauſe good, neither can I perſuade myſelf he would be willing to father ſuch a piece as this.

He ſeems to ſpeak as tho' the venerable commiſſioners of late years had began to make ſome amendments in the regulation of the miſſion, but is careful not to tell us what they be, nor aſſert that the people of Stockbridge, do bear their proportionable part in the miſſionaries ſupport.

He alſo informs, there is not a trader in the town of Stockbridge, & where elſe has there been of late years; or what need of any, now the Indians money and lands are chiefly gone. And but two taverns licenced perſons, as though no others could let them have rum & cyder there, and in adjacent towns too.

After all the main point remains unreſolved, to which every thing elſe ſaid in that piece, were but appendages, viz. Wherein appears the juſtice of that conduct that maintains a miſſionary to preach to the Indians, who ſpends more than half of his time in diſcharging the duties of a paſtor among the Engliſh, ſince they have not and do not bear their proportionable part of his ſupport? This matter he has left undone, and ſaid many things that he ought not to have ſaid, and but little that he ought. If any thing I have wrote, ſhall in the iſſue, be a means of God's glory, I ſhall have my ends fully anſwered in his praiſe.

I ſhall leave this writer with my beſt wiſhes, and patiently wait for his rejoynder, or hiſtory of the riſe, progreſs, declention, and preſent ſtate of the miſſion, and hearken to the divinely inſpired writer. Make no friendſhip with an angry man, and with a furious man thou ſhalt not go, leaſt thou learn his way, and get a ſnare to thy ſoul.

LONDON, January 1, 1771

Extract of a Letter from Boſton, Nov. 2. 1770.

THE principal news ſince my laſt is the trial of Capt. Preſton, which began on Wedneſday October 24th, and was continued from day to day, Sunday excepted, 'till Tueſday the 30th, when the Jury returned their verdict, finding him Not Guilty. He was immediately diſcharged, and is now at the Caſtle. I employed a ſhort hand writer to take down the trial, which I ſhall ſend you by the next veſſel. The witneſſes examined on both ſides amounted to about fifty. The lawyers for the Crown were Mr. Paine and Mr Samuel Quincy; for the Priſoner Mr. Auchmuty and Mr. John Adams. Each of them ſpoke near three hours at leaſt. About Monday noon the Judges began their charge. Judge Trowbridge, who ſpoke firſt, entered largely into the contradictory accounts given by the witneſſes, and declared that it did not appear to him that the priſoner gave orders to fire; but if the Jury ſhould think otherwiſe, and find it proved that he did give ſuch orders, the queſtion would naturally be, what crime is he guilty of?—They ſurely could not call it murder.——Here he explained the crime of murder in a very clear, diſtinct manner, and gave it as his opinion, that by law the priſoner was not guilty of murder; obſerving, that the King had a right to ſend his troops here; that the commanding officer of theſe troops had a right to place a centinal at the Cuſtom houſe; that the centinel placed there on the night of the 5th of March was in the Kings peace; that he durſt not quit his poſt; that if he was inſulted or attacked, the Captain of the guard had a right to protect him; that the priſoner and his party, who came there for that purpoſe, were in the King's peace; that while they were at the Cuſtom-houſe, for the protecting the centinel, it was plainly proved, they had been aſſaulted by a great number of people; that the people aſſembled there were not in the King's Peace, but were by law conſidered as a riotous mob, as they attacked the priſoner and his party with pieces of ice, & clubs, and that even one of the witneſſes againſt him confeſſed he was armed with a Highland broad ſword; that the rioters had knocked down one of the ſoldiers of the party, laid hold of ſeveral of their muſkets, and that before the ſoldiers fired the cry was, Knock them down, Kill them, Kill them; that all this was ſworn to by the witneſſes, and if the jury believed them, the priſoner could not be guilty of murder. He then proceeded to explain what the law conſidered as manſlaughter, and obſerved, as before, that if they gave credit to the witneſſes who teſtified of the aſſaults made on the priſoner and his party, they could not find him guilty of manſlaughter: and concluded with ſaying, that if he was guilty of any offence, it could only be excuſable homicide; that this was only founded on the ſuppoſition of the priſoner's having given orders to fire; for if this was not proved, they muſt acquit him.

Judge Oliver, who ſpoke next, began with repreſenting, in a very nervous and pathetic manner, the inſults and outrage which he, and the Court through him, had received on a former occaſion (meaning the trial of Richardſon) for giving his opinion in a point of law; that notwithſtanding, he was reſolved to do his duty to his God, his King, and his country; that he deſpiſed both inſults and threats; and that he would not forego a moment's peace of conſcience for the applauſe of millions. He agreed in ſentiments with the former Judge, that the priſoner was not guilty.

Judge Cuſhing ſpoke next, was but ſhort, and agreed entirely with the other two, with regard to the priſoner's caſe.

Judge Lyndes concluded. He ſpoke a conſiderable time, and was of the ſame opinion with the other Judges.——Towards the cloſe of his ſpeech, he ſaid "Happy I am to find, that after ſuch ſtrict examination, the conduct of the priſoner appears in ſo fair a light; yet I feel myſelf at the ſame time deeply affected, that the affair turns out ſo much to the diſgrace of every perſon concerned againſt him, and ſo much to the ſhame of the town in general."

Great Numbers attended during the whole trial which was carried on with a ſolemn decency.

After the Jury had returned their verdict, no guilty, Judge Trowbridge aſked the Jury, if any of them had the leaſt doubt in their minds, whether Capt. Preſton did, or did not, give orders t fire? He was anſwered, No; not the ſmalleſ doubt of his innocence.

Twenty Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the Subſcriber, (living in Second Street, between Market and Arch Streets) about the latter end of laſt June, a negro fellow named Toby, about 24 years of age, 5 feet 6 or 8 inches high, a likely well ſet fellow, very talkative and complaiſant, eſpecially when in liquor, has been brought up to houſe work. He was taken up in New York, the 19th of Aug. laſt, and made his eſcape from goal the ſame day. It is ſuppoſed he is there got on board ſome veſſel bound to the Weſt-Indies, or went towards Albany or New-England. Any Perſon who ſhall take up ſaid Negro, ſo that his maſter may get him again, ſhall be entitled to the above reward and all reaſonable charges. JOHN BAYRD.

N. B. His clothing are not deſcribed, as he took nothing but his common apparel, which it is ſuppoſed, by this time he has worn out or changed. He can write and perhaps he may change his name and pretend to be a free negro.

SUTTONIAN INOCULATION.

MR. LATHAM, Surgeon to the King's (or 8th) Regiment of Foot, acquaints the Inhabitants of this province, as alſo thoſe of New England, that he has open'd convenient Houſes for the Reception of Patients, who chooſe to be inoculated after the Suttonian Syſtem, where the greateſt Attention will be obſerved, and every Thing neceſſary provided.

Mr. Latham likewiſe informs the Public, that he is the only Perſon who can inoculate, or who can authoriſe Perſons to inoculate after this approved, eaſy, and ſucceſsful Method, in any Part of America, North of Philadelphia: while Doctor Shuttleworth (Brother in Law to Mr. Sutton) is the only Perſon that can inoculate, or can cauſe to be inoculated in the ſame Method, South of Philadelphia. As the New-England People ſuffer ſo ſeverely by the natural Small-Pox, Mr. Latham aſſures them, that he will wait upon any ſufficient Number aſſembled together to be inoculated; and as his Deſire is to be of as much Service to Mankind as he poſſibly can, he will do every Thing in his Power to bring the Suttonian Syſtem to as great Utility and Practice in America, as it is now in England, Scotland, and Ireland; where Mr. Sutton has ſeveral Partners in each country.

Mr. Latham has inoculated in Canada, lately three Hundred Perſons, belonging to Maſſachuſett's-Bay and Connecticut Governments, who were never confin'd from doing their uſual Occupations. For further Particulars, Application to be made to Mr. Latham, at his Houſe in Broad Street.

POET'S CORNER.

Verſes to the Memory of a deceaſed Lady.

YE muſes all, contribute to my woe,
And bid my lays in plaintive numbers flow
O! all ye graces, your aſſiſtance lend,
To ſing the kindeſt mother, deareſt friend;
Come, all her friends, and to her mem'ry pay
What duty aſks, or tend'reſt love can ſay.
In each kind act the ſaint was all expreſs'd;
No angry paſſion harbour'd in her breaſt;
No gloomy malice there did e'er remain;
No envious thought her ſpotleſs ſoul did ſtain.
Her tender heart did always learn to glow
For others good, and melt at others woe.
Oh! view her now; a breathleſs corſe ſhe lies,
Whom once ye knew ſo virtuous and ſo wiſe.
Oh death! e'er thou canſt cut her fellow down,
Devouring time ſhall rob thee of thy crown.
Oh! I could ſit and weep the live long day!
Look on her grave, and ſigh my ſoul away.——
But why this grief; ſince now ſhe's fully bleſt,
While choirs of angels ſing her to her reſt?
Yet nature now returns, and now my ſong
In trembling accents falters on my tongue;
To ſing my grief, my fainting muſe does fail;
Only my ſighs can ſpeak the tender tale.
But ah! no language can her worth expreſs,
And guſhing tears muſt utter all the reſt.

On Ingratitude.

INgratitude, that bratt of hell,
Her character no tongue can tell:
She wears a gown of fair diſguiſe,
A gaudy caſe ſtuff'd full of guile and lies.
Deceiving every one that truſts her,

Extract of a letter from Vienna, Sept. 6.

"On the 18th of Auguſt, about eight in the morning, the lightning fell at Breſcia, upon a magazine, in which were about 12,000 rubbi of fine cannon powder, which was to have been ſent to Venice on the 5th of the ſame month. This powder inſtantly took fire, and the exploſion was ſo great, that it overturned about a ſixth part of the houſes in the town, and according to the beſt information we have hitherto been able to receive, buried near 3000 perſons under their ruins. Belonging to the above magazine was a tower built of large ſtones, which blew up at the ſame time, and falling like hail upon the churches, houſes and other buildings, ſhattered them from the very roofs to the cellars. Several other fragments of Stones, launched horizontally, unroofed the houſes, pierced the walls, and beat down the moſt ſolid buildings. One of thoſe fragments driven by the violence of the ſhock to the diſtance of half a mile, there beat to pieces a houſe on which it fell and buried five perſons under the ruins. In ſhort there is not ſo much as one edifice, which has not ſuffered more or leſs by this terrible event. All the ſtreets are covered with ruins of every ſort, and beſides the houſes beat down from top to bottom, upwards of 500 more threatening every moment to fall. The exploſion was ſo violent, that the ſtrongeſt faſtnings, at 18 miles diſtance, were forced open: Some pieces of ſtone carried ten miles, and a cannon 25 Cwt. driven two miles and a half. The fields near the baſtion, on which the lightning fell, are entirely burnt up, and covered with the ruins of the houſes beat down, which were driven there, trees torn up by the roots, and with dead bodies. All the ſhops in the town were forced open by the violence of the ſhock, and many of the doors belonging to the houſes carried up into the air and ſhattered to pieces. In ſhort, through the whole city, not one ſquare of glaſs remains unbroken. The damage as yet is eſtimated at four millions of Philipins; and the Government has appointed 2000 men to clear away the ruins, and ſave, if poſſible, numbers of unfortunate people, who lie almoſt intirely buried beneath them, making the air reſound with the moſt horrible cries."

LONDON, Dec. 8.

For the PUBLIC LEDGER.

The CONDUCT of JOHN WILKES, briefly conſidered.

THAT the King took particular care of the King of Pruſſia in the late Treaty of Peace concluded at Fontainbleau, appears in the 13th Article in theſe words;

"France ſhall evacuate the fortreſſes Weſel, Cleves, Guilders, and in general all the Countries belonging to the King of Pruſſia, as ſoon as may be done."—This was complied with in ſix weeks.

Immediately after, the King called his Parliament, and in his ſpeech has theſe words:

"The powers at war with my good brother the King of Pruſſia, have been induced to agree to ſuch terms of accommodation as that great Prince has approved of, and the ſucceſs which has attended my negotiations has neceſſarily and immediately diffuſed the bleſſings of peace thro' every part of Europe."

To this Wilkes replies, in his number 45, in theſe words "The infamous fallacy of this whole ſentence is apparent to all mankind; for it is notoriouſly known, that the King of Pruſſia did not barely approve, but dictated every article of the form of the Peace, no advantage of any kind has accrued to that magnanimous Prince from our Negotiations, but he was baſely deſerted by the Scotch Prime Miniſter of England; he was known to be ſcarce on better terms of friendſhip here than at Vienna, and he was betrayed by us in the Treaty of Peace."

Reader, caſt your eyes on the above 13th article, then judge of this audacious and moſt inſolent man, in giving his Sovereign the Lie, when a greater truth was never uttered; for doing which he was very juſtly committed to the Tower, but the manner of doing it by a General Warrant, without his name, was illegal; of this ignorance of the Secretary he took advantage, ſet the nation in flame about Number 45, brought his action and recovered damages.

His next amuſement was, writing notes to a blaſphemous libel. Government, willing to bring the libeller of his King and the blaſphemer of his God to Juſtice, broke open his houſe. This again was contrary to law, and he again triumphed; but the miſtakes of Government were produced from his abuſing both his God and his King, therefore, he is the Origin of all the Confuſion that the Kingdom has and does labour under; but the Miniſtry were wrong in the manner of proſecuting him; he choſe to fly from his Puniſhment as well as from his Creditors, to whom he wa indebted Twenty Thouſand Pounds. Four years after, he returned; when the miſtaken multitude, thinking him their Deliverer, ſtunned the nation with Number 45. Amidſt this noiſe, he became a Candidate to repreſent the City, when the Livery treating him with juſt contempt, he ſet up for Middleſex; for which he was unhappily duly elected, by the weight of Mile-end and Wapping. But Adminiſtration being again ill adviſed, expelled him; he was re-choſen and again expelled, and the Liberty of the nation wounded thro' the ſides of Middleſex, who tho' miſtaken, were uncontroulable by any power on earth who they ſhould chuſe. This great miſtake in Government was, therefore, new matter for this Incendiary to alarm the Nation; this produced many Remonſtrances; of which there is yet no end. But as confuſion and diſorder is his delight, and by which he lives, and not having, as he thinks, occaſioned enough, he next ſet up for Alderman, in this he ſucceeded to wiſh, and being now in the tract of ſucceſſion, we may ſoon ſee him Lord Mayor of London; when he will have a right frequently to demand an Audience of his Sovereign, to whom he has given the Lie, and whom he has ſo often traduced as well as the illuſtrious Perſonage that bore him.

Let the candid reader now judge whether we ſhould have heard any thing of General Warrants, committing to the Tower, or King's Bench, and killing in St. George's Fields or Brentford, or of Expulſions, if he had not both blaſphemed his God and abuſed his King, for from that baſe conduct of his are ſprung all the proſtitutions, and all the confuſion that the Kingdom labours under; but the meaſure of his Iniquity not being full, he has lately dared to diſcharge impreſſed ſeamen, on whom the defence of the State depends, this he has done againſt the ſenſe of the Lords, Commons and ableſt Lawyers.

Such is the political conduct of this abandoned man; his debts at Naples, Paris Jewellers, Hopitals in England, and all his private life being a reproach to human Nature, it would be a ſhame to recite it.

INTELLIGENCE EXTRAORDINARY.

IT is ſaid a number of great mechanical Geniuſſes are employed to conſtruct an engine, by which the Province of Maſſachuſet's Bay, may be removed from where it now lies, nearer home, that we may have it more under our eye, and prevent, for the future, all "Combinations," and "unwarrantable Practices," which have conſtantly hitherto began in that province. It is farther ſaid, the Lever is to be the principal power uſed in this grand machine; but the Projectors meet with ſome difficulty reſpecting the Fulcrum, as a proper place cannot yet be found to fix it on.

ALL perſons indebted to the ſubſcriber for the Connecticut Courant for the year 1770, are once more deſired to ſettle their accounts immediately, for as he is call'd on by the Printers to pay for the ſame, ſo he is obliged to call on his late cuſtomers for that purpoſe and deſires that they will not omit doing it immediately, for if they ſhou'd, it would put him to the diſagreeable neceſſity of calling on them in ſome other way, and they be put to coſt——Alſo, all other perſons indebted to the ſubſcriber for books, &c. are deſired to diſcharge their debts, as he is ſoon about to remove into another province, it is abſolutely neceſſary that all his other accounts be ſettled ſoon, which will much oblige the ſubſcriber,

TEMPLE OF FAME

THE fondneſs for novelty is ſo far from being peculiar to us degenerate moderns, that with many other paſſions and foible, which a certain cynical race of mortals, would fix on, and appropriate ſolely to their vicious cotemporaries, we may trace it, back to the firſt period of human exiſtance.——It is with many the firſt, and with almoſt all, the ſecond queſtion, What news? though we are not quite ſo intent on ſomething new, as thoſe we read of in the new teſtament, who ſpent their whole time in hearing, or relating ſome new thing, or news; yet one may ſafely from obſervation conclude, it is, if not uppermoſt, at leaſt among the firſt of human paſſions—view a man poſſeſs'd of, and enjoying the moſt ſubſtantial earthly happineſs——eaſy circumſtances with the ſocial converſe of agreeable companions, unbending at the conqueſt, or the ball——or in the more retired ſcenes of domeſtic enjoyments; how ſudden the mind lets go, for a moment, all its preſent enjoyments, at the ſound of ſomething new—news arriv'd——and fixes its whole attention on the news of the day—it may be important, but the probability is greatly againſt it; and at beſt, the mind relinquiſhes for a while a certainty for an uncertainty. Preſent joy, & pleaſing ſenſations, in queſt of others no way probable to equal them, and very poſſible, for thoſe intirely the reverſe.—The reaſons for this conduct ſeem to riſe from the very principles of human nature. Man is ſo form'd for ſociety, ſo deeply intereſted in what affects humanity, in any manner whatever; that his own enjoyments or misfortunes, are almoſt neceſſarily and involuntarily ſuſpended, which any thing is related, or about to be, whilſt effects others of his ſpecies.——It is to this I have often attributed the univerſal taſte for news papers as they are called——I ſay univerſal, for there is not an exception within my knowledge. Thoſe who are ſo ignorant that they can ſcarce read at all, and too dull to reliſh what is read by others,—The gay and volatile, the indolent and inattentive, the man of buſineſs and the man of taſte, readily find time for peruſing the news paper of the week, or the day—the very poſt, who ſpreads them becomes immediately of conſequence, is treated, and kindly noticed by all, even though his intelligence may be indifferent, or even diſagreeable.——The modern eſtabliſhment of poſts, or couriers, which for ſome centuries paſt has been made in all the civilized parts of Europe and America, is an improvement far exceeding any thing of the kind among the moſt celebrated of the antient ſtates. And tends more toward civilizing mankind, than any one regulation ever hit on by man.——By this, we have ſuch frequent, and regular intelligence, not barely from the moſt remote colonies in America; but from all the civilized parts of the world as inſenſibly intereſts us, in the happineſs or miſery of all mankind.——From Philadelphia to Boſton, which includes the beſt part of the colonies, we have intelligence of whatever is worth the relating, every week, and by ſmall improvement may be had twice in the ſame ſpace, which indeed is already in great part the caſe——Thus this great extent becomes but as one neighbourhood, to thoſe, whoſe buſineſs, or inclination, lead them to keep up a regular correſpondence; and to all, who will be at the trifling expence of purchaſing the news papers.——There is nothing human, but is capable of improvement, for the better or worſe.—A news writer cannot always pleaſe his cuſtomers alike, in a dead, dull time, when nothing intereſting either foreign or domeſtic, turns up, the paper muſt be in ſome degree barren, as has been the caſe for ſome months paſt——and muſt be always in peace, unleſs internal commotions, and debates, intervene; or ſomething important occur in neighbouring ſtates——Yet as this paper ſtill circulates, and is received as regular, as when fill'd with matters of the laſt importance; I have often lamented, that ſo uſeful, and ſo univerſal a vehicle of intelligence, ſhould ever be deſtitute of ſomething to inſtruct, or at leaſt to divert, and entertain the readers.——Tho' in America, a new country, where almoſt every one finds his private concerns ſufficient, to engroſs the whole of his time, and attention, it cannot be expected, that wit and humour, ſhould be carried to that height, as in Great-Britain, &c.—Yet as it is allowed, there is, as great a proportion of knowledge, and learning taking the people collectively, in America, as in any part of the world;—as arts, agriculture, manufactures, and the like, are but in their infancy here, no writer can ſurely be at a loſs for a ſubject, uſeful at leaſt, (if properly treated) to the public.——From among the ſenſible and ingenious, who make agriculture (or farming as it is called) their buſineſs; how many very extenſively uſeful experiments, might thro' this channel, be communicated to each other—by this means a farmer in Pennſylvania, and one in Connecticut, or further remote, might have all the advantages of each others improvements, as though their lands lay contiguous.——The ſame might be ſaid of various other branches, with the ſame juſtice——Eſſays, moral political, humourous, ſarcaſtic, or even religious; ſo long as private characters are not reflected on, and a decent ſtyle and temper maintained, may with propriety be introduced; and tend much to the improvement of our fellowmen, an object next, I may almoſt ſay, inſeparably connected with our own happineſs.

For this purpoſe, I have attempted to fill now and then a vacant page, in this Courant, and ſhall continue the obſervator, until ſome one, for the greater benefit of the public, will ſupply the place——that there are many very many more able, I have not the vanity even in thought, to deny; and ſhall think myſelf happy, even in my own dull performances, if they provoke ſome of them, to ſhew the world, how very dull, and inſipid they are, by placing their own in contraſt—Eſſays political or religious, are apt to be diſagreeable, yet I confeſs I ſee no cauſe why they ſhould be, if properly handled; the great difficulty appears to me to conſiſt in this, the writers, are ſcarce ever diſintereſted—the readers are in the ſame ſituation—add to this, the extreme jealouſy of mankind, on theſe ſubjects; which never patiently ſubmits their long adopted ideas, to be diſputed; much leſs to be humourouſly diſcanted on——though I will not promiſe, wholly to refrain from treating occaſionally on theſe, yet this far I pledge myſelf, never with deſign, to offend any ſect, or party.

Folly, has ever, in all free ſtates been adjudged lawful game; and as places of ſanctuary, have not been allowed of among the reformed nation; I truſt no action of damage will be brought againſt me, let me enter whoſe grounds I will in the chace.

Mr. WATSON,
Pleaſe to inſert the following in your next.
My dear Countrymen,

THE good effects which my laſt year's addreſs had in keeping thoſe gentlemen out of the Council who were formerly juſtly diſmiſſed, for favouring the Stamp Act, and thoſe worthy and tried patriots, in, who ſucceeded them, encourage me to offer you another word in ſeaſon. I have not the leaſt doubt, notwithſtanding the malicious and wicked endeavours of a ſmall diſcontented party, that you will keep ſteady, and be eaſy, as the ſaying is, while you are well; But as one new magiſtrate muſt be choſen this ſpring, and as the people in Hartford county have complain'd (though, as I ſhall ſhew, without cauſe) that they have not an equal ſhare in council there is reaſon to think they will make an attempt to replace at leaſt one of thoſe formerly left out, it moſt certainly becomes us to think ſeriouſly and ſeaſonably of ſo important a ſtep. I grant that the county of Hartford is on account of extent, numbers, wealth and buſineſs, by much the moſt reſpectable of any in the colony. And that, conſidering the remote ſituation of one of the Magiſtrates, and the almoſt continual abſence of the other from the county, the large and populous towns in the center are laid under ſome inconveniencies: yet we all know theſe conſiderations are not ſufficient to authorize our putting men into the council who are not fit for the important ſtation. The county of Hartford muſt therefore be content to put up with their preſent ſituation, until they ſhall have men among them capable of filling a ſeat in council with dignity and fidelity, when I can aſſure them the Sons of Liberty in New London and Windham Counties will give them their ſuffrages——I need ſay no more——a word to the wiſe is ſufficient.

By the Earl of Halifax Packet, Capt. Bolderſon, in 10 Weeks from Falmouth, we have the following Advices viz.

MADRID, (in Spain) Nov. 10.

OUR Court is willing, we hear, to reſtore the Iſlands of Falkland to Great Britain; but on certain conditions, which the public at preſent are ignorant of.

Paris, (in France) Dec 3 On the 27th ult. a courier arrived here, diſpatched by Prince de Meſſerano, Ambaſſador from the King of Spain at the Court of London, who brings advice, that the negotiation for terminating in an amicable manner the differences between the Courts of Madrid and London has not yet taken any favourable turn In conſequence of which, a courier was diſpatched the ſame night from hence to Madrid.

Smyrna (in Turky) Oct. 15. The Captain of a French ſhip, who arrived here a few days ago from Lemnos, declares that a Ruſſian man of war of 80 guns commanded by Admiral Elphinſtone, has been loſt upon a rock, but that the crew and guns were ſaved.

Warſaw (in Poland) Dec 5. We have juſt received the important news that the garriſon of Brailow, fearing the ſame fate of that of Bender, abandoned the place, but that the greater part of them were drowned in croſſing the Danube Immediately after that ſhameful flight, the Ruſſians took poſſeſſion of Brailow.

Paris, Dec. 21 The Parliament has received letters from his Majeſty dated the 19th in which they are ordered to proceed on buſineſs; but they have refuſed to obey them.

Jan. 1. An Evening Paper of Saturday ſays, The diſpoſition of the new French Miniſtry is certainly FOR WAR.

As the King of Pruſſia was lately eaſily riding from Potzdam to Berlin attended by one Gentleman and one Huſſar he perceived on a poſt, which was placed in the road, a paper written in large characters; he ordered the Huſſar to bring it to him, when he perceived it was a libel againſt himſelf and government, wherein he was accuſed in moſt indecent terms, of every crime human nature could be guilty of. The King ſhewed it to the Gentleman and aſked him what he thought of it? "Why, Sir, ſaid he, you ſhould find out the author, and let him ſuffer the utmoſt rigour of the law." "Pho, pho," ſays the King, "here, Huſſar put it in its place again; it will ſave the poor author the trouble of writing another; was I to deſtroy this, he would have nothing to do but to write for a fortnight.

Extract of a letter received on Monday night from Paris

"The Duke de Noailles, who is not yet abſolutely Miniſter, has all the precaution of Choiſeul, without one ſpark of his ambition. He is for peace—he has repeatedly declared himſelf for peace with the Engliſh. With theſe ſentiments, I can aſſure you he entered into the head of the Cabinet of France."

A quantity of naval and military ſtores are ordered to be ſhipped for Senegambia; and a reinforcement of troops is alſo ordered for compleating the garriſon there.

It is reported that Captain Preſton has received aſſurance of being recompenced for his late ſufferings, in conſequence of the proſecution carried on againſt him at Boſton in New England.

It is ſaid that letters of recal are preparing for Lord Harcourt who is to aſſume a principal poſt in Adminiſtration and that a nobleman has been nominated to ſucceed him as Ambaſſador to the Court of France.

An Evening Paper has the following letter, which was received a few days ago by a certain Great Man.

"My Lord, A word before a blow, as the lightning is before the thunder. Beware how you make us deſperate by cauſing your doctrines to be approved by the worthleſs mercenaries in both houſes. Remember I ſo warn you: It is a ſubject which will be ſeen, heard and FELT ON.

Buckingham Gate August,
the 2d 1628

Extract of a letter from Dover, Dec. 30.

"A veſſel arrived yeſterday from Calais, brought the news that the inhabitants there were making great preparations to illuminate their houſes, a courier arrived embarking for England with the news that a peace, not a war, was the ultimate reſolution of the Courts of England and Spain. [Kentiſh Gazette]

The following is a fact; An Iriſhman at a certain coffee-houſe, who ſeemed to have the appearance of a gentleman explained to ſome company the true meaning of the proverb, "What's one man's meat is another man's poiſon," in the following manner: "You know, gentleman, (ſaid he) hemlock is deadly poiſon, to men, and, by Jaſus, it is very ſalutary to goats."

Yeſterday an expreſs arrived at the Dock-yard, to loſe no time in equipping the Royal William, of 80 guns, the Princeſs Amelia of 90, the Mars of 74 and the Worceſter of 64 guns.

We hear Admiral Geary has deſired leave to reſign.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.

Captain Aſhmead, arrived here from Barbadoes, informs us, That Captain Cotton, in a Sloop from New London, on the 25th of Dec. laſt, in Lat. 37 Long. 60, was obliged to cut away his Maſt, in a violent Gale of wind, had loſt 30 Horſes off his Deck, and the next morning ſaw a Sloop that was overſet.

In the Storm of Wind, Snow and Rain, on Saturday, the 9th Inſtant, the Brig Queen of the May, Captain Chancellor, bound to Liſbon from this Port parted her Cables about Seven o'Clock at night, and drove aſhore about a Mile within Cape Henlopen, about Ten o'Clock ſhe fell on her Beam Ends, and the People took to that Side of the Veſſel out of water to ſave themſelves, but the Sea making a continual Breach over them, they were in the moſt imminent Danger of their Lives, and a Negro Man was waſhed overboard and drowned; the next Morning the Captain, and an Apprentice had periſhed with Cold and Fatigue the reſt of the People made a Shift to get the Yawl free by which means they got ſafe on ſhore, much fatigued, and ſcarcely able to help themſelves.

NEW-YORK March 28

On Monday the 18th of March, Inſtant, The Sons of Liberty in this City, met at Hampden Hall, to celebrate the Day on which our moſt gracious Sovereign, in Compaſſion to his American Subjects, redeemed them from the Yoke of Slavery and Oppreſſion, by repealing the Stamp-Act.

NEW PORT, March 25.

Laſt Wedneſday arrived, in 38 days from St. Nichola Mole, the Brig Induſtry Capt. Samuel Lawton.——While Captain Lawton was lying to, in a hard gale at N. W. in lat 40 6. long. 69 at 3 o'clock laſt Saturday morning, a ſloop ran foul of him, and carried away his main top-maſt main-topſail yard, and all his chain plates; but what damage the ſloop received he could not tell, or whether ſhe ſunk or not; nor did he learn the Maſter's name, ſhe being out of ſight in 3 minutes, and could not be ſeen the next day; though imagines the ſloop was one which ſailed from the ſame place 5 days before him, belonging to Boſton, Benjamin Eldridge, Maſter.

By the laſt New London Paper, we find, that out of 5 or 6 veſſels only, belonging to Connecticut, 12 or 14 perſons were loſt in a violent gale of wind about the 25th of December, and near 100 horſes.

N. B. By a good calculation, it appears that the Northern Colonies have ſunk near 50 per cent. on all the horſes ſhipped for the Weſt-Indies for 10 years paſt.——How well worth purſuing is ſuch a trade! And who would not kill all their ſheep to enable them to raiſe horſes?

Laſt Thurſday as two brothers, named Stafford, were a gunning at the ſhore in Little Compton, the younger brother's gun accidentally went off, when the whole charge entered the right temple of the other, came out at the left eye brow, and killed him inſtantly. He has left a widow and 4 or 5 children.

Saturday evening arrived the ſloop Neptune, Capt. James Nixon, in 28 days from the Mole, by whom we are informed, that accounts were received from Port au Prince, of the arrival of ſeveral ſhips in ſhort paſſages, informing that affairs between England and Spain were likely to be amicably ſettled.——Captain Nixon had very bluſtring weather on the coaſt, and on the 18 inſt. lat. 37 40 long. 72, 30, ſpoke with Capt. Joſeph Dean, from Surinam for Boſton, 56 days out, who was determined to put into Philadelphia, or the firſt port he could make. Capt. Nixon brought part of three whaling crews belonging to Dartmouth, whoſe veſſels had been taken by two Spaniſh guardacoſtas on the ſouth ſide of Hiſpaniola, in Sam Bay; the maſters of ſaid veſſels were Silas Butler, William Roberts, and Richard Welding; alſo Ephraim Peaſe of the Vineyard was taken at the ſame time, but had his veſſel, and cargo of 200 barrels of oil, given him, to bring away the others hands: The other 3 veſſels were carried to St. Domingo, having each 100 barrels of oil on board. Theſe 4 veſſels were taken in the morning of the 11th of February.

"I have the pleaſure to inform you that the Project, which has been ſtrongly urg'd by the enemies of your Province to alter your Charter, is now wholly laid aſide.——It is juſtly conſider'd as a Compact between the King and the people, which cannot be vacated without the Conſent of both Parties". Query, Whether making a Governer independent upon the People for his Subſiſtence as well as Exiſtence as a Governer, would not eſſentially annihilate the freedom of our Charther.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in the Admiralty Office, dated Dec. 31, 1770.

The Talk is much of War. This Day the Preſs Warrants were renewed for a Year, as alſo the Preſs from Protections——Four five Ships were ordered Yeſterday to be got ready with the utmoſt Diſpatch; between 40 and 50 Sail of the Line preparing for Sea, 25 of them are mann'd."

Yeſterday Morning died at Roxbury, in the 77th year of his Age, his Excellency William Shirley, Eſq; formerly Governor and Commander in Chief of this Province. We hear his Funeral is to be attended on Friday next, at the Houſe of John Erving, jun. Eſq;

We are informed, by ſeveral Captains of Veſſels lately arrived at Salem, that from about the 13th to the 22d of January, a Comet, with a glimmering Tail, was ſeen, from ſeveral Iſlands in the Weſt Indies, in the S. E. Part of the Heavens which moved very faſt to the Weſtward.

WILMINGTON, (North-Carolina) Jan. 9.

Laſt Tueſday morning about two o'clock, a dreadful fire broke out at Capt. Oldfield's ſtore, at the ſouth ſide of the dock: The ſame moment, that diſcovered the flames, ſhew'd the impoſſibility of extinguiſhing them. The fire raged with its utmoſt violence until all the houſes in that ſquare, fifteen in number, were totally conſumed. Upon the firſt alarm by the fire-bell, the engines were immediately brought to the ſpot and work'd, but without effect. The inhabitants of the town, and the people from the veſſels that lay at the wharfs, ſhewed utmoſt alacrity in endeavouring to ſtop the progreſs of the flames, and removing what could poſſibly be ſaved, but notwithſtanding every effort, a very great quantity of dry goods, rum, ſugar, molaſſes, flaxſeed and proviſion was conſumed.

The rapidity of the flames threatening the immediate deſtruction of Mr. Burgwin's, tar houſe, and all the wharfs, houſes and ſtores below the dock, a number of gentlemen exerted themſelves at the utmoſt riſque, inciting others by their example, manifeſted that they preferred the preſervation of ſo great a part of the property of others, to any conſideration of their own ſafety. By this laudable conduct a quantity of naval ſtores and lumber were removed amidſt an almoſt ſuffocating ſmoak, and within the ſcorching heat of the fire, which was thus prevented from farther devaſtation. Happily the wind was eaſterly, to this circumſtance and to the oppoſite houſe being of brick, was in a great meaſure owing the preſervation of the houſe and ſtore of John Lyon, Eſq; Had the fire extended itſelf to that part of Front-ſtreet, the whole of Dock-ſtreet, and in all probability the greateſt part of the town, muſt have been reduced to aſhes; the loſs on this melancholly occaſion is computed at Ten Thouſand pounds Proclamation money. Mr. Robeſon loſt above 1000l. This is the ſecond time that he has unhappily been a conſiderable ſufferer in this country, by fire.

We are deſired to add, that the ſchooner Two Brothers, and Bedford (Simmons and Benney) both of Rhode Iſland, have loſt all their ſails and great part of their rigging, which had been put into one of Mr. Robeſon's ſtores conſumed by this fire.

Some Account of RUSSIA.

RUSSIA is one of the Moſt extenſive ſtates that we know of in the whole habitable world. It contains conſiderably more territory than all the reſt of Europe put together Its length from the frontiers of Livonia to Kamtſchatka, or nearly oppoſite to Japan, is above twelve thouſand wreſts, which are 714 German miles, reckoning ſeven wreſts to a mile (about 6856 Engliſh miles) its breath extends from the 4th degree of latitude to beyond the 70th. But then this vaſt empire is very far from being ſo well cultivated and peopled as moſt of the other nations in Europe. There are deſerts from 80 to 130, and even to 200 Engliſh miles, in which there is not a living ſoul to be found; though ſome parts of theſe deſerts are ſituated in a very good climate, and have the beſt ſoil that could be wiſhed. True it is that in ſome places there is a deficiency of wood and water; in others there is every thing that is neceſſary for human life, and yet are deſerts for want of inhabitants. In ſhort, this empire could very eaſily afford ſuſtenance for triple the number of inhabitants it contains. The following account may furniſh ſome grounds of judgment on this point. According to the laſt numbering, in the year 1744 and 1745, of the people of theſe provinces which properly conſtitute Ruſſia, there were ſeven millions of males, from the age of four years to that of ſixty, who pay the capitation or poſe tax. Seven millions more might be allowed for women, children, and old men. The officers of the revenue, and clerks of the chancery, who form a claſs apart, are, with their wives and children, reckoned about two hundred thouſand. For Livonia, Ingria, and Finland, provinces which are not comprehended in the capitation there are allowed ſix hundred thouſand ſouls. As for the Ukraine, of the Don, of the Jaick as well as for the different nations of heathens that inhabit Siberia and the frontiers of Auria and Japan, they are computed at a million eight hundred thouſand; the total making about eighteen millions four hundred thouſand individuals.

BOSTON, March 28.

Sunday laſt arrived here Capt. Rowe from London, by whom we have the following Advices, viz.

L O N D O N.

Dec. 25. Several American Agents are to wait upon Lord Hillſborough in a few days, to learn his Lordſhip's ſentiments on the ſubject of ſome particulars concerning the protection of the colonies, in caſe of a War.

It is generally believed Lord Weymouth will ſoon join the minority.

Dec. 29. It is now generally believed that Junius is the joint production of the Earl of Shelburne, Col. Barre, and Mr. Dunning.

A report is circulated at the Weſt End of the Town, that the Earl of Hillſborough will be appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in the room of Lord Viſcount Townſhend.

It is ſaid, that a Bill is preparing to be laid before an auguſt Aſſembly, to enable his Majeſty to appoint the Council for the Colony of Maſſachuſetts-Bay, in the ſame manner as his Majeſty appoints the Privy-Council of Great-Britain and Ireland; the right of chooſing the Council for the ſaid Colony is at preſent veſted in its Aſſembly.

Jan. 4. It is ſaid a Courier is arrived with Diſpatches from the Courts of Verſailles and Madrid, with Articles of Aſſurance for an Accommodation of Peace.

It was univerſally reported yeſterday on 'Change and at the Coffee-Houſes, that there will be no War.

Jan. 5. Yeſterday after breaking up of the Levee, at St. James's, Lord North, Lord Hillſborough, & Lord Barrington, had a long Conference with his Majeſty on Affairs of Importance.

It is aſſerted that the Government has already contracted for 25,000 Barrels of Iriſh Beef and Pork.

Letters from Florence ſay that the Earl of Bute has again relapſed into his old diſorder.

A new ſyſtem of regulations for the American Colonies, has lately been ſubmitted to the inſpection of a great number of reſpectable merchants; and we are informed will certainly be taken into conſideration of Parliament ſoon after the adjournment.

Dr. Edmund Keene, Biſhop of Cheſter, is elected Biſhop of Ely in the Room of Dr. Mawſon, deceaſed.

Rev. John Averell, Biſhop of Limerick in the Room of Dr Leſlie, deceaſed. Rev. George Berkly, Dean of Limerick.——Rev. Mr. Young, Prebendary of Cantebury Cathedral.

The 11th of laſt month died, at Dublin, Curtis Fartan, Gent. late Capt. Lieutenant in the 64th regiment, commanded by Col. John Pomeroy.

On Thurſday died in the Fleet-Priſon, Stephen Welch, who had been confined by Court of Chancery hear thirty years, for CONTEMPT!

Arrived, Beaver, Coffin, and Tartar, Merrick from Nantuket. The Hannnah, Pope, from Rhode-Iſland, is put into King-Road by Streſs of Weather.

It was his Majeſty's ſloop of war the Peggy, Capt. Toby, of 8 guns, beſides 16 ſwivels, and 124 men, that was forced on ſhore in the late ſtorm at Happiſburgh. Of the number of men loſt this unhappy juncture, 82 of this Ship's crew were buried in Happiſburgh Church-yard, and it is ſuppoſed there were 20 more, went away with the tide, and were no more ſeen.

H A L I F A X, Feb. 19

We hear from good Authority, that the Wreck of the Ship Diadem, Capt. Seguin, who ſailed from the Harbour for England in January 1769 and was ſuppoſed to have foundered at Sea, was ſeen laſt Summer on Shore at one of the Weſtern-Iſlands, having been found floating in the Occean a few Leagues off the ſaid Iſland——and was towe'd on Shore by the Portugueſe.

On Friday laſt between 11 & 12 o'clock A. M. a Melancholy Accident happened to Mrs Elizabeth Stiver in the North Suburbs of this Town. It ſeems ſhe had been out into Town and returned home about 11 o'clock, when ſhe locked herſelf into the houſe as is ſaid was her cuſtom, and went to making a Fire, when, by whatever means is unknown, it is ſuppoſed ſome of her Cloaths took fire, which burn'd her in the Face, Breſt and Legs &c. to ſuch a Degree that when her huſband came home at 12 o'clock, from the Navy Yard, where he is employed as a Watchman, he being obliged, after knocking at the Door ſeveral Times and no one opening it, to burſt it open, and found her expired on the Floor.

HARTFORD, April 2.

His Honor the Governer has iſſued a Proclamation, appointing Thurſday the 18th of April next for a general Faſt in this Colony.

A few Days ſince the noted Richard Steel was diſmiſſed from Goal in this Place, where he had been confined for Coſts on his laſt Trial for Burglary——and on Tueſday Night laſt Week he broke open the Houſe of Mr. —— Kibbe, of Enfield, and rob'd it of ſundry Articles and a ſmall Sum in Money; from thence he went to the Barn of Mr. Terry of Enfield, and ſtole a Horſe, and made off; but he was purſued and taken the next Day at Weſton, and on Saturday returned to his former Lodgings in this Place, where it is hoped he will be confined till he ſhall receive a full Reward for all his paſt Offences.

INOCULATION.

Dr. Tapper,

TAKES this method to acquaint the public, that he has for ſome time paſt, and ſtill is carrying on that branch of his profeſſion at Kingſton, alias Euſopus, in Ulſter County, province of New-York, where thoſe gentlemen and ladies that ſhou'd be inclin'd to take the Small Pox, may depend on having good genteel lodging and nurſing, at the moderate price of One Dollar and half per week, and Three Dollars for the Doctor, ſo that the whole expence, in an ordinary way, will not exceed nine or ten dollars. This place is extremely healthful and pleaſant, and out of near ſix hundred perſons that have been inoculated, not one ſingle patient has been loſt. 27

BROKE out, and made their eſcape from the common goal in Hartford, the night after the 26th inſtant, the following perſons, viz. John Marſhel Roberts of Tolland, a man of about 24 years of age, rather more than middling for ſtature, wore his own black hair. Alſo one Joel Gay of Hebron, he was a man of about 27 years of age, of a middling ſtature, wore his own hair, they both were committed for Burglary, the ſaid Gay, was crop'd and branded, but held in goal for the coſt, Roberts had his trial, and found guilty, but hath not received his puniſhment. Whoever ſhall take up the ſaid perſons, or either of them, and convey them to this goal, ſhall have a reward of TWENTY SHILLINGS for each, paid, by JOHN LORD, Goaler.

POET'S CONRER.

The State of Nature. From the Eſſay on Man.

NOR think in nature's ſtate they blindly trod;
The ſtate of nature was the reign of God:
Self love and ſocial at her birth began,
Union the bond of all things, and of man.
Pride, then was not; nor arts, that pride to aid;
Man walk'd with beaſt, joint tenant of the ſhade;
The ſame his table, and the ſame his bed,
No murder cloath'd him, and no murder fed.
In the ſame temple, the reſounding wood,
All vocal beings hymn'd their equal God:
The ſhrine with gore unſtain'd, with gold undreſt;
Unbrib'd, unbloody ſtood the blameleſs prieſt:
Heav'n's attribute was univerſal care,
And man's prerogative, to rule, but ſpare.
Ah! how unlike the man of times to come!
Of half that live, the butcher, and the tomb;
Who, foe to nature, hears the gen'ral groan,
Murders their ſpecies, and betrays his own!
But juſt diſeaſe to luxury ſucceeds,
And ev'ry death its own avenger breeds;
The fury paſſions from that blood began,
And turn'd on man, a fiercer ſavage, man.

An Epigram.

CRIES Celia to a Rev'rend D—n,
What reaſon can be giv'n,
Since Marriage is an holy Thing,
That there is none in Heav'n?
There are no Women, he reply'd:
She quick returns the Jeſt,
Women there are, but I'm afraid
They cannot find a Prieſt.

LONDON, January 1, 1771.

On Saturday the 20th of Oct. there appeared in London Gazette a promotion by his Majeſty of ſix Captains to the rank of Admirals by which promotion ſeven very worthy officers, their ſeniors, were ſuperſeded, to the great ſurpriſe of every perſon acquainted with the navy. On the Saturday following the ſeven Captains ſo ſuperceded were likewiſe promoted to be Admirals, and their rank and precedency reſtored to them. This ſecond promotion was ſtill more ſurpriſing than the firſt. Col. B—re, in the Lower Room of the Robinhood Society, frequently called upon L—d N——h to account for this ſtrange proceeding, becauſe, he ſaid, one of the two ſteps muſt be wrong: if the ſeven deſerved to be ſuperceded, they ought not to have been reſtored; if, on the other hand, they deſerve the rank they had now obtained, it was ungrateful and ſcandalous to put ſuch a ſlight upon their ſervices, and ſuch a ſtigma on their characters, as had been done by ſuperceding them. L—d N——h being puſhed pretty hard one day on this ſubject, anſwered fretfully, that it was not in his department; that he would neither avow the meaſure nor diſavow it; that if gentlemen wanted to know who had adviſed his M——y to act ſo, they ought to aſk the Firſt L—d of the Ad——y, in whoſe department it was.

When this was ſaid by L—d N——h, it was generally underſtood that Sir E——d H——k's infirmities, and attention to other buſineſs, would prevent his being in the Lower Room this winter. However, when the augmentation of the navy was moved for, Sir E——d H—— was in the room. Col. B—e took the opportunity to apply to Sir E——d for the ſolution of the myſtery of a double promotion. Sir E——d H—k declared, that tho' in his department, it was not by his advice; he ſaid, he would tell the Room all he knew concerning it.—— 'I was directed to lay before his M—— a liſt of the navy down to L—d H—e incluſive, which I did according to their ſeniority, diſtinguiſhing the length of ſervice, and the particular character and ſervices of each. His M—— immediately gave me a ready written liſt of ſix whom he ſaid he had choſen to promote to the rank of Admiral; I intreated his gracious permiſſion to repreſent to him, that this promotion ſuperceded ſeven ſenior officers, diſtinguiſhed for their character, and eminent for their ſervices. His M—— replied, that he chooſe only ſix. I then requeſted his gracious M——, that the ſeven ſuperceded officers might be permitted to lay memorials of their ſervices before him. This his M—— moſt graciouſly permitted. I had afterwards orders to cauſe the ſeven ſuperſeded officers alſo to be inſerted in the Gazette." Col. B—re took occaſion from this hiſtory to obſerve, that it was the ſame caſe in the Ad——y as in every other part of government; that there was a certain buſy Devil that thruſt its head into every department, and did the buſineſs for every officer of State; that we have a nominal M——y, nominal S——s of State, nominal P—y C——l; men whoſe names are only uſed for reſponſibility; that ſo a deſpicable junto, who form the interior cabinet, may, at the riſque of others, work miſchief in darkneſs and obſcurity.

Extract of a Letter from Barnſtable, [England] December 14.

—"We have had moſt terrible windy weather, attended with abundance of rain, for ſeveral days paſt, which has done a great deal of damage, both by land and ſea, inſomuch that our coaſt is full of wrecks. Monday a large French veſſel, in great diſtreſs, was drove up St. George's channel, and got into Ilfracombe harbour; ſhe is full of hands & ſaid to be bound for Ireland. Our officers went on board her, and made a thorough ſearch, and found a great quantity of apples and pears of three pounds weight each, and many large cheſts of firelocks and other warlike inſtruments, with ſeveral great trunks of gold and ſilver laced cloaths, deſigned, it is ſuppoſed, to furniſh the Roman Catholicks in Ireland. Her whole cargo is ſaid to be worth upwards of 100,000l. Our officers have ſeized her, and put G. R. upon her, at which the French officers are highly incenſed, and ſwear they don't care a t—d for G. R nor any of the Engliſh, and wiſh to God they had foundered at ſea, rather than have fallen into our hands. They had a figure of the Virgin Mary on board, richly dreſſed, but ſhe could not inſure either ſhip or cargo, for which ſhe is highly abuſed by the whole crew, I don't doubt."——

The following extract of a letter from France is handed about in the city:——"The Engliſh Miniſtry are univerſally derided or pitied on the Continent; the ſeveral powers of Europe, even to the petty Electorates of the empire hold them in contempt, for carrying on a dilatory negociation with Spain, which was never meant by the latter to have a pacific iſſue. The political creed of every thinking people in Europe except of the Engliſh, in reſpect to the preſent commotions, is as follows: That the Spaniards are protracting this negociation to gain time, and equip themſelves for the field; that they will then attack the Britiſh territories in both Indies; that while our forces are hurried from home to oppoſe their motions in theſe places, and the kingdom left defenceleſs at home, France will pour in her ſtrength on the naked iſland, and endeavour to complete the ruin of that conſtitution, which they have admired and envied for ſo many centuries."

A letter from Portſmouth, dated Dec. 25, ſays, "Laſt night Admiral Geary gave notice to the maſters of ſuch ſhips as were bound to the Mediterranean, not to ſail without a convoy, which would be immediately appointed. A train of Artillery is ordered to this garriſon, which is expected every day."

In conſequence of ſome Expreſſions made uſe of by Governor Johnſtone in the Houſe of Commons laſt Friday, and applying them by inſinuation to the Rt. Hon. Lord George (Sackville) Germaine; the latter being informed of what paſſed, (for he was not in the Houſe that Day) followed Governor Johnſtone out of the Houſe Yeſterday, and called him into the Court of Requeſts, and there demanded Satisfaction, which Mr. Johnſtone ſeemed to decline, by ſaying, "He was in Order he had been quite Parliamentary, &c." Lord George ſaid, he had no Right to aſperſe his Character, and inſiſted upon his meeting him at Four o'Clock that Day (it was now Two o'Clock) at the Ring in Hyde-Park. As Governor Johnſtone could not uſe the Sword, Piſtols were agreed upon. Lord George took the Right Hon. Thomas Townſhend with him as his Second; and Sir James Lowther, Bart was Governor Johnſton's Second. Mr. Johnſton's Piſtols were fired firſt, and the Combatants having miſſed each other, (tho' the Diſtance was very ſmall between them) they had Recourſe to his Lordſhip's Piſtols. Lord George miſſed his Antagoniſt again; but Mr. Johnſtone's Ball ſtruck againſt the Cock of his Lordſhip's Piſtol. After this ſecond firing, the Seconds immediately interpoſed, and the affair ended.

Another Account ſays, the Duel fought in Hyde Park on Monday, between Mr. Johnſtone and Lord George, Germaine, was occaſioned by a Speech of the latter, in the Lower Room of the Robinhood Society, two Days before any Reſentment was ſhewn to it, and ſaid to have been one far from giving Offence, by many that were preſent; but to the ſurprize of the Aſſembly, two Nights afterwards Mr. Johnſtone got up, and ſpoke in a moſt indecent Manner, of Lord George, which aſtoniſhed the Hearers, but nobody took any Notice of it that Time; however Lord George ſent a Meſſage to the Gentleman to meet him in Hyde Park, which was complied with, and brought for his Second Sir James Lowther; and Lord George took with him Thomas Townſhend, Eſq. It was agreed to fight with Piſtols, and they fired twice at each other, but neither of them received a Wound. What was extraordinary, Lord George's Piſtol was ſhot out of his Hand at the ſecond Diſcharge of his Antagoniſt, but received not the leaſt hurt.

THIS is to give Notice, that the SUSQUEHANNAH Meeting is adjourned from the 13th Day of March Inſtant, to the 4th Day of April next, at Windham Court-Houſe.

An extract of a letter from a gentleman, to his friend, who was about to take up the work of the miniſtry.

DEAR SIR,

I Received yours of the 2d of March; and now, I embrace this, as the firſt opportunity, to return you an anſwer. I ſhould be very glad to have an opportunity, to converſe with you face to face, upon ſo important a point, as preaching the goſpel; but this I am deprived of at preſent, and therefore muſt content myſelf to be confined to this epiſtolary way of converſing. My ideas, ſir, you deſired me in your laſt letter, to let you know when I expected to enter into the ſacred work of the miniſtry—This is a hard queſtion, attended with two difficulties, which have perplexed my mind, not a little: however, I think at preſent, I am pretty well ſettled, with reſpect to them both: and I would to GOD, that every one was ſettled upon the right baſis, with reſpect to preaching the goſpel—You muſt know, ſir, that the difficulties which I ſpeak of are theſe, viz. Whether a man has any right to preach before ordination, or not; and whether a licence gives a man any right to preach? the latter of theſe, all who give licence deny: and to ſupport themſelves in this abſurd practice, they deny that any candidate does preach, and they likewiſe openly deny, that a licence does give him the leaſt authority to preach; and yet they inſiſt, that candidates ſhould be licenced. Now, in the name of common ſenſe, I would aſk why a man may not preach as ſafely, without a licence, as with, ſince it gives him no authority at all to preach, according to their own words? But here theſe jugglers, & abuſers of common ſenſe ſhelter themſelves under a covert of prieſt-craft, and ſay if candidates do not take a licence, we will tell the people not to hear them, altho' we know they preach the pure doctrines of chriſtianity: that is to ſay, if they will not help us to ſupport prieſt-craft, we will turn our arms againſt them; and we are ſo mighty in the earth already, that we can cruſh all before us, even the moſt pious endeavours of all, who are not on our ſide; and therefore we give fair warning to all, who would ſleep in a whole ſkin, to come over to our ſide. But I hope e'er long, to ſee all theſe ſupporters of Koraiſm, drove from under their covert, and hunted from all their ſecret haunts, and expoſed to the view of common ſenſe, where they will look like owls in open day light———You doubtleſs remember, my dear friend, that when we were at the univerſity together, I always expreſſed an abhorrence againſt ſophiſtry, and prieſt craft; but revered the ſacred function when rightly diſcharged. I think prieſt craft has reigned triumphant, long enough already: and I would to God, that the time might now commence, when the Popes ſhould ceaſe to grant indulgence——and when all ſhould be guided by the word of God. Could we once ſee this happy time, I am perſuaded, and that not without good reaſon, that we ſhould never more ſee a man attempt to preach, till he is firſt ordained. Indulgences would then be at an end; and candidates would then deſiſt from the bold invaſion, with a ſhuddering horror, like that which made the congregation of Iſrael flee, when the earth ſwallowed up Korah, Dathan and Abiram, for invading the prieſt's office. I ſay theſe things, not to affright you, but as a dear brother I would warn you, againſt running before you are ſent, or of accepting of any indulgence in miniſterial affairs; for the word of God knows of no ſuch thing, as what is now a days called a licence to preach; for how ſhall they preach except they be ſent? Rom. 10, 15. Read alſo, 1 Cor. 1, 21; Mark 16, 16; John 20, 21; Acts 13, 3 4, &c. When I talk with theſe gentlemen, who hold to the doctrine of indulgence, they are obliged to run into all manner of abſurdities, and contradict one moment, what they owned, but the moment before, and explain away the ſenſe of every thing, which oppoſes them, in order to ſupport their own doctrine. One moment they will tell you, that candidates do preach, the next, they will ſay, they do not. And if you deteſt them for the contradiction, they will tell you, that when they ſay candidates do preach, they mean to be underſtood in the vulgar, and not in the true ſenſe of the word; for in the ſtrict ſenſe, they ſay, that they do not ſuppoſe that a man can preach, till he is ordained; which is as abſurd, as to ſuppoſe that a man cannot get drunk, till 9 o'clock, let him drink never ſo much, becauſe it is before the third hour of the day. Thus by contradictions, abſurdities and prieſt-craft, theſe gentlemen ſupport, their principles by which, they grant indulgences——My friend, if you would ſee the doctrines of indulgence fairly confuted, read the reverend and learned Ebenezer Prime, Paſtor of the presbyterian church in Huntington on Long Iſland.

THE commiſſaries of the Ruſſian ſquadron have received an order here, which will not allow the completing their agreement for proviſions for their fleet; and our merchants have received advice from their correſpondents at Marſeilles, to diſcontinue commerce with the Engliſh, from the Great-[illegible] of a rupture between the Engliſh and Spaniards.

Ferrari (in Italy) Dec 8. The republic of Venice has reſolved to permit no places of Aſylum in their ſtates; the hotels of the Ambaſſadors will even be deprived of that right which they have ſo long enjoyed. This affair will probably occaſion ſome coolneſs between the republic and ſome foreign Courts.

Warſaw, (in Poland) Dec. 5. The Ruſſians have at length made themſelves maſters of Ibrailow which was abandoned by the Turks, as Choczim was laſt year. A courier has brought a confirmation of it to Prince Wolkonſki, the Ruſſian Ambaſſador. After this conqueſt Gen. Leiden, Dec 25. A letter of good credit from Paris, dated the 17th inſtant, aſſures us that the Parliament of that city in their Deliberations on the 14th, on the ſubject of the King's refuſal to give audience to his Parliament before they had reſumed their functions, had reſolved that their firſt preſident ſhould ſay to his Majeſty, "Your edict, Sire, is deſtructive of all law; "your Parliament is charged to maintain law: "and the law periſhing, they ſhould periſh with "it. Theſe are, Sire, the laſt words of your Parliament."

Some other letters from Paris mention the Duke de Choiſeul's being exiled, and ſucceeded by the Duke de Aiguillon; and add, that the Duke de Praſlin is alſo baniſhed.

We hear that on the 14th of Nov. laſt, by order of the King of Spain, all friars that had not taken up their orders, were inliſted into his ſervice, to the amount of 35 000 men.

A rumour prevails, that an authentic confirmation has been received from Holland, that ſeveral Dutch tranſports are now loading in the Texel, with all kinds of warlike ſtores for the uſe of the Spaniards; and that theſe ſhips will ſail with falſe clearances for the Dutch iſlands of Curacoa and St. Euſtatia, though really intended for the Havannah and other Spaniſh ports.

Some capital inſurrance on Spaniſh property were done on Thurſday at the under writing offices in the city at very advanced premiums.

The laſt letters from Amſterdam mention, that the ſum of three millions of gilder, was negotiating for the ſervice of his Pruſſian Majeſty.

It is now reported that his Grace the Duke of Grafton will certainly go as Lord Lieutenant to Ireland.

An embargo, by his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant and the Privy Council of Ireland, is laid upon the exportation of all Iriſh proviſions, to any parts whatſoever, excepting to Great-Britain and the dominions thereto belonging; & on Friday ſe'nnight ſome ſhips, laden with beef, butter, and pork, bound to France, were ſtopt by the embargo laid on by proclamation.

On the 27th of Nov. laſt, a packet boat from the Havannah, with about 600 cheſts of ſugar, and 8000 dollars, was loſt in the Harbour of Corunna; the Captain and 18 men were drowned. Alſo was loſt near Corunna, a ſloop from Yeſterday a warrant was made out for the executing Captain Ferguſon, at Execution dock, on Thurſday next, for the murder of his cabbin-boy on the high ſeas, and his body is afterwards to be hung in chains upon the marſhes down the river; the ſentence paſſed upon him by Sir Tho. Saluſbury, "to be diſſected and anatomized," being reverſed by the Lords of the Admiralty, who have a power by act of parliament to change that part of the ſentence, which they have accordingly done, and ordered him to be hung in chains as above mentioned.

Friday laſt a preſs gang was very buſy at Newington-Butts, and having impreſſed a poor countryman from his wife and children, the diſtreſſed woman followed her huſband with lamentations, which induced many women to ſally from their houſes; among the amazons was the famous Hannah Snell, who immediately demanded the captive from the Lieutenant; he refuſing, and hard words enſuing ſhe collared and ſhook him; two ſailors advanced to reſcue their officer, whom ſhe beat, and challenged to fight any of the gang with fiſts, ſticks, or quarter ſtaff, only let her be permitted to pull off her ſtays, gown and petticoats, and put on breeches, declaring ſhe had ſailed more leagues than any of them, and if they were ſeamen they ought to be on board, and not ſneak about as kid nappers; "but if you are afraid of the ſea, take Brown Baſs on your ſhoulders, and march through Germany as I have done, ye dogs; I have more wounds about me than you have fingers. By G--d, this is no falſe attack; I'll have my man." and accordingly took the poor fellow from the gang, and reſtored him to his wife. Thus did the long petticoats, headed by a veteran virago, overcome the ſhort trowſers.——Mrs. Snell has a penſion of 50l. per annum left by the late Duke of Cumberland for many manly ſervices by ſea and land.

The Spaniſh Ambaſſador, we find, ſecludes himſelf for the preſent, till he receives anſwers to the diſpatches he has lately ſent to his Court, touching their determinations as to England ſince the change in the French adminiſtration.

The ſiege of Ibraiiow coſt the Ruſſians 1200 men, in killed and wounded; amongſt them, nine officers. Col. Jeltſchaninow, Knight of the military order of St. George, was killed at this ſiege, and is greatly regretted by the whole army.

It is ſaid that our extraordinary treaty with Ruſſia for ſupplying her with ſixteen ſhips of war, whenever ſhe ſhall make a demand of them, will be called for in a certain place, and ſeriouſly agitated in a ſhort time.

LONDON, January 26.

The Public may be aſſured the following are AUTHENTIC.

ABOUT Three o'clock Yeſterday Afternoon the Right Hon. Lord North laid before the Houſe of Commons, by His Majeſty's Command, the two following Papers.

TRANSLATION of the DECLARATION ſigned and delivered by Prince de Maſerano, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from his Catholic Majeſty, dated the 22d day of January 1771.

HIS Britannick Majeſty having complained of the violence which was committed on the 10th of June, 1770, at the iſland commonly called the Great Malouine, and by the Engliſh Falkland's Iſland in obliging, by force, the commander, and ſubjects of the Britannick Majeſty, to evacuate the port, by them called Egmont, a ſtep offenſive to the honor of his Crown;—— the Prince de Maſerano, Ambaſſador Extraordinary of his Catholic Majeſty, has received orders to declare, and declares, that his Catholic Majeſty, conſidering the deſire with which he is animated for peace, and for the maintenance of good harmony with his Britannick Majeſty, and reflecting that this event might interrupt it, has ſeen with diſpleaſure this expedition tending to diſturb it; and in the perſuaſion in which he is, of the reciprocity of ſentiments of his Britannick Majeſty; and of its being far from his intention to authorize any thing that might diſturb the good underſtanding between the two Courts; his Catholick Majeſty does diſavow the ſaid violent enterprize;—and in conſequence, the Prince de Maſerano declares, that his Catholic Majeſty engages to give immediate orders, that things ſhall be reſtored in the Great Malouine, at the port called Egmont, preciſely to the ſtate in which they were before the 10th of June 1770: for which purpoſe his Catholick Majeſty will give orders to one of his officers, to deliver up to the officer, authorized by his Britannick Majeſty, the port and fort called Egmont; with all the artillery, ſtores, and effects of his Britannick Majeſty, and his ſubjects, which were at that place, the day above named; agreeable to the inventory which has been made of them.

The Prince de Maſerano declares, at the ſame time, in the name of the King his Maſter, that the engagement of his ſaid Catholick Majeſty, to reſtore to his Britannick Majeſty, the poſſeſſion of the fort and port called Egmont; cannot, nor ought, any wiſe, to effect the queſtion of the prior right of ſovereignty of the Malouine Iſlands, otherwiſe called Falkland's Iſlands. In witneſs whereof I the underwritten Ambaſſador Extraordinary, have ſigned the preſent Declaration with my uſual ſignature, and cauſed it to be ſealed with our arms. London, the twenty ſecond day of January, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ſeventy one. (L. S.) Signed.

Le Prince de Maſerano.

HIS Catholick Majeſty having authorized the Prince of Maſerano, his Ambaſſador Extraordinary, to offer in his Majeſty's name, to the King of Great Britain, a ſatisfaction for the injury done to his Britannick Majeſty by diſpoſſeſſing him of the Port and Fort of Port Egmont; and the ſaid Ambaſſador having this day ſigned a declaration, which he has juſt delivered to me, expreſſing therein, that his Catholic Majeſty being deſirous to reſtore the good harmony and friendſhip which before ſubſiſted between the two Crowns, does diſavow the expedition againſt his Britannic Majeſty's poſſeſſions, commander and ſubjects; and does alſo engage that all the things ſhall be immediately reſtored to the preciſe ſituation in which they ſtood before the 10th of June 1770. And that his Catholic Majeſty ſhall give orders, in conſequence, to one of his officers, to deliver up to the officer, authorized by his Britannic Majeſty the Port and Fort of Port Egmont, as alſo all his Britannic Majeſty's artillery, ſtores, and effects as well as thoſe of his ſubjects, according to the inventory, which has been made of them. And the ſaid Ambaſſador having moreover engaged, in his Catholic Majeſty's name, that what is contained in the ſaid declaration, ſhall be carried into effect by his Catholic Majeſty; and that duplicates of his Catholic Majeſty's orders to officers, ſhall be delivered into the hands of one of his Britannic Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, within ſix weeks. His ſaid Britannic Majeſty, in order to ſhew the ſame friendly diſpoſitions on his part, has authoriſed me to declare, that he will look upon the ſaid declaration of Prince de Maſerano, together with the full performance of the ſaid engagement, on the part of his Catholic Majeſty as a full ſatisfaction for the injury done to the Crown of Great Britain. In witneſs whereof I the under written, one of his Britannic Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, have ſigned theſe preſents with my uſual ſignature, and cauſed them to be ſealed with our arms. London, the 22d day of January, 1771.

(L. S.) Signed ROCHFORD.

[As the Miniſter did not favour the Houſe, neither in writing, nor by ſpeech, with the King of Spain's inſtructions to his Ambaſſador in London; we ſhall here give what is authentically the purport of them, though perhaps it may not be exactly the tenor.

The King of Spain condeſcends, out of his regard for his loving Brother, the King of France, to relinquiſh Falkland Iſland. But at the ſame time Proteſts againſt any Claim the Engliſh may ſet up to the Right.]

After the Clerk had read the papers,

Lord N—th ſaid, when the merits of the Spaniſh declaration came under the examination of the H—e, he would avow the part he had taken in the negotiation.

Mr. D——ll moved that all papers, letters, inſtructions to our M——rs. &c. relative to the taking of Falkland Iſland, and the negotiation with Spain upon the ſubject, might all be laid before the H—e

Lord N—th conſented; only he deſired the papers might be moved for in three diſtinct motions, inſtead of being all included in one.

Mr. M—ng made an objection as to the idleneſs, between one motion and three, for the ſame thing.

Mr. D—ll agreed to L. North's requeſt.

Mr. D—n made a fooliſh quibble about ſome words in the motion, conveying, as he pretended a meaning contrary to a part of the K—'s Speech, at the opening of the preſent ſeſſion.

Colonel B—e ſhewed, that the words objected to, were copied exactly from the K—'s Speech. He compared Mr. D—n to a ſnow ball, and was very ſevere upon him. He then called the Spaniſh Declaration, ſcandalous and infamous, diſhonourable to the crown, and diſgraceful to the nation. He ſaid, when the merits of this Declaration came under examination he ſhould ſpeak fully to it; for he had much to ſay upon it, and ſhould therefore reſerve himſelf for that day. But at preſent he could not help obſerving, there was not a man in England who did not condemn that declaration. What four months arming! and four months negotiating! and is this all!——The noble Lord (Lord N—h) ſaid in this H——e before the Holidays, that Spain ſhould pay a part of the expence we have been at, in making preparations to reſent the inſult. But there is not a word of the expence in the Declarations. The enemy was not ignorant of the weakneſs and cowardly diſpoſition of the M——s. The enemy know you dare not go to war (to Lord N—h) and therefore refuſe to make us any ſatisfaction. There is not an honeſt man in England, who does not abhor the preſent ſet of M——s. There is not a petty Prince in Europe, who does not laugh at and deſpiſe them. Thus it is in the power of any individual to put us to an enormous expence, and our M—s dare not avenge the affront. They dare not go to war, becauſe they are afraid they ſhall loſe their places. Thus the nation is expoſed to inſults abroad; and it is left a prey to Jobbers and ſharpers at home. A French Secretary, being in your ſecrets, has made near half a million of money by gaming in your funds. And ſome of the higheſt among yourſelves [Lord H——tf——d, Lord H——d, &c &c] have been deeply concerned in the ſame ſcandalous traffic. But a day of reckoning will come. This country cannot be quiet, while every thing that is dear and valuable to the people, is thus raviſhed from them.

Lord N——th denied, that he had ever ſaid Spain ſhould pay part of the expence. He declared, that he could not have ſaid ſo, becauſe he had never entertained the leaſt idea of making ſuch a demand.

Mr. C——s Fox ſaid, he did not remember the noble Lord to have ever made uſe of any ſuch words [He looks very much like his Father.]

Colonel B—re ſaid, he had not truſted to his own memory only, for his account of that fact. He had aſked ſeveral other m——rs, who all remembered the words.

Mr. B—ke ſaid he remembered the words. He condemned the declaration in very ſevere terms. He called it ſcandalous, infamous and treacherous. He ſaid, the nation would demand the blood of thoſe who made it. Nothing elſe could——nothing elſe would ſatisfy.——This declaration, this wiſdom, this ſpirit of the M——y, this vindication of the honour of the Crown, this ſecurity of the rights of the ſubject, which all lies in a nut ſhell, has coſt the nation above two millions of money! The Land Tax was prematurely voted; or rather, the country gentlemen have been duped out of 500,000l. The trade of this country has been greatly diſtreſſed and injured; 40 000 ſeamen have been voted; an additional army 13000 men have been voted and they muſt all be paid; a great number of ſhips have been put into commiſſion, at a great expence to the public, and all for what? Why, to procure that ſcandalous, baſe, and diſhonourable Declaration that lies upon the table.

The M——rs made no reply.

[While Mr. B—ke was ſpeaking, there was ſuch a confuſion and noiſe in the room from ſome of the m——rs going out others talking, that he was obliged to ſit down for a ſhort time. When he got up again, he began with words to the following purport: Is this Society ſo irregular, ſo totally loſt to decency and good manners, that I cannot be heard when I am ſpeaking to a queſtion of the utmoſt importance to the kingdoms in general, and to our conſtituents in particular? Are the ears of this Aſſembly to be wilfully miſlead from giving attention to me, when I am arguing on a point of ſuch a nature, that their muſt be blood, I ſay blood, to atone for the miſconduct of thoſe who tranſacted this dark affair? The day may not be immediately at hand; but it cannot, it muſt not, be at a great diſtance; It will come, when the lives of ſome concerned in this buſineſs make atonement to this injured nation, &c.

When the debate was over, ſeveral new writs were moved for. But when Mr. W——rn was mentioned, the members expreſſed their contempt of it, by a very loud and diſmal groan (ſuch as the Livery of London generally give in Guildhall, to the Name of an Alderman whom they diſlike) and it was negatived by ſeveral of the m——rs crying out, no! no! no! A circumſtance ſo extraordinary; and peculiarly diſgraceful, has not happened in the memory of the oldeſt member of the H—e of C——ns, and muſt forever cover the apoſtate with ſhame.

The reigning toaſt is, "May the late accomodation with Spain, be honorable, be durable, but not diſarming yet."

Some letters from Holland, of good authority, by the laſt mail adviſe, that the States General have ordered 18 men of war to be fitted out immediately.

LONDON,

A quantity of naval and military ſtores are ordered to be ſhipped for Senegambia; and a reinforcement of troops are alſo ordered for completing the garriſon there.

Lord Weymouth, we are confidently aſſured, gave his opinion in Council for an immediate War with Spain, and on this account was obliged to relinquiſh the poſt of Secretary of State for the Southern department, becauſe in ſuch diſpoſition he could not treat with the Spaniſh Miniſter for peace. His Lordſhip was offered the Northern Department, but choſe to retire.

It is ſaid there are conſiderable ſubſcriptions already paid to the Bill of Rights, for the purpoſe of trying the land tax affair, &c. with the Commiſſioners of Middleſex.

Our Correſpondent at Portſmouth ſays, "All the artificers belonging to our Dock yard worked on Sunday; they go on with great expedition in getting the ſhips in the harbour fit for ſea."

Harwich, Dec. 28. The Snow ſloop of war was amongſt the number of ſhips that were loſt on the Home Sand, and the crew, conſiſting of 80 men, periſhed.

The foregoing intelligence was taken from a Liverpool print of the 1ſt of February; from the ſame paper we have alſo taken the following ſhort extracts, viz. THAT the Ruſſians have retaken the Iſle of Lemnos, and all the Turks found there were put to the Sword; they have alſo taken Diſcharſcrewo, the laſt Fortreſs the Turks had on the Danube, with a conſiderable ſlaughter, and 20,000 Tartars were ſubmitted to the Ruſſians laſt year, have taken up arms againſt the Turks: That the Earl of Sandwich, as firſt Lord of the Admiralty has declared that no new Lieutenants ſhall be made in the royal navy, till all the half pay Lieutenants are provided for:—That Mr. Juſtice Bathurſt is appointed Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, William De Grey, Eſq; is appointed Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, in the room of Sir John Eardly Wilmot, who has reſigned, and Mr. Serjeant Naire is appointed a Judge in the room of the Lord Chancellor; and 'twas ſaid Mr. Serjeant Leigh will be appointed King's Serjeant in the room of Judge Naires. Mr. Thurloe is appointed Attorney General, and Mr Wedderburn Solicitor General:—That 'tis ſaid if peace ſhould enſue, 25 000 ſeamen are to be retained in his Majeſty's ſervice for the future:——That notwithſtanding the agreement to our requiſitions on the part of the court of Spain, it is ſaid their ambaſſador will not continue long in England; and it is the opinion of many that the Spaniards are more politic than honeſt, and ſome ſay their intentions are hoſtile, tho' their profeſſions are peaceful:——That the Ruſſians have taken and carried into Miſſina 7 ſhips of different nations laden with the productions of Egypt, and were bound to Conſtantinople:—That the court of Spain had given orders to diſcharge every ſubject of Great Britain from the naval ſervice of Spain:——That 'twas ſaid all the military preparations in Great Britain are to be carried on till finiſhed, and then to remain on that footing, and if England would keep 30,000 ſeamen in pay, perhaps we might not experience a war in the courſe of 30 years.——And that orders were ſent to Portſmouth to poſtpone the embarkation of the companies of the royal train of artillery for Gibralter, till further orders.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Liverpool, to another in Boſton, dated February 5 1771.

"Matters with regard to a War ſeem at a hand, notwithſtanding the court of Spain has offer'd ſatisfaction (as it is called to our court) for the inſult given, which believe was accepted by the miniſtry, but greatly to the diſlike of both Lords and Commons, as well as the public.——How the diſpute will terminate, we cannot at preſent ſay, but the general cry ſeems for war."

"We are very much engaged in preparing for the Ship's Departure, are much perplexed by the preſs gangs, who are continually ſtripping the Ships; Protections are nothing, ſo that no Sailors dare appear; and when the Ships are loaded, we fear men cannot be had for Sea."

Captain Biddle ſailed from Port au Prince the 16th of February, at which time the French were in daily expectation of a War, which they much dreaded, as the place is quite defenceleſs ſince the earthquake, and a number of fine ſhips lay in the harbour, which might eaſily be cut; they have a ſmall Frigate of 20 guns lying there, but ſhe has buried moſt of her hands, and had not above 30 men fit for duty.

A gentleman at Loweſtoft has favoured us with the following account ;—" The dreadful ſtorm on Wedneſday the 19th inſt. began about one o'clock in the morning, and continued with increaſing violence till five, when the wind ſuddenly changed from the South Weſt to the North-Weſt and for a few hours raged with a fury that was hardly ever equalled. Anchors and cables proved too feeble a ſecurity for the ſhips, which inſtantly parting from them, and running on board each other, produced a confuſion neither to be deſcribed or conceived ; not a few immediately foundered, others were diſmaſted, and none eſcaped unhurt. At daylight a ſcene of the moſt tragic diſtreſs was exhibited ; thoſe who firſt beheld it aſſert, that no leſs than eighteen ſhips were on the ſand before this place at one and the ſame time, and many others were ſeen to ſink ; of thoſe on the ſand one half were entirely demoliſhed, with their crews, before nine o'clock ; the reſt were preſerved a few hours longer ; but this dreadful pauſe ſerved only to aggravate the deſtruction of the unhappy men that belonged to them, who betook themſelves to the maſts and rigging ; theſe continually breaking, eight or ten were not unfrequently ſeen to periſh at a time, without the poſſibility of being aſſiſted ; fifteen only, about two in the afternoon, were taken off one of the wrecks, about as many more were ſaved by taking to their boats, or getting on board other ſhips when they boarded each other. It is impoſſible to collect with certainty, how many lives or how many ſhips were loſt in this terrible hurricane, twenty five at leaſt perhaps thirty ſhips, and two hundred men, do not ſeem to be an exaggerated account. This indeed is too ſmall a calculation, if credit is to be given to one of the ſeamen, who declares he ſaw ſix veſſels ſink not far without the Stanford, among which was a large ſhip bound for Liſbon with 60 or 70 paſſengers on board. One or two of the ſhips that are loſt belong to Yarmouth, and one to Plymouth, but the generality are colliers and belong to Sunderland, Shields, and other places in the North. The concern this deſtructive ſcene occaſioned to the ſpectators of it was increaſed by the following circumſtance ; when the maſts of one of the ſhips, on which were eight or nine men, fell, two of them were ſome time afterwards ſeen ſtruggling among the wreck, and at length, after unremitted efforts got upon the hull. In the afternoon a pilot-boat ventured from the ſhore, but it was found impracticable to adminiſter any relief, to the unfortunate ſufferers, whom they were compelled to leave in their forlorn ſtate ; an approching dark, cold, ſtormy night heightening the horrors of their ſituation. The next day, to the aſtoniſhment of every body, one of the men was obſerved to be alive, and about noon the boat again attempted to ſave him, and approached ſo near as to aſk the poor fellow ſeveral queſtions ; but the hull on which he was, being ſurrounded with wreck, and the ſea running ſo high, it was impoſſible to reſcue him from the impending danger. He was at the ſtern of the ſhip ; towards her head the ſailors conceived it barely poſſible to board her with ſafety. This they told the unhappy man they would attempt ; and bid him walk to the place, but replying he was too weak to change his ſituation, they were again obliged to leave him, making ſigns of his inconceivable diſtreſs. The inſuing night put a period to his misfortunes and life."——The gentleman concludes with the following reflection : " If ſuch calamities as theſe, which are the diſpenſations of Providence, occaſion any painful reflections, how great, muſt our emotion be, to conſider the thouſands of lives wantonly butchered in wars, kindled merely to gratify the whim of Princes, to feed the ambition of aſpiring men, or to furniſh men of diſſipation with means of indulging their exceſſes ? To a diſpaſſionate mind it ſeems equally wicked and abſurd, that two great and civilized nations ſhould ſacrifice the property, the repoſe, and the lives of their ſubjects to determine which of them has the beſt right to a deſert, truly as worthleſs to them both, as if it was placed in the ſatellites of Jupiter."

SUTTONIAN INOCULATION.

MR. LATHAM, Surgeon to the King's (or 8th) Regiment of Foot, acquaints the Inhabitants of this province, as alſo thoſe of New England, that he has open'd convenient Houſes for the Reception of Patients, who chooſe to be inoculated after the Suttonian Syſtem, where the greateſt Attention will be obſerved, and every Thing neceſſary provided.

Mr. Latham likewiſe informs the Public, that he is the only Perſon who can inoculate, or who can authoriſe Perſons to inoculate after this approved, eaſy, and ſucceſsful Method, in any Part of America, North of Philadelphia : while Doctor Shuttleworth (Brother in Law to Mr. Sutton) is the only Perſon that can inoculate, or can cauſe to be inoculated in the ſame Method, South of Philadelphia. As the New-England People ſuffer ſo ſeverely by the natural Small-Pox, Mr. Latham aſſures them, that he will wait upon any ſufficient Number aſſembled together to be inoculated ; and as his Deſire is to be of as much Service to Mankind as he poſſibly can, he will do every Thing in his Power to bring the Suttonian Syſtem to as great Utility and Practice in America, as it is now in England, Scotland, and Ireland ; where Mr. Sutton has ſeveral Partners in each country.

Mr. Latham has inoculated in Canada, lately three Hundred Perſons, belonging to Maſſachuſett's-Bay and Connecticut Governments, who were never confin'd from doing their uſual Occupations. For further Particulars, Application to be made to Mr. Latham, at his Houſe in Broad Street.

BROKE out, and made their eſcape from the common goal in Hartford, the night after the 26th inſtant, the following perſons, viz. John Marſhel Roberts of Tolland, a man of about 24 years of age, rather more than middling for ſtature, wore his own black hair. Alſo one Joel Gay of Hebron he was a man of about 23 years of age, of a middling ſtature, wore his own hair, they both were committed for Burglary, the ſaid Gay, was crop'd and branded, but held in goal for the coſt, Roberts had his trial, and found guilty, but hath not received his puniſhment. Whoever ſhall take up the ſaid perſons, or either of them, and convey them to this goal, ſhall have a reward of TWENTY SHILLINGS for each, paid, by

Pleaſe to give this a place in your next paper, if ſo, you will oblige one of your readers.

Ubi intenderis ingenium, valet. Si lubido poſſidet, ea dominatur. Animus nihil valet.— Sulluſt Hiſtoria.

IT affords me a great degree of pleaſure and ſatisfaction, to ſee any riſing genius in our nation eſpecially in America, which but a few years ſince, was a barren deſolate wilderneſs, deep ſunk in ſavage ignorance and barbarity, but thanks to heaven it is now far otherwiſe. Hail auſpicious day ! when glorious liberty, and her intrepid ſons, firſt landed upon theſe inhoſpitable ſhores, and made way for the arts and ſciences to bring up the rear with all their happy train. The mechanic arts have been conſiderably improved, eſpecially theſe three, agriculture, architecture and medicine. The public by turns has afforded ſome encouragement to agriculture ; it is not of ſo much importance if architecture is neglected, ſince that will increaſe in proportion as a fine taſte and politeneſs of manners increaſes. But is it not a criminal neglect in the public, to take ſo little notice how the medical art flouriſhes, and to afford it no more encouragement ? I do not mean to tax the public in too high terms, with inhumanity and ſtupid inſenſibility.————Yet is it not the moſt adviſeable way to appoint a profeſſor of phyſic, who ſhould reſide at our college, and read daily lectures upon chymiſtry, botany, &c ?—— I cant but think it is full as expedient and neceſſary, as to have a profeſſor of mathematics and natural philoſophy, altho' the knowledge of mathematics and natural philoſophy, tends as much as any of the arts and ſciences, to diſſipate ſuperſtitious chimeras, and old women's fables, which are the natural attendants of ignorance, and the offspring of over heated imaginations. (Pardon this digreſſion) to appoint as above would it not be the beſt, and moſt natural way, to debar from practice, all mountebanks, quacks and ignorant pretenders to phyſic. The world has been impoſed upon long enough by the above mentioned tribe of ignoramus's, did you never ſee one of theſe quacks aſſuming an important air, with arms a kimbo, racking his ſubtil brain to recollect ſome phyſical phraſes, which he underſtands a little better than the mimic parot, at length he rallies all his forces, then out comes a volley of hypocondrics, hyſterics, ipecacuanna's, with an inundation of noſtrums, the patient lies all this time, ſtruck with aſtoniſhment at the profound erudition of this eminent doctor, and in hopes of health, ſwallows the bitter pill, bleſſing his ſtars that he has got ſuch a ſkilful phyſician.—America has long been famed for theology, for ſententious and metaphyſical divines. There ſeems to be an unhappy war at preſent in the eccleſiaſtical world, between the two kingdoms of metaphyſics and Old Opinion, what the event will be, time only can reveal, yet it is hopeful that by the mediation of ſome power, they will come to happy and glorious capitulations of peace, before we are obliged to grapple with the united powers of the aſpiring houſe of Bourbon. Sed major rerum tibi naſcitur ordo ! Perhaps there can be ſome reaſons aſſigned, why men of genius may not appear, but none why they may not exiſt in one period as much as in another, for rain, air, and the influences of the ſun, are not more neceſſary, in the evocation of the vigitable world, than externals as time, opportunity, and the patronage of ſome able friend, in producing the flowers & the ripening fruits of genius ; it is true Virgil and Horace, and all thoſe authors, who graced the Auguſtian age, were indebted to heaven for their divine talents, but if Meccinas and Auguſtus, had not afforded them patronage, their works would not have been immortalized, and their names muſt have been circumſcribed within the narrow limits of their acquaintance. So the world would have been robbed of the moſt glorious trophies of Antiquity. I cant think that we are deſtitute of Meccinas's patrons of literature eſpecially of Poetry, it gives me great degree of pleaſure when I am reading your Poets Corner, to point out a riſing Shakeſpear, a Milton, a Pope, and Addiſon, and all the enchanting ſons of the muſes.—Have we not reaſon to believe, that now the Auguſtian age is ripening in America ?

Timothy Bickerſtaff.

LONDON, Jan. 26.

We hear that matters were at length carried ſo high between our Miniſtry and the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, that when the laſt requiſition was made to his Excellency, he was allowed no longer than 48 hours to give his final anſwer.

We can aſſure the public, from undoubted authority, that before the Spaniſh miniſter wou'd condeſcend to explain himſelf in any ſhape, he inſiſted that a courier ſhould be ſent to Mr. Harris, to order him to ſtay at Madrid, or to return thither, if, in conſequence of the orders ſent him on the 21ſt of laſt month, he ſhould, have left that place. Our miniſtry received the law, and it is ſuppoſed this courier will find him at Paris. This is the way in which the King of Spain makes ſatisfaction to the King of Great Britain. The public will find the definitive treaty exactly of a piece with the preliminaries.

Upon the arrival of the Governor of Buenos-Ayres in Old Spain, the King of Spain immediately appointed him Vice Roy of Upper Navarre ; a poſt of great honour, power and truſt.—Does this look like diſapproving of his conduct at Falkland's Iſland ?

Notwithſtanding our diſputes ſeem for the preſent to be adjuſted with the Court of Spain, yet it is aſſerted that there are ſome very material points ſtill to be ſettled with the French Court ; and that Lord Rochfort ſent laſt week a very ſpirited memorial on this head to Lord Harcourt, our Ambaſſador at Paris.

Yeſterday there were full houſes of both Lords and Commons ; Lords Chatham and Camden were preſent in the former.

A Scheme is on foot, and it is ſaid will ſoon be carried into execution to make ſeveral extenſive grants of the Crown lands on fine certain, determinable on leaſes for 500 years.

Rear Admiral Harland is fitting out, with all expedition, for the Eaſt Indies, attended with a fleet of five ſail of the line, to protect our ſettlements.

Yeſterday an appeal of the Earl of C——m, from a late decree of the Court of Chancery, was preſented to the Upper Aſſembly, and received by their Lordſhips.

CHARLESTOWN, February 19.

This Province being annually drained of all the Gold and Silver brought into it, and laid out in purchaſing our produce, an Agreement is now entering into for raiſing the Value of Foreign Gold and Silver Coin which has been ſigned by all the principal Money lenders, Merchants and other Inhabitants, and will it is generally believed remedy the Evil ſo ſeverely felt and complain'd of. The Rates propoſed are :——Spaniſh Coin : Milled Dollar, 32 s. 6 d. do. unmilled, weighing 17 dwt. 8 gr. 32s. 6d. Piſtareen, 6s. 2 d. Double Doubloon, 24l. Doubloon, Piſtole, half and quarter Dollar, in Proportion.—Portugal Coin : Half Johannes, weighing 9 dwt. 13l. Moidore weighing 6 dwt. 20 gr 9l. 15s.

The Choctaw and Creek Indians have again commenced Hoſtilities, and ſeem as inveterate againſt each other as ever. There has been ſundry and various Reports for ſome Time paſt in this Province and Georgia, concerning the Cherokee Indians, and their hoſtile Intentions againſt his Majeſty's Subjects, which appear to have been much exaggerated. The Story of their having attacked and driven away the Virginians, is not true. It is however certain that the Weſtern Indians, who are greatly diſguſted on account of Encroachments made on their Lands, are very diligent in forming a Confederacy to give Weight to their Repreſentations on that Head, and by the laſt Accounts from the Country of the Cherokees, it appears they had a great number of Deputies and Emiſaries there, ſolliciting thoſe Indians, to join the Great Weſtern Confederacy above-mentioned.

It is ſaid, a Party of the Cherokees and ſome Northern Indians are gone againſt the Chickeſaws, to revenge the Death of ſome Cherokees killed by them.

We have this Day a Report from Jamaica, that the Spaniards have a large Fleet of Men of War and Tranſports with Troops on board, &c. at St. Jago de Cuba.

Yeſterday His Excellency THOMAS HUTCHINSON, Eſq; lately appointed Governor of this Province, on an invitation from the Corporation of Harvard-College, was pleaſed to viſit that Ancient Seat of Learning.

INOCULATION.

Dr. Tappen,

TAKES this method to acquaint the public,

The Chapel not being large enough to Accomodate the Gentlemen who were preſent on this Occaſion, and the Members of the Society; His Excellency, with the Lieutenant Governor, the Overſeers, Corporation, Officers of the College and the other Gentlemen, went in Proceſſion from Harvard Hall to the Meeting-Houſe, preceded by the Students of the College, Graduates and Undergraduates.

The General Court being then ſitting in the College, a Committee of the Corporation waited on the Honorable Houſe of Repreſentatives to aſk their Attendance on the Exerciſes of the Day.—Which Invitation they were pleaſed to accept of.

The public Exerciſes began with a handſome Gratulatory Oration in Latin pronounced by Mr. WETMORE, one of the Reſident Graduates. To this his Excellency made an Elegant Reply in the ſame Language, teſtifying his Affection to the Seminary in which he had his Education, and his Regard to the Intereſts of Literature.

Then followed an ANTHEM, compoſed ſet to Muſic and performed by the young Gentlemen of the College.

The Words of the Anthem.

WE have heard with our Ears. O Lord, and our Fathers have told of thy might!—Thy wonders which thou didſt of old; how thou didſt drive out the heathen from among them!

For they got not their land by their own ſword; but it was thy right hand, thine arm, and the light of thy countenance! O Praiſe the Lord forever and ever.

—How bleſſed are all they that fear the Lord and walk in his Ways, for thou ſhalt eat the labour of thine hands.—O well is thee, and happy ſhalt thou be.

Lo! thus ſhall the man be bleſſed that fears the Lord.

For thus ſaith the Lord, from henceforth, behold all nations ſhall call thee bleſſed; for thy RULERS ſhall be of thine own kindred; your NOBLES ſhall be of yourſelves, and thy GOVERNOR ſhall proceed from the midſt of thee.

Awake! Awake! Put on thy ſtrength. O Zion,—break forth into joy with Hallelujah! for the Lord hath redeemed his people.

Bleſſing and glory, ſalvation and wiſdom, thankſgiving and honor and power and might, be unto the Lord GOD Almighty, who ſitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever, Amen. Praiſe the Lord.

When the Exerciſes were over, the Proceſſion returned to the Hall, where a genteel Entertainment was provided for his Excellency, the Honorable and Reverend Overſeers—the Honorable Houſe of Repreſentatives, and the other Gentlemen. The whole was conducted with the greateſt Decorum and Elegance.

ST. CHRISTOPHERS, January 16.

We hear from Porto Rico, that a few days ago arrived there ſixteen ſail of Settees, and ten ſail of Sweediſh and Spaniſh ſhips, with 7000 regular troops, and 1000 convict ſlaves, a number of braſs cannon, mortars and ammunition, from Spain; and a number of Iriſh officers, who are now raiſing a regiment of rangers. They work conſtantly on the garriſons with 700 men. The women and children are ordered to keep themſelves in readineſs to leave the town at a minute's warning; 50 men are taken from every pariſh, who are now in town learning diſcipline; almoſt all their officers are Iriſh. Orders are given to obſerve no holidays for ſix months to come.

WILMINGTON (North Carolina) March 12.

His Excellency the Governor having received information on oath, that the inſurgents, intended to pay a viſit to Newbern, with an intention to releaſe Herman Huſbands, and to lay that town in aſhes, diſpatched a meſſenger to Colonel Aſhe, and ſome other gentlemen here; upon receipt of his Excellency's orders, the militia was called, a great number of whom marched from the town yeſterday for Mr Collier's, where they are to wait for further orders from his Excellency.

The alacrity and ſpirit of the people upon this occaſion deſerve applauſe, and evince the truth of a late obſervation, "that this government can ſuppreſs internal inſurrections without any foreign aid."

His Excellency the Governor has been pleaſed to grant the prayer of a petition, ſigned by the ladies and gentlemen of this town, in favour of Malachi Hews, under ſentence of death for horſe ſtealing.

The extreme ſimplicity of this young criminal excited compaſſion, and part of his behaviour intermingled ſome degree of eſteem with commiſeration. He had propoſed to become evidence for the crown againſt the other priſoners, among whom were his father and brother; when he was brought before his Majeſty's Attorney General to be examined, he heſitated; Mr. Attorney then repreſented to him his melancholy ſituation, and very humanely gave him ſome time to conſider and determine what he would do; he choſe, at laſt, to ſtand trial, apprehending (as is thought) that his evidence would certainly convict two perſons, whom nature had very nearly connected him, tho' theſe perſons, eſpecially his father, had been the chief cauſe for committing the crimes for which he was condemned, and for which he would have ſuffered the moſt ignominious of deaths, had not juſtice yielded to the prayers of humanity, and the dictates of mercy. This incident ought to be a dreadful leſſon to thoſe inhuman parents, who neglect the education and morals of their children, and who inſtead of impreſſing on their tender minds the rudiments of virtue, encourage them by their immoral and abandoned conduct, in the moſt baſe and villainous practices.

The ſchooner Friendſhip, Capt. Noys, from Newbery, was caſt away in a violent gale of wind, a few days ago, on the Frying pan. The people and part of the cargo were ſaved, but the veſſel and a quantity of ſpecie were entirely loſt. Two pilot boats were beat to pieces by the ſame gale, on the beach near Fort Johnſton.

A traveller now in town, ſays he heard on his way hither, that the people who threatened to viſit Newbern rudely, had diſperſed, upon hearing Herman Huſbands was diſcharged from jail.

February 27. The detachment of militia, that encamped near Mr. Collier's, under the command of Col. Aſhe, was diſcharged on Sunday laſt, in conſequence of orders received from his Excellency our Governor, and it is thought the inſurgents will be more orderly for the future than they have been for ſome time paſt, or at leaſt that they have entirely dropped their deſign of beſieging Newbern.

The moſt authentic accounts of theſe infatuated people ſay, that only three hundred of them had begun their march before Mr Herman Huſbands returned among them.

Mr. WATSON,

Pleaſe to give the following piece a place in your Paper, and your humble ſervant will be thankful. S. A. P.

'TIS new times, if I miſtake not—new Lords—new laws—all new and nothing ſtrange—two proclamations late, one for thankſgiving, another for faſting, upon a Thurſday, and not upon Wedneſday, in the Engliſh colony of Connecticut too—and not in his Majeſty's Engliſh colony of Connecticut as formerly—Why this metaleptic ſyncopate?—dont Connecticut remain a part of his Majeſty's territory? do laws, writs, &c &c go off in his Majeſty's name? is not Wedneſday as good as formerly? is it not from the pious example of our forefathers, (who firſt ſettled this colony) delivered down to us their ſuffering children, as indeſpenſibly neceſſary to faſt upon Wedneſday and feaſt upon Thurſday—and pray what has the King done whereby he muſt loſe his honor in the colony of Connecticut—and pray whence the epithet of the Engliſh colony of Connecticut, when above half are Iriſhmen, the other half Indians, and the reſt a mixed multitude of all nations. Alas! farewel Mr Majeſty, and Lady Wedneſday too, you now keep open cloſets.—I will ſing my old ſong now upon Wedneſday.

BOSTON, April 11.

Laſt Sunday arrived here the Ship Lydia, Capt. Scott, and on Monday the Capts. Calef and Coffin. From the public Prints we have the following Articles.

LONDON, Jan. 11.

The earl of Sandwich kiſſed his Majeſty's hand at St. James's on being appointed (for the third time) firſt Lord of the Admiralty, in the Room of Sir Edward Hawke, who has reſigned.

Notwithſtanding the very ſhort time the earl of Sandwich has been ſecretary of ſtate, it is ſaid his lordſhip is intitled to a quarter's ſalary, and a complete ſervice of plate, both equal in value to 4500l.

Jan. 12. The Hon. Mr. Juſtice Bathorſt was appointed Lord Chancellor, and created Baron Apſley.

Mr. De Grey, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas in the Room of Lord Chief Juſtice Wilmot who retires upon a penſion of 2000l. per annum.

Mr. Thurloe, Attorney General in the Room of Mr. De Grey.

Mr. Wedderburn, Solicitor General in the Room of Mr. Thurloe.

The Hon. Mr. Naſſau, Maſter of the Houſhold, in the Room of Mr. Thynne.

Jan. 2 When the Earl of S-ff-lk accepted of the Privy Seal, a Great Perſonage, to ſooth him, ſaid, "He lamented moſt exceedingly the loſs of his Lordſhip's friend, that great and good man, Mr. Grenville, whom he conſidered as an honor to human nature."

Jan. 15. Yeſterday Afternoon, at a quarter paſt ſix o'Clock died, at his Houſe in Bloomſbury-ſquare, his Grace the DUKE of BEDFORD.

His Grace is ſucceeded, in titles and eſtates, by his grandſon the Marquis of Taviſtock, now Duke of Bedford, a minor about five years of age.

The late Duke of Bedford was of Norman extraction, and his anceſtors appears to have been poſſeſſed of a large eſtate in Dorſetſhire in the year 1702.

We are credibly informed, that the late Duke of Bedford died poſſeſſed of a real eſtate of 45.000l. per annum, beſides about 700.000l. in the different public funds.

A few days ago a country gentleman, at a coffee-houſe, having a news-paper in his hand, ſaid to another who ſat next him, "I have been looking ſome time to ſee what the M—y are about, but I cannot being uſed to the London paper." To which the other anſwered, "Look amongſt the Robberies."

The D— of C——d is now every night in the ſide boxes with a merchant's wife, one Mrs. B——y, and the huſband goes about with them, and thinks it an honour.

Yeſterday morning M. Marener, bookſeller, in James ſtreet, Covent-garden, was brought up to the Court of King's-Bench, Weſtminſter hall, to receive judgment for ſelling a paper called the Whiſperer, No. V. and VI. when he was ſentenced to ſix months impriſonment for each number, and to find ſecurity for his good behaviour for two years.

During the laſt hard weather our moſt excellent Queen did not give leſs in charity to the poor people than 1500l.

Upper Houſe, Tueſday 14 Feb. 1771.

THE order of the day being read for taking into conſideration the papers relating to the diſpute about Falkland's iſland, & for the Lords to be ſummoned.

It was moved by the Duke of Newcaſtle, That an humble addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty to return his Majeſty our thanks for his gracious communication to this Houſe of the Declaration, ſigned by the Ambaſſador of his Catholic Majeſty, which his Majeſty has been pleaſed to accept.

"To offer to his Majeſty our moſt ſincere acknowledgements for having ſupported the honour of the crown of Great Britain, by a firm and unvaried adherence to his juſt demand of ſatiſfaction for the injury received, by the violent enterprize againſt Falkland's iſland, by which ſteady and uniform conduct his Majeſty has obtained from the King of Spain an explicit diſavowal of that expedition, together with an engagement to reſtore things to the preciſe ſituation in which they were before the late unjuſtifiable attempt.

"To expreſs our ſatiſfaction on the proſpect of the bleſſing of peace being ſecured to us, as we have no reaſon to doubt the good faith of his Catholic Majeſty, in the performance of his engagements; and to declare our grateful ſenſe of his Majeſty's paternal care of his people, in not too haſtily engaging them in the hazards and burthens of war.

"To aſſure his Majeſty of our zeal and readineſs, on all occaſions, to exert our utmoſt efforts to enable his Majeſty to carry into execution ſuch meaſures as ſhall be neceſſary for the ſupport of the honour and dignity of his crown."

Then the Duke of Mancheſter propoſed an amendment to be made to the ſaid motion, by leaving out the words from the end of the firſt paragraph thereof, to the end of the motion.

Which being objected to, after long debate, the queſtion was put thereupon. It was reſolved in the negative.

Contents 38 Not Contents 107

Then the ſaid Addreſs was agreed to as at firſt propoſed, and ordered to be preſented to his Majeſty by the Lords, with white ſtaves.—Upon which the Lords in the minority entered a Proteſt.

Wedneſday the Spaniſh papers relating to the Convention came under conſideration of the Lower Aſſembly. Lord B——p moved in ſubſtance,—That an humble addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, returning him thanks for having agreed to the Convention, and for his compliance with the requeſt of that Aſſembly, in laying the Spaniſh papers before them.—Mr. D——ll moved, that all thoſe words contained in the addreſs, which conveyed the thanks of the Club for having ſigned the Convention, be left out, & then the propoſed addreſs would only thank his Majeſty for having laid the papers before them. Which being objected to, the debate began—Col. B——e made a moſt ſpirited ſpeech on the occaſion, highly condemning the ſteps taken by the Miniſtry in the affair of Falkland's iſland.

The debate laſted till half an hour paſt three yeſterday morning, when the houſe divided; 275 were for the addreſs, and 157 againſt it.

Feb. 19. Yeſterday the Lords preſented their Addreſs of thanks to his Majeſty on account of the late Convention with Spain: as did likewiſe the Commons, and were both moſt graciouſly received.

The following, we are aſſured, may be depended on: When the Britiſh miniſtry firſt made remonſtrances to the Court of Spain for reparation of the inſult at Falkland's Iſland, the pecuniary demand they made was, the immediate payment of three hundred thouſand pounds; at the ſecond interview they dropped down to one hundred and fifty thouſand pounds; and at laſt, they ſigned the convention.

LONDON.

Feb. 23. Thurſday a Meſſenger arrived in Town from Madrid with the Catholic King's Ratification of the Convention entered into between his Ambaſſador Prince Maſſerano and the Britiſh Court. And Yeſterday Morning Notice was ſent to the Coffee-Houſes about the Royal Exchange, to prevent the Merchants making further Applications for Protections, as Matters were finally adjuſted between England and Spain.

Twelve Hundred Thouſand Pounds is the neat Sum expended upon the late Preparations for War.

The ſinking fund, brought in the Year 1770, to account at the Exchequer, is 2 700 000 juſt 650,000l. more than in the Year 1764 when Mr. Grenville was at the Head of the Treaſury.

When the Prince Maſſerano was laſt treated with about ſigning the Convention, twenty four hours only were allowed him to come to a determination. It is further aſſerted, that the diſpatch which notified this fact to the Spaniſh Court, prevented a meditated attack upon Gibralter, which at that time, it ſeems was reſolved on.

Capt. Preſton, who was tried at Boſton on account of a late Riot there, has been reimburſed his expences for that proſecution.

It is ſaid our warlike preparations will be continued as they are, as the King of Spain may not ratify the convention. Our Miniſtry are right, for as his Catholic Majeſty has thought proper to diſavow the attack upon Falkland's iſland, which was made by order of his Miniſter, he may, with as good reaſon, diſavow the preſent convention, which has been ſigned here by his Ambaſſador.

It is now, whiſpered, that after all the expence and buſtle made about Port Egmont in Falkland's iſlands, it has been determined to bring home the ſtores belonging to his Majeſty, and evacuate the ſettlement, tho' the French are ſuffered to continue in the poſſeſſion of one of them.

BOSTON, April 11.

Several Letters from London mention, that the Talk of War had almoſt ſubſided, and that all the Preſs Warrants were recalled; but that the People in general were very much diſſatiſfied with the Agreement with Spain, tho' there was a Majority of 138 in the Houſe of Commons for accepting it as a full Satisfaction for the Injury received.

We don't learn that any Thing had been done in Parliament relative to American Affairs, or that there was like to be.

We have Advice from the Weſt Indies, that on the 16th of February, between 7 and 8 o' Clock in the Evening, there was a ſmart Shock of an Earthquake at Dominica, and a much harder One at Martinico.

We hear that a great Number of Hogs, Sheep &c have lately been bit by ſome Mad Dogs in Southborough, Weſtborough, Grafton, and other adjacent Places.

By the NEW-YORK POST.

CHARLESTOWN (S. Carolina) March 21.

Herman Huſbands, ſaid to be chief Ring Leader in the late Commotions in North Carolina, and one of the Aſſembly having been taken and impriſoned at Newbern, the Inſurgents (as they are called) ſo ſeriouſly threatened to beſiege that town to releaſe him, that a Body of militia was raiſed to oppoſe them. On the 8th a Bill of Indictment was preferr'd againſt ſaid Huſbands at the Court of Oyer, and Terminer, but the grand Jury not finding the bill, he was diſcharged, and the quiet of the province is ſaid to be reſtored.

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.

On Saturday night, about 12 o'clock, the city was alarmed by the cry of fire, which proved to be in the houſe of Mr. Thomas Rodgers, in Front Street, near Market Street Corner, the effects of which were very tragical—Moſt of the houſe was conſumed, and ſeveral adjoining buildings, occupied by Mr. Harvy, Stay maker, and Mr. Aaron Hews, Hatter were greatly damaged, Mr. Rodgers himſelf periſhed in the flames, and alſo Mrs Baxter, an aged woman, related to Mr Rodger's family, two little daughters of Capt. Campbell, being grand-daughters of Mr. Rodgers, were very much burnt, and their recovery is doubtful. Mr Rodger's remains were not found till the next day, (yeſterday Morning) when they were taken out of the ruins reduced almoſt to a coal. Mrs. Rodgers, Mr. Baxter, his ſon in law, and an old negro woman eſcaped out of the houſe with great danger, and ſomewhat ſcorched, but not badly.—After part of the houſe had fallen in, one of the girls, about ſeven years old was taken out of an upper room, from the midſt of the flames, by the reſolution and activity of a young ſailor. The fury of the flames, and the difficulty of coming at the fire was ſuch, that notwithſtanding the extraordinary efforts of a vaſt multitude of people, with ſix engines conſtantly playing, it was not entirely ſubdued till 5 o'clock in the morning. The fire was firſt diſcovered in the back buildings of Mr. Rodger's houſe, by what accident unknown. Several Perſons are ſufferers, not only by fire, but by ſundry goods being ruined in attempting to remove them, in the hurry and confuſion uſual in ſuch times.—"By terrible things in righteouſneſs, does the God of our ſalvation ſometimes viſit us."

NEW-YORK, April 11.

A Gentleman in about 8 Days from Newbern (in North Carolina) reports, that the Regulators who upon the Releaſe of Huſbands, ſeemed to have been appeaſed, had begun a new Inſurrection, and that Governor Tryon with a conſiderable Body of the Militia, was preparing to march againſt them.

NEW-HAVEN, April 12.

Laſt Tueſday died in this Place, Col. NATHAN WHITING.—The Particulars will be in our next.

HARTFORD, April 16.

Laſt Friday at Door. — Cole of Eaſt Hartford, was ſharpening Rolls at his Door, he was ſeiz'd with an apoplectic Fit, and died in a few Minutes.

Same Day as a Number of Perſons in E. Hartford, were ſailing in a ſmall Veſſel, on a Party of Pleaſure, one Jonathan Judſon of that Place, about 28 Years of Age, was accidentally knock'd over board by the Boom, and unfortunately drown'd. His Body was taken up the next Day and decently interr'd.

Laſt Sunday Morning Mr. William Sedgwick of Weſt Hartford, roſe as uſual, and went into the Barn (as the Family imagined) to fodder his Cattle, but ſtaying longer than common, his Son went after him, and found him hanging by his Neck to a Brace in the Barn quite dead.—The Jury impaneled according to Law, found a Verdict, Non Compus Mentis.

One Day laſt Week, the Body of a Man was found in Springfield, almoſt covered with Sand, but a ſmall Part of his Head and one Shoulder appearing, and that tore in a ſhocking Manner by the Ice, which came down in the Flood. He was conſiderably well dreſs'd, but had no Papers, or any Thing about him whereby it could be diſcovered who he was, or where he belonged.

The late great Rains has occaſion'd a greater Flood in Connecticut River this Spring than has been known for upwards of Twenty Years paſt; but we have not heard of any great Damage done by it.

Arrived at the Grenades. Capts. Schellinger, Perkins and Swaſey from New London.

RAN-away from the ſubſcriber of Claverack, on the 1ſt day of inſtant April, a negro man named Harry, about 5 feet high, had on when he went away, a greyiſh coloured coat, a pair of buckſkin breeches, green Indian ſtockings, large brim'd beaver hatt, ſomething worn.—Whoever ſhall take up ſaid Negro, and convey him to Col. John Aſhley of Sheffield, or confine him in any of his Majeſty's goals, and ſend word to the ſubſcriber, ſhall have Three Dollars reward, and all neceſſary charges paid, by

JOHN UPHAM.

Claverack, April 10, 1771.

ALL Perſons in the Towns of Windſor, Suffield, Tolland, Coventry, Bolton, and Eaſt-Hartford, who are indebted for the Connecticut Courant, from the 18th of December, 1769, to the 18th of December 1770, are deſired to make immediate Payment to Knight Sexton in Hartford.

POET'S CORNER.

The BEGGAR.

PITY the ſorrows of a poor old man!
Whoſe trembling limbs have borne him to your door,
Whoſe days are dwindled to the ſhorteſt ſpan,
Oh! give relief, and Heaven will bleſs your ſtore.
Theſe tatter'd cloathes my poverty beſpeak.
Theſe hoary locks proclaim my lenthen'd years,
And many a furrow in my grief-worn cheek
Has been the channel to a ſtream of tears.
Your houſe erected, on the riſing ground,
With tempting aſpect, drew me from my road,
For plenty there a reſidence has found,
And grandeur a magnificent abode.
(Hard is the fate of the infirm, and poor!)
Here craving for a morſal of their bread,
A pamper'd menial forc'd me from the door,
To ſeek a ſhelter in an humbler ſhed.
Oh! take me to your hoſpitable dome,
Keen blows the wind, and piercing is the cold!
Short is my paſſage to the friendly tomb,
For I am poor, and miſerably old.
Should I reveal the ſource of every grief,
If ſoft humanity e'er touch'd your breaſt,
Your hands would not withhold the kind relief,
And tears of pity could not be repreſs'd.
Heaven ſends misfortunes; why ſhould we repine?
'Tis Heaven has brought me to the ſtate you ſee;
And your condition may be ſoon like mine,
The child of ſorrow and of miſery.
A little farm was my paternal lot,
Then like the lark I ſprightly hail'd the morn;
But ah! Oppreſſion forc'd me from my cot,
My cattle dy'd, and blighted was my corn.
My daughter, once the comfort of my age,
Lur'd by a villain from her native home,
Is caſt abandon'd on the world's wide ſtage,
And doom'd in ſcanty poverty to roam.
My tender wife, ſweet ſoother of my care!
Struck with ſad anguiſh at the ſad decree,
Fell, lingering fell, a victim to deſpair,
And left the world to wretchedneſs and me.
Pity the ſorrows of a poor old man!
Whoſe trembling limbs have borne him to your door,
Whoſe days are dwindled to the ſhorteſt ſpan,
Oh! give relief, and Heaven will bleſs your ſtore.

The PARADOX.

MY Betſy, truſt me, for 'tis true,
At once I love and hate thee too.
'Tis true, thy wanton airs are ſuch,
I hate thee, yes I hate thee much.
Yet, ſuch is beauty's magic power,
Though much I hate, I love the more.
And ſuch my ſighs, as plainly prove,
Though much I hate thee, more I love;
Thus, though I hate, and hate ſincerely,
I ſtill muſt love, and love thee dearly.

BROKE out, and made their eſcape from the common goal in Hartford, the night after the 26th inſtant, the following perſons, viz. John Marſhel Roberts of To land, a man of about 24 years of age, rather more than middling for ſtature, wore his own black hair. Alſo one Joel Gay of Hebron he was a man of about 23 years of age, of a middling ſtature, wore his own hair, they both were committed for Burglary, the ſaid Gay, was crop'd and branded, but held in goal for the coſt, Roberts had his trial, and found guilty, but hath not received his puniſhment. INOCULATION.

Dr. Tappen,

TAKES this method to acquaint the public, that he has for ſome time paſt, and ſtill is carrying on that branch of his profeſſion at Kingſton, alias Euſopus, in Ulſter County, province of New-York. where thoſe gentlemen and ladies that ſhould be inclin'd to take the Small Pox, may depend on having good genteel lodging and nurſing, at the moderate price of One Dollar and half per week, and Three Dollars for the Doctor, ſo that the whole expence, in an ordinary way, will not exceed nine or ten dollars. This place is extremely healthful and pleaſant, and out of near ſix hundred perſons that have been inoculated, not one ſingle patient has been loſt. -27

ALL perſons having accounts unſettled with the eſtate of JOHN BERNARD, late of Hartford deceas'd, are deſired to bring them in to the ſubſcribers, in order for a ſettlement.

THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic.

From TUESDAY, APRIL 16, to TUESDAY, APRIL 23, 1771.

BERLIN, (in Germany) January 29.

SIR Andrew Mitchel, Knight of the Bath, his Britannic Majeſty's Miniſter at this Court, died here yeſterday, after having filled that poſt fifteen years.

London, Jan. 2. We are aſſured, that when the P—y S—l was offered to L— S——k, he deſired time to conſider of it: The next day he deſired a conference with Lord N—h; L—d N——h did not chuſe to ſee him for three days; and when he did admit L—d S——k to an audience, informed him, that the place muſt firſt be offered to Lord Dartmouth and to Lord Hardwicke, and if they both refuſed it, then L—d S——k might have it. The hopeful young L—d, with a very large fortune of his own, 40 000l. with his Lady, a widower with only one child, a daughter, and who has [illegible] both the PARTIES, was humble enough to accept of the P—y S—l in this ignominious manner.

It is ſuppoſed that the late Duke of Bedford, for the laſt ten years, gave a thouſand yearly for the relief of the poor, beſides very large contributions to public inſtitutions.

Jan. 26. The laſt advices from India having brought no account of the Aurora, which failed for our ſettlements there with the three ſupervisors, [illegible] Vanſittart, Scrafton, and Colonel Ford, on board, there now, unhappily remains no manner of doubt but that ſhe is loſt.

From the London Magazine of January laſt, we learn, that 13 Scots Officers have proteſted againſt the Election of the Earl of Stair, as influenced by Adminiſtration unconſtitutionally.

In the Political Diſſenſions the Rev. John Horne has publiſhed a long Reply to a Number of Charges laid againſt him by John Wilkes, Eſq; among them is one or two of Fraud: Theſe Charges he undertakes to anſwer, and clear himſelf of.

We are aſſured, that the following converſation abſolutely paſſed at the Smyrna;—An old politician being aſked what he thought of the preſent diſpute between Mr. W—s and Mr. H—ne, replied, "I look upon the quarrel between W—s and H—ne with as much indifference as I would view a combat between a viper and a toad; which of the two prevails, I don't care a farthing; whether the viper ſtings the toad, or the toad poiſons the viper, or if they mutually deſtroy each other, ſo much the better; the public, by that means, gets rid at once of two very noxious and deteſtable animals."

Jan. 31. On Tueſday died, at his houſe in Cavendiſh-ſquare, the Hon. Richard Penn, one of the two proprietors of the Province of Pennſylvania.

Feb. 1. Capt. Briggs, of the Grace Cutter, is appointed to the command of the Favourite ſloop of war, which is to carry a packet to Boſton.

Feb. 11. Friday night an account was received from Ireland of the death of the Right Hon. Arthur Trevor, Viſcount Dungannon.

Lieutenant General [illegible] and Mr. Ralph Payne, have been created Knights of the Moſt Honorable Military order of the Bath.

Thomas Whately, Eſq; is appointed one of the Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantation in the Room of William Northey, Eſq deceaſed.

LONDON, Feb 23.

Summonſes are ſent to all the Members of the Upper Houſe to attend their duty in Parliament on Monday next, and to be there early; from whence it is ſuppoſed ſome affairs of great importance are to be then diſcuſſed.

It was on Thurſday reported, that His Moſt Catholic Majeſty was actually upon his way to the Court of Verſailles, where he is in Perſon to ſettle ſome matters with the French King, which are judged to be of too delicate a Nature to be tranſacted by Repreſentatives.

Extract of a letter from Portſmouth, Feb. 20.

"We hear that Admiral Montague is to ſail to Halifax with a Flag of command on that Station."

The King has much interfered lately in endeavouring to bring together a certain Couple long ſince under Separation, but finds it equally difficult as the reconciling other Kinds of Parties.

L—d T——n, it is affirmed with Confidence, is already appointed to the Chief Juſticeſhip in Eyre; but to ſave Appearances, the Secret is to be kept till after the Riſing of the Great Aſſembly.

The Sweepſtakes, [illegible], from New England, is arrived at Falmouth.

A Letter from the Ruſſian General to the Ruſſian Ambaſſador in London, dated at Jaſſy, Dec. 24. mentions the taking of Brahilow, and found 74 pieces of Cannon, and a large magazine with military ſtores. during which Brig. [illegible] drove out of Bucharest 5000 of the enemy's troops, and purſued them to the Danube, and took poſſeſſion of that town; The General is determined to diſlodge the Grand Vizer from his poſt, and intends to extirpate the enemy from that ſide of the Danube.—A party of brave [illegible], paſſed the Danube, attacked [illegible] on the 10th of November took its Citadel, killed many thouſand Turks, and diſperſed the reſt. They took 13 pieces of cannon, but it being dangerous for ſuch a ſmall number to ſtay on the other ſide of the Danube they threw them into the river, & returned back ſafe. This greatly alarmed the Grand Vizer, who with his army flew into the mountains towards Babadon; The Grand Vizer intends to winter at Adrianople.

Warſaw, (in Poland) January 25.

LETTERS received here confirm the Report of the Ruſſians having raiſed the Seige of Czentochow. The regimentary Zaremba advanced to ſuccour the Place, which was commanded by the Sieur Pulawſki, one of the Chief confederates; the Ruſſians, to prevent their Deſign, detached Colonel Lang, who was defeated by Zaremba, and obliged to abandon three Pieces of Cannon. At the ſame Time Pulawſki cauſed a Sally to be made, in which they burnt all the Ruſſian Proviſions and Warlike ſtores. A Night or two after a general Sally was made in which great Numbers of Ruſſians were killed, who then raiſed the Siege, and left four Pieces of Cannon behind them. This Affair has greatly raiſed the Spirits of the Confederates.

The laſt overtures for an accommodation between the Empreſs of Ruſſia and the Grand Signor, were received by the latter ſovereign with high contempt and indignation, which makes the political world imagine, that ſome new powers on the continent have already declared in his favour, or at leaſt, that ſome diverſion will be made by ſome of the German powers to draw the Ruſſian forces out of the Turkiſh empire.

LONDON, Feb. 12.

A Bill for puniſhing Mutiny and Deſertion in the American Colonies has paſſed a great Aſſembly.

Notwithſtanding the late Convention, it is the general opinion that the Year 1771 will not be a year of Peace.

Feb. 23. We have it from very good authority, that the following Law promotions will take place before the breaking up of the preſent Parliament.

"Sir Fletcher Norton, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench, in the room of Lord Mansfield, who retires with a penſion, yet holds his office as occaſional Speaker in the Houſe of Lords.

The Solicitor General to be made Attorney-General in the room of Thurlow, who is to be called up to the Common Pleas, in the place of Juſtice Gould, who retires.

Rear Admiral Montague is likewiſe to command in North America, and to ſuperceede Commodore Gambier.

The betts at the Weſt end of the town are ten guineas to one that the Parliament will not break up till the middle of May.

LONDON, Jan. 14.

The following Captains in the Royal Navy, viz. Thomas Allſon, William Bladwell, Henry Dyve, Edward Falkingham, Robert Jefferies, Charles Knowler, and John Weller, Eſqrs. are appointed Rear Admirals on half-pay, ſo that the ſuperannuated liſt now conſiſts of twenty eight, of which the expence to the nation is 8042l. 10s. per annum.

Laſt Thurſday the following promotions were made in the navy: Thomas Symonds and Thomas Pasley to the rank of Poſt Captains; Charles Hay, John Linzee, Henry Bryne, Matthew Squire, Cuthbert Baines & Skeffington Lutwidge to the rank of Maſter & Commander.

And the following gentlemen to the rank of Lieutenants: George Montagu, George [illegible], Roger Curtis, William Whitmore, Hon. Charles Phipps, Green Delpard, John Holloway, Henry Broady, George Wickham, and Hugh Cloberry Christian.

It is ſaid that the Lords of Admiralty have ſent orders to Portſmouth for three additional ſhips of war to be fitted out to join Commodore Byron's ſquadron, which will be ready to ſail about the middle of March next, for the protection of the Newfoundland cod fiſhery the enſuing ſeaſon.

A Bill is preparing to be brought into parliament for augmenting the bounty paid by Government on the tonnage of ſhipping employed in the Newfoundland Cod fiſhery.

Thurſday the affair of the priſoners, James Stevens, Robert Leſlie, William Thomſon, J. Biggs, and John Mein, who forced out of the King's Bench-Priſon the 19th of November laſt, came on before the Court in Weſtminſter-Hall, when the rule was made abſolute for an information againſt them.

Saturday a maſter of a ſhip was brought before the Right Hon. the Lord-Mayor, charged by the father of his apprentice, with ſelling the ſaid apprentice as a ſlave to a rope-maker at Nantucket.

In the courſe of the examination his Lordſhip, being Governor of the London Workhouſe, recollected that the maſter had applied for ſeveral apprentices, and had them but aſſured him that he ſhould never have any more. His Lordſhip was, however, under a neceſſity of diſcharging him, for want of evidence. The father produced a letter written by his ſon with a ſtick (for he could not procure a pen) informing him of the above tranſaction.

Yeſterday a Chapter of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter was held at St. James's, when the Right Hon. Earl Gower was elected and inveſted with the enſigns of ſaid Order.

Warſaw, (in Poland) Dec. 23. The Chief, M Salva, has been entirely defeated by Count Branciki, near Wyſokie Litewſki. The former was at the head of 2000 men, and the latter had only 800. Two hundred of the Confederates were killed on the ſpot, and 500 taken priſoners.

BRANDISI (in Bohemia) Dec. 20.

LETTERS arrived here aſſure poſitively, that the Ruſſians have not only retaken the iſle of Lemnos, but alſo that all the Turks who were conducted there by Haſſan Bey, have been cut to pieces, and that the caſtle has ſurrendered. Some perſons have even already received the capitulation.

Conſtantinople, (in Turkey) Nov. 17. The Chevalier du Tot is returned here, after putting the Dardanelles in a good ſtate of defence; and the Grand Signor has made an offer to pay him 100 ſcudis per day, not only during the continuance of the war, but afterwards, on condition of his reſiding at this place, in order to teach the Turks military diſcipline.

We learn that the Ruſſians, not having been able to make themſelves maſters of any ports in the Archipelago, to refit or ſhelter their fleet, from the violent ſtorms that are frequently felt there, during the winter, have been obliged to abandon thoſe ſeas, and that beſides, they had not a ſufficient number of troops to venture a deſcent. Their retreat has opened the navigation of the Helleſpont, and our veſſels, as well as thoſe of other nations, arrive daily from thence without any obſtacle.

Stralſund, (in Germany) Dec. 5. Laſt Wedneſday in the afternoon the Powder Magazine in this town blew up, at a time when all the workmen were in it. By this accident, upwards of 100 people loſt their lives, and above 1000 were dangerouſly hurt. Seventy houſes were thrown down, and all the windows in the town were broken.

Venice, (in Italy) Dec. 12 We hear by letters from Conſtantinople, that the Grand Signor will not liſten to any propoſals of peace, and that his Highneſs has reſolved to put himſelf at the head of 300 000 men next campaign, to chaſe the Ruſſians from all the conqueſts they have made in his empire.

Cadiz, (in Spain) Dec. 26. For ſome days paſt all the batteries of this city have been mounted. The engineers, &c. work with the greateſt activity, in order to finiſh two new ones, which have been built at the extremities of the two moles for defending the entrance of the harbour.

Genoa, (in Italy,) Dec. 29. Letters from Toulon adviſe, that on the 19th inſt. the workmen in the dock yard were augmented, in order to finiſh with the utmoſt diſpatch 16 men of war of the line, and 8 frigates; and that at Port l'Orient, they were fitting out 40 men of war, which were all to aſſemble next May at Breſt; Mr. Bambeyon is to have the command of the latter. The ſame advices add, that the Grand Maſter of Malta has refuſed the Ruſſian ſhips the liberty of wintering at Malta; and that in order to guard the port againſt any ſurpriſe, he has ordered guns to be mounted upon the batteries and forts, and obliged all perſons above 15 years of age to bear arms.

Warſaw, (in Poland,) Dec. 29 Letters from Lemberg, dated the 23d of this month, declare, that the Turks have ſurrendered up the fortreſs of Scharſchewo the laſt important place on the Danube, to the Ruſſians, who have taken poſſeſſion of it.

Leghorn, (in Italy,) Jan 2. All the letters from Spain ſay, that the Catholic King is firmly reſolved to remain ſole maſter of the navigation of the South ſea, and conſequently not to tolerate any foreign nation that ſhould eſtabliſh ſettlements there, not even in the ſtreights of Magellan.

Madrid, (in Spain) January 3. There is a ſquadron of 12 ſhips of the line at Cadiz, ready to put to ſea, which is to be commanded by the Sieur Tillie; there is beſides at Ferrol, another ſquadron ready equipped, conſiſting of 12 ſhips of war, among which are one of 112 guns, five of 80, and ſix of 70, with ſix frigates, which wait only for the firſt notice to put to ſea under the command of Sieur Reggio.

Piſa, (in Italy,) Jan. 12. This morning Count Orlow, Miniſter Plenipotentiary and General of the Ruſſian troops, arrived here from Leghorn, after having performed his quarantine. He is accompanyed by the Engliſh Envoy; and intends to paſs part of the winter here, and at Leghorn, in order to inſpect the refitting of his ſquadron, ſeveral of which are expected from the Archipelago and Meſſina, at Port Ferraio and Leghorn, where they will be repaired and careened. The Sieur Rutherford, Commiſſary of the Court of Peterſburgh, will ſell at Leghorn the prizes taken by the Ruſſians, ſome of whom have lately arrived in the harbour.

Hague (in Holland) Jan. 18. The Province of Frieſland has juſt ſuffered a heavy loſs by the burning of its Admiralty at Harlingen, with the Stores, Archieves, and every Thing belonging to it.

By the NEW-YORK POST.

PHILADELPHIA, April 15.

By Capt. Sparks, arrived here in a ſhort Paſſage from LONDON, we have the following ADVICES, viz.

LONDON, Jan. 18.

THE following is a tranſlation of the Letter de Cachet, ſent by order of the French King to the Duke de Choiſeul:

"My Lord Duke,

"I am extremely diſſatisfied with your ſervices; and I command you to reſign the three departments which you hold, viz. the office of Secretary of State for foreign affairs, Secretary at war, and Poſtmaſter-General: I further command you to retire inſtantly to Chanteloux: My firſt intention was to have baniſhed you to Bourges, but, in conſideration to the Dutcheſs de Choiſeul, I permit you to remain at your ſeat of Chanteloux, until you ſhall know my pleaſure.

Signed LOUIS."

Immediately after the delivery of the above Letter de Catchet, all the letters and papers belonging to Monſ. de Choiſeul were ſiezed by the Duc de Vrilliere, and carried to the King.

A certain Prelate meeting Col. Barre in the Court of Requeſts, ſaid, "Heavens bleſs the hands which have preſerved us from a war!" The Colonel anſwered, "I differ from you, my Lord, for I d—n the Confectioners."

Jan. 24 Yeſterday commiſſions paſſed the great ſeal, appointing the Earl of Halifax, Secretary of State for the northern department; and alſo the Earl of Suffolk, keeper of the privy ſeal; and yeſterday they both acted in that capacity.

Jan. 31. Wagers are already begun to be laid, that the obligation of the preſent convention does not bind the powers that have entered into it, ſo long as three months.

Feb. 5 It is whiſpered at the Weſtminſter end of the town, that there are ſeveral ſecret articles in the new convention, and that all our claim to Falkland's iſlands is ſigned away.

We are informed that the Parliament will riſe very early in April.

They write from Paris, that there is at preſent in and near that capital an army of 60 000 effective men.

The Liberty, Thorn, (late Carr) from Virginia, was loſt on the Horn Cliffs, near Chriſt's Church. Some of the materials of the ſhip will be ſaved.

We are told by a Court correſpondent, that the Spaniſh Ambaſſador diſcovers ſymptoms of uneaſineſs at the continuances of our naval preparations, and has even made repeated remonſtrances on the occaſion.

Feb. 15. Col. Barre wittily calls the Houſe of Commons the Book of Numbers; another, not leſs witty than himſelf, calls them the Book of Exodus, as they all ſeem gone aſtray and out of the way.

A letter from Madrid mentions, that notwithſtanding the late contention with England, the politicians there look upon a war to be unavoidable in a ſhort time, as both courts ſeem very little diſpoſed to relax in their hoſtile preparations.

We hear the greateſt care is taken to prevent a great perſonage reading the letters of Junius.

The etter de Cachet to each Member of the Parliament of Paris, was worded as follows:

"SIR,

"I write you this letter, to order you to depart this day out of my good city of Paris, without receiving or paying any viſits, and to repair, without delay, to ——, there to remain till further orders from me, without liberty to ſtir out of it, under pain of diſobedience.—Upon this, Sir, I pray God to take you into his holy keeping, &c

The toaſt of the weſt end of the town is, "May the Spirit of the Parliament of Paris diffuſe itſelf into the Senate of Great Britain."

The following, we are well aſſured, is a true copy of a letter ſent by the Duke deChoiſeul to the King of France, wrote immediately on his receiving his late diſmiſſion.

"When your Majeſty honor'd me with your favours and your bounty, I received them with the pureſt acknowledgment. This ſentiment could not but redouble in my heart the love I bear to your royal perſon, the application to my duties, and my efforts in all that could contribute to the glory of your reign. My incapacity only could make the faults which have determined your Majeſty to withdraw from me your confidence. The pain I receive with reſignation, as I did your benevolence with gratitude; and always penetrated with the ſame fidelity, I ſhall occupy myſelf in my retreat in praying only, that my ſucceſſor may unite more talents with as much zeal. I am, &c.

It was reported yeſterday morning that Port Egmont is to be abandoned as a uſeleſs place; no further ſettlement made on it by Gr. Britain.

A correſpondent having ſeen a liſt of Wilkes's champions, begs leave to add the weapons weilded by each reſpective hero.

TALBOT——	Gunpowder.
MARTIN——	Target.
DUNN——	Penknife.
FORBES ——	Sword.
ELDRIDGE——	Skewer.
HORNE ——	Sword of the Spirit.
MACLEANE——	Pen and Ink.

We are told that a certain Alderman is to procure a city addreſs of thanks on the Spaniſh convention. A correſpondent aſks who is to be thanked, the King of Spain, his Ambaſſador, or Don Buccarelli?

No wonder (ſays a correſpondent) the Miniſtry ſhould tempt Lord Lyttleton;—ſuch a character among them would almoſt ſanctify their evil deeds.

Feb. 16. The Lords of the Admiralty have ordered that the Preſs warrants ſhall be no longer in Force than till the end of this month.

A letter from a perſon of conſequence in France, ſays, "The King's throne ſhakes under him, and his crown totters on his head."

According to letters from Paris, ſome ſecret tranſactions between the French and Spaniſh Miniſters had lately been laid open to the moſt Chriſtian King, which it was thought would go near to ruin inevitably a certain exile.

FEBRUARY 23.

Thurſday, at five o'clock in the afternoon, a meſſenger arrived at Lord Rochford's office from Madrid, with the King of Spain's approbation of Prince Maſerano's declaration, relative to Falkland's Iſland, together with an order for the reſtitution of Port Egmont; upon which notice was inſtantly ſent to Lord North, in the Lower Aſſembly, where this intelligence was immediately made Known.——And yeſterday morning notice was ſent to the coffee-houſes about the Royal Exchange, to prevent the merchants making further applications for protections, as matters were finally adjuſted between England & Spain.

The conſpiracy formed between the Marquis de Grimaldi, the head of the Spaniſh Miniſtry, and the Duc de Choiſeul, to involve Europe in a general war, was the real cauſe of the diſgrace of the latter. It was agreed between the two miniſters, that the negotiation with England ſhould be protracted, till a French army of 40,000 men could be got ready to march into Brabant. The Count de Stainvill, Choiſeul's brother, was to have the command, and to carry a requiſition, that the United Provinces ſhould immediately become parties in the war on the ſide of France; in caſe of refuſal, he was to commence hoſtilities. The States, upon the diſcovery of this ſecret machination, applied immediately to the King of Pruſſia, whoſe Miniſter was the firſt perſon who carried the deſigns of Choiſeu to the King, his maſter—Louis, who is naturally an enemy to bloodſhed, preferred the turning out of his Miniſter to a war.

To the PRINTER of the GAZETTEER.

I Cannot find any argument for what has happened in reſpect to Falkland's Iſland, otherwiſe than that the Governor of Buenos Ayres has robbed the K—g of England, for which he ought to be hanged; that the Spaniſh K—g did receive the ſtolen goods, for which he ought to be tranſported; and that the —— of E—— together with his Miniſtry, ſhould be ſent after him, for compounding felony.

OXBALL.

QUEBEC, March 14.

We hear that a Woman, lately at Service at Point aux Trembles, near Montreal, being deſirous to quit her Place, demanded her Wages, but having no written Agreement with her Maſter, a Neighbour was call'd to witneſs the paying her the Sum due, after receiving of which ſhe ſet out to ſeek another Reſidence, and paſſing through a Wood was met by the ſame Man who had been witneſs to her receiving the Money, who, preſenting two charg'd Piſtols to her, demanded her to give him her Caſh, or then he would murder her, whereupon ſhe took the Money out of her Pocket, and threw it into the Snow on one ſide of the Road, deſiring him to take it rather than her life; he being over deſirous for the Prize, inadvertently laid down his Piſtols in the Road, which the Woman immediately ſeiz'd, and ſhot him dead on the Spot, but did not re-take her Money 'til ſhe had alarm'd the neareſt Neighbours to the Place where the Scene was tranſacted.

NEW-YORK, April 18.

It is ſaid Capt. Sparks reported that the Dutcheſs of Gordon was on the Point of ſailing for this port in Ballaſt.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.

Feb. 12. The Parliament met to day, and this Morning it is confirmed, that Lord Sandwich on Saturday Night ſigned the Convention with Spain, which it is ſaid is ample; ſo all is Peace, and Funds riſe amazingly in conſequence thereof. If the Peace (for ſo it is termed) is approved, and can ſtand, the preſent Adminiſtration is firm as a Rock.

Feb. 23. "On the Report of our Differences with Spain being entirely ſettled, Eaſt-India Stock got up from 180 to 225; Bank ſtock from 133 to 131; three per Cent. conſolidated Annuities from 76 to 86; and all other Stocks in Proportion. The Parliament met Yeſterday, when Lord North declared to the Houſe, that the Affair, in regard to Falkland Iſland, was amicably made up, whether this will have a further Effect upon the Stocks, (they being now almoſt as high as before the War was talked of,) or not, I cannot ſay; but this I can ſay, with certainty, the Convention is generally diſliked, and it is believed at the ſame Time, by moſt People, that it will not be laſting."

NEW-HAVEN, April 19.

On Tueſday the 9th Inſt. about Seven o'Clock in the Evening, Colonel NATHAN WHITING departed this Life, in the 47th Year of his Age, univerſally lamented; having maintained an excellent Character, even from his Childhood, to the Day of his Death.

He was the youngeſt Child of the Rev. Mr. Samuel Whiting of Windham; but being left an Orphan when very young, he had a religious Education in the Family of the late Rev'd Preſident Clap.

In early Life he was noted for early Piety, and an amiable, virtuous Behaviour.

In the 21ſt Year of his Age, he had a Commiſſion, in the Expedition againſt Louiſbourgh, Anno 1745; in which he ſuſtain'd ſuch a Character, that at the Concluſion of that War, a Lieutenancy upon the Eſtabliſhment, was given him, by the General, Sir William Pepperell.

In the Beginning of the late War, Anno 1755 he was appointed Lieutenant Colonel; and the Year following Chief Colonel of a Regiment; and in every Campaign, until the Conqueſt of Canada, he was employed in the Service of his King and Country, and diſcharged with Fidelity and Honor to himſelf and the Colony, the important Truſt he ſuſtained.

Of late Years he has been Member of the General Aſſembly, as Repreſentative of the Town of New-Haven; and (being in the Nomination) would undoubtedly, in a few Years, had he liv'd, have been one of the Aſſiſtants.

He was of a generous, benevolent Diſpoſition; and grateful Deportment; and was univerſally reſpected, in all the Societies and Combinations of Men, with which he was connected, whether at Home or abroad. He had a peculiar Talent of diſcountenancing Vice, without giving Diſguſt; and of reſtraining Diſorders (when in Command) without Severity.

In him the Chriſtian and the Gentleman were very gracefully united; & he well maintained the religious Character, amidſt the Snares and peculiar Temptations of the Army. Having fought a good Fight, he finiſhed his Courſe with a ſteady Mind, truſting in God, upon the gracious Plan of the Goſpel, and thro' the Mediation of Chriſt, whom he regarded as the Captain of his Salvation; leaving a mournful Widow and four orphan Children, in the Care of that God, whoſe Goodneſs he ſo eminently experienced when he was an Orphan.

BOSTON, April 19.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman of conſiderable Note in London, dated February 24, 1771.

"I hope the ill Treatment you have had from our M—n—y, is drawing to a Period. They are, I believe, heartily ſick of the Affair, and ſo hard preſſed by the Oppoſition, as to be willing to leſſen the Number of your enemies, and of the Objections to your Management. I am ſo well perſuaded, that North-America will, within an hundred Years, be the Seat of Commerce, Liberty, and Power, and the Refuge of the Friends to Liberty, and the Proteſtant Religion: that, were I not ſo far advanced in Life, I would come over to you, with my Family."—

RUN away from Eliakim Deming of Farmington, in Hartford county, on the 13th of inſtant April, an indented ſervant, who calls himſelf by the name of Royce Davis, of a pale complexion, about 5 feet high, ſhort flat noſe, about 35 years of age, wore his own curl'd boſhy black hair, an old felt hatt, an old bearſkin great coat, the bottom of it cut off and patch'd, a dark colour'd waiſtcoat without ſleeves a check woolen ſhirt, a pair of ſhoes, with the ſtraps turn'd in, tied with ſtrings, is a very good workman at the farming buſineſs. Said Davis has been twice convicted of ſtealing, and has been puniſhed and bound out for the coſt.——He took with him a little black Dog called Penny, with ſhort legs. 'Tis ſuppoſed he is gone to the weſtward. Whoever ſhall take up ſaid run away and ſecure ſo that his maſter may have him again, ſhall have Two Dollars reward, and all neceſſary charges paid, by Hartford, April 16, 1771.

BROKE out of the county Goal in this town, laſt Night and eſcaped, the following perſons viz. The notorious Burglarian, that called himſelf Richard Steel, that has been twice crop'd and branded, and was at March Court, at Hartford, again tried for the third Offence, but found not guilty, purſuing his old Trade, was again taken up and cloſely confined in Irons, but has found Means to get them off. His appearance is that of a likely young Man, of about 21 years of Age, about middling for Height, ſomewhat ſlender, has a lively, keen, dark colour'd Eye, and is finely pitted with the Small Pox, wears his Hair, pretty dark Colour'd, but not unlikely he may ſoon get a wig to cover his Ears; he is pretty quick and lively in ſpeaking, and has a little different Manner from perſons born among us. Alſo one Moſes Allen, belonging to Windſor, a likely, handſome young fellow, to Appearance about 20 Years old, wore his own Hair, is a fair Countenance, ſomewhat ſhort and pretty well ſet, was committed for Theft, is ſuppoſed, to have carried on a Trade for ſome Time, of opening Shop Doors with Keys, of his own make, and carrying away Goods in ſmall Parcels, and putting in his own Cheſt, when he liv'd unſuſpected till of late.——Alſo, one John Robinſon, a young Man, called a tranſient Perſon, but laſt from Simſbury, and committed for Debt. Alſo a woman called Roſanna Blanchard, who had been convicted of harbouring and entertaining the above named Steel and puniſhed, and was held for the Coſt. Whoever ſhall take up either of the two firſt mentioned notorious Criminals, and ſecure them that they may be brought to Juſtice, ſhall have a Reward of Forty Shillings; Lawful Money, and all neceſſary Charges paid, For Robinſon, Twenty Shillings; and for the woman, Ten Shillings. per

An Occaſional Letter, From a dying LIBERTINE to his Friend.

Dear PHILO,

DEATH already ſeizes my extremities; but as my heart ſtill ſurvives, and checks me for the many follies you have been witneſs to in my former Life, and the bad advice I have ſo often gived you in regard to a future ſtate, I think it my duty, by way of reſtitution, to ſend you my preſent thoughts, which can't be ſuppoſed to be any ways byaſſed, when I am waiting the diſſolution of my mortal frame.—For while you are reading theſe lines, I ſhall in all probability, be either groaning under the agonies of abſolute deſpire, or triumphing in fulneſs of joy.

It is impoſſible for me to expreſs the preſent diſpoſition of my ſoul, the vaſt uncertainty I am ſtruggling with; no words can paint the force and vivacity of my apprehenſions; every doubt wears the face of horror, and would preſently overwhelm me, but for ſome faint beams of hope, which dart acroſs the tremendous Gloom.

What tongue can utter the anguiſh of a ſoul ſuſpended between extremes of infinite joy or eternal miſery? I am throwing my laſt ſtake for eternity, and tremble and ſhudder for the important event—Good God! how have I employed myſelf! How have I conſumed my days in a ſinful lethargy! I never waked 'til now! I have but juſt commenced the dignity of a rational creature; 'til this inſtant I had a wrong apprehenſion of every thing in nature; I have purſued ſhadows; entertained myſelf and friends with Dreams. I have been treaſuring up duſt, and ſporting myſelf with the wind.—While, I look back on my paſt life, I find it all blank, a perfect vacancy, except ſome memorials of infamy and guilt. Oh! I never had a juſt apprehenſion of the ſolemnity of the part I am to act 'til now.

It is this that arms death with all its terrors, elſe I could ſtill mock at fear, & ſmile in the face of the gloomy monarch. It is not giving up my breath; it is not being for ever inſenſible, that makes me ſhrink:—It is the terrible hereafter, the ſomething beyond the grave, at which I recoil.—Thoſe great realities, which you know, I, in the hours of mirth and vanity, treated as phantoms, & as the idle dreams of ſuperſtitious brains, ſtart forth and dare me now in their moſt terrible demonſtrations. O Philo! my awakened conſcience feels ſomething of that eternal vengeance I have ſo often ſtupidly defied.

To what heights of madneſs is it poſſible for human nature to reach? What extravagance is it to jeſt with death! to laugh at damnation! as we have done in the greateſt of our folly.—Every thing in nature ſeems to reproach this levity in human creatures. The whole creation, but man, is ſerious; man who has the higheſt reaſon to be ſo, while he has affairs of infinite conſequence depending on his ſhort uncertain duration. A condemned wretch may with as good a grace go dancing to his execution, as the greateſt part of mankind go on with ſuch a thoughtleſs gaiety to their graves.

Oh, Philo! with what horror do I recal thoſe hours of vanity we have waſted together! Return ye loſt neglected moments! How ſhou'd I prize you above the eaſtern treaſures! Oh, could I be permitted to live; to dwell with hermits; to reſt on the cold earth: and once more ſtand a candidate for an immortal crown, and have my probation for celeſtial happineſs; What worth is there in the vain grandeurs of a court! In ſounding titles! in periſhable riches! What conſolation! what relief can they afford me?

I have had a ſplendid paſſage to the grave! I die in ſtate, languiſh under a guilded canopy, I am expiring on ſoft & downy pillows, and am reſpectively attended by my ſervants and phyſicians: My dependents ſigh, my ſiſters weep, my father beareth a load of years & grief: my endearing wife pale and ſilent, conceals her inward anguiſh: My friend Euphormio, who was as my own ſoul, ſuppreſſes his ſighs, and withdraws from me to hide his burſting grief.——But, alas! who can anſwer my ſummons at the high tribunal? who can bail me from the arreſts of death? Who will deſcend into the dark priſon of the grave to relieve me there, or defend me from Corruption?

Here they all leave me, after having payed a few idle ceremonies to the breathleſs carcaſs, that lump of clay, which perhaps may lie repoſed in ſtate, while my ſoul, my only ſenſible part, may ſtand trembling before my Judge. The love and gratitude of my friends may perchance honour my remains with a ſtately monument inſcribed with, Hear lies the great.—But, could the pale corpſe ſpeak, it would ſoon reply,

—Falſe marble, where?
Nothing but poor and ſord'd Duſt (lies here.
COWLEY.

While ſome flattering penegyric is pronounced at my interment, I may perhaps be hearing my juſt condemnation at a ſuperior tribunal, where an unerring verdict may ſentence me to everlaſting infamy. But I find comfort in the promiſes of God, and hope for mercy thro' Chriſt. Therefore repent, and farewell, 'til we meet in the world of ſpirits.

Paſſage-Boat.

THIS is to inform the public, that the ſubſcriber has provided a good BOAT, convenient for paſſengers, which will ſail in the following manner; from Middletown on monday to Saggharbour, and back again on thurſday's, every 1ſt & 3d week in each month until November, winds and weather permitting. ROME, (in Italy) November 24.

THE Chevalier Charles Stuart arrived here the firſt of this month, and had the honour to be preſented to the Sovereign Pontiff.

Warſaw, (in Poland) Nov. 28. It is pretended that the Jews who have been expelled the States of Ruſſia, owe that diſgrace to the correſpondence which they kept up with the Jews of other countries, and particularly with thoſe diſperſed in Poland among the Confederates, and in Turky, whom they informed of every thing which paſſed in the States of the Empreſs.

Smyrna, (in Turky) Nov. 8. The regency of this place have refuſed admittance to an Engliſh ſhip of [illegible] guns, and to two frigates of the ſame nation, of [illegible] guns each, in conſequence of the intrigues of a certain European power, who hinted that theſe ſhips were Ruſſians under Engliſh colours, and had on board a large number of troops; and notwithſtanding an order obtained by the Engliſh Ambaſſador from the Grand Signior the Magiſtrates refuſed to obey it, and obliged them to caſt anchor before the Caſtle that defends the place.

Paris, (in France) Jan. 24. We are aſſured, that ſince the Duke de Choiſeul has been at Chanteloup a letter has arrived in characters which nobody was able to decypher, in conſequence of which the Abbe de la Ville went to Chanteloup, to aſk the explication from the diſgraced miniſter, which he gave, that the diſpatch came from the Ottoman Porte, in which the Grand Signor communicates to the Duke de Choiſeul a new treaty of peace between Turky and Ruſſia, in which England acted as Mediatrix, aſking his particular counſel in that reſpect, as he was reſolved not to act without his advice, and the approbation of France; to which he added a moſt flattering eulogium. the Duke de Choiſeul gave back the characters to the Abbe de la Ville, that the King might be able to verify the juſtneſs of the explication, and be convinced that the praiſes heaped by his Sublime Highneſs on that Miniſter were not ſervilely ſolicited.

Hamburgh, (in Germany) Jan. 18. Letters from Hanover adviſe, that the King of Great-Britain has given orders to remount the artillery, not only at Hanover, but alſo at Stade, Hamelen, Hardeburgh, Nienburgh, and other ſtrong places in the Electorate; to make new Baggage waggons, carts, and copper pontons, to replace thoſe that are worn out; and moreover, to take throughout the whole Electorate, an exact liſt of all the young men able to bear arms.

Conſtantinople, the Capital of Turky, Nov. 17. Notwithſtanding the advantages which General Count Totleben has gained over the Pachas who oppoſed his entrance into Armenia, he has been obliged to abandon that province without attacking the fortreſs of Akalſike to which he had approached within a league. This retreat has loſt the Ruſſians all the advantages which they had obtained in thoſe parts, during the former part of the campaign.

The plague has conſiderably decreaſed in this metropolis; the Ruſſian fleet has abſolutely left our ſeas, and the price of commodities has been conſiderably lowered ſince the Navigation of the Dardanelles has been opened.

Hague, (in Holland) Jan. 21. During the courſe of laſt year, 3434 proteſtants were baptized at Amſterdam, 7402 perſons died there, and [illegible] proteſtants were married. During the year 1770, 1579 veſſels entered into the Texel.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, we hear, is to be created Marquis of Rynham in Norfolk.

Two ſmall French frigates of war, have been obſerved for theſe three weeks paſt, cruiſing in the channel from Beachy-head down as low as the Deadman, to the weſtward of Plymouth. They are ſuppoſed to be ſtationed to obſerve what is paſſing at Portſmouth and Plymouth, having been ſeveral times ſeen quite within the Iſle of Wight, and cloſe to the Mewſtone off Plymouth Sound. This account is confirmed by ſeveral coaſting veſſels employed between Plymouth and the river Thames, lately arrived.

LONDON.

Jan. 13. The truth of the following circumſtances is poſitively aſſured by thoſe who pretend to be maſters of the ſecrets of the cabinet: Ever ſince the conqueſt of the Havannah, which ſhewed the real internal weakneſs of Spain, our Miniſtry have always treated the Spaniſh Ambaſſador reſiding at our Court with attention and politeneſs, but never permitted either the preſent Ambaſſador or his predeceſſor, to give themſelves any unbecoming airs. The preſent Ambaſſador had a mind, however, to try the preſent Adminiſtration whether they were made of ſupple materials or not. In this paroxyſm of Spaniſh haughtineſs, he began with ſpeaking in a ſtrain a little too high to Lord Weymouth; but this truly Nobleman cut the Inſolent Spaniard quite ſhort, by telling him in plain Engliſh, "I do not underſtand ſuch impertinent language, and I deſire never to hear any more ſuch from the Spaniſh Ambaſſador." Mortified with this Britiſh anſwer, the Ambaſſador began to find himſelf in the wrong box, and accordingly drew in his horns. On Lord Weymouth's receſs from office, and Lord Richmond being appointed to ſucceed him, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador again began to prick up his ears, and in a conference with the new Secretary of State, ventured upon the unlucky experiment of telling Lord Richmond that his Lordſhip had broke his word with him. Lord Richmond gave him a ſhort but ſmart reply, telling the hot and wrong headed Ambaſſador, "that he was determined always to have a check upon him," and begged that he might have no more impertinence; and that he would have no farther conference with him on any ſubject, upon any account whatſoever. In conſequence of this declaration, our Miniſtry ſent an Expreſs to the Court of Madrid, and on Wedneſday laſt, on the return of the courier, Prince Maſerano received his letters of recal.

By letters from Gibraltar there is advice that a veſſel which put in there from Tangier in Africa, brought an account that on the 2d of December laſt, there was a ſevere ſhock of an earthquake felt there, which laſted two minutes and a half; That great part of the houſes were thrown down, and the inhabitants buried in the ruins. The letters further ſay, that it was felt ſeveral leagues at ſea, that it was perceived at Gibraltar, and at the time it happened the ſea roſe conſiderably.

LONDON, Jan. 24.

Yeſterday Lord commiſſioner Bathurſt kiſſed his Majeſty's hand, on being appointed Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, with the title of Baron Apſley, of Apſley, in the county of Suſſex; as did alſo Edward Thurloe, Eſq; on being Appointed Attorney General; Alexander Wedderburne, Eſq; as Solicitor General; and Mr. De Grey, as Chief Juſtice of the Court of Common Pleas.

Jan. 28. Notwithſtanding the favourable aſpect which our political affairs ſeem now to wear, it is ſaid. "The mountain has laboured and brought forth a mouſe:" as the acquieſcence of the court of Madrid to the terms propoſed by ours, it is aſſerted by the knowing ones is a pretended temporary action on their part; & the ſole intention is only to blind our Miniſtry, Prepare themſelves more effectually, and prevail on the Court of France to act in conjunction with them, when the plot which they are certainly laying is ripe for action. If this is the caſe, which there ſeems great probability of, it behoves our Rulers to behave with the greateſt openneſs upon the occaſion and let their tranſactions appear in their true colours to their nation; that if there ſhould be more diſcerning men than themſelves, (a matter we need not doubt of) by their ſuperior ſkill they may be able to point out and convince the tranſactors of their errors; for ſecret negociations are certainly contrary to the ancient cuſtom of this kingdom; and if adhered to, and terminate in the matter above mentioned we may with juſtice make uſe of Sterling's words in the clandeſtine Marriage. "Lord, Lord, what will the World ſay?"

A bill is now depending for puniſhing mutiny and deſertion in the American colonies.

The diſpute between his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, and the Parliament of Paris, hath terminated in the baniſhment of every one of them, and the creation of a new one. It is ſaid that many perſons have been lately committed to the Baſtile, and that the Prince of Conti hath been forbid to appear at Court.

The Grand Signior, notwithſtanding the great ſucceſs of the Ruſſians, is far from being diſpirited. He has rejected, with diſdain the propoſitions of peace made to him on the part of Ruſſia, and that in conſequence his Highneſs is preparing to take the field with a very formidable armament.

Great bodies of Pruſſian and Auſtrian troops have entered Poland.

It is reported that the King of Pruſſia has taken poſſeſſion of Poliſh Pruſſia.

They write from [illegible], that there is at preſent in and near that capital an army of 60,000 effective men.

Feb 13. It is ſaid, that a letter was received yeſterday from Paris, which mentions, that ſome Noblemen have been exiled, for refuſing to acknowledge the authority of the new Parliament there.

Lord Howe has declined accepting of the Mediterranean, or any other command, in times like theſe which look ſo much like peace.

James Hume, Eſq; is appointed Attorney General of Georgia.

Yeſterday Mr. Mariner, printer of a paper called the Whiſperer, was brought up to the Court of King's Bench to receive ſentence for printing a Number of the ſaid paper, and was ſentenced to be confined one year in the King's-bench priſon; to give ſecurity for his good behaviour, himſelf to be bound in 100 l. penalty, and two other perſons in 50 l. each.

Feb. 15. An evening paper ſays, it is rumoured with confidence, that a very melancholy account of the King of Denmark's ſtate of health has been received, from which conſequences are to be dreaded worſe than the death of that Monarch.

It is reported that Lord North will ſoon reſign the place of firſt Lord of the treaſury: It is alſo ſaid that Lord Gower will ſucceed him.

It is certain his Grace the Duke of Richmond has refuſed to accept the Viceroyſhip of Ireland, or any other poſt, on terms inconſiſtent with his honour and patriotic principles.

It is currently reported that authentic letters have been juſt received from the Continent, declaring that an amiable Northern Monarch has lately ſhewn tokens of inſanity, and is obliged to be watched with the utmoſt circumſpection.

Wedneſday the Spaniſh papers relating to the Convention, came under the conſideration of the Lower Aſſembly. Lord B——p moved in ſubſtance as follows, "That an humble Addreſs be preſented to his M——y, returning him thanks for having agreed to the Convention, and for his compliance with the requeſt of that Aſſembly, in laying the Spaniſh papers before them."——This motion was ſeconded by Lord P—m—e. Mr. D———ll moved, "That all thoſe words contained in the Addreſs, which conveyed the thanks of the Club for having ſigned the Convention, be left out, and then the propoſed Addreſs would only thank his Majeſty for having laid the papers before them." Col. B—e ſeconded Mr. D———ll's motion. W—— E——, Eſq; ſpoke for a conſiderable time againſt the propoſed alteration. The debates then becoming general, the queſtion was ſpoke to by ſeveral Gentlemen, and Mr. D—g, in a ſpeech which laſted upwards of an hour, finiſhed the debate.

The queſtion was then put on Mr. D——ll's motion, which paſſed in the negative. On the diviſion there appeared for the queſtion 157; againſt it 275 Moſt Gentlemen in the Minority then left the Aſſembly, and L—d B—— p's motion to addreſs his M——y was carried without any farther oppoſition.

The ſpeakers were, L—d B——— p, L—d P—m—e, Mr D———ll, Col. B—e, Mr. B—s, Mr. C—F—, Gen. B——ne, Gen. C——y, L—d N—h, Adm. K———l, Mr. B—e, Mr. S——y, Com. H- -y, Sir G. S- -le, and Mr. D——g.

On Thurſday the Upper Aſſembly was prodigiouſly full when the Spaniſh papers came under their conſideration. The D. of N——e made a motion to addreſs. The D. of M——r, made a motion ſimilar to that made by Mr. D——ll in the Lower Aſſembly on Wedneſday The debates on the occaſion continued for ſeveral hours when the addreſs was agreed to. On the D. of M——'s motion being put, there appeared, for the amendment 55. with three proxies; againſt it 92, with 15 proxies. The Aſſembly was not up till half paſt eleven o'clock.

It is ſaid the two beſt ſpeeches which were made on Thurſday laſt, were thoſe of Lord G——n, and L—d Sh—— ne.

A paragraph of intelligence from Paris ſays, "The King has written a moſt obliging letter to the Dutcheſs of Choiſeul.—The Duke her huſband has leave given him to ſee the Nobility in his neighbourhood, ſo that Chanteloux is crowded by the beſt company. His Majeſty frequently mentions that he miſſes that Nobleman at his Court; from which it is imagined, that his diſgrace will not be of long continuance."

We hear that a proteſt was entered yeſterday againſt ſome proceedings on Thurſday.

Within this fortnight paſt, a certain Nobleman loſt, at one evening's ſitting, upwards of 6000 l. at cards.

LONDON, Feb. 8.

It is ſaid the preſent Duke of Bedford, when of age, will poſſeſs near ſeventy thouſand pounds per ann.

The Duke of Bedford, has made the Dutcheſs of Bedford's jointure equal to 10,000l. per annum, he has alſo bequeathed to her Grace, all her jewels, trinkets, and paraphernalia, entirely at her own diſpoſal; he has left her the uſe of Bloomſbury houſe, furniſhed as it is at preſent, and alſo Woodburn houſe and park, during life. He has left his grandſon, the now Duke of Bedford, 200l. per annum, till he arrives at the age of fifteen; at the age of ſixteen, 100l. a year more, till he arrives at the age of eighteen, at which period that income is to be augmented to 600l. per annum, which he is to receive till he comes of age. To each of his other two grandſons, has left an annuity for life of 600l. He has left his widow forty horſes. To Richard Rigby, Eſq; he has left the ſum of 6000l.

Monday laſt arrived here the Ship Thomas, Capt. William Davis, from London, by whom we have Papers to the 1ſt of March; which contain the following

FRESH ADVICES,

LONDON, Feb 25.

YEſterday the order was read in the Lower Aſſembly for the attendance of the Printers: and upon being called, and not attending, it was moved, "That for their contempt in not obeying the orders of the Houſe for their attendance on the Houſe this day, they be taken into the cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms attending this Houſe, or deputy." The numbers were 160 for the motion, and 17 againſt.

In the 3d Article of the Capitulation between the Commanding Officers of his Britannic Majeſty's Forces by Sea and Land and the Spaniſh General at the Falkland Iſlands It was required by the Engliſh that his Majeſty's Sloop Favourite ſhall go wherever they ſhall think proper. The Spaniard agreed but not till 20 Days after one of the Spaniſh Frigates had ſailed; and for ſecurity the Favourite ſhould be diſmantled, by putting her Rudder on ſhore

In a debate in a Great Room lately, on the Spaniſh papers, the affair of national and perſonal honour was canvaſſed Capt. A g ſt-s H-r v-y ſaid. "The national honour was as dear to him as his own perſonal honour; and inſiſted on the propriety of the addreſs, declared himſelf perfectly ſatisfied therewith" On which Capt. B- le W ls-ngh m ſaid, "I riſe to ſay a few words. I mean only to declare my opinion to be totally different from that of my honorable friend (Capt. A g ſt s H-rv y).——Had I been Commander of the Tamar ſloop, although I own and commend the ſuperior prudence of that Captain's conduct. I ſhould not have ſubmitted to the indellible diſgrace of having my Rudder taken from my ſhip the ſtrongeſt mark of diſhonor his Majeſty's flag could ſuſtain, and the bittereſt taunt with which a gallant man can live; and had Bucarelli (the Spaniſh Governor) come in perſon to offer this inſult, I would have chopped his head from his ſhoulders."

The Meſſenger who arrived at the Secretary of State's Office in Cleveland row, from Madrid, laſt Thurſday afternoon, brought a copy of the King of Spain's formal order for reſtoring Port Egmont; and an inſtrument of approbation, not of ratification, of Prince Maſerano's late declaration. But the claim of right, which the King of Spain has ſet up to Falkland's Iſlands, is to be the ſubject of ſubſequent negotiation. And there is great reaſon to apprehend, that, by private agreement, in order to obtain the abovementioned formal order for reſtitution, our miniſters have ſtipulated, or promiſed, not to ſend any officer, or ſhip, to re poſſeſs Fort and Port Egmont.

The beginning of laſt week, when a poor Iriſh woman was called to give evidence in a great Aſſembly in Weſtminſter, ſhe began her depoſitions by telling the audience, that "ſhe was a poor woman who had four orphan children, and that they had neither father nor mother except herſelf.

LONDON,

March 1. Yeſterday the Right Hon. Earl Temple gave a grand Entertainment to the Earl and Counteſs of Chatham and a great number of Nobility at his Houſe in Pall Mall.

Yeſterday a Board of Trade held at the Plantation office, at which the Earl of Hillſborough preſided, when ſeveral orders reſpecting the colonies were made.

The following is a liſt of the ſeventeen Gentlemen (and the two Tellers) who voted againſt taking the Printers into cuſtody on Tueſday laſt. Sir Robert Bernard Bart. N. Bailey, Eſq; Colonel Barre, Sir Piercy Brett, W. Burke, Rt. Hon. W. Dowdeſwell, J. Dunning, Sir Robert Clayton, Bart. C. W. Cornwall, Col. Jennings J. Mauger. R. Oliver, F. Standert, Sir George Savile. Bart. Charles Turner, R. Whitmorth, and Sir Cecil Wray, Bart. Alderman Sawbridge and Alderman Townſend Tellers.

A Warrant is ſigned by the Speaker for apprehending the two Printers who did not attend on a written order being left at their houſes. They are ſtill, however, we are aſſured, determined to reſiſt, and will not attend unleſs compelled by ſuperior force.

We are informed, that yeſterday the two Printers, who have neglected to appear at the Bar of a great Aſſembly, according to Orders, had agreed to attend their buſineſs as uſual; and that a conſtable was at hand, who was inſtructed to ſeize any perſon who ſhould aſſault them in their ſhops, and to carry him before the proper Magiſtrates, who was determined to commit him; and that the Printers would each of them bring a ſeparate action againſt him for an aſſault.

A member of the lower aſſembly aſked a brother member whether he did not think the Printers who had been called upon to appear before that houſe a ſet of audacious fellows? Not at all, ſays the other, for I always underſtood their intercourſe was with a parcel of devils, whom they keep continually under their roof; and if ſo, who but the devil would have any thing to do with them?

It is currently reported, that four Aldermen in the whole have declared, that if the Printers ſhould bring any officer of a certain place before them for ſeizing their papers, they will commit ſuch an Officer for an aſſault and falſe impriſonment.

The Printers have two precedents of reſiſtance to the authority of the Houſe of Commons: the caſe of Stawell, of Exeter, (an anceſtor to the preſent Lady Stawell, lately married to Lord Hillſborough) who in 1680, in the reign of Charles II, when the Houſe of Commons had made many arbitrary commitments, and complaints againſt thoſe violences were heard from all quarters he had the vigour and courage to put an end to the practice of the houſe in making diſcretionary commitments. The houſe had ordered him to attend. He refuſed to obey the order. The houſe then ſent the Serjeant at Arms to bring up in cuſtody. He ſtood upon his defence, and told the Serjeant there was no law by which they pretended to commit him. The houſe, finding it equally dangerous to proceed or recede, got off by an evaſion; they inſerted in their votes, that Mr. Stawell was indiſpoſed, and that a month's time was allowed for his recovery. Before the month was expired the houſe was up The other caſe of Allen, who was ſent to Newgate not two years ago, where he remained between three and four months, rather than acknowledge the power and juſtice of the Houſe, in a petition to the Speaker which was required of him. When the parliament was prorogued, he of courſe became at liberty, and ſtill remains ſo. The houſe not thinking it quite ſo prudent perhaps, to take any further notice of him, as he had repeatedly declared, in all companies, that if the Houſe ſhould determine to lay hold of him again, inſtead of flying his country, as was adviſed him, he would ſtand his ground, and repel force by force.

Wedneſday the Lower Aſſembly went upon the Nullum Tempus Bill, the debates were long and intereſting, many ſpeeches being made both for and againſt the intended amendment; at nine o'clock a motion was made for the Preſident to quit the chair, and the Houſe to form itſelf into a Committee, but the previous queſtion being put the lobby was cleared, and they divided, when the non amendment carried it by 9 votes; the numbers 164 to 155. As the majority were going into the Houſe again, a Gentleman, no Member, whoſe name was Hunt, mixed along with them and went in, but being almoſt immediately diſcovered, he was ordered into cuſtody, and the Houſe divided a ſecond time, when the numbers were as before; when the diviſion was over Mr. Hunt was called to the bar, and queſtioned why he came in? he anſwered, that he did it for no other reaſon than in hopes of getting into the gallery; he was then aſked, what Member he knew? He replied, that he was acquainted with ſeveral; among others, he was known by Mr Dunning and Serjeant Glynn, and he ought to be known to the Preſident, for he had been his client upwards of twenty years The Houſe conſidering his coming in as an act of inadvertency, more than any deſigned, and then (it being half paſt eleven) the Houſe broke up.

The further proceedings on the Nullum Tempus Bill, are poſtponed for three months.

Several Perſons are now living in Philadelphia in North America, who remember when there was not a ſingle Houſe in that City. By the laſt Accounts from thence we are informed, that there were then upwards of five thouſand good Brick Dwelling houſes in that City and it's Suburbs. The Streets are well paved and lighted, and the beſt Police is maintained in that beautiful City.

Patriotiſm ſeems now much upon the Decline; E——l T——ple's Love for his Country lies buried with his Br -er G- ge G——le; E—l S——e's is ſhortly to be tranſported into a diſtant Country, and poor W—kes almoſt forgot.

It is ſaid the following may be depended on; the B. of S———h being preſented with a printed ſermon, by one of the officers belonging to the upper aſſembly, preached on the 30th of January laſt, made anſwer, "that he had no room in his pocket for ſuch things."

A certain witty Earl was lately offered the government of a neighbouring Kingdom, which he repeatedly declined, with proper acknowledgments for the favour intended him; the Miniſter however ſtill continued to preſs it upon him moſt ſtrongly, and told him at laſt he muſt go there, as the nation was in a flame, That is the very reaſon, replied the Lord, that I will not go; for I'll be d——n'd if you ſhall burn me in your political conflagrations.

A gentleman of veracity juſt arrived from France, reports, that there is all the reaſon in the world to believe that a civil war will very ſhortly happen in that Kingdom.

They write from Briſtol and Liverpool, that ſince the confirmation of the Spaniſh convention being ſigned, a great number of Merchant ſhips have been engaged to ſail with full cargoes to different ports in Europe and America.

It is reported, that authentic advice is received of the ſafe arrival of the Aurora, Capt. Lee with the ſupervisors, at Bombay. It is ſaid they were becalmed for upwards nine weeks, and afterwards drove into an iſland where they were almoſt familhed, after ſtaying there five months.

Upwards of ſeventy Sailors were diſcharged on Wedneſday night from on board the tenders in the River.

The firſt Lieutenant of the Seaford man of war (arrived at Portſmouth from Jamaica) died on the paſſage.

Yeſterday the grant to Sir Eardly Wilmot, of a penſion of 2400l. per annum came from the Privy-Seal office, and was ſigned by the Lord Chancellor.

On Friday his Excellency Charles O'Hara, Eſq; Governer of Senegambia, took leave of his Majeſty, and in a few days will ſet out for Deal, to embark for his Government on board the Shelburne, Capt. Spence.

Extract of a Letter from Cracow, dated Jan, 26.

"The united troops under the Marſhals Beltz and Czernichow made an attack the 13th inſt. at day-break on the ſuburbs of Caſimir, and afterwards on the City itſelf. The principal attack was however made againſt the aforeſaid ſuburbs and the gate of Grodzker, the fire was very hot, and laſted till noon. The Confederates were repulſed three times with great loſs, and failed in their attempt of battering down the gates of Schuſter with their battle-axes. The Ruſſian Major Uſchakow was dangerouſly wounded, and Col. Ochſchlewitz, our Commander was wounded by a carabine. The Ruſſians had ſeven men killed, and twenty wounded. Although the two companies of Imperial Guards fought with a bravery never to be ſufficiently extolled, their loſs was not the moſt inconſiderable. The Confederates, amounting to four thouſand, have pillaged the quarter of the Jews, where the damage ſuſtained is eſtimated at 300,000 ſilver florins of Poland.

According to advices recieved from the Levant Provinces of Crim Tartary have revolted from the Grand Signior, and joined the Ruſſian army north of the Black Sea.

Some letters from Conſtantinople inform, that a Treaty between the Porte and the Court of Iſpahan is upon the point of being renewed; which, if effected, will prove very diſtreſſing to the Ruſſians, as the whole Perſian Empire will be engaged in favour of the Turks.

Some accounts of the Ruſſian ſquadron in the Mediterranean repreſent it to be in a deplorable ſtate.

A letter from Naples, dated Jan. 22, ſays, "If we may credit ſome Letters from the Levant, Admiral Spiritow, having received advice that ſome Turkiſh caravallei, joined with ſome other ſmaller ſhips of war, had left the Dardanelies, in order to ſet fire to ſome ſhips which were careening; the Admiral immediately ſet ſail, and coming up with them, after ſome hours engagement, he drove ſome on ſhore, ſunk ſome others, and diſperſed the reſt. The letter adds, that the Admiral afterwards landed on the iſland of Lemnos, the garriſon of which had ſurrendered themſelves priſoners of war."

LONDON, February 28.

Tueſday, in Compliance with an order of the Lords of the Admiralty, the preſs-warrants from the tenders in the river, and the rendezvous houſes at Wapping, &c. were returned to the Admiralty-Office.

Two tranſports, with warlike and ordinance ſtores, will accompany the men of war now getting ready to ſail for Port Egmont to take poſſeſſion of Falkland's Iſland from the Spaniards, on board of which will embark two companies of infantry, in order to render Port Egmont of ſufficient force, not to be ſurprized again (if the Spaniards ſhould break the preſent convention) on ſuch humiliating terms as before.

BOSTON, April 25.

Yeſterday arrived here Capt. Loba in 8 Days from Halifax, by whom we have the melancholy Account of the Loſs of the Granby Sloop, commanded by Mr. George Hoy, a Mate belonging to his Majeſty's Ship Salliſbury, with two Midſhipmen, a Pilot, and twelve Seamen, who all periſhed. She had on board ſome Stores and 3000l. ſterling, for Hallifax Navy Yard. From the Accounts of the Maſters of two Veſſels which were in Sight the Evening of the 8th Inſtant, when a Storm aroſe, it is ſuppoſed that ſhe ſtove to Pieces on the Light Houſe Rocks off Halifax:——Pieces of the Wreck were diſcovered next Day, alſo a Hammock with the King's Mark, ſeveral Covers of Boxes and ſome Caſks directed for Lord William Campbell drove aſhore at Proſpect Harbour. Seven dead Bodies had been found and buried.

NEWPORT, April 8

Laſt Friday arrived Capt. John Buſh, in the Sloop Pitt, in 80 Days from Martinico, having only his Mate and one ſick Man on Board; on the 9th of February he ſhipped a Sea which carried away all his larboard Rails, the next Day had one Man waſhed overboard & drowned; the 27th, Lat. 37, in a hard Gale, having ſhipped a large Sea, which unſteped his Maſt, ſo that it fell down on the Gunnel and ripped up Part of his Deck he was obliged to cut it away; 5 Days after he got up a Jury Maſt; and on the 28th of March another of his Hands died, after which he had no other Help but his Mate to navigate and ſail the Veſſel, juſt before he got up a Jury Maſt, he ſpoke with a Sloop from Boſton, on Board which Mr. John Malcolm was Paſſenger, bound to North Carolina, the Captain's Name not known; and though the Boat, with Mr. Malcolm and ſome of the Hands were ſent along ſide of Capt. Buſh, and ſaw his Difficulty, he could obtain no aſſiſtance from them, but as ſoon as they returned to their Veſſel, they made all the Sail they could from him. On the 12th of March he ſpoke with a Brig, Capt. John Cox, from Granada, who gave him a little Pork, the Weather being too bad to afford any other Aſſiſtance: the 19th, ſpoke a Schooner, Capt. Ephraim Johnſon, bound to Salem, who help'd him to ſome more Proviſion, by Means of a Line, the Weather not premitting them to get out their Boat; April 3. he ſpoke with a Brig, Monſ. Bommer) from Statia, who, with great Humanity, very generouſly gave him Proviſions, Water, Rigging, Nails, and ſome other Articles which he ſtood in Need of, all which Favours Capt. Buſh moſt gratefully acknowledges.

April 15. At the Superior Court, held laſt Week, in King's County, Bills of indictment were found againſt Eleven Perſons, being concerned in breaking open the Jail in ſaid County, on the 3d of November laſt, and letting out the Priſoners confined for counterfeiting Dollars &c. Several of the Rioters, who were young, and ſuppoſed to have been unadviſedly drawn into the Affair, were admitted as King's Evidence. ——The following were convicted viz.

Nathan Barbar; and ſentenced to a Fine of One Thouſand Dollars, to and for the Uſe of the Colony.——

Timothy Feckham, Blackſmith; and fined One Hundred Pounds lawful Money.

William Carliſle was convicted of paſſing counterfeit Dollars, and ſentenced to ſtand One Hour in the Pillory, on Little Reſt Hill, next Friday, to have both Ears cropped, to be branded on both Cheeks with the Letter R. to pay a Fine of One Hundred Dollars and Coſt of Proſecution, and to ſtand committed till Sentence performed.——This Carliſle, 'tis thought, has been One of the Emiſſaries, and employed as a Poſt to the moſt diſtant Connections of the numerous Gang of Money Makers, throughout the Colonies. The Public may be aſſured the Evil has been widely ſpread; but from the ſteady Exertions of Authority, 'tis hoped, ſo infamous a Practice will ſoon be ſuppreſſed.

Several of the Perſons, againſt whom Bills were found, had abſconded.

ON DEATH.

OH Death! ſweet Sleep to peaceful Breaſt,
Where virtuous Souls find balmy Reſt;
In whoſe cold Arms the Wretched lie,
Exempt from Pain and Miſery.
Thy Beck, ev'n Monarchs muſt obey,
And for Thee quit Imperial Sway,
The downy Couch on which they lie
The harder Coffin muſt ſupply;
The Velvet bed and gilded Room
Muſt be exchang'd for Marble Tomb.
Their Bodies mould'ring into Duſt
Be only ſeen in pompous Buſt.
The ſlave who ſweats in Indian Mines,
The Fop that in Embroid'ry ſhines,
The Cinder Wench that's cloth'd in Rags,
The gaudy Belle who Beauty brags
The Ruffian, Coward, and the Brave,
Muſt all be level'd in the Grave:
To Death, the ſtouteſt Heroes yield,
He conquers all, and ſweeps the Field.

Mr. WATSON,

"THE corruptions of the times, is the general complaint of all times; it has " ever been ſo, and it ever will be ſo, not con" ſidering that the wickedneſs of the world is al" ways the ſame, as to the degree of it; though " it may change places, perhaps, and vary a " little in the matter. One while whoring it " in faſhion, another while gluttony to day, " exceſs in apparel, & more care of the body than " of the mind: to-morrow comes up the humour " of ſcoffing and after that perchance a vain " of drinking; when he ſhall be accounted the " braveſt man, that makes himſelf the verieſt " beaſt." SENECA.

DEAR SIR,

I Received your laſt, wherein you ſeemed to crown the cloſe of our correſpondence upon the ſubject of the times in this town (in particular) with a deſire to let things wear off by degrees as they came on——and let the pitiful, unmanly, ignominious, irreligious, and decaying ſpirit of a people, naturally endow'd with bleſſings ſufficient to form a loyal, and enterprizing diſpoſition to their nation ſleep a while, and if they will forget that they are (if they pleaſe) the favourites of heaven, and are not only the terror of half the globe but the envy of every nation but their own.—I confeſs there is ſomething even in that. The ſacred page alſo aſſures us, there is more rejoicing over one grievous ſinner that repents, and is ſaved, than over many ſaved, that never ſinned in their lives; yet that cannot be an argument (I conceive) that our youth ſhould be bred in debauch, and turn off the prime part of life. To commence chriſtians at forty, nor that men ſhould grow grey in iniquity, to be converted as they are making their exit. No, God forbid!——Whatever indulgence, (my friend) heaven is pleaſed to beſtow, that deſerves thanks, but when man beſtows indulgence, that indulgence is but man's, the ſtate differ in magnitude, yet ſtill are ſtate——but grant delays not dangerous, great indulgence ſhall be given but ſet a bound to indulgence, leaſt by growing inſolent, it do defeat itſelf, and as well as to men prove ungrateful to omnipotence and love——And what but ingratitude and careleſs inactivity, can pollute the mind with ſo foul a blot, and turn the heart to ſuch inſenſibility and hardneſs, that we are aſleep to all expoſtulations divine or human——when our parent country threatens abſolute ſubjection, internal diviſions catch every where around us, and expand to an amazing degree of increaſe——the magiſtrate, the miniſter, and inferior officer oppreſs'd and cloſe beſeged with univerſal oppoſition, and treated with levity, and what's as bad they treat themſelves with more, and a land of levity is a land of guilt, a perſon that prefers the body to the mind, ſuffers his mind to become ſubſervient to the luſts of the body, and thus proſtitutes the nobleſt work of God to the greateſt ignominy poſſible in a wicked world.

You know of ſome body that could call me a virtuoſo now indeed, and do it as one that's forced to an appetite by a bitter—and I aſſure you he may be half in the right at leaſt, and might be altogether ſo—for though I ſhould admoniſh him and his brothers of levity and debauchery I much rather would chooſe to meet them in a withdraw, than at the G—d—n B—l. Alarm'd at the reigning paſſion for pleaſure, and the madneſs of many of our neighbours plunging into all the miſeries of a falling ſtate—I cannot but open my ſoul laden with the nobleſt affection to my dear falling, expiring Hartford, and bemoan her approaching diſſolution——What? and while I am to ſpeak ſhall a grave, deliberate, ſimmering, popular knave, ſay that youth are ſubject to pleaſure, & debauchery, and that its requiſite that they ſhould ſpend an evening at an enchanted tavern, and that they are not accountable for ſins committed in youth and manhood as well as old age?—Shame to modern times!——waſhed to fouler ſtains?——I know there are (I hope but few) of thoſe trafficking old r—g—s that are in great demand, and therefore upheld, that wear the gown, for the ſole purpoſe, of ſlacking the reins of juſtice, under the ſpecious colour of governing, not as they were one day to render an account of their ſtewardſhip and important office——but merely to ingratiate a good number of votes——and thus enfeoff themſelves to popularity, a thing beneath the notice of a man, & the greateſt moth in a ſound government Cæſar and Pompey are examples of it.

I write not, ſir, to curry notice, vice and immorality flouriſh and look green—yet we are not paſt recovery, tho' yet much worſe than many of our neighbours; would to God we were as much above them as our advantages above theirs. I foreſee a doom pronounced upon my epiſtle, (if not upon the preſs) but I would be that I am & ſcorn the man dares be worſe, be he an Alderman or Layman. I write the truth, God be my witneſs (and that without price) be it high or low, languid or ſublime and the preſs the grateful preſs, ſhall publiſh it abroad, and ſtand the trumpet in Zion nor longer may a ſound part of us, thoſe that feed the flock and guide the plough and thoſe that endure the ſcorching heats of ſummer, have their crops ſhortened, & bear the ſins of diſtempered luxury.

And thoſe nobler few that the wrath divine keep back, and delay, by pious behaviour, and devout intreaties. Let my friends intreat them with firm union, and aſſiſtance that they do not faint, under a burthen almoſt inſupportable.

Philanthropos.

RAN-away from the ſubſcriber of Claverack, on the 1ſt day of inſtant April, a negro man named Harry, about 5 feet high, had on when he went away, a greyiſh coloured coat, a pair of buckſkin breeches, green Indian ſtockings, large brim'd beaver hatt, ſomething worn.——Whoever ſhall take up ſaid Negro, and convey him to Col. From TUESDAY, APRIL 30, to TUESDAY, MAY 7, 1771.

OBSERVATOR, [No. VIII.]

POPULAR government is on many accounts the moſt eligible of any in the world, it appears to be that, which mankind forced by neceſſity to form ſocieties, firſt hit upon and preferr'd.—And what obſervation ſhews them, ſtill to be moſt fond of.—To ſuppoſe men in a ſtate of nature, willing to forego, and give up, the ſenſe of their own worth, all private right of power and ſuperiority, and tamely ſubmit to the abſolute will, pleaſure and controul of any individual is abſurd——compact, has by ſome ingenious writers been fix'd as the origin of government. If carefully conſidered it will be found not the origin, but rather the firſt regulation and form of government, which ever had, and forever will have its riſe from neceſſity——The neceſſities of the ſolitary and defenceleſs individual, urge him to form ſociety, by which his wants may be reliev'd, his circle of enjoyments enlarged, and the fruits of his labour, and induſtry ſecured to him.——Then comes the compact, in which he gives up part of his natural rights, to have the reſt ſecured to him. His wild and ſavage liberty of living, where, and in what manner he pleas'd, ſubmits to be circumſcribed, regulated, and reſtrain'd by laws, and rules formed by, and for the good of the whole.—However advantageous the bargain, and ſtimulating neceſſity urges him to come into it, yet pride, or a certain opinion of his own worth and ability which every man entertains and none ſo high as the unpoliſh'd ſavage, muſt forever bar his ſubmiſſion to the terms, were it not, that by conſenting to, or aſſiſting in, making the laws and regulations of the ſociety, and government in which he aſſociates, and to which he ſubmits his own importance is not neglected——he in ſhort is himſelf a governor whilſt governed, and by ſubmitting to no laws but thoſe to which he has firſt conſented —retains all the pleaſing ſenſations of mind ariſing from the idea of perfect liberty——and enjoys all the ſolid advantages of civil government —The extreme jealouſy which has always prevail'd in popular governments among the ſubjects; both of their laws, and their rulers is a ſtriking proof of what has been advanc'd—This jealouſy while kept within proper bounds, has ever been of ſervice in free ſtates, and not only tolerated but in ſome of them encouraged, but going beyond all reaſon, has been equally fatal to magiſtrates and people——its bounds are eaſily aſcertain'd beyond which it never ought to go, nor ought it ever to be wholly eradicated, or laid aſleep——implicit confidence in the beſt of mortals, like a two edged weapon is fatal both to him that confides, and the confided in; nor is it an over jealous temper, reſulting either from conſciouſneſs of our own weakneſs, or envy of the ſuperior abilities of another, leſs pernicious. In the antient popular ſtates of Greece, to be ſignal for learning, and virtue, for integrity, and ability in managing and conducting the intereſts of the common-wealth, was generally as dangerous, and fatal, to thoſe who poſſeſs'd theſe virtues, in a conſpicuous degree, as their contrary vices to others——Ariſtides whoſe integrity was ſo univerſally acknowledged, that the common conſent united in giving him the ſirname of the juſt, was it is well known baniſhed by the oſtraciſm——When a peaſant, a freemen of the republic, about to give his vote for his baniſhment, who was ſo illiterate that he could neither read nor write, and ſo perfectly ignorant of the worthy man, whom he had determined to drive into exile, that in the croud he met Ariſtides himſelf, and deſired him to write for him the name of a ſenator, whom he had determined to vote into baniſhment—Ariſtides willing to oblige him, aſk'd whoſe name he would have wrote——One Ariſtides reply'd the peaſant whom they call the juſt.——But friend, ſaid the worthy man, what cauſe of complaint, have you againſt this ſame Ariſtides? whom it ſeems by your own account, the public voice has conferr'd a very ſignal honor on, in thus diſtinguiſhing him by the title of the juſt? pray can the man whom all the republic have honored with ſo noble a title, deſerve baniſhment; unleſs guilty of the greateſt and moſt enormous of crimes? doubtleſs he cannot, of what crime is he accuſed? being a voter myſelf, have a right to know for my own direction —to make ſhort of the matter, reply'd the peaſant, I know no reaſon, why he ought to be honeſter, and juſter than other magiſtrates, or citizens; and I think this renders him dangerous to the community, as it gives him a ſuperiority over others which——you have ſaid enough, Ariſtides returned, interrupting him, and writing his own name for him.—It happen'd this vote turned the deciſion of the day, for baniſhing the beſt of men——At firſt we can hardly juſtify his own conduct, and may be inclin'd to ſubſcribe, to the character which the Poet gives him, when he ſays, "In all things "juſt, ſave when he ſign'd the ſhell."

THOMSON.

Yet when we conſider that this patriot, had probably long before obſerv'd the growth and fatal effects of this paſſion, of jealouſy, and when he now found by experience, that all his public virtue, for which he had been diſtinguiſhed, was ſo far from protecting him, that it was made a cauſe for his ruin——conſciouſneſs of the contraſt, between his worth and dignity, and their envy and jealouſy, might juſtify his thus ſigning his own baniſhment, ſince he carried with him, what they could not deprive him of, what he could not part with on any compoſition or terms, and what had become an object of their jealouſy—his virtue——The conduct of the Roman republic was, as well as the Grecian in many inſtances, of the ſame caſt. The Romans ordained triumphs for their ſucceſsful generals, and commanders, yet leaſt triumph and parade, join'd with military ſkill and virtue, ſhould have any dangerous conſequence on the liberty, or rather equality of the State; it was not only permitted to the rabble, to ſay every thing they could think of, againſt the hero of the day, by way of invective—but expreſly appointed one to ride in the triumphial chariot with him, and in a public manner remind him of all his faults—this was a precaution of ſtate, leſt the worthy hero in triumph, might forget his own weakneſſes, might think the public eye fixed ſolely on the bright ſide of his character, and in conſequence think his fellow citizens his inferiors, ſo as to be properly fitted to be his ſubjects and vaſſals——I recollect a ſtriking inſtance—a celebrated Roman general, who had conquered the enemies of the republic in every quarter, whoſe conduct had in every reſpect, laid the foundation of the applauſe, with which Rome was ever impatient, to receive him on his triumphal entry; the hero entered——the public calumniator by his ſide——hackneyed as he was, in all the arts of aſperſion, he could advance nothing againſt the General, but that he was a bald pated lover of women——or letcher if you pleaſe. If we may compare antient times with modern, it will be found, that the ſame cauſes, have the ſame effects, and that the piece lately publiſhed, complaining of the alteration of our feaſt, and faſt days, from Wedneſday to Thurſday, is if properly conſidered, either the higheſt encomium on our preſent magiſtrate in chief—as it appears, malice can find nothing elſe againſt him——or a ſtriking inſtance of the ſuperlative dulneſs, and ſtupidity of its author, in fixing on the moſt indifferent circumſtance in nature, to give a vent to his jealous envy.

The piece referr'd to, in itſelf may ſeem too low, to deſerve a ſerious conſideration—but ſerious conſequences, often attend the moſt trivial performances, or actions; and they more generally, open the door for ſerious & uſeful obſervations and reflections—where a poiſonous reptile, carries in him, an antidote to his own miſchief. No one can be called a trifler, or an uſeleſs writer, who attempts his diſſection, and to draw if poſſible from his obſervations on the ſubject, what may be uſeful to his fellowmen.——From this principle ſolely have the above obſervations been made by an impartial, unbiaſſed, and diſintereſted Obſervator.

N. B. The term oſtraciſm, was given to this method of voting, becauſe every voter, wrote the name of the perſon he deſign'd ſhould be baniſhed, on a ſhell, in their language called the Oſtra——from whence the angliciſm.

LONDON, February 23.

It is obſerved by a wag, that lawyers never put an end to a cauſe; they only prune it, in order that it may ſpread into more branches. In the famous lawſuit between the Duke of Portland and Sir James Lowther; that now engages ſo much of the talk of the public, it began with one ſuit, which is now happily multiplied to 300; for there have been that number of ejectments ſerved at ſix guineas a head. All the Forests in England have been engaged on one ſide or the other; they have drawn up for theſe two years paſt, with their briefs and quills, terrible as an army with banners; both parties have been fleeced to their mutual ſatisfaction; and now when the cauſe is juſt going to be decided; the counſel on both ſide concur (from a love to juſtice) in carrying it to the legiſlature, to make a new law before it can be decided; and then by the grace of Weſtminſter hall, and the harmony of both Houſes, it may probably remain as much perplexed, and as freſh a caſe, as at the beginning.

Portſmouth, Feb. 26. Yeſterday the Sandwich man of war, of 90 guns, was paid off; and it is expected the other three deckers will likewiſe be paid off. The Juno frigate, Capt. Stott, and the Hound ſloop of War, Capt. Carr, are both ſheathed, and we hear are ordered to go to Falkland's Iſland, & take poſſeſſion of Fort Egmont. Juſt now arrived, and was put under quarantine, his Majeſty's ſhip Dorſetſhire, of 70 guns, Capt. Clements, from Gibraltar.

"Yeſterday a Court Martial was held on the Rev. Mr. Green, chaplain on board his Majeſty's ſhip Prince of Wales, for giving a challenge to the Lieutenant, who at that time had the command of the ſaid ſhip in the abſence of the Captain, which is deemed mutiny, and the charge being fully proved to the ſatisfaction of the Court, we hear he was diſmiſſed the ſervice, and rendered incapable of ſerving in that capacity in future."

Stralſund, Dec. 5. Laſt Wedneſday in the afternoon, the Powder Magazine in this town blew up at a time when all the workmen were in it. By this accident, upwards of 100 people loſt their lives, and about 1000 were dangerouſly hurt.——Seventy houſes were thrown down.

February 28, Col. B. when he was ſpeaking on Friday laſt, againſt the embarkment at Durham yard, ſaid he had obſerved, that whilſt the report was reading, the whole aſſembly were talking, except one man, and that was the Premier, who was faſt aſleep. He was then called to order by Lord S———ge. The Colonel acknowledged he might be diſorderly, but ſaid it was no uncommon thing there to be ſo.

SAVONA, Jan. 5.

THEY write from Corſica, that the French have reſtored all the effects that had been confiſcated under the preceeding government. They have publiſhed an edict there, eſtabliſhing the uſe of Stamped paper, but have diminiſhed a 20th of the impoſts of the preſent year as a former. The nephew of Count Marbœuf is going to raiſe a new regiment of Corſicans; they have eſtabliſhed a militia alſo there, but will grant no more paſſports to the Corſicans, who want to paſs to the Continent.

From the Frontiers of Poland, Jan. 25.

The Confederates in number about 1000 men, who attempted to make themſelves maſters of Cracovia, and who only were able to poſſeſs that part of the town called Wazimera, were driven from thence by a Ruſſian Lieutenant who commanded the place, and having received a reinforcement from Oidlchelwitz, attacked the Confederates, who retired after having 300 men killed, and leaving 100 horſes and ſeven pieces of cannon for the conquerors, whoſe Lieutenant was killed in the action.

Venice. (in Italy,) Jan. 30 Our inſurance company ſuſtains a loſs of above 86,000 Ducats on the two ſhips from Turkey, laden with tobacco, which foundered at ſea, off the Iſle of Cerigo, or Zante. Two veſſels carrying Engliſh colours, laden with ſalt meat, have, in the ſame latitude, met with the ſame misfortune. As to the negociation which has been carried on at Conſtantinople between M. Le Bas, the French Ambaſſador's Secretary, and Count Orlow, concerning peace between the Turks and the Ruſſians nothing has yet tranſpired. However, from the great warlike preparations, which are carried on with the utmoſt diligence, it may be concluded that it is come to nothing. It is ſaid that within this month the Grand Signior will remove the whole Court and Seraglio to Adrianople, in oder to be nearer his camp; and he is ſaid to have not as yet dropt the reſolution of putting himſelf at the head of his troops, which will be by far more numerous than any of the preceding campaigns.

Mahomed Baſhaw, the new appointed Grand Viſir, is making great ſtrides from the borders of Boſnia, at the head of a conſiderable number of Arnautes and Boſnians, towards Adrianople. A great number of officers are ſent to all parts in the Turkiſh dominions to raiſe troops, and to regulate the head quarters; particularly great diligence is uſed to reſtore the loſs of the artillery, and other warlike ſtores they loſt in the laſt campaign.

Zevenbergen, Feb 7 There now remains no longer a doubt but that the Ruſſians are maſters of Wallachia. All the peaſants who fled from thence into this principality, are returned to their home, except their wives, whom they left here, becauſe they would ſee firſt whether it was ſafe for them to return alſo. The Grand Vizir has forſaken the places on the Donau after he had reinforced the garriſon of Siliſtria and Varna, in Bulgaria, and retired farther into Romelia. From Adrianople (where the new Vizir is juſt arrived) to Baſaploctrick, along the river Muniſa, all ſwarms with troops, which are divided and ſtationed in villages and boroughs. The roads from Conſtantinople and Adrianople are continually covered with waggons and carriages, wherefore great numbers of artillery, ammunition and proviſion are continually arriving at the army.

Febuary 28. Dr. Wilſon has ſettled fifty pounds for life upon Mr. Wilkes; and ſays, that if any man will do more, he will equal him in generoſity. His chariot is always at the ſervice of the Patriot, who is, in civility, obliged to ſend for it oftner than he wants it, for fear the Doctor ſhould imagine he is neglected. the ſame reverend and public ſpirited Divine has frequently declared, that he has in his will left ſomething handſome to his friend; and that, after his death he will be independent.

Yeſterday the Serjeant at Arms and the Meſſengers of the Houſe of Commons went to the houſe of Mr. Wheble, publiſher of the Middleſex Journal, and not finding him at home, ſtood for ſome time in the Chapter coffee houſe, in expectation of meeting with them; at half after 5 they quitted their poſt, which they are to reſume at half after ten this day.

If by any means the printers ſhould be taken into cuſtody by the Serjeant at Arms of the Houſe of Commons, it is ſaid they are determined to bring ſeparate actions againſt that officer for illegally detaining their perſons, and it is thought a London jury will certainly give ample damages.

The eſtabliſhment of the army, from the 25th of next month is to be the ſame before the late augmentation, only the ten new companies are to ſtand.

From a London Paper.

TO LORD MANSFIELD.

MY LORD,

DURING the Courſe of this Winter we have under different Signatures, addreſſed a great Number of Letters to your Lordſhip; To none of theſe have you ever deign'd to make the ſmalleſt Reply. We do not intend at preſent to trouble your Lordſhip with a long String of puzzling Interrogatories; but, in order to bring Matters to an Iſſue, we beg Leave, once for all, to aſk your Lordſhip one very ſhort and very plain Queſtion, Why won't you be a Patriot?

Patriotiſm, my Lord, is a Cloak that covers a Multitude of Sins: If your Lordſhip has any that require ſuch a Covering, Why won't you be a Patriot?

Patriotiſm is a political Varniſh, that gives to every Action a fair and ſhining Appearance. If your Lordſhip wiſhes to eſcape Calumny and Miſrepreſentation; if you wiſh that all your Words & Actions ſhould be placed in the faireſt Point of View, Why won't you be a Patriot?

We have heard that Modeſty and Diffidence generally accompany true Genious, and ſuperior Worth: Your Lordſhip therefore may probably imagine, that, in order to ſupport the Character, and diſcharge the Duties of a Patriot, more Virtue and greater Abilities are requiſite than even you poſſeſs —— Believe us, my Lord, (for we ſpeak from Experience) the modern Practice of Patriotiſm requires but little Art, and no Genius: You have only to humour the popular Prejudices of the Times; inſult your S—v—n, embarraſs his Government, ſlight his Authority, oppoſe all the Meaſures of his Miniſters right or wrong; foment Diviſions at home, and expoſe our Weakneſs abroad; in a Word, JOIN OUR PARTY: Do this, my Lord, and we will recal thoſe Emiſſaries that are employed to calumniate and abuſe you; nay we will endeavour to wipe off all the Aſperſions that have hitherto been thrown out againſt you; become one of us; and from that Moment we will draw your true Colours; we will ſpeak of you as you deſerve, "and ſet down naught in Malice;" we will allow you all the Abilities that exalt the human Character, and all the Virtues that render it amiable; in ſhort, we will allow you to be what you really ARE.

BUT, my Lord, if you ſhould ſtill perſiſt in lending your Aid to Government, and in ſupporting Miniſters, whoſe places we MUST and WILL have; if you continue to inforce the Laws againſt Blaſphemers and Libellers, who are our very good Friends, and who are labouring for our Advancement; if my Lord, you ſhould obſtinately perſevere in obſtructing our Views and thwarting our Deſigns; in that Caſe you have every Thing to dread from our Reſentment.—The People of England are intirely at our Devotion; we ſhall continue with unremitting Dilligence to iritate and inflame them againſt you; every Art ſhall be practiſed to render you odious in their Sight; Libels ſhall be circulated through all Parts of the Kingdom; we will traduce your Character, miſrepreſent your Speeches, and poiſon your domeſtic Peace.

All this we will do, BECAUSE WE DARE.

Signed,

JOHN IMPUGER WILKES, HORNE, GLYNN, TOWNSEND, OLIVER, BELLOWS, PHILELEUTHERUS ANGLICANUS, JUNIUS, CALIGULA, DOMITIAD.

By the NEW-LONDON POST.

NEWPORT, April 15.

By a Gentleman from Nantucket, we are informed, that Iſaiah Chadwick & one Obed Bunker, Maſters of two Whaling Sloops in the Weſt-Indies, belonging to Nantucket, had informed their Owners by Letters, that as they were lying in the harbor of Abbaco, a Ship appeared off ſaid harbour making a ſignal: upon which one of the Captains with ſome hands from each Sloop went in a boat to their aſſiſtance; as ſoon as he went on board the acting Captain preſented a piſtol to his breaſt threatning to ſhoot him if he refuſed to carry him into the harbor; to which he replied, he was a ſtranger to the harbor, but had a Man in his boat who belonged there; the Man was called in and threatened in the ſame manner, who not knowing what elſe to do, undertook to ſtand Pilot, and carried her ſafe in and anchored her, a point of land being between the Ship and Sloops. The boat was ſoon diſcharged and returned to the Sloops: when they had a conſultation, being perſuaded the People on board the Ship had turned Pirates, as thoſe who went to bring her in obſerved they were almoſt all armed, and ſaw one Man below, walking alone in the Cabin, whom they ſuppoſed to be the proper Captain.—They therefore concluded to invite the acting Captain, and other Officers and Paſſengers on board one of the Sloops to dine with them: The pirate Captain, and Boatſwain went and carried the proper Captain in character of a Paſſenger; they had not been long on board before the Pirate grew uneaſy, and wanted to return to his Ship again; but they bound him faſt and would not ſuffer him to return: upon which the proper Maſter of the Ship gave them an account of the Pirates proceedings; they then told the Boatſwain if he would go on board the Ship, and bring the real Mate (who was confined in irons) and help them take the Ship, they would endeavor to have him, the Boatſwain, cleared, and further intimated to him that there was a Man of War within two hours ſail from them, to which they would go and procure force ſufficient to overpower them, and informed him what ſignal they would make if they ſucceded in getting help, the Boatſwain went to the Ship and delivered his meſſage to the Mate, but further told him their Captain was a priſoner; the Boatſwain not returning according to agreement, one of the Sloops weighed anchor and ſtood out as if going on one ſide of the Ship, upon which the Pirates got all their guns on that ſide in order to ſink the Sloop; but juſt before ſhe got up with the Ship, they altered her courſe and ran by on the other ſide, before the Pirates could ſhift their guns again; by which means the Sloop got out unhurt, and ſtood off till out of ſight of the Ship, when, tacking about, and putting out the ſignal, mentioned before, as a proof of their having ſucceeded in procuring force from the Man of War, they boldly ſtood in for the Ship; whereupon the Pirates ſeeing the Sloop coming up, and thinking they ſhould be taken, left the Ship and went aſhore, but were ſoon apprehended. The Whalemen boarded the Ship, releaſed the Mate from his irons, and carried her to New Providence, where the Pirate Captain was hanged; and the Whalemen had about 2500 Dollars allowed them for their good conduct and bravery.——The Ship belonged to Briſtol, had been on the Coaſt of Africa, and carried a cargo of Slaves to the Weſt Indeis and was homeward bound with a load of Sugars. The Gentleman who gave us the above account did not remember either the Ship's or Captain's name.

New-London, April 26.

We hear from Stratford, that the Rev. Doct. Johnſon, has taken a Houſe in that Town for the Dean of Limrick, whom he expects daily, he being appointed by the King to inſpect into the State of the Epiſcopal Churches on the Continent, and make return annually from this Colony. He is to continue in this Office Four Years.—Whether this Office is to be eſtabliſhed, or whether it is only to prepare the Way for an American Biſhop, we do not yet learn: But this is evident, that the preſent Method of Information, (by the Miſſionaries in their Letters to the Hon Society) renders it highly neceſſary that there ſhould be ſome other Way than what has been uſually practiſed, for a right information of the Epiſcopal Churches in theſe Colonies, & the Conduct of their Miſſionaries, and the great need they ſtand in of a Viſitor.

YOU ſee my dear, ſir, for your comfort, there were Phariſees in the world eighteen centuries ago. This ſhort, but pointed ſketch of their character, needs no comment upon, nor laboured explanation, to hold up to view the exact, and ſtriking reſemblance of the modern Phariſees to their antient predeceſſors.—As the world, that is, the little part of it, which is a conſiderable part indeed of this colony, that take the Connecticut Courant, may think poor Hartford in a terrible ſituation by the late lamentation you have made over it, it ſeems quite proper to tell the whole ſtory without mincing, or diſguiſing any part.

Mr. David Bull well known throughout this colony, and to the gentlemen of the neighbouring colonies, who travel through this town, for a civil, honeſt, and obliging tavern keeper or publican, without deſign, happened to offend, and become obnoxious to Philanthropos and his friends, I ſay without deſign, for I never could find whence their malevolence ſprung, unleſs from the flouriſhing circumſtances this gentleman appeared to be in——his ruin, ſo far as the depriving him of this method of getting his living would effect it was determined on.——St. Luke informs us above, that a Phariſee can make religion or the pretence of it, a handle to endeavor the ruin of a poor publican, even in the ſight of his maker. It was therefore as little as could be expected from Philanthropos, and his brethren to make the ſame pious uſe of it, to ruin an induſtrious neighbour in his intereſt in the world.—It was difficult to bring a charge againſt him that would lye, or was worthy notice. Finally the heinous crime of card-playing, which if we may believe Philanthropos occaſioned the ſhortneſs of our laſt year's crops, was alledged againſt him—not that he play'd himſelf, not that he encouraged or countenanc'd it, but that when gentlemen travellers, and others, in a chamber by themſelves, inclin'd to ſpend an evening at cards, he did not examine ſo ſtrictly into what they were about, but rather choſe to paſs it by in ſilence.

This was the whole charge, but by aſſiſtance of council learned in the law, it was ſo exaggerated, that the majority of the authority of the town, inclin'd to omit him in the nomination of tavern keepers for the preſent year. It would be tedious, or their whole ſiniſter, interſted views and proceedings, which all finally centered in getting his birth, and cuſtom for another perſon, a friend of theirs, ſhould be laid open and expos'd.——Mr. Bull conſcious of his endeavours to ſerve the public in the beſt manner, and ſenſible of the damage it would be to him to be thus diſgracefully broke up, applied a freſh to the town, and on ſecond conſideration they nominated him to the court for a licence—before the court every thing was ſaid to prevent his being licenced which a fertile invention, long hackneyed in every mode of aſperſion could ſuggeſt——It was to no purpoſe——as the Hon. Court ſaw for themſelves, ſo they judged, and without heſitation licenc'd Mr. Bull of whoſe conduct in his buſineſs for many years they had been eye witneſſes——. Thus defeated, Philanthropos ſounds aloud the trumpet of fanatical nonſenſe, and abuſes even the authority themſelves—tells of the enchanted tavern, of the G—d—n B—ll or Golden Ball, collects a few detach'd ſentences from a late celebrated author, to glitter like ſcarlet patches clumſily ſew'd on a thunder and lightning fuſtian coat—tells of trafficking old rogues wearing the gown of juſtice, who regard nothing ſave popularity, and ſecuring a number of votes to themſelves——indeed he ſeems to have a tenderneſs for the rogues after all, and therefore does not incline to write out their name at large, but like the political writers of the day, writes it r—g—s. Here Philanthropos you are truly politic in not offending the bigger half of your employers,—for had the county been purged twenty years ago of the rogues and fools that are in it, you muſt unavoidably have ſpent your days in tending ſheep, or driving the plough, and which honeſt and honorable callings, (for ſuch I have ever eſteemed them) I moſt heartily recommend to you rather than being trumpeter either for Zion or Hartford.

A POOR PUBLICAN.

By the NEW-YORK POST.

NEW-YORK, May 2.

Tueſday laſt arrived the Mercury Packet, capt. Dillon, with the Mail from Falmouth, which he left the 18th Feb. and conſequently brings no News ſo late as we have had. We hear that the Fifth Packet Boat, to ply between Falmouth and this Place, is to be built here, and that Orders for that purpoſe are brought by the Packet.

Capt Offar, in 26 days from Penſacola, acquaints us that the troops and inhabitants at that place are very healthy, and that they are buſily employed in erecting four new batteries there.

Yeſterday arrived the Brig Elliot, Captain Chriſtopher Miller, in 6 Weeks and 4 days from London, by whom we have London Papers to the 9th of March, which contain little news of importance, the particulars of which we muſt defer for want of Room.—Some of the moſt material Articles are,——That the King of France has aboliſh'd all the Parliaments in his Kingdom, and entirely new modell'd the internal Form of Government, that the greateſt confuſion and diſcontent prevails thro' all the Provinces, that a general Inſurrection is by many apprehended, and that the King is going to diſcard Madame Barre, for a new Miſtreſs.

That the King of Spain has ſent a ſpirited Remonſtrance to our Court, demanding a categorical Anſwer with Regard to one of the Molacca Iſlands, in the Weſt-Indies, to the Government of which Mr. Dalrymple has lately been appointed, and which is claimed by the Spaniards.——Another Paper denies that ſuch a Remonſtrance has been received. That the Juno Frigate, and the Hound Sloop of War, with 2 Transports, and 2 Companies of Infantry, a quantity of Ordnance and Warlike Stores, &c. are going to retake Poſſeſſion of Port Egmont, which the King of Spain has ordered to be reſtored.

That Col. Burgoyne's new rais'd Regiment of light Dragoons are diſbanded, as are to be all the other Regiments of Dragoons. That the Sandwich Man of War, and all the other 3 Deckers at Portſmouth, are ordered to be paid off. That Admiral Montague with 4 Men of War of the Line are coming to America. That the French, Spaniſh and Engliſh Miniſters have frequent Conferences with Steuart M'Kenzie, Eſq; (Lord Bute's Brother) who is Secret Premier. That the King of Pruſſia has made a large demand upon the Britiſh Court, and it is apprehended has a deſign to invade Hanover, in Conſequence of which Report, there was a conſiderable Fall in the Stocks, that there is ſoon to be a great Change in American Governors, That many Perſons have refuſed to accept of the Place of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, that the late prorogation of Parliament, there had ruined great Numbers of Manufactories and Workmen, that at the meeting of Parliament there the 26th Feb. the Houſe was ſurrounded by above 10,000 Perſons, that the Members, of the Court Party, were in Danger of their Lives, and were obliged to call in the military Aid, and that much Miſchief was apprehended. That at a board of Trade the 4th of March ſeveral Orders were made, reſpecting the American Colonies.

On the 9th of March, his Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to a Bill to continue an Act for puniſhing Mutiny and Deſertion in the American Colonies, For erecting a Play-Houſe in Liverpool and ſundry other Acts.

The Emperor and the King of Pruſſia, have aſſembled powerful Armies on the Frontiers of Poland, act in Concert, and it is imagined the Object of their Deſign is the re-eſtabliſhment of Peace in that Kingdom. It is ſaid the Ruſſians have again entered the Morea, and that the Inhabitants have join'd to aſſiſt them, that the Ruſſians continued the Operations, notwithſtanding the Severity of the Winter, had defeated 5000 Turks, and inveſted 2 Towns, the laſt the Turks had left on the Danube. That the Governor of Trebiſonde had revolted againſt the Porte, giving the Signal of his Rebellion by ſetting Fire to the Town, which was half burnt down. That the Ruſſians ſtill maintain'd their Advantages both by Sea and Land and that with far leſs Difficulties than they have already encounter'd, if their Succeſs continues another Campaign, they will gain the Poſſeſſion of Conſtantinople.

NEW-HAVEN, May 3.

Laſt Monday the notorious Burglar, Richard Steel, was taken at Milford, and conveyed to Fairfield Goal, (charged with ſeveral Burglaries and Thefts, ſince his late Eſcape from Hartford Goal, the laſt of which was committed in Stratford) alſo one Evens, an occaſional Landlord of Steel's, and at whoſe Houſe he was taken; Steel made a moſt vigorous Reſiſtance, and wounded the perſon in the Head with a Cutlaſs who took him.

HARTFORD, May 7.

We hear from Say-Brook, that on the 16th Inſtant the Wife of Mr. Handley Buſhnell, of that Place, was delivered of Twins, a Son and a Daughter. The laſt Children ſhe had before theſe were two Daughters, Twins, who are now in their 11th Year.—The Infant Twins were chriſtened laſt Sunday, and were carried out by their Twin Siſters, which is eſteemed a ſingular inſtance.

A Thought on ETERNITY.

E'Er the Foundations of the World were laid,
E'er kindling Light th' Almighty Word obey'd;
Thou wert; and when the ſubterraneous Flame
Shall burſt its Priſon, and devour this Frame,
From angry Heav'n when the keen Lightning (flies,
When fervent Heat diſſolves the melting Skies,
Thou ſtill ſhalt be; ſtill, as thou wert before,
And know no change, when Time ſhall be no (more.
O endleſs thought! divine Eternity!
Th' immortal Soul ſhares but a Part of thee;
For thou wert preſent when our life began,
When the warm Duſt ſhot up in breathing Man.
Ah! what is Life? with ills encompaſs'd round,
Amidſt our Hopes, Fate ſtrikes the ſudden (wound:
To-day the Stateſman of new Honour dreams,
To-morrow Death deſtroys his airy Schemes.
Is mouldy Treaſure in thy Cheſt confin'd?
Think all that Treaſure thou muſt leave behind;
Thy Heir with Smiles ſhall view thy blazon'd (Hearſe,
And all thy Hoards with laviſh Hand diſperſe.
Should certain Fate th' impending Blow delay,
Thy Mirth will ſicken and thy Bloom decay;
Then feeble Age will all thy Nerves diſarm,
No more thy Blood its narrow Channels warm.
Who then would wiſh to ſtretch this narrow Span,
To ſuffer Life beyond the Date of Man?
The virtuous Soul purſues a nobler Aim,
And life regards but as a fleeting Dream:
She longs to wake, and wiſhes to get free,
To launch from Earth into Eternity.
For while the boundleſs Theme, extends our (Thought,
Ten thouſand, thouſand rolling Years are nought.

To the PRINTER.

Pleaſe to inſert the following Obſervations upon HEALTH, and the excellent Virtues of MILK.

HEALTH is univerſally eſteemed the greateſt Bleſſing in human Life, and the Means to preſerve this ineſtimable Jewel, has been the ſtudy of all Ages. What I would now offer upon the important Subject of Health, is a Recommendation of MILK. Perhaps Nature does not afford one Article beſides, ſo univerſally friendly and ſalubrious to the human Conſtitution as Milk. It is food, double refined, eaſy of Digeſtion, and ſoon prepared in the Stomach to paſs into the Blood, and convey that fine balſamic Nouriſhment of every Part of the human Body, which is requiſite to re-inkindle the vital Flame and make the Lamp of Life burn bright to old Age. How many Fevers, Dropſies Conſumptions, with a long Train, of other Diſorders, might the uſe of Milk Prevent?——And what vaſt Numbers have ruined their Health & brought on Diſeaſes and Death, by the corroſive enervating TEA, and the acid ſlipic Coffee! For a Proof of theſe things, let us look into other Nations, view paſt Ages, and the preſent Generation, with their different Ways of Living. The Antients lived upon the Produce of their own Country, and very much upon Milk, agreeable to the Advice of the moſt eminent and enlightened Phyſicians and Philoſophers, who judged that Vegetables and Animals nouriſhed in the ſame Climate and Air that we breathe in, are moſt agreeable to our Conſtitutions; and that Milk being a fine Extract from all the various wholeſome Vegetables, muſt be extremely nutritious and greatly contribute to Health & long Life. This is juſtly ſuppoſed to be one principal Reaſon why the Antients had ſuch robuſt Conſtitutions and lived to ſuch great Ages. Our own Obſervations upon the preſent Generation confirm the Truth of the above Remarks; for in England, Ireland, Scotland, and many other Parts of Europe, as well as in America, thoſe People who reject Foreign Luxury, and live upon the Produce of their own Farms, enjoy the fineſt Health, live to the greateſt Ages, their Minds are ſerene and clear, unclouded with thoſe Miſts which Luxury creates, like a lamp fed with pure Oil, the Candle of Life burns bright to the laſt. What Infatuation has ſeized upon ſuch Multitudes of Americans, to depart from the wiſe Example of their noble Anceſtors, from the Maxims of Reaſon, and become Enemies to themſelves, to their Country, to Poſterity and the human Species, (for a bad Man, or an ill Example, is an Injury to Mankind in general) and for momentary gratifications, to ſacrifice their Health, their Eſtates, and all that is dear to human Nature!——Can Humanity forbear weeping over ſuch ſtupid Mortals, and dropping a Tear at their untimely Graves!——

BROKE out of the county Goal in this town, laſt Night and eſcaped, the following perſons viz. The notorious Burglarian, that called himſelf Richard Steel, that has been twice crop'd and branded, and was at March Court, at Hartford, again tried for the third Offence, but found not guilty, purſuing his old Trade, was again taken up and cloſely confined in Irons, but has found Means to get them off. His appearance is that of a likely young Man, of about 21 years of Age, about middling for Height ſomewhat ſlender, has a lively, keen, dark colour'd Eye and is finely pitted with the Small Pox, wears his Hair, pretty dark Colour'd, but not unlikely he may ſoon get a wig to cover his Ears; he is pretty quick and lively in ſpeaking, and has a little different Manner from perſons born among us. Alſo one Moſes Allen, belonging to Windſor, a likely, handſome young fellow, to appearance about 20 Years old, wore his own Hair, is a fair Countenance, ſomewhat ſhort and pretty well ſet, was committed for Theft, is ſuppoſed, to have carried on a Trade for ſome Time, of opening Shop Doors with Keys, of his own make, and carrying away Goods in ſmall Parcels, and putting in his own Cheſt, when he liv'd unſuſpected till of late.——Alſo, one John Robinſon, a young Man, called a tranſient Perſon, but laſt from Simſbury, and committed for Debt. Alſo a woman called Roſanna Blanchard, who had been convicted of harbouring and entertaining the above named Steel and puniſhed, and was held for the Coſt. Whoever ſhall take up either of the two firſt mentioned notorious Criminals, and ſecure them that they may be brought to Juſtice, ſhall have a Reward of Forty Shillings; Lawful Money, and all neceſſary Charges paid; For Robinſon, Twenty Shillings; and for the woman, Ten Shillings.

OBSERVATOR, [N°. IX.]

A Neighbour of mine ſomewhat philoſophically diſpos'd, ſmoking a pipe with me the other evening, on my obſerving that it was a backward ſpring, reply'd aye, I think more ſo than has been known for ſeveral years, why I have not ſeen a ſingle political piece in the papers this ſeaſon, except a ſmall diminutive ſprout of Unanimous——on looking full in his face, with a countenance half ſurprize, and half interrogation, he knock'd the aſhes out of his pipe, and emptying the tankard of cyder, proceeded—you can but have obſerved in general, that the arts and ſciences, have as much their particular ſeaſon, as trees, and other race of vegitables—indeed differing climates, and cultivation are always to be conſidered in both caſes——with us, the only ſeaſon for politics, is from the firſt of January, to the middle of May or beginning of June.——The year 1766 was the moſt fruitful of any within my remembrance, yet if you recollect there was very little of any conſequence produced but in that term. The approach of the ſpring proxy, and election, has the ſame effect on theſe kind of writers, that the ſun has in the ſame ſeaſon, on waſps, flies, ſnails, and the whole race of beings, dormant through the winter——Not continued he, on my ordering a freſh tankard, that I believe the proxy, and conſequent election are the ſole cauſe of theſe productions at this ſeaſon;——The ſummer & winter, give different ſenſations, and often different ideas of the ſame object even to a philoſopher, and it is ſaid of one of the greateſt Poets that ever lived, that he found a moſt ſurprizing odds in himſelf about the vernal equinox, not being any way able in the other ſeaſons of the year, to think, and write with the ſame energy, and flow of imagination as at that——The extreme heat of ſummer relaxes, and unbends the human frame, and the powers of the mind have, you are ſenſible, a very large ſhare in whatever effects the body; beſides the ſeaſon itſelf is too warm, without either political or church debates, to deſtroy what little cool air the heavens graciouſly ſpare us. As light foods are recommended by phyſicians in them months, ſo the learned or ſentimental world ſeldom produces, or reliſhes any thing heavier than a diurnal eſſay, ſonnet, or favourite air. The next is called the ſober ſeaſon, in which the gradual approaches of winter, and the preparations for it, with all the bloom, and beauty of nature fading around us, rather prevent, than aid the efforts or ſallies of imagination——Winter like the evening of life calls us within doors and naturally leads to calm reflection on the paſt, and preſent, with ſerious meditation on the future——both man and beaſt are thro' this ſeaſon ſupported, and enabled with ſome degree of chearfulneſs, to bear up againſt the ſeverity of the climate, from the ſtock they frugally provided in better days——But the returning ſun, reanimates all nature, and as in the vegetable world it immediate ferments, and ſets in motion thoſe juices, for the due, and proper concocting, and purifying of which, the cold was abſolutely neceſſary—ſo in the mental.

You know modern wits have been very free in ridiculing the notion of the antients, that certain ſorts of food, and drink conduced as much as any thing to give perſons a particular turn of thinking. Yet if you conſider it unprejudicedly, you muſt give into the truth of the fact—Now I am fully convinced that cyder, which through the winter months, is our ſtaple liquor, as much conduces to inſpire the politics of the ſeaſon, as that the generous wine ſo freely drank, and ſo highly celebrated by antient poets help'd to give a ſprightlineſs to their imagination, and an energy of ſtile and ſentiment unequalled by any thing modern.——The laſt ſeaſon was very barren as to this article, particularly ſo in the two principal cyder counties, to which more than any thing, I attribute it, that we hear no more of the ſcheme, for making four new counties, and ten new regiments in the colony, at the next aſſembly.

You ſeem ſurprized, ſir, for my part I was a little uncertain I confeſs myſelf, on firſt hearing of the plan, whether it would do, but the reaſons in favour of it, are ſo very weighty, and concluſive that I think every one diſintereſted muſt at once give up the point—all I fear for is, that it will not be carried through this ſeaſon, and as you have ſome friends in both houſes, hope your influence will not be wanting—To this very odd harangue, thus odly concluded, I replied that the propoſal was intirely new to me, and was of courſe a ſtranger to the reaſons in ſupport of it——on which my friend after recruiting his exhauſted ſpirits, by a freſh application to the tankard, taking down the ingenious Mr. Parks's map of the colony, and ſpreading it on the table proceeded——turn the map upſide down, direct round, reverſe of the poſition it now lies in, I mean to begin on this eaſt ſide—look at New-London county——let me ſee, it is from Killingworth to Norwich more than thirty miles—from there to Windham or Lebanon but about eight——there are eight towns in it——what need many words about it, your eye tells you at once it is out of all proportion—there is in Windham county nine towns, you ſee at firſt view Windham is far from being the centre of this county. Turn your eye next on Fairfield, and Litchfield counties, and the diſproportion is equally ſtriking. To ſay nothing of New Haven. Hartford county is enormous North Weſt and South Eaſt 60 miles in extent, Eaſt and Weſt, thro' the centre, near forty, North and South more than 50——Now, Sir, if you conſider the ſituation of the colony, and particularly of the towns included in each county, at the time of their being ſet off as counties, you will find that the reaſons for their being ſo extenſive were, that there was not within them limits then, more buſineſs than ſufficient for one court, and that there were not, at them early periods men learned in the law to ſupply more courts with able judges, attorneys, &c. than were then erected——but if there is now ſix times the buſineſs there was then——and at that time you muſt grant there was ſufficient, or impeach the wiſdom of the hon. aſſembly in appointing the courts——and if we have now ſix aye twenty times the number of men ſkill'd in the law as then——for full proof of which, ſee the increaſe of Juſtices of the peace, and the enlargement of their power, within theſe few years—I ſay theſe facts being inconteſtible, the conſequence plainly follows that counties and judges ought to increaſe in number in ſome proportion.

In ſhort when every thing is conſidered, the honor it will do the colony, as well as many individuals truly deſerving of ſome higher title than (his worſhip) and the great conveniences that will ariſe from ſuch an alteration or increaſe of counties to the public in general, but more eſpecially to the young attorney's, make me think four new counties, will hardly be ſufficient, but it is beſt to begin moderate.

As to the ten new regiments, there certainly can nothing be ſaid againſt that part of the propoſal——the notion of ſkill in military diſcipline, being neceſſary for the officers that are to command the regiments, has long ſince been exploded; and we have the pleaſure to ſee the militia on a ſyſtem, in which knowledge of the art of war is ſo totally unneceſſary, that we have colonels, and majors appointed, of ſo peaceable a make, that they avoid like good chriſtians, not only the knowledge, but the leaſt appearance of any thing warlike——but as the name ſtill retains the ſame emphatical ſound, and in other parts of the world really means ſomething——as the bulk of mankind will couple an important idea, with a ſound of importance.—I think the making ten new regiments, as there will in conſequence be thirty new field officers, and not a half penny coſt to the colony, we ought by no means to put it off, eſpecially as we are threatened with a war——the news of ten new regiments, raiſed in Connecticut, might tend greatly to intimidate the proud Spaniards, and intriguing French, and continue a peace on our own terms.——My friend here ended his reaſons for the purpoſed additions, though as he obſerved he had but juſt touch'd on a few, out of an almoſt numberleſs variety.

For my own part am fully convinced, and deſirous every one elſe ſhould be ſo too, have publiſhed the converſation in order that ſo uſeful and honorable an act, may be promoted by all, as well thoſe without, as thoſe within doors.

This Morning arrived the Lydia, Capt. Hood, from London, as did alſo the Paoli, Capt. Hall, this laſt in but five Weeks, from the Prints brought by them we have taken the following Articles of Intelligence, viz.

LONDON, March 25.

Extract from the Guild hall Rhota Book.

Guild hall, 15 March, 1771.

JOHN Wheble, the Publiſher of the Middleſex Journal, was this day brought before Mr. Alderman Wilkes at Guildhall, by Edward Twine Carpenter, a Printer being apprehended by him in conſequence of a Proclamation in the London Gazette of Saturday the 9th of March Inſtant; but the ſaid Edward Twine Carpenter not having any other Reaſon for apprehending the ſaid Mr. Wheble than what appeared in that Proclamation, the ſaid Mr. Wheble was diſcharged; and then the ſaidMr. Wheble charged Carpenter for aſſaulting and unlawfully impriſoning him, and on his making Oath of the Offence, and entering into a Recognizance to proſecute Carpenter at the next Seſſions in London, Carpenter was ordered to find Sureties to anſwer for this Offence, which he did, himſelf being bound in 40l. and his two Sureties in 20l. each, and was thereupon diſcharged.—— Carpenter requeſted a Certificate of his having apprehended Wheble which was given to him.

(COPY.) Guildhall, 15 March, 1771.

This is to certify, that John Wheble, the Publiſher of the Middleſex Journal, was this Day apprehended and brought before me, one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace for the City of London, by Edward Twine Carpenter, of Hoſier lane, London, Printer.

JOHN WILKES, Alderman.

(COPY.)

Guildhall of London, March 15. 1771.

“ MY LORD,

“I Had the Honour of officiating this Day as the ſitting Juſtice at Guildhall, John Wheble, the Publiſher of the Middleſex Journal, a Freeman of London, was apprehended and brought before me by Edward Twine Carpenter, who appears to be neither a Conſtable nor Peace Officer of this City. I demanded of what Crime Wheble was accuſed, and if Oath had been made of his having committed and Felony, or Breach of the Peace, or if he lay under a Suſpicion ſtrong enough to juſtify his Apprehenſion or Detention. Carpenter anſwered, that he did not accuſe Wheble of any Crime, but had apprehended him merely in conſequence of his Majeſty's Proclamation, for which he claimed the Reward of Fifty Pounds. As I found that there was no legal Cauſe of Complaint againſt Wheble, I thought it clearly my Duty, to adjudge, that he had been apprehended in the City illegally, in direct Violation of the Rights of an Engliſhman, and of the chartered Privileges of a Citizen of this Metropolis, and to diſcharge him. He then made a formal Complaint of the Aſſault upon him by Carpenter; I therefore bound him over to proſecute in a Recognizance of Forty Pounds, and Carpenter to appear and anſwer the Complaint at the next Quarter Seſſions of thePeace for this City in a Recognizance of Forty Pounds himſelf, with two Sureties in Recognizances of Twenty Pounds each.

“ I am, my Lord,
“ Your Lordſhip's moſt obedient,
Right Hon. Earl “ humble ſervant ” of Halifax. (Signed) “ JOHN WILKES.”

LONDON, March 25.

ABOUT two o'clock, the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, attended by Mr. Alderman Oliver, went from the Manſion-Houſe, to attend in their reſpective places in the houſe of Commons, purſuant to orders iſſued to them on Friday laſt. There was a prodigious concourſe of people about the manſion-houſe to ſee them come out, and the croud continued to increaſe the whole way to Weſtminſter hall.

When the members of the Houſe of Commons had taken their ſeats, the Houſe proceeded to the diſcuſſion of the very tender and delicate matter before them. Their Debates, relative to the Lord Mayor, we are told, turned principally upon theſe three points, Cenſure, Expulſion, or the Tower. The Majority ſeemed inclined to the ſecond. Very early, however, in the evening they had divided twice; and the numbers on the ſecondDiviſion, which was an adjournment, are ſaid to have been 213 Noes to 97 Ayes.

About half paſt ten o'clock, his Lordſhip finding his ſtrength exhauſted, and being unable to bear the pain and fatigue any longer, begg'd permiſſion to retire; which being granted, he returned to the City, attended as before by a vaſt concourſe of people, who took the horſes from the coach, and drew it all the way to the Manſion houſe, teſtifying their approbation of his Lordſhip's conduct by the loudeſt acclamations and repeated ſhouts of applauſe.

March 26. About three o clock in the morning the Debates in the Houſe of Commons ended, when Richard Oliver, Eſq; Alderman and Member of Parliament for the city of London, was ordered to be ſent to the Tower, but was indulged to lie at his own houſe in Fenchurch ſtreet, where the Serjeant at Arms attended between the hours of ſeven and eight o'clock, and conducted him in a coach to the above Priſon.

The numbers on this laſt Queſtion are ſaid to have been 138 Ayes to 83 Noes.

March 27. This day the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of the City of London went from the Manſion houſe, about one o'clock, (accompanied by the Committee) to attend in his place in the Houſe of Commons, purſuant to order. He was accompanied, as on Monday, by an amazing number of people, who ſeemed anxious to know the iſſue of the affair.

The Juſtices and High and Deputy Conſtables of Weſtminſter were all attending, and the Guards, both horſe and foot were ordered to be in readineſs, in caſe any tumult ſhould ariſe.

The members reſolved, “that the proceeding of the Lord Mayor, in diſcharging Miller, and committing the Meſſenger was a breach of the privilege of that houſe.” A motion was then made, that the Lord Mayor ſhould, for his contempt be committed to the cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms, but upon his Lordſhip's obſerving, that if any offences had been committed, he was the greateſt offender, and that he longed to join his brother in office; an order was ſigned for his commitment to the tower, permitting his Lordſhip to ſleep that night at the Manſion houſe.

March 28. About four o'clock in the morning the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor arrived at the Tower, and was lodged at Mrs. Bradſhaw's, on the parade, next door to the Bloody Tower. His Lordſhip, notwithſtanding his indiſpoſition, was in great ſpirits.

Mr. Alderman Wilkes followed the Lord Mayor in Mr. Reynolds's Coach with him and another Gentleman to Palace Yard, and then returned to the City.

March 29. Mr. Wilkes, when he went to the Houſe of Commons yeſterday, deſigned only to attend the Lord Mayor on his way. When his carriage reached St. Martin's Lane, the populace took off the horſes, and drew it to the King's Arms Tavern Palace Yard.

The crowd was ſo great yeſterday in Old Palace Yard, and Weſtminſter Hall, that it was with the greateſt difficulty many of the members, eſpecially the Court Party, got to the Houſe of Commons; Lord North had his chariot glaſſes ſmaſhed to pieces, as well as his carriage; his wriſt was cut; and the Mob alſo took off his hat and cut it into pieces, and he narrowly eſcaped with his life. The two Mr. Foxes, and Mr Hans Stanly, were greatly inſulted and pelted with mud; Juſtice Kelynge attempted to read the Proclamation, but was ſo pelted that he was obliged to deſiſt; two hundred conſtables, could not keep the populace in order for on their endeavouring to keep the peace, the mob ſeized their ſtaves and broke them to pieces: As ſoon as a members coach appeared, they ſtopt it and obliged the coach man to inform them of his Maſter's name and they were treated according as they ſtood in their approbation, ſome with hiſſes and groans, and others with loud acclamation.

The Right Hon Lord North is extremely indiſpoſed of the wounds he received on Wedneſday at the door of the Houſe, and is attended by two ſurgeons and a phyſician of eminence.

The populace were very riotous yeſterday in the park and frequently inſulted a Great Perſonage. Among the reſt of the expreſſions made uſe of on the above occaſion, were a number reſpecting the P—— D——; and many called out, Where is the Lord Mayor? Set him him at liberty: Tower! Tower! &c. &c.

The Ruſſians are determined to carry on the War with Vigour againſt the Turks.

The Diviſion in the Houſe of Commons for commitin the Lord Mayor to the Tower, was 202 for, and 39 againſt it.

Extracts from the Speech of Alderman Townſend, in defence of the Lord Mayor.——

“ Salus populi ſuprema lex eſto, was long the maxim of of the Roman commonwealth; and I could wiſh that it were more attended to in this houſe. Unfortunately for this country too many of us are more aſſiduous to pleaſe female caprice than to ſatiſfy their conſtituents, Inſtead of endeavouring to deſerve well of the public, they ſtrive to deſerve well of a woman, who has during the reign, governed this nation.

“ Here ſeveral member cried out Name her! Name her! Why then, if I muſt name her, her name is, Auguſta, Princeſs Dowager of Wales. [Here he was called to order, but he proceeded.] Sir, I am not in a humour to retract or eat my words. That infamy I leave to the miniſterial gentry. I am not yet courtly enough to ſay and unſay the ſame thing in a breath. Were I ſuch a crouching ſpaniel, I ſhould plead the cauſe of liberty with a very bad grace. I do aver, that for theſe ten years paſt, we have been governed by one woman, and that, the woman is the Princeſs Dowager of Wales. If you doubt what I advance, appoint a committee for enquiring into her conduct, and I dare ſay, that you will find my aſſertion to be a fact.

Wedneſday night laſt the mob about the Parliament Houſe grew very outrageous, and inſulted not only the members, but even the magiſtrates; for when the Juſtice Sherwood very ſpiritedly went in among them, and harangued them his hat was pulled off, and he was otherwiſe miſuſed; and on his producing the riot act, and aſſuring them if they did not immediately diſperſe he would read it, they roared out “ Read, and be d—— d, that's all we want:” They then threw mud and dirt in his face, and at all the magiſtrates, who were compelled to retire; and Mr. Sherwood being called to the bar of the Houſe, he ſhewed how he and the other magiſtrates had been uſed, and after receiving the commands of the Houſe to uſe their diſcretion in quelling the mob, he and the other magiſtrates, aſſiſted by the Sheriffs, did (to their honor be it ſaid) keep the peace afterwards, without any military aid whatſoever.—Would to God the Surry magiſtrates had done the like on a former occaſion!

April 2. Laſt Saturday the Houſe of Commons ſat about an hour and a half, & then adjourned till Tueſday, April the 9th; ſo that they have adjourned beyond the day appointed for Mr. Wilkes's attendance, which was the 8th

Yeſterday policies were opened at ſeveral coffe houſes about the Royal Exchange, to receive five guineas to pay one hundred if theSpaniſh Ambaſſador does no leave this Court on or before the 25th inſt. Very few chuſe to underwrite it.

Yeſterday at noon a hearſe, followed by two carts, was drawn through the city and accompanied by a very great mob. In the firſt cart was the figure of the P D of W. and another of Lord B—e attended by a Chimney ſweeper praying for them; in the ſecond, the S—k—r and both the F—x's. They were dragged to Tower hill, and there burnt.

We hear that the Lieutenant of the Tower having ſent his compliments to the L. Mayor, informing his Lordſhip that he is at liberty to walk about any where within the Tower walls, attended by a warden if he deſired it; his Lordſhip returned him thanks for his kind offer; and added that he did not chuſe to aſk or accept of any favours; that he was ſatiſfied with the apartments allotted him, and would continue within them till his diſcharge ſhall be ordered.

MR. WATSON

AS your two laſt papers contain, the firſt a weak and boyiſh, the other a partial, falſe and malicious account of a late tranſaction, in the appointment of a certain Taverner in this town, and the conduct of the authority therein, ſhall aſk the favour without mincing, to ſet that extraordinary affair in a juſt light.—— It is too notorious, that the town of Hartford, (perhaps not alone) has been charged, (however juſtly) with many diſorders; of which, night caballing, gaming and revelling, are the chief and moſt predominant. That theſe baleful practices are found not only with the youth, but men of ſome buſineſs and families, inſomuch that for theſe and other reaſons, we were lately threatened with a diviſion of the town—— Great care, from year to year, was taken by ſome, to check the growing evil; ſtrict enquiry made for the ſecret lurking place of reſort, that gave birth to all our troubles; and was found at laſt to be chiefly at the G—n B—ll; a central ſpot indeed!—Here it appeared full ſcope was given by night and day——. Rooms made convenient, and ſequeſtered for the purpoſe——doors and windows ſecured and ſhutted——ſtrangers inſulted and neglected—and inſtead of a tavern according to its primary intent, it ſeemed a common Fair, inſtituted by the owner, to ſet to ſale the morals of the people, in which he himſelf was a great ſharer. The civil authority, and officers of the town, fully ſatisfied and alarmed in this matter, at their annual meetings heretofore, often threatned and admoniſhed this civil, honeſt, obliging tavern keeper, and he as often promiſed to reform——Complaints ſtill increaſing, big with ruin and evil example, ſuch as Saturday night Junto's till 9 o'clock and other flagrant inſtances——Witneſs a late inſult offered to the whole General Aſſembly, as alſo that of a moſt daring attempt upon the life of a youth; all iſſuing from a licentious indulgence at that houſe. The civil authority and officers of the town, at their uſual meeting in January laſt, fully conſidering their long try'd patience, as greatly abuſed, agreed to ſuppreſs this diſorderly tavern, not one hand (tho' two or three ſeem'd well inclined) was held up for it——That afterwards, at their adjourned meeting in the ſame month upon a ſecond trial, and full hearing (all poſſible pains and ſoothing to the contrary notwithſtanding) he was again negativ'd Nemine Contradicente——At the ſame meeting a plan for reformation was formed, and unanimouſly eſtabliſhed, reſolving that the laws made for the ſuppreſſion of vice and immorality ſhould inviolably be put in execution that the ſame ſhould be printed and ſent into each quarter of the town, the better to effect ſo ſalutary a purpoſe. A hopeful proſpect now appeared, a d all engaged to ſupport the common cauſe——But, alas! the ſcene was changed, the joyful dawn was ſoon eclipſed——licentiouſneſs, juſt tottering, rear'd her baleful creſt——proxy day drew on——conſults were held—ſubſcriptions adviſed and ſet on foot——and every undue meaſure purſued to ſave the dreary manſion. Another convention of nominators muſt accidentally be held on Freeman's Meeting day, to cure the wild diſorder. Such as were preſent accordingly attended, ſome in return for favours juſt received, and being much worried with the fatigues of the day (very rainy) and the help of refreſhment, graciouſly beſtowed, a nomination immediately took place, obtained by ſeven yeas againſt five nays—two were neuter. This was ſoon handed about, and further names privately annexed—Being thus prepared, and all things ready, it was offered into Court on the laſt day, ſurrounded with a numerous train of anxious favourites, all muſtered on the occaſion, and received a ſilent ſanction. Thus, Poor Publican, you have the true ſtate of this intereſting matter and ſhall, without further notice, leave the public to conclude from what views and principles it has been conducted; I ſubmit it to the legiſlature, whether in this inſtance the court have not denied the town, the beſt judges, all right given by ſtatute, of correcting, ſuppreſſing, or nominating Taverners? or, in other words, could they (without force) admit and approve of a nomination thus unduly and unſeaſonably obtained? A FREEMAN.

Mr. PRINTER,

It may ſerve my purpoſe, if I neither give you my name, or place of abode, but inform you, I am one who never could be reduced to reaſon until it was beat into me.

I Was bred an arrant clown, and never had the leaſt reliſh for piety, learning, or good breeding. For which reaſon I always deſpiſed, and envied thoſe who had ever ſince the late revival of ſinging commenced, which was, perhaps about ten years ago; I have obſerv'd it had a mighty influence over the minds of young people in general, eſpecially thoſe who were well inſtructed in the art of muſic; diſpoſing them much to civility, harmony, and good agreement. And although my mind has at ſeveral times been ſtruck with a ſence of its beauty. Yet finding myſelf an unqualified member for ſuch an agreeable ſociety, (by reaſon I could never till very lately, be perſuaded to apply myſelf to the ſtudy of the rules of ſaid art.) Have for the moſt part improv'd all my faculties, to invent means whereby to make myſelf the moſt diſagreeable to them I poſſibly could. Accordingly, whenever I heard of a ſinging meeting in the town, it was my practice to take with me, a crew of my own kidney, and often club the houſe, fling chips at the windows, and ſometimes ſet up a hideous yell in deriſion of the muſic. At other times I would enter the company with my train after me, all with our hats on, while our beters were bare, with long cains in our hands, and endeavour with many odd poſtures, and broggarly behaviour, to fix the attention of the learners wholly on our ſilly conduct; ſo as to render it impoſſible for the maſter to go on with his buſineſs, with any good ſucceſs. At a certain time, a number of us ruſhed into a chamber, where we knew that a company of ſingers for the evening had withdrew in the moſt private manner they could, to be rid of our inſults; when it was demanded why we came there? we replied, to hear and be civil. We had no ſooner obtain'd leave to ſtay, on condition of being civil, but we ſoon began, by jocund behaviour and merry airs, to ſtir up mirth and levity, among the young ones. We alſo endeavoured ſome of us, to get behind in the darkeſt part of the room, and would frequently whiſper ſome thing in the ears of the ladies, which would have proved very diſagreeable to them, had they been endow'd with the leaſt ſpark of modeſty. But inſtead of their being affronted with us, it would often produce a loud peal of laughter. This I perceived did not ſet well on the ſtomach of the maſter, who in very civil terms, beg'd us to act like men, and be mindful of our promiſe of being civil. On which I ſteps ſoftly behind him, and began to practice all the apiſh tricks of a merry Andrew. One while I would be mocking of him by twiſting my mouth half round my head, and fixing it directly under one of my ears, another while I would ſtretch it open to an unuſual width.—But all this while I endeavoured to keep conceal'd, from all but thoſe whom I knew were well pleaſed at the fun. When the maſter look'd about to ſee what it was that diverted his ſcholars ſo much; I took care to have my face dreſs'd up in ſo ſober a hue, that I tho't it impoſſible he ſhould miſtruſt my roguery: but his two watchful eye caught me in one of my tricks, which provoked him to that degree, (although commonly a good natur'd man) as that he caught hold of a quarter-ſtaff, & with one blow of it, laid me level on the floor. I was taken up for dead by two of the company, and carried home, where after the ſurgeon was ſent for, and being let blood, I was brought ſo much to my ſenſes, as to hear one of the company ſay, 'twas a wonder my brains were not beat out, I replied, no by no means, for if I ever had had any, I ſhould never have gone to have acted as I did. My ſurgeon encouraged me my wound was not mortal. I was greatly terrified, however for that night, with the thought's of death, being no ways prepared, as I believ'd for that change, I was made to reflect ſeverely on myſelf for many miſcarriages of the like nature, and could not but upbraid my afflicted parents, for induiging me ſo much in ſuch wicked habits, who had ſeveral complaints brought to them before, but they always took my part, in ſuch wiſe, as rather encouraged me, than detected me.

What makes me willing to hold up my conduct to public view, is, that others may ſee their own faces in my glaſs, and that the ſhameful accident I met with, might deter others from doing as I have done. And I would take this opportunity humbly to intreat parents and maſters to take more care that their children and ſervants behave better than I have done, otherwiſe I muſt confeſs 'twill be juſt if they meet with my fate. The gentleman who gave me the blow, came early next morning to inquire after my health, was exceeding ſorry he had been ſo paſſionate, beg'd my pardon, offered to pay the ſurgeon and to pay whatever damage I ſhould ſuſtain. I was touch'd with his generoſity, that I frankly forgave him, and confeſs'd I was much more to blame than he was, and aſk'd his forgiveneſs; and promiſed that for the future I would behave in another manner. After I recovered, which was about a month ſince, I went to the gentleman to deſire his inſtruction in the art of ſinging, which he freely granted, and in about two month's cloſe application, I have attained to a conſiderable degree of ſkill in the art of muſic in which I have experienced ſo much pleaſure and ſatisfaction, as I do not now wonder at thoſe who practice the art, that they cannot better bear with thoſe who deſpiſe it. I am conſtrain'd to confeſs, it has had a moſt improving influence over me; I am at length prevailed upon to relinquiſh my clowniſh actions, and have become a conſiderable civil fellow, and I ſincerely wiſh that hundreds, yea thouſands, would be induced by my example, to turn and become men The which if they will once do, I am perſuaded they will never repent it. There is certainly a ſatisfaction to be enjoy'd in it, that none can conceive of till experience makes it plain to them. I can now ſee the propriety of beating time in ſinging, which many make a ridicule of, and I know from experience that it is beſt for thoſe who lead in the ſinging part of worſhip, that they ſhould ſit pretty much together, and it much grieves me to ſee people from a malignant ſpirit, ſtrive ſo much to oppoſe it.

Mr. WATSON.

Pleaſe to inſert the following in your Paper, and you will oblige ſeveral of your cuſtomers.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

IN the New-London Gazette No. 342 and 343 I obſerved a piece ſigned E, ſetting forth, that "in the year 1727, an act (ſtill in force) was paſs'd by the general aſſembly of this colony, entitled, An act for providing how the taxes levied on the profeſſors of the Church of England, for the ſupport of the goſpel ſhall be diſpoſed of; and for exempting ſaid profeſſors from ANY taxes, for the building meeting-houſes for the preſent eſtabliſhed churches of this government.

And in the cloſe of this act it is aſſerted that, the pariſhioners of the Church of England, attending as aforeſaid, are hereby excuſed from paying ANY taxes, for the building meeting-houſes, for the preſent eſtabliſhed churches of this government.

But that notwithſtanding this act, the general aſſembly ſaw fit in 1764, to appropriate all the exciſe money (about £ 280 lawful money) then remaining in the hands of the exciſe maſter in Norwich, to erect a meeting-houſe at Chelcey, a pariſh in that town, where a church of England had ſeveral years been built, and where was then an incumbent miſſionary.—This money ſo given, was the property of the colony—and what churchmen, (for ought I can ſee) had a good right to enjoy the benefit of, in common with the reſt of the community.

[illegible] the general aſſembly, in [illegible] did enact that the colony tax, yearly ariſing in the pariſh of Chelcey (or as ſome ſay, all except the ſinkage of Connecticut Bills) ſhould be appropriated to the meeting houſe there, during the aſſembly's pleaſure; which act ſtill continues in force; and almoſt 40l. of the colony tax, before the laſt rate, has already been paid to the Committee of Chelcey ſociety.— And as the churchmen now in Chelcey are about 1500l. in the Grand Liſt; the tax being two pence on the pound, muſt take from them more than 12l. lawful money (unleſs the deduction of ſinkage money ſhould make it ſomewhat leſs) beſides their proportion of almoſt 40l. in the colony taxes before: all this churchmen pay to a meeting-houſe, which they do not want, even while they are under an incumbent of their own, and have long before at their own expence built a church for themſelves, and do ſtill maintain it in repair. Epiſcopalians are oblig'd to build their own houſes of public worſhip, if they have any, at their own expence; and is it either reaſonable or equitable, that they ſhould at the ſame time be conſtrained (even while under incumbents of their own, and while a certain ſtatute law of this colony plainly declares that they are excuſed from paying ANY taxes, for the building of meeting houſes for the preſent eſtabliſhed churches of this government,) I ſay, to aſſiſt in building meeting houſes for thoſe of a different perſuaſion, who are in theſe parts much more numerous and wealthy than themſelves? Is this agreeable to the true deſign of that ſtatute of this colony, which excuſes churchmen under incumbents, from paying ANY taxes, for the building of meeting houſes for the preſent eſtabliſhed churches of this government? Is this agreeable to the ſpirit of Engliſh liberty, a thing greatly boaſted of in this colony? or is what the diſſenters in this colony mean by liberty, the engroſſing it intirely to themſelves, and depriving others of it? Is this doing as they would be done by? Will the general aſſembly grant the colony's money to build Epiſcopal Churches? No. Why then ſhould they grant churchmen's money, to build and maintain diſſenting meeting houſes?

Though it was never propoſed or deſir'd by the church of England, that diſſenters ſhould be taxed for, or pay to, the maintenance of Biſhops in America; yet if they ſhould be oblig'd ſo to do, who of them could (with the leaſt modeſty) complain, ſeeing that they tax churchmen in the ſame manner, while under their power?

For my part, I do not ſee, why the reaſoning in this piece ſigned E, is not worthy of being attended to; nor why the members of the preſent aſſembly ſhould not think themſelves concerned (for the cauſe of equity, and the honour of this colony) to look into the truth of this affair; and upon finding it to be as here related, either move to have the grant of the colony tax ariſing in Chelcey ſociety, diſcontinued to their meeting houſe; or elſe that what of the colony tax ariſes from churchmen in that pariſh, ſhould be appropriated to the uſe of the epiſcopal church there, which is much wanted, and which is perhaps the moſt equitable.——For that churchmen ſhould ſtill be obliged, without any redreſs, to aſſiſt in ſupporting, what they look upon to have been, at firſt, an unreaſonable ſchiſm from themſelves, and ſtill continu'd as an inimical oppoſition, is what one would expect no reaſonable man could, with [illegible]. Nor could one have imagined (had not facts often verified it) that people who are tolerated, would be unwilling to tolerate that religion, from the members of which they did at firſt receive, and have ſince enjoy'd, their own toleration!

A Lover of Equity.

Mr. PRINTER,

Pleaſe to inſert the following in your next and you will much oblige an old cuſtomer.

HAVING lately ſeen a piece in your paper No. 323, in which is ſet forth the alarming ſtate of the American colonies in caſe of a war, earneſtly recommending the neceſſity and importance of putting our militia upon a more regular, and reſpectable footing, than has yet obtained among our colonies. I was highly delighted with the magnanimous and heroic ſpirit which appears throughout the performance, and could not but ſincerely wiſh, that every obſtacle which lies in the way of ſuch a reformation might be carefully removed; and though in that piece mention is made of ſundry things which want to be corrected and amended, before we are to expect that ſo important and ſalutary an event will take place; yet one thing has eſcaped his obſervation, which in my humble opinion, is of no ſmall conſequence to the forementioned deſign, viz. The cuſtom which prevails in moſt parts of this colony, for all perſons that are appointed to poſts of honour and command in the militia, to provide for their conſtituents and others preſent a coſtly and ſumptuous entertainment, the tendency of which if a little conſidered, will I doubt not appear to every judicious mind to be very pernicious and deſtructive to the health, happineſs and ſtrength of the colony, not only as it lays an effectual bar in the way of perſons being elected to offices of this kind, who are not men of fortune, or otherwiſe diſpoſed to favour this unneceſſary and evil cuſtom, however fully they may be poſſeſſed of military ſkill, and all the accompliſhments of intrepid, worthy, and brave commanders, but as it puts it in the power of ambitious ſycophants, however ignorant and unſkilful in all military exerciſes and accompliſhments, to engroſs all offices of honour and importance of this nature.

All wiſe ſtates and communities in all ages, have taken particular care and pains, to guard againſt the miſchief and danger which ariſes from bribery and corruption, in the election of all public officers, and a ſmall acquaintance with the hiſtory of mankind, will be ſufficient to inform us, that in proportion to the ſucceſs of their endeavours of this nature, they have flouriſhed, become powerful and happy, and on the contrary when this has been neglected, they have gradually declined, and fallen an eaſy prey to bold daring uſurpers. Great care and pains was taken by the wiſe founders of this colony, to guard againſt the evils reſulting from this quarter, and perhaps at preſent we are as free from it, as any community whatever, in the election of our legiſlative authority, although I am ſorry to ſay that by ſome late inſtances of this ſort, I fear we are in imminent danger of falling into the ſame fatal irregularity and extravagance in our elections, which is practiſed in our mother country, and in ſome of our neighbouring colonies; but I hope that by the [illegible] and care of our public [illegible] and others who are friends to the [illegible] of the colony, all ſuch [illegible] and thoſe who are guilty [illegible] with the puniſhment which their crimes deſerve.——But to return, it is really ſtrange and unaccountable, that in a community where a ſpirit of jealouſy, and concern for the public liberty, ſo much prevails as it does in this colony, that no more regard ſhould be paid to the well ordering and regulating the militia, nor no pains taken to correct and reform the preſent faſhionable, the ſhameful and dangerous cuſtom of [illegible] ferments, to military offices, by the [illegible] and bribery——to what purpoſe would it be [illegible] we be attacked by any foreign, or [illegible] enemy, to be able to boaſt that our [illegible] are firm and ſteady friends to the [illegible] and our charter of [illegible] [illegible] repel [illegible] the [illegible] ments of tyranny and deſpotiſm, while our military companies are wholly unacquainted with order and diſcipline, and their officers unable or unwilling to teach them? is not the militia the ſtrength of a community, and under heaven muſt it not be its final ſupport? I think every friend to the weal of the colony, muſt earneſtly deſire a reformation in theſe affairs, though there ſeems to be no poſſibility of it until this ridiculous cuſtom of feaſting and banqueting, be laid aſide, and ſome other criterion by which to judge of the abilities of candidates for military preferments be ſubſtituted, than the ſtalled ox, and well fattened ſwine.

LONDON, March 27, 1771.

Colonel ISAAC BARRE's Speech, when the motion was made in the Houſe of Commons, for ſending Alderman Oliver to the Tower.

Mr. SPEAKER,

SINCE I had the honour, or rather diſhonour, of ſitting in this Houſe, I have been witneſs to many ſtrange, many ſhameful tranſactions; but, ſince I could call myſelf a member of the Britiſh Senate, never were my ears ſhocked with ſuch an abominable propoſal, as that which now diſgraces this Aſſembly. A Repreſentative of the firſt City in the empire, or perhaps in the world, is to be treated as a ſtate criminal, for ſupporting the general rights of the nation, and the peculiar privileges of his fellow citizens. It has been proved to a demonſtration, that your claim of privilege was meant as a bulwark againſt the encroachments of the Crown, and not as a check upon your conſtituents. It has been clearly ſhewn that you have acted contrary to Magna Charta, and that the arraigned magiſtrates have adhered to the law of the land. Nor is this all——You have been convicted of invading the peculiar franchiſes of the city, and of trampling on numerous ſtatutes made in its favour—while the objects of your impotent malice have only acted according to the dictates of conſcience, and the religion of their oath.—You will puniſh them, becauſe they would not for the purpoſe of your tyranny betray their truſt, and be guilty of perjury. What can be your intention in ſuch an attack upon all honour and virtue? Do you mean to bring all men on a level with yourſelves, and to extirpate all honeſty and independence? Perhaps you imagine that a vote will ſettle the whole controverſy? Alas! you are not aware that the manner in which your vote is procured, remains a ſecret to no man. Liſten —— for, if you are not totally callous, if your conſciences are not ſeared, I will ſpeak daggers to your ſouls. Whence did this motion take its riſe? Where was the ſcheme conceived? Did it originate in this Houſe? Is it the legitimate offſpring of this Aſſembly? No; it is the abortion of five wretched Clerks, who, though a diſgrace to this Houſe, have the management, I beg pardon, the miſmanagement, of all national affairs. Theſe pitiful drudges brought the Treaſury into the ſcheme; the Treaſury influenced the Junto of Charlton houſe; Charlton houſe ſet all the adminiſtration in motion; and the adminiſtration gave life & vigour to the machines that compoſe the majority. Thus are you played off, like puppets, for the entertainment of the magicians that act behind the curtain. Do you not bluſh at ſuch infamy; Do not your cheeks burn with conſcious ſhame of being mere walking plants, perfect oxen in a ſtall, fed by the hand of your maſter, and forced to draw in his yoke? By Heaven, I had rather not be, than drag ſuch a heavy, ſuch a galling ſuch a deteſtable chain. There are, indeed, thoſe of whoſe commands I ſhould be proud, becauſe their ſervice is perfect freedom. The inſtructions of your conſtituents you ſhould be always ready to obey. But you have inverted the maxim of the Goſpel, and made the ſervant greater than his maſter. You, who are only deputies or factors, have uſurped a power not only ſuperior to that of your creators, but deſtructive of the very rights by which they exiſt as freemen. In the gulf of your privileges you have ſwallowed up the birthright of the People, who are ultimately paramount to all the three branches of the legiſlature. Had you been as tenacious of your duty as of your intereſt, you would have firſt provided for the ſafety of the people's rights, and then entered into the diſcuſſion of your own privileges. It is the privilege of the people to be tried by the law of the land and to ſee the courſe of juſtice free and uninterrupted. Both you have flagrantly violated, and opened a door for anarchy and confuſion. But where is the wonder that you act in this arbitrary manner, when you would not allow mention to be made of the traiterous Member, who declared, in the face of day, that he hoped to ſee his Majeſty as abſolute and deſpotic as the King of Pruſſia; and that he had brought his conſtituents, and made of their inſtructions an uſe not fit to be named! Had you been true repreſentatives, you would have immediately dropped every other ſubject, and bluſhed to determine any national affair, till you had removed from among you ſuch an accurſed thing, ſuch an abomination to all honour and honeſty. But you love to protect ſuch culprits, becauſe of ſuch is your kingdom compoſed. How then, can you imagine, that the people will tamely acquieſce in injuries received from men of your ſtamp? How can you imagine, that Britons will endure an act of tyranny, as alarming as any practiſed by the deſpot of France? Louis the well beloved eraſes the acts of his parliaments; and our beloved Houſe of Commons eraſes the legal proceedings of our courts of record. Why, the violence of Charles the Firſt, when he entered this Houſe in perſon, and ſeized the five Members, was not a matter of ſuch pernicious example! You have ſtruck at the very root of all law and juſtice, and endeavoured, at one blow, to annihilate all our liberties.

The conſequence is natural. After having aſſumed an arbitrary dominion over truth and juſtice, you iſſue orders, warrants & proclamations, againſt every opponent, and ſend priſoners to your Baſtile all thoſe who have the virtue and courage to defend the expiring freedom of their country. But it is in vain that you hope by fear and terror to extinguiſh every ſpark of ancient fire of this Iſle. The more ſacrifices, the more martyrs you make, the more numerous the ſons of liberty will become. They will multiply like the Hydra's head, and hurl vengeance on your devoted heads. Let others act as they will, while I have a tongue or an arm, they ſhall be free. And that I may not be a witneſs of this horrid proceeding, I will leave Houſe; nor do I doubt but every independant, the every friend to England, will follow me.

LONDON.

The Houſe of Commons have now more buſineſs (and that of a kind totally new to them) upon their hands, than they could have imagined at the commencement of the ſeſſions; the preſent affair ariſing from the diſcharge of the printers, will be to them at once intricate and detrimental; the powers of a Spaniſh inquiſition will not be ſuffered by the People without doors; they have been afforded an opportunity of having their eyes opened the people know how far they may legally reſiſt, and a legal reſiſtance will be made to its fulleſt extent. The houſe muſt loſe by the conteſt, and they may thank the ONSLOWS for their loſs.

The moſt candid and diſpaſſionate agree, that the proceedings of the lower aſſembly have been without method and illegal an Engliſh ſubject is by the conſtitution of his country allowed trial by his equals for every pretended offence againſt the laws of his country; for one branch of the legiſlature, and that no court of judicature; to reſolve itſelf at once into the triple capacity of plaintiff, judge, and jury, is as abſurd as it is unjuſtifiable; and thoſe who acknowledge what they term "the power of the houſe" to warrant their late proceedings deſerve to loſe thoſe invaluable privileges every Engliſhman has a legal right to enjoy.

The Lord-mayor and the two Aldermen who diſcharged Mr. Miller, Mr. Wheble, and Mr. Thompſon, have given the ſtrongeſt and moſt convincing proof of their ſtrict regard to that very important branch of their duty, "the preſervation and defence of the liberty and property of the freemen and citizens of London." It is hoped, and not at all doubted, by every lover of freedom but that at the next general election they will be three of the four members for the city, not brought in by a bought, venal majority, but by the unanimous and diſintereſted ſuffrages of the electors.

The following is an exact Copy of the Warrant of Commitment, by which Mr. Alderman Oliver is now detained in the Tower.

"Whereas the Houſe of Commons have this day adjudged, that Richard Oliver, Eſq; a Member of this Houſe, having ſigned a Warrant for the commitment of the Meſſenger of the Houſe, for having executed the Warrant of the Speaker iſſued under the Order of the Houſe, and having held the ſaid Meſſenger to his Bail, is guilty of a breach of the Privilege of the Houſe; And whereas the ſaid Houſe hath this day ordered the ſaid Richard Oliver Eſq; one of the Aldermen of the City of London, and a Member of this Houſe, be for his ſaid offence committed to the Tower of London:

Theſe are, therefore to require you to receive into your Cuſtody, the Body of the ſaid Richard Oliver, Eſq; and him ſafely to keep, during the Pleaſure of the ſaid Houſe for which this ſhall be your ſufficient Warrant. Given under my Hand the Twenty Fifth Day of March, One Thouſand Seven Hundred and Seventy One.

To the Lieutenant of the Tower of London or his Deputy.

The London Packet has the following extraordinary Paragraph:——Letters from ſeveral Parts of Devonſhire ſay, that when the Account was received of the Impriſonment of the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver, the People aſſembled in large Bodies, and behaved in a very riotous Manner, calling out "To Arms!" It was with great difficulty that the Juſtices diſperſed them. They declared that they would at any Time (if Gentlemen of Diſtinction would head them) take up Arms in Defence of thoſe Magiſtrates who attempted to prevent the Laws from being trampled under Foot, and who preſerve the Rights and Privileges of the People from Violation.

On Wedneſday a city clergyman, after theſe words in the Litany, "for all priſoners," added, particularly for the worthy Aldermen now in the Tower."

It is ſaid the Populace who aſſembled on the Commitment of the Lord Mayor filled up a Space of Ground three Miles in Length.

We hear that Alderman Sawbridge was likewiſe committed to the Tower. And that 5 Regiments were ordered into the City of London to quell the Mob, when the Lord Mayor was committed.

LONDON.

April 2 The following Addreſs of the Portreeve, Bailiff, and all the principal Inhabitants of the Borough of Honiton, in Devonſhire, has been tranſmitted to Sir George Young, Bart. and the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of this City, their Repreſentatives in Parliament.

To Sir GEORGE YOUNG, Bart. and BRASS CROSBY, Eſq;

GENTLEMEN,

'WE the Portreeve, Bailiff, and principal Inhabitants of the Borough of Honiton, think it our indiſpenſible Duty to return you, our Repreſentatives our warmeſt Thanks for your diſintereſted and unbiaſſed Conduct in parliament, in defence of our ineſtimable liberties, and conſtitutional Rights, as nothing is more dear to us, or could have rendered you more worthy of our Regard, and the Continuance of our Approbation, than the Part you have avowed and ſupported in Maintenance of thoſe invaluable Privileges.

'We beg Leave therefore to aſſure you, that your inflexible and uninfluenced Perſeverance in the ſame glorious Cauſe will ever render you moſt worthy of our Eſteem, and entitle you to our future Confidence, in Defiance of every undue Art which may be ſuggeſted as a Motive to ſhake our Reſolutions.

'Dated at Honiton, We are,
'March 29 1771. Gentlemen,
Your moſt humble Servants.'

LORD MAYOR's Anſwer to the Addreſs of the Portreeve, Bailiff and Inhabitants of the Borough of Honiton.

GENTLEMEN,

I HAD the honor this day of receiving from you the nobleſt teſtimony of your approbation of my conduct in parliament: that ſacred truſt I have always conſcientiouſly diſcharged. I have in that ſtation, ſolely conſidered myſelf as intruſted by you to be a guardian of the invaluable Liberties, which this nation enjoys beyond any in the world. With anguiſh I have ſeen them attacked and violated of late in the moſt deſperate manner and the wicked plan of deſtroying this Conſtitution ſeems now to be purſued with the utmoſt rigor. But whatever the profligate attempts of our enemies may be, they ſhall find in me a zealous and intrepid aſſerter of the Liberties of this kingdom, a warm friend to the Conſtitution as by law eſtabliſhed, and that I am on every occaſion devoted to your ſervice.

I rejoice to find that all the undue arts to warp your integrity have been ineffectual; and I hope that in the ſevereſt trial I ſhall approve myſelf worthy of the ſupport of Gentlemen, whoſe publicvirtue is proof againſt every ſiniſter attempt, or open attack.

I am, with the utmoſt reſpect and gratitude,
Your faithful and obedient ſervant
From the Tower,
April 2. 1771 BRASS CROSBY.

April 3 Tueſday the 29th of March, an Expreſs arrived from Lord Harcourt, our Ambaſſador at Paris, with an account that the King of France had written a Letter to the King of Spain, "wherein he aſſured the Catholic King, that he was aſhamed of the Conduct of the Court of London; that he was ready and willing to co-operate with the King of Spain, in whatever future Meaſures ſhould be judged expedient; that he put himſelf entirely under the Direction and Wiſdom of the Catholic King; and only begged that in their future Operations, that Monarch would have an Eye to the preſent ſituation of France."

Next Day Lord North, and the two Secretaries of State, waited on the King who was exceedingly ſhocked at receiving this Account.

On the 8th or 10th of April the Courier is expected to arrive from the Court of Madrid. He is to take Verſailles in his way to London; ſo that on his Arrival here, the great event will be determined, and we ſhall then know whether Peace or War with France and Spain is to take place or not this Year.

April 4. The packet brought by the courier that arrived from Spain on Saturday laſt, is not in anſwer to thoſe ſent from London the 5th & 11th of March and therefore is not very material. It contains directions of courſe to the French and Spaniſh Ambaſſadors, in caſe they ſhould be called upon by our miniſters on matters relating to Falkland's iſland. In that caſe they are not to be very ſtrict in regard to the claim of his Catholic Majeſty, but they are to wait another courier for further inſtruction.——The meſſenger that was diſpatched by Lord Rochford with the ultimatum, was to be at Paris (on his return to London) the 2d inſt and is expected here to-morrow, which, it is ſuppoſed, will make great alteration in affairs; for as our miniſters have certain aſſurance of the hoſtile intention of Spain, they have inſiſted on their diſarming immediately; and a refuſal will be looked on as a declaration of war. As a categorical anſwer was demanded, nothing evaſive will be put up with; and a plan is fixed on which our miniſters are determined to proceed directly.—This the public may depend upon as fact; and further, that there have not been any diſpatches from Madrid received by the Secretaries of State, as mentioned in ſome yeſterday's papers.

The right to Falkland's Iſland, which is now the ſubject of diſpute between the Engliſh and Spaniſh miniſters, is the cauſe of the fluctuation of the ſtocks, and the premiums of inſurance. Hence likewiſe it is that the fleet, which was ordered to take poſſeſſion of theſe iſlands, had been commanded to poſtpone its departure. It is expected that the affair will be ſettled in a week's time, and that the next courier's arrival will determine whether we are to have peace or war. The danger which threatens the Ottoman empire is another circumſtance, which renders the continuance of peace doubtful. The French and conſequently the Spaniards will throw themſelves into the Turks, if the Ruſſians ſhould force their paſſage thro' the Dardanelles, or take the caſtles and batteries, by which the ſtreights are guarded.

A few days ago the Falkland's iſland fleet was countermanded, by expreſs. This week, by expreſs, it was ordered to proceed on its voyage with all poſſible expedition —— The ſtocks are not more fluctuating than the reſolutions of our auguſt counſellors.

We can from good authority, aſſure the public, that a truce is concluded between the Ruſſians and Turks.

Private letters from Portugal, mention, that ſome very extraordinary diſpatches had been received from Madrid, which required an immediate anſwer.

We have it from the beſt authority, that the Parliament will not be prorogued till all the matters which have been entered upon of a temporary nature ſhall be finally ſettled.

The premier has dropt all thot's of reſigning.

It is aſſerted that two Perſons of the higheſt Rank paid a Viſit incog, to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver on Saturday Evening. The reaſon of this viſit, we are told, is a political one.

It is aſſerted that very great conceſſions have been made to the popular priſoners in the perſons of two royal viſitors; but that they were of ſuch a nature as to be genteely declined.

Large wagers are laid that a certain aſſembly will proceed againſt Alderman Wilkes with the greateſt ſeverity; a great miniſter having publicly declared, that popular as he may be rendered by puniſhment, neither the particularity of his ſituation, nor his wiſhes to be proſecuted, ſhall furniſh him with a triumph over the laws of his country.

The buſineſs depending before both houſes of Parliament is ſo conſiderable, that it is thought they will not be prorogued till the latter end of May.

A noble Duke, who had impaired his fortue by gaming, ſince his arrival from his travels, at one ſitting laſt week won from a brother Peer, no leſs than 100,000 l. together with the Peer's carriages, horſes, &c.

A correſpondent ſays, "the diſturbance which has been occaſioned by the printing a few ſpeeches of the Members of the Houſe of Commons, reminds me of an anecdote which I have heard of the late Mr. Pelham. A motion was, in his time, made by ſome hot-brained Members to proſecute the printers of ſome of the magazines, for publiſhing ſome ſpeeches ſaid to be made in parliament. But Mr. Pelham, who had a little more wit than either Col. Onſlow, or his Couſin and nameſake, quaſhed the motion with the following obſervation: "Let them alone (ſaid he) they make better ſpeeches for us, than we can make for ourſelves.

STRATFORD, May 18, 1771.

This day was found driven upon the ſhore in Stratford River about five miles above the town, the body of a man about 5 feet 6 or 10 inches high, his face much diſfigured by putrifaction and worn with the water, his hair moſtly worn off, had on a blue upper veſt with pewter buttons, one red ditto lined with red, a pair of old leather breeches, check'd woolen ſhirt, a black handkercheif, home made black and white mix'd ſtocking old ſhoes, with one round braſs buckle the other tied with a ſtring, and braſs knee buckles. HARTFORD, May 28.

Laſt Friday as three men in Lyme were returning down the river in a boat, loaded with ſtone, the waves running high, they obſerved the boat was ſinking, when one of them jump'd into a canoe which they had in tow, which was alſo loaded with ſtone, but the boat ſinking before the other two could unload her, they were obliged to betake themſelves to the canoe, which over-loaded her ſo, that ſhe immediately ſunk, by which accident two of the men were drown'd, their bodies were ſoon after taken up and decently interr'd.

Laſt Saturday night as one William Barrett, a lad about 16 years of age, was attempting to board a veſſel at the ferry in this place, he was accidentally drown'd. His body has not yet been taken up.

Laſt Thurſday was taken up at Litchfield the notorious John Brown, and returned to the goal in this Place. He was apprehended here and committed to goal on election day for ſtealing in Kenſington, from which he made his eſcape on Tueſday Night laſt, and the next night broke up and robb'd the houſe of Capt John Kieth of this Town, of about 200l. in caſh, together with a horſe from Mr. James Church—moſt of the caſh, and the horſe was found with him—a ſpecial court was yeſterday call'd to try him, when he was found guilty and ſentenced to receive 25 ſtripes, on his naked body and to be cropt and branded, which puniſhment was accordingly inflicted.

POET'S CORNER.

The Road to Honour.

NOW he that's inflam'd with the fumes of ambition,
Muſt heave out his line, and ſtill be a fiſhing :
His hook he muſt bait with popular foibles,
Appear in the front, at all party ſquabbles.
Some* plans of importance muſt be in his head ;
And thoſe, by his tools, induſtr'ouſly ſpread.
If any oppoſe——be quick in their hair :
And ſomething ſtill do, to make people ſtare.
Blend virtue and vice to ſhew that he's able ;
And when over match'd come off with a quibble.
Be ſweet, and be ſour, be tempting & awful :
And ſtrain at a gnat and ſwallow a ſaw-mill.
Muſt wheedle and ſhift and ſail with all winds :
Profeſs no ambition but pleaſing his friends.
Be bowing and ſcraping, flouriſh and ſnicker :
Bribe ſome with pretences ; others with liquor,
Religion ſtill wear, on th' out-ſide his cloke ;
Yet hint to the libertine, "all's but a joke."
Theſe rules cannot fail, t' inveigle thoſe freemen,
Whoſe brains are but weak, or much prone to ſcheming,
The minion of mankind, thence he'll become ;
And may go their deputy, or may ſtay at home.
As ſtill he goes on (no end to ambition)
Th' attornies emp'oy'd to draw a petition.
(If th' peace to conſerve his principal thirſt is)
Th' aſſembly is pray'd, to make him a juſtice.
To ſign the memorial, he'll get all he can ;
A tipler or tenant, a monkey or man :
Or ſober, or drunk, by fair means or foul ;
A name is a name, tho' 't be but an owl.
Some friend, for a fee, may forward the matter ;
While he muſt be preſent, to flouriſh & flatter,
If there is the houſe then vote in his favour ;
He thence is a 'ſquire, 'ſquire would be, forever.

The Teſt of Good, and Ill,—God's precious Gift to Man.
The Pow'rs of Darkneſs all their Force combind,
To filch the precious Bleſſing from Mankind ;
By Fraud and Force, his Freedom they aſſail'd,
And by his aid againſt himſelf prevail'd ;
Tyrannic power the groaning earth o'er Spread,
And Freedom found no Place to reſt its Head,
Till Britain entertain'd the Fugitive,

MR. WATSON,

By inſerting the following you will much oblige your conſtant cuſtomer.

HAVING juſt now converſed with ſeveral members of Yale College in Connecticut, and perſons of undoubted character and veracity ; I thought myſelf in duty bound, to undertake to let the public know the true ſtate and ſituation of affairs in that ſeminary of learning, which every one knows was erected for, and is or ought to be, a public emolument not only to the colony of Connecticut, but alſo to the other colonies and provinces in America. The tranſactions of the governors and authority of that college in the late public puniſhments, are ſo miſterious and unaccountable, and ſo alarming to the country and colony in general, and I may ſay to every man of ſenſe, that I think it high time for the aſſembly of this colony to take it under conſideration, that the characters and lives of young gentlemen ſent there for an education may not be expoſed and deſtroyed as has been the caſe the laſt year. The government of that college I underſtand is ſubmitted to a number of the clergy by a generous charter granted them about the year 1700 by the aſſembly of the colony, with full power and authority of making ſuch laws, ſtatutes and ordinances, and putting them in execution, as were not repugnant to the laws of the realm, and the laws of the colony in particular. But happily ſecured by a clauſe which obliges the preſident, and fellows of the college, to lay all their proceedings before the aſſembly if thereto required. In conſequence of theſe privileges, the preſident and fellows have appointed a ſteward to provide ſuitable proviſion for the ſtudents, who hath now the generous price of ſix ſhillings per week, for [illegible] ſtudents, which every one knows is a [illegible] price to provide every thing wholeſome and every way neceſſary. But the ſteward has failed of performing his duty theſe many years ; and complaints and remonſtrances have been made to the authority of college ever ſince the year 1757, and no ſufficient redreſs and relief hath been had. For the proof of theſe abuſes, I appeal to thoſe gentlemen who have been educated there theſe twelve years. In conſequence of which the ſteward hath unjuſtly become eminently rich. But to return to the laſt winter, the ſcholars univerſally declare that the deficiency of the ſteward hath been unſufferable and intolerable in all reſpects. That the quantity of Butter afforded for the uſe of making toaſt for ninety ſtudents, the winter paſt, hath been but ten pounds, together with a large water pail, and that that was ſubject to as great a deduction (as well as all other proviſions) as the ſteward's negroes pleaſed. For the proof of this, I appeal to the overſeers and others that eat in college kitchen. However, to ſet the whole affair in a clear light, I need only eſtabliſh two propoſitions : the firſt that commons have been intolerably deficient & bad, the latter that ſufficient application hath been made to proper authority. The firſt of theſe propoſitions is conceded to by all the authority of college. The latter can be proved if the evidence of ninety ſtudents may be valued, who declare that application hath been made to the tutors of the College, ſixty or a hundred times the winter paſt, and that the tutors never failed to juſtify their complaints and condemn the victuals, but never redreſſed their grievances, or removed the cauſe of complaint. At length the deficiency was ſo great that there was not but three or four pints of milk for a ſupper for a claſs, for ſeveral times before the ſtudents left commons, at laſt they were forced to break out of commons, and agreed to board in town a week, but immediately choſe a committee to wait on the preſident, to deſire him to put them out of commons a week, while the ſteward made better proviſion, which they deſired the preſident to ſee done. The preſident told them that to put them out of commons a week was not in his power, but if it was he would not do it ; but as to making commons better, he would endeavour to do it.——————They then went to the ſteward and deſired him to put them out the week—he told them he would do it if the preſident would conſent—but between them they never did it. The reaſon of the ſtudents deſiring to be put out the week they had gone out, was founded on the ſtewards conſtant complaint, (when application was made to him, concerning the badneſs of common) that he could not get butter and ſauces at that ſeaſon of the year. The ſcholars told the ſteward that it was owing to his neglect, that he was not provided at that ſeaſon, and alſo that he had uſed them in like manner, every winter and always had the ſame excuſe ; and that the preſident and ſteward obliging them to go into commons, and run the chance of the ſteward getting a ſufficiency of proviſion at that ſeaſon, and making them pay for the week they had gone out, was highly unjuſt and injurious, eſpecially ſince the ſteward had declared that the deficiency was owing to the impracticability of getting proviſions at that ſeaſon. And the impoſſibility of the thing appeared from the people in town, not being able to get ſuitable proviſions to board the ſtudents more than ten days. The matter was then reduced to this, they muſt either return into commons, pay two dollars the week they had gone out, and let the whole affair revert to the old channel of making complaints, which time out of mind proves ineffectual, or continue out till vacations, but this was abſolutely impoſſible for the above reaſons. In this dilemma the ſtudents choſe a ſecond committee and ſent to the preſident, to petition a repetition, to lay before the authority all matters of grievance.——The reaſon of this was founded on a miſterious law prohiting any kind of petition to be prefer'd, without liberty firſt obtained. A thing unhear'd of, and before unknown, to any policy whatever ; the committee made known their buſineſs, but the preſident peremtorily denied them the privilege of petitioning. Matters having grown to this [illegible] What ſhall be done ? The preſident ſays return into common, and no doubt the ſteward will make better proviſion. And no doubt indeed if he had not failed fourteen years, and the impoſſibility of the thing according to his own commiſſion. The ſtudents thought the only remedy left them, was to return home and acquaint their parents which they did. Some of their parents adviſed their ſons to return, out of a view of their not looſing their time, determining to look into the affair themſelves, which ſome of them did immediately, and juſtified their ſons conduct, and ſome did not : but ſuffered their children to return becauſe the others had done it. Having given the public a narrative of facts as nigh as they can be had from the authority of college, and ſcholars ; I ſhall now give the public a relation of facts that happened after the ſtudents return to college, which is worthy the attention of every gentleman that has ever had, or ever will have any connection with that ſociety. Imprimis, they have not one law, ſtatute or ordinance that peremtorly affixes the puniſhment to thoſe who are guilty of any immorality, but have it to invent after the crime or fault is committed——Their laws are all pro arbitrio, ſo that if they have the leaſt diſguſt againſt a ſtudent, they can expel him, and no one can ſay why do you ſo ? except the aſſembly inquire into the cauſe.—To proceed, the preſident called ſome of the corporation ſoon after the ſtudents left college, and they examined a number of freſhmen and others who had returned, viz. who had been principal ſpeakers in the late diſorders ; they anſwered they were all equally active for ought they knew. But being threatened with immediate excluſion from college, they were obliged to anſwer interrogatives, which were all taken in writing (experte) and improved as evidences to prove ſome more active than others. A method the moſt illegal, unjuſt and dangerous, and ſuch as the law knows nothing of : ſome of which were never read in the hearing of the accuſed. And ſome of the accuſed were in fact put upon Connecticut night law in the day time. Five of the above mentioned affidavits aſſerted that two of the accuſed were at the head of three or four meeting ; when in fact they were out of town. However, ſome of the fellows of college having before trial declared that a number muſt be expelled for the ſupport of government, did not fail to put their deſign in execution, even after they had made a humble confeſſion, & one of the corporations, own draughting, and ſuch an one as they told them they would accept. A piece of cruelty unheard of to expel a number of young gentlemen that I am informed bid faireſt for uſefulneſs of any in college. And all for what ? Truly if the aſſembly do not look into the cauſe, I do not think the public will ever know, for what——Have they ever been guilty of any immorality ſince their reſidence at college ? they all ſay no. Have they aſſerted their right in ſtronger terms than the reſt ? truly I believe that is the caſe. But I ſubmit the facts to the conſideration of the impartial public, as I have them from undoubted authority. And ſhall only obſerve, that college ought to be put on a more reſpectable footing. The clergy are a ſet of men too cruel, and unacquainted with ſtate policy, to govern any ſociety whatever —There ought to be a viſitor appointed whereby the ſentences of the corporation may not be deciſive, as well as a number of laymen to inſpect the revenues of the college, eſpecially thoſe ariſing from college lands, &c. But as the aſſembly are about to undertake this buſineſs, there is no need to prefix a moddle of government to that ſociety. I therefore humbly ſubmit it to their wiſe conſideration, hoping and praying they will look into the proceeding of that court of inquiſition, and not ſuffer tyranny and oppreſſion to reign in the freeſt ſtate under heaven, parents money taken away, and their ſons branded all for nothing.

PARENTES.

LONDON, March 29.

To the PRINTER,

"SIR,

"I am no way ſurprized, though I am greatly afflicted, at the events, to which I have this day been a witneſs. I have ſeen a multitude, certainly not leſs than fourſcore thouſand, exerting themſelves, in the moſt extraordinary manner, in heaping inſults, and outrages of all ſorts, upon the King's perſon, and even loading him with execrations. This is very melancholy, Sir, but the cauſe of it is worſe. The King, with as many virtues as ever adorned a private perſon, is unfortunately beſet with men, who care as little for his real honour and intereſt, as they do for that of the nation. By their advice he ſhuts his ears to the complaints of his people, and ſuffers them to puſh him on to ſuch violent meaſures, as muſt end in deſtruction. To day, indeed, he heard the voice of the people pretty diſtinctly, and if one may judge by his royal countenance, the crown of England would be dearly purchaſed at the price of ſuch agonies of grief and ſhame, as he muſt have experienced this morning. The reſentment of the populace would probably not have been carried ſo far as it was, but for the indecent and moſt ſhocking behaviour of Mr. Charles Fox, who is ſuppoſed to have great influence with his Majeſty, and already aſſumes the ſtile and port of miniſter. This youth, for above half an hour, was leaning out of a coffee-houſe window in Palace yard, ſhaking his fiſt at the people, and provoking them by all the reproachful words, and menancing geſtures, that he could invent. George Selwyn ſtood behind, encouraging him and clapping him on the back, as if he was a dirty ruffian going to fight in the ſtreets. They often pointed to the horſe guards, and it was evident that they meant to urge the people to ſome violence, upon which they might call in the ſoldiery to butcher their fellow ſubjects. Theſe are our ſenators;—— theſe are the men, whom our gracious King ſupports and for whoſe ſake he expoſes his perſon to ſomething much more ſerious than ſcorn and contempt. I am truely ſorry to ſee him ſo ſhamefully ill adviſed."

April 3. In the debate on Thurſday Morning laſt in the Lower Aſſembly, Lord North, in the cloſe of his laſt ſpeech, obſerved, "that he was very ſure the mob, who ſurrounded the avenues to the Houſe, and who had the brutality to attack him, were hired by the minority, to endeavour to effect without doors, what they deſpaired of doing within." Upon which Mr. W. Burke roſe up, and ſaid, "It was a falſehood, a moſt egregious falſehood; that the minority, to a man, were perſons of ſuch honor & conſequence as would ſcorn even the ſhadow of ſuch a reſource; that ſuch a charge could never come from any man but one hackneyed in indirect meaſures; and who could never impute ſuch a proceeding to any body of gentlemen, had he not a mind capable of adopting ſuch himſelf."

A meſſenger was yeſterday morning diſpatched from St. James's with letters to ſeveral perſons (in adminiſtration) at Newmarket, requiring their immediate attendance in town, on buſineſs of the greateſt importance.

We are aſſured from authority that private orders have been given for eight men of war of the line, to be ſtationed in the Downs immediately, Admiral Buckle is to have the command.

We hear, that by a ſecret convention between the two courts England has, after all this expence and inſult, agreed to give up Falkland's iſland again, after the Spaniards have made reſtitution of it to us in due form.

A great Perſonage, in a converſation the other day with one of his Secretaries of State, aſked him his opinion. "What would be the beſt method of ſettling the preſent diſpute between his Parliament and the City? To which Lord R. replied, "If I might adviſe your Majeſty, the two Citizens ſhould be ſent to the Tower, and the two Onſlows to St. Luke's."

[A Mad Houſe]

The following are the names of the perſonages who were on Monday carried in two carts, with a hearſe before them, through the city and down the minories, to Tower Hill. The P. D. Ld. B. G——I; Mr. W——roe, hung by the heels as being a turn coat; Sir G——t E——t, Meſſrs. D——n and J——n; C. F—x, in the body and legs a man, head and tail a fox with a bunch of grapes before him; Ld. H. with a ſtick, in imitation of a penſioner, or one out of place; Ld N—h. Near ten thouſand people were aſſembled. One gentleman who ſeemed to be a merchant treated the people with beer, and lent a hand in tying them to the gallows, which was thirty feet high; after hanging an hour, the mob, ſeeing a hearſe to take away the bodies, declared they had been ſuch enemies to the king and country, that they ſhould not be delivered, for they would burn them on the gallows which was done. A ſweep chimney, with a band, attended as ordinary.

It was yeſterday morning ſtrongly reported on 'Change, (on that authority, or for what purpoſe we pretend not to ſay) that Gibraltar was attacked by the Spaniards, both by ſea & land; that the fleet which lay before it conſiſted of 30 ſail of ſhips from Barcelona, and other Spaniſh ports; and that the army employed againſt it conſiſted of 17 000 men who had raiſed ſeveral large batteries within gun ſhot of the fort; and that it was expected before this time, that the Spaniards had made themſelves maſters of it.

Extract of a letter from an officer at Bengal, dated Calcutta, Sept 4.

"You will undoubtedly receive very ſhocking accounts of the famine that has made ſuch terrible ravages in the province of Bengal, Bahear, and Oriza, nay throughout all Indoſtan: The dearth has been ſo very great for the laſt ſix months, in the company's diſtricts alone, (upon a moderate computation) there have died upwards of three hundred thouſand inhabitants through mere want. During the laſt ſix weeks we have loſt in Calcutta and its environs, 7600 and the cities of Patna and Muxadabad, it is ſuppoſed more than double the number, altho' there are many public charities open, and every method that can be thought of taken for their relief. Hunger drives many of them to ſuch diſtreſs, that the ſtrongeſt frequently in ſome parts of the country fall upon the weaker and devour them.

Balls, concerts, and all public entertainments ought to ſubſide at this time of general ſcarcity; but I am ſorry to ſay they have not; and under the doors and windows of theſe places of amuſements, lie many dead bodies, and others again in all the agonies of death, deſpair and want. But let me quit this melancholy ſubject, and inform you that there is a proſpect of a very plentiful harveſt and grain begins to be cheaper. There has alſo been a great mortality among the Europeans here; upwards of two hundred have died within theſe two month, and the ſickly ſeaſon is not yet over.

"There was never ſo great a ſcarcity of caſh in Bengal as at preſent; not a rupee to be had even from the company; part of the troops two months in arrear; trade is dead, and the Company I am afraid will fall ſhort of their revenues this year, the Company being quite impoveriſhed, the villages deſerted, and the riots (or renters) flown to the large towns for relief. However, among all the calamities there is not the leaſt talk of a war either here or upon the Coaſt.

April 6. By authentic advices from Cadiz we learn, that the Spaniards go on briſkly in their preparations for war, which event they look upon for certain about the month of auguſt next.

April 3. Great bets are now depending that the Lord Mayor and Mr. Oliver are releaſed by Tueſday.

Two more apartments in the Tower are ordered to be got ready againſt the meeting of the Parliament after the Holidays, the one is called the Bloody Tower, the other little Eaſe: The firſt is ſuppoſed to be intended for Mr. Alderman Townſend, and the ſecond for Mr. Alderman Sawbridge.

A gentleman in company the other evening, amongſt other queſtions was aſking whether the Lord Mayor was a rich man, and what he was worth?—" Worth," ſays a gentleman preſent, "Why he is worth—his weight in diamonds."

His Majeſty has ſigned commiſſions and orders for the march of 10 000 of the militia.

It is ſaid, that on Tueſday the 14th Inſtant, the French and Spaniſh Ambaſſadors waited on the Earl of Rochford, and ſaid, That although the King of Spain had conſented to put his Britannic Majeſty in poſſeſſion of Port Egmont, yet they were inſtructed to demand of his Lordſhip, when his Britannic Majeſty's Officer would evacuate the ſame; and inſiſted upon the day being named; they alſo demanded, that the queſtion of right to Falkland's Iſland ſhou'd be determined before that day. Lord Rochford ſaid he would enter into no negotiation about it. To which the Ambaſſadors replied, they muſt ſend an account to their Courts, and they apprehended the anſwer they ſhould receive [illegible] be their recall.

The Empreſs Queen has ſignified in form to our court, that in caſe of a rupture on the continent, ſhe will not become a principal in a war in defence of Flanders; the revenues of that country not being adequate in a degree, to the expence of one campaign: It is therefore highly probable, that the French will be ſoon in Poſſeſſion of all the Sea-ports of the Auſtrian Netherlands.

This day at high Change, two Carts, attended by a great mob, paraded the Strand, Fleet-ſtreet, and Cheap ſide. In the firſt cart ſat Jack Ketch, as it was guarding ſome paintings and paſte boards which were ſupported by a wooden Frame fixed on the cart.—On the back of three paſteboard figures theſe words, "A letter of Thanks." After him came Halifax and Harvey, the latter of whom was repreſented in an Alderman's gown; each having a night cap, and being drawn with grievous countenances, as if going to carry their accounts to the other world.

In the ſecond cart ſat another Jack Ketch, guarding ſome figures with ſorrowful countenances, drawn by ſome perſons that ſeemed well acquainted with the attitude and dreſs of the undermentioned names, which were depicted on the backs of four figures; Jemmy Twitcher, De Grey, Lutterell the Uſurper, Cocky Onſlow. An hour after this proceſſion, the right and true laſt dying ſpeeches of the malefactors executed on Tower hill, were cried about the ſtreets.

It is ſaid that the committee of enquiry into the cauſes of the riots, have not yet been able to make any diſcoveries.

It is ſaid that the Commander in chief, lately ſailed to take poſſeſſion of Falkland's Iſlands is furniſhed with a diſcretionary power to act according as he finds the diſpoſition of the Dons towards literally fulfilling the late convention.

By the BOSTON POST.

BOSTON, May 30, 1771.

Yeſterday being the Anniverſary of the Day appointed by the Royal Charter for the Election of Councellors for this Province, the Great and General Court or Aſſembly met at Harvard-College in Cambridge, at Nine o'Clock in the Morning; when the uſual Oaths were adminiſtred to the Gentlemen, who were returned to ſerve as Members of the Honorable Houſe of Repreſentatives, who alſo ſubſcribed to the Declaration:——The Houſe then made Choice of Mr. Samuel Adams for their Clerk; after which they choſe the Hon. Thomas Cuſhing, Eſq; their Speaker.

About Nine o'clock His Excellency the Governor, with thoſe Gentlemen of the Council who reſided in Town, ſet out from the Province-Houſe, being eſcorted by a Party of the Troop of Guards from Roxbury, arrived at Harvard-College, and being in the Chair, a Committee of the Houſe preſented the Speaker elect to His Excellency, who afterwards, ſent a Meſſage in Writing, agreable to the Royal Explanatory Charter, that he approved of their Choice.

At Eleven o'Clock His Excellency the Governor, accompanied by the Honorable His Majeſty's Council, the Hon. Houſe of Repreſentatives, and a Number of other Gentlemen, preceded by a Military Company, under Capt. Gardner, went in Proceſſion to the Meeting-Houſe where a Sermon very ſuitable to the Occaſion was preached by the Rev'd Mr. John Tucker of Newbury, from thoſe Words in the 1ſt Epiſt. Peter, 2d Chap. 13th, 14th, 15th, & 16th Verſes.

After Divine Service the Proceſſion returned to Harvard-Hall, where an Entertainment was provided, at which were the Hon. Members of the Aſſembly, the Hon. Commodore Gambier, and a Number of other Gentlemen who had been invited by his Excellency the Governor and Council.

At noon the Guns at the Batteries in Boſton were fired, & at the caſtle at One o'clock: It being alſo the Anniverſary of King Charles 2d Reſtoration, the Guns on board his Majeſty's Ships of War in this Harbour were fired at one o'clock.

For the late Colony of Maſſachuſetts-Bay.

The HONORABLE.

SAMUEL DANFORTH, Eſq;
ISAAC ROYAL, Eſq;
JOHM ERVING, Eſq;
WILLIAM BRATTLE, Eſq;

For Sagadahock.

JAMES GOWEN, Eſq;

At Large.

JAMES HUMPHRY, Eſq;
GEORGE LEONARD, jun. Eſq;

The Gentleman with this (*) Mark, were not of the Council laſt Year.

The Liſt of Councellors choſen Yeſterday being agreeable to the Direction of the Royal Charter, preſented to his Excellency the Governor, His Excellency was pleaſed to conſent to Election of the Gentlemen before-mentioned, except the Hon. John Hancock, Eſq; and Jerathmeel Bowers, Eſq;

By the New-York Poſt.

CHARLESTOWN, (South Carolina) April 4.

On the 7th of March, about three o'clock in the afternoon, though they had no rain in town, a flood poured down through all the ſtreets of Baſſeterre, St. Chriſtopher, with ſuch rapidity, that it forced a paſſage through the Church yard (a great part of which was laid under water,) and ſeveral houſes on the upper ſide of Cayon ſtreet, and did conſiderable damage. The river of Cayon was ſo full, that ſome negroes attempting to croſs it, were carried away and daſhed in pieces.

NEWBERN North Carolina, April 26.

On Wedneſday laſt his Excellency the Governor, attended by ſeveral of the members of his majeſty's council, and the principal gentlemen of the town, marched from this place, at the head of near 300 men, a train of artillery, and a number of baggage waggons for the ſettlements of the Regulators, in the heart of the country, where his Excellency will ſoon be encamped at the head of 2000 men, which are collected from the ſeveral counties of this province, and now in full march for Orange county; the dangerous and precarious ſituation of the province, in having ſuch a number of deluded and infatuated men, armed in the heart of it, making it abſolutely neceſſary to oppoſe them with a force that may at once be deciſive, and reſtore peace and tranquility to that part of the province.

The very ſhort time in which ſuch a number of men have been inliſted, the chearfulneſs, ſpirit and alacrity, with which they marched, and the great emulation among gentlemen of the firſt rank and fortune in the province to attend the campaign, bids fair under divine providence, to quell this dangerous inſurrection, and return to their allegiance a body of men, who, under colour of redreſſing nominal grievances, have had nothing more in view, than overturning civil government of this province, and reducing it to a ſtate of anarchy and confuſion.

His Excellency our Governor, is now appointed to the reſpectable ſtation of governor of New-York, and, did he conſult his eaſe and intereſt, would be preparing to repair thither, with all imaginable ſpeed and convenience. Inſtead of which we ſee him at the head of the provincial troops of this province, undergoing a tedious and painful march of near 200 miles exposed to all the perils of war, and ſacrificing his health, and domeſtic felicity, to the internal peace and good government of this province. Such a conduct can be actuated only by a true regard for the honour and ſervice of his royal maſter, and the eaſe and happineſs of the people of a colony committed to his government.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.

We hear from North Carolina, that the Regulators in the back counties, to the amount of 5000 are determined to meet the Governor and Militia; who are going out to quell them. The Regulators, it is ſaid, are provided with a number of wooden cannon well bound round with iron hoops, with which they can do great execution, and fire very quick.

Extract of a Letter from London, April 2.

"Before this comes to hand, you will no Doubt have heard of the Lord Mayor, and Alderman Oliver, being committed to the Tower. The Fact is certain, and it is with deep Concern I aſſure you, that the Face of Things here has a melancholy Appearance. In general, People ſeem much exaſperated at this arbitrary Proceeding, and talk of addreſſing his Majeſty on the Occaſion; but, whether they will or not, a few Days will determine. It is however very certain, that Lord North, and ſeveral of his Friends, were attacked laſt Week by the Populace near the Parliament houſe, and were put in Fear of their Lives. His Lordſhip was reſcued by Sir William Meredith, and acknowledged his Obligations openly in the Houſe to that Gentleman, with Tears on his Cheeks. Upon hearing this, the old Duke of Rutland ſaid, that "my Lord North had been ſaved from a cruel Death by a merry Death." The Minority Members did not forbear to exult over ſuch Timidity as their opponents diſcovered.—I am ſorry to be able to write you ſo much bad News, and the more ſo as it is feared that theſe are only the beginnings of Trouble. Many are the Evil Predictions of the Wiſe in State Affairs from theſe Omens; but, being not the leaſt of a Politician, I only relate Facts and leave the Iſſue of them to Providence. War too is warmly talked of again with France and Spain.——At preſent the Parliament is adjourned, but meet on Monday next, when Mr. Wilkes is ordered to attend the Houſe. This he will undoubtedly refuſe to do, and then coercive Meaſures are expected to follow; but of this hereafter. The Lord Mayor is a good Character; but Mr. Oliver (and I have it from his intimate Friends) is a cool, ſteady and ſenſible Man.—A Letter he hath lately publiſhed proves him to be the laſt.—— I ſhall write further by Capt. Oſborne, who ſails in a few Days."

NEW-YORK, May 30.

We hear from Stratford, that the ſtory in our laſt from New-London about Doct. Johnſon's having taken a houſe for the Dean of Limerick, for four Years, who was ſaid to be ſoon ſent by the King to inſpect the Affairs of the church of England in America, and make report, &c. is without any Truth or Foundation, and could be invented and reported only from pure Malice to the Epiſcopal clergy, to take occaſion thence to abuſe and ſlander them as men of no Truth in their Report of the the Affairs of the church. All that the Dean (i. e. Doctor Berkley) ſaid, was that he had inherited from both his Parent, (who formerly reſided here) ſuch an Affection for America, that he purpoſed in a Year or two to make a Viſit thither, and if he did, he had Thoughts of taking a Houſe for a Year, at Stratford from the Friendſhip he had to Doctor Johnſon and his Son.

Sunday Night the 12th Inſt. one William Blakey, and William Caſey, in Company with ſeveral other Perſons, being at the Houſe of Thomas Dunn, Inn-keeper, living on the Common in this City, a Quarrel aroſe between Blakey and Caſey, who ſtrip'd and went into the Street to fight, when ſeveral Blows paſſed, whereby Blakey was much bruiſed, and in a Fall he received he broke his Thumb.—A ſhort Time after he was carried home, where he lay in the greateſt Pain and Miſery, having ſuch violent Convulſions, that he became Lockjawed, and continued in that Situation till Thurſday laſt, when he expired.—The Coroner's Inqueſt ſat on the Body, who brought in their Verdict Manſlaughter, ——Caſy, (who it is ſaid belongs to Philadelphia) at firſt kept out of the Way, but on Saturday Evening, delivered himſelf up, to the Coroner, gave Bail for his Appearance on his Trial, and is ſince gone to Sea.

NEW-HAVEN, May 31.

Laſt Friday Evening Mr. John Cooper, of North-Haven, was drowned in the Eaſt River, near Morris's Bridge, where he was eeling. His Body was taken up the next Day.

HARTFORD, June 4.

On Wedneſday laſt there was a Convention of the Church Clergy of this Colony, at Norwich: The Service of the Church was read by Mr. Boſtwick of Great Barrington, and a Sermon preached by Mr. Andrews of Wallingford.

Laſt Saturday the Body of William Barret, (mentioned in our laſt to be drown'd) was taken up at Rocky-Hill, and decently interred.

Laſt Tueſday as a Number of Perſons in Haddam were raiſing a Houſe, one Side (not being well ſecured) fell, by which Accident one Man was wounded in ſuch a Manner, as that he died in about an Hour afterwards.

Suſquehannah!

THESE are to notify the Proprietors of the Suſquehannah Purchaſe, that the Meeting of ſaid Company ſtands adjourned to Wedneſday the 12th Day of June Inſtant to meet at Windham. A general Attendance is very neceſſary. Teſt, Samuel Grey, Clerk.

The cheerful Man's a King.

Mr. PRINTER,

Your inſerting the following may gratify the curioſity of ſome of your readers.

IN the ſmall new town of Goſhen, there has been in the year 1770 fifty births, (twenty ſons and thirty daughters) and but five deaths, four infants and an old gentlemen, aged 93. If ſome gentleman in each town in the colony would favour us with an account of the births and deaths in each town annually, it would ſerve as a ſpecimen to ſhew how prodigiouſly faſt this country increaſes in its number of inhabitants, as likewiſe the health and increaſe of each particular town But for want of that, I ſhall for the preſent calculate according to the increaſe of this town. Goſhen, as I obſerved before, is a ſmall new town, is but one pariſh, and that not very large. Now there is in the colony about 160 pariſhes (excluſive of churchmen, baptiſts, &c.) if we allow the proportion of births to deaths to be ten to one, as it is here, there will be 160 multiplied by 50, is 8000 births and 10 death's out of a 100 births, is 800 from 8000, conſequently 7200 remains for the increaſe of the year paſt. If this calculation be not too large, which I believe is not king George has 7200 more ſubjects in the colony of Connecticut this year, than he had laſt, ſuppoſing emigrants and incomers to be equal.

" And hurls the thunder of the law on gin."
POPE.

ASK Lawyer Vulture what crying Sin of the Day brought in a venal corrupt Miniſtry, and put it into their Heads to tax, and enſlave America, and he will never ſo much as conceive any part of the Cauſe is to be attributed to the Chicanery and Litigation of the Bar.——Aſk the Rev'd Dr. Categoricus the ſame Queſtion, his Anſwer is ready, the Hereſy of the Day——Juſtice Bumkin has ſettled the matter beyond Diſpute, and has fix'd it on the neglecting to proſecute on all the Penal Statutes in the Colony Law Book, particularly the open tolerating our Youth to play Quoits in the Street, and Chequers in almoſt every Family; he heſitated indeed a while whither a conſiderable proportion of our Calamities ought not to be attributed to Fidling and Dancing, and occaſionally walking or doing errands on Saturday, and Sunday Evenings, but the Parſon of his Pariſh, after ſeveral Years painful Labour on the Subject, has effectually ſilenced the former, and the 'Squire having conſiderable Buſineſs on his Hands, finds it beſt to leave out the latter in his Catalogue of Sins deadly——Graſpland deſirous a few Years ſince, to Improve his fortune by venturing part of his Money out at Intereſt, contented himſelf with the moderate rate of Twelve per Cent, but calling on one of his Debtors, who was though Poor, as litigious, as the Creditor was avaricious, he threatned to file a Bill againſt him for Uſury; this was a terrible blow to Graſpland who well knew the Force of that Law he had broke, thefore compounding the Matter with his Debtor leaſt the Example ſhould take among others, He as ſoftly, and prudently as Poſſible collected in his Monies which he found on ſo hazardous a footing, not without frequent groaning in Spirit for the wickedneſs of the Times, and often very wiſely obſerving that a People ſo deſtitute of Faith, and Honor, as to break their Contract by taking ſuch Advantages of the Law, juſtly deſerved the judgments they felt, and thoſe they feared——but finding the Law againſt Uſury had made an exception, reſpecting any Uſage, or Cuſtom that had or might obtain reſpecting the hiring out of Cattle—he took Courage, altered the tenor of his Bonds into Cows, and Sheep, and now has the Pleaſure of taking Thirty per Cent Intereſt for his Money with impunity; this diſpel'd the Gloom, which the Dread of looſing a Penny never fails ſpreading over Graſplands viſage, and ſet him to look for ſome other Cauſe for our Calamities.——All mankind are extremely prone to determine every diſpenſation of Providence which any way thwarts their own Intereſt, or inclination into a Judgment, as it is commonly call'd, in the next Place to find out what has occaſioned, or provoked the Judgment, in which Enquiry they always go Abroad, & never fail of Succeſs, any more than Graſpland who having but a ſhort Crop of Corn the laſt Year, in inquiring into the Cauſe, the very firſt Step ſuggeſted it plainly——the Sins of the Poor conſume of Bread—Graſpland reaſoned juſtly [illegible] Righteous ought not to ſuffer with the [illegible]ed, and therefore that the Judgment might [illegible] where it [illegible] raiſed the Price of his Corn in [illegible] ſcarcity——a few Years ſince there [illegible] ſt Proſpect of an extraordinary Crop, and the univerſal Cry was that Grain would be very Plenty and Cheap, every time Graſpland made a Tour round his, and the neighbouring Fields loaded with the growing Plenty, the Thought of a low Price came acroſs him, and rendered the Proſpect the moſt gloomy to be conceiv'd, his Spirits ſunk, having nothing but the hopes of a Blaſt, or an early Froſt to ſupport them, without which he declar'd, he Fear'd his Grain would hardly be worth the getting in——neither happen'd, and the Judgment of the Plenty lay ſo heavy upon him that he had probably never ſurviv'd it, had not an unexpected Demand from abroad occaſioned by a moſt diſtreſſing Dearth in Europe reliev'd him.—I dare foretel that Ninety Nine out of a Hundred (if this Paper have ſo many Readers) will be looking out of themſelves, to find ſome Individual on whom to fix the Character of Graſpland—once for all therefore I give them my Word neither the Picture of Graſpland, nor any other which I have attempted, are Perſonal, and therefore Deſire they may not be applied, otherways than this, every one is at Liberty to find out as many of his own Features, or all of them if the reſemblance hold through as he pleaſes in any of the Characters given in this Paper. The Deſign of which is in the moſt diſintereſted Manner from actual Obſervation, to divert, and improve.—In drawing likeneſſes in this Manner if I may ſo call it, all Parts ought really to be taken from actual Life, yet if any Individual is ſo ſtrongly, and to the Life drawn that every one muſt unavoidably fix the Deſcription perſonally—The writer may expect no other conſequence but the ill-will of the Individual, and the neglect of the reſt of the World, which ſelf-intereſt will I truſt, (if nothing elſe does) ever Help me to keep clear of.—Vice, and Folly however nearly allied, ought by Moraliſts to be treated diſtinctly, and in a different Manner;——If the Follies of mankind, are from the Deſk treated with the ſame ſeverity as thoſe Capital vices, prejudicial to ourſelves and neighbours, the Audience will conclude both are equally Heinous in the ſight of the Preacher, which will of Courſe lead them to make a very Abſurd eſtimate of Things, if they believe their Inſtructor is right.

That Vice is Folly none will deny, but that every ſpecies of Folly is Vice, none but the moſt ſuperficial, or ſuperſtitious Perſon on Earth, will maintain. There are follies in Dreſs, and follies in Diverſion, follies peculiar to every Age, and Rank or Employment which ought ever to be conſidered and treated of diſtinct from Vice—In a former Obſervator I promiſed to lay before the Public ſome of the cauſes of the judgments of the Day in the Opinion of ſome individuals of my acquaintance. I have touch'd on the ſentiments of but a few out of many——If the higheſt Folly is Vice, I ſubmit it to the impartial, what rank that Folly takes which from the abſurdity of human Pride, pretends to be in the ſecrets of Heaven, to be able readily, and with certainty to Account for all the diſpenſations of Providence——The Eternal fitneſs, or unfitneſs of every Thing throughout the Univerſe, yet at the ſame Inſtant is conſcious there are wonders, and myſteries in the formation, and properties of a grain of Sand or the meaneſt Vegitable, ſufficient forever to confound all the pride of Philoſophy and pedantry of Schools. LONDON, April 2, 1771.

Mr. SPEAKER,

BEFORE you come to the determination of arraigning ſuch a high magiſtrate as the Lord Mayor, I think it would not be amiſs to enquire into the ſtate of the law, and ſee whether he has really been guilty of an offence. You ſay that he has violated your priviliges. But has he violated the law of the land, which is the ſtandard of a magiſtrate's conduct? I defy you to prove ſuch an aſſertion. He has ſtrictly adhered to the letter of the law, and the ſpirit of the conſtitution. I do not therefore riſe ſo much to defend him and his brother aldermen, as to return them my ſinceteſt acknowledgements for their uprightneſs and intrepidity. Had I been in their place, I truſt I ſhould have had the virtue to act with equal firmneſs. Entertaining theſe ſentiments, how can I help exclaiming againſt the propoſed motion? The magiſtrates of the city have walked on legal and conſtitutional ground; do you follow their example. If you have already erred, do not aggravate your guilt by a freſh treſpaſs. It is enough that your warrant was illegal; another illegal act will not mend the matter. You ſtare, and look aſtoniſhed, that I ſhould call your warrant illegal. But I have ſaid nothing which I am not ready to prove. Nor ſhall I uſe my own words; that what I affirm may have the more weight, I will uſe the words of Lord Coke. Four things (ſays that oracle of the law) are eſſentially neceſſary in a warrant. He who iſſues it in any particular caſe, muſt have lawful authority, it muſt be under his hand and ſeal; there muſt be a lawful cauſe of commitment; and it muſt have a lawful concluſion; that is, the warrant muſt declare that the culprit is to be ſafely kept, till he be diſcharged by a due courſe of law. Now are all theſe ingredients to be found in the warrant, which was brought before the Lord-Mayor? No, not one. For by what law is the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons authorized to apprehend any delinquent in the city of London? No law for the reverſe. The city has from time immemorial enjoyed the right of executing and returning all writs, precepts, commandments, and warrants by its officers. No preſs-warrant is valid within the city, except it is backed by the Lord Mayor. Where is the particular ſtatute, that exempts the warrant of the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons from this rule? I defy you to point it out. But preſcription alone, which in this caſe would be ſufficient, is not for the city. It has alſo poſitive acts of the whole legiſlature in its favour. Magna Charta ſays, let London poſſeſs all its antient franchiſes and cuſtoms. The charter granted by Edward the third, with the conſent of parliament, in 1327, declares, that no ſummons, attachments, or executions ſhall be made, but by the miniſters of the ſaid city. The charter granted by Edward the fourth, in 1460, renews the ſame aſſurance, and declares, that the right of executing and returning all ſorts of writs and warrants ſhall be in the city. The act of William and Mary, in 1690, is, if it be poſſible, ſtill more explicit; and, as it paſſed at a time when the government was unhinged, for the purpoſe of ſecuring liberty, I look upon it as a conſtitution as irreverſible as Magna Charta. Indeed it is the peculiar Magna Charta of the city, and ought to be for ever held ſacred. What then becomes of the legality of your warrant? In the city it is not only contrary to immemorial preſcription, which is common law, but alſo to all the charters of the city, and to the irreverſible ſtatute of William and Mary. Thus then the warrant is illegal in this particular caſe; becauſe it infringes the rights of the city. This, though a ſufficient juſtification of the Lord Mayor's conduct, is not the only defence that may be offered.——The warrant is ſubverſive of the general and fundamental laws of the realm; laws which exiſted before the Houſe of Commons was known. The Great Charter ſays, " that no freeman ſhall be taken or impriſoned, &c. but by the lawful judgments of his peers, or by the law of the land;" or, as theſe words are explained by the ſtatute of the 25th of Edward the third, chap. 24, " by indictment or preſentment of good and lawful people of the ſame neighbourhood where the crime was committed, or by proceſs made by writ original at the common law." The ſame language is held in 28 Edw. III, C. 2. How come you by the authority of ſuperſeding theſe I apprehend that the three branches of the legiſlature cannot, without overturning the conſtitution aſſume ſuch an authority. They have, indeed, in caſes of great danger and neceſſity, ſuſpended the Habeas Corpus act But was it ever heard that when there was a king upon the throne, and a Houſe of Lords in being, the Commons arrogated to themſelves ſuch a power? In the preſent caſe you claim a perpetual authority of ſuſpending the law; a privilege, which the people certainly never meant to grant to the whole legiſlature, much leſs to a part, and that part too their own ſervants I own that you can impriſon, becauſe you can impeach. But is this your intention on the preſent occaſion? None of you will pretend to advance ſuch an abſurdity. That courſe, according to Lord Holt is never to be taken, except where the crime requires a ſtrict proſecution, and very much concerns the public. In no other caſe, but in that of actual contempts in the Houſe, have you the right of committing perſons who are not members of your Houſe In conſequence of a meſſage ſent by James the firſt to his Houſe of Commons, they gave up this claim; except where you mean to proſecute, you have no authority to impriſon; becauſe your impriſonments are in the nature of judgments and puniſhments; powers not veſted in you as you are not a court of judicature.—What is the reaſon? you cannot adminiſter an oath. And a party, who denies or juſtifies, can never be legally cenſured or puniſhed without an accuſation upon oath.

The ſecond ingredient in a lawful warrant is in yours totally wanting. You have no ſeal to uſe; a clear proof that the conſtitution did not mean to leave you the power of iſſuing warrants any more than to the ſovereign. If either of you judge yourſelves injured, you are to order the proper officer to proſecute the offenders, in the court of juſtice. When the King is obliged to follow this courſe, it is no degradation of your authority to be ſubject to the ſame regulation. However great and awful you may reckon yourſelves, the law ought to be ſtill more great and awful.

The third requiſite in a good warrant needs but little diſcuſſion. The reaſon why you would commit was, becauſe your ſpeeches had been publiſhed Is this a legal cauſe of commitment? Do you imagine that your conſtituents have no right to know how you execute your commiſſion, how you diſcharge the truſt repoſed in you? You may complain that your ſpeeches have been miſrepreſented. In what ſhape? Are they leſs elegant, nervous, or ſententious? You cannot be vain, or uninformed enough to entertain ſuch a notion. But they aſcribe to you opinions, which you never harboured. I cannot think it. I have heard many of your harrangues, and I am tolerably well acquainted with the doctrines embraced by the reſpective members; yet I cannot ſee any injury done to them in the obnoxious ſpeeches. Your political creed is there pretty faithfully copied. The only injury done you is, that your conceptions are better arranged, and better expreſſed. At any rate, if a particular member thinks that he is miſrepreſented, or rendered obnoxious to his conſtituents, why does he not commence an action at law? A jury will give him ample damages.

But, though your warrant had been unexceptionable in theſe three points, yet the concluſion would have made it abſolutely illegal and abominable. For it does not order the priſoner to be ſafely kept till he be diſcharged by due courſe of law, but till it ſhall pleaſe the Houſe to diſmiſs him. What can be more ſubverſive of our conſtitution, than ſuch an unlimitted, ſuch an arbitrary power? It is, equally dangerous in the hands of a ſmall body of men, and in the hands of a ſingle perſon. It is vain that we have reſcued ourſelves from the arm of the ſovereign if we are to be left to the diſcretion of the commons. In my mind, one tyrant is preferable to five hundred.

By the BOSTON POST.

BOSTON, June 6.

Tueſday laſt arrived here Capt. Wilſon from Glaſgow which he left the 1ſt of May) and Capt Jenkins from London which he left the 23d of April: The lateſt Papers are to the 20th, which contain the following Articles:

LONDON,

April 19. Yeſterday, about one o'clock, Serjeant Glynn made a motion in the court of common pleas, for a Habeas Corpora to remove the bodies of the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver out of the Tower; in which he was ſeconded by Serjeant Jephſon.

After the affidavit and the Letter of Commitment had been read, the Lord Chief Juſtice granted the Habeas Corpora.

When Lord North opened the Budget on Wedneſday, he took a view of the preſent ſtate of affairs, both foreign and domeſtic; laughed at the late riots, and all mobs; cenſured the late petitions and remonſtrances; and blamed the ten gentlemen who divided the houſe 23 times upon a queſtion reſpecting the privileges of their own houſe.

Mr. Cornwall objected to raiſe the ſupplies by way of Lottery, unleſs a clauſe was inſerted, reſtricting the members of that houſe from receiving any number of tickets from the miniſter, by way of douceur for paſt or future ſervices He alſo expreſſed a wiſh (in vain) that the diſſolution of that aſſembly might ſpeedily take place.

Mr Burke, the Right Hon Thomas Townſhend, Mr. Alderman Townſend, and many other minority gentlemen, attacked the miniſtry with great warmth and ſpirit upon their late proceedings reſpecting domeſtic and foreign affairs.

Mr E Burke made a great Figure on Wedneſday in his oppoſition to the plan for raiſing the ſupplies for the ſervice of the preſent year

Neither the Premier, nor any of his friends, return'd anſwers to the many weighty objection made uſe of by ſeveral members to the contents of the budget. After he opened it he threw himſelf back in his ſeat, in his uſual manner, with his arm acroſs, and the reſt of the treaſury bench imitated him, ſecure in the knowledge of the number of their votes.

Not a word was mentioned by either party, concerning the releaſe of the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver; nor any notice taken of the Grand Jury's having found the bill againſt the meſſenger

The Lord Mayor is elected a member of the ſociety of Supporter of the Bill of Right.

John Wilkes, Eſq; having propoſed to alderman Oliver, now in the Tower, to be colleague with him in the office of ſheriff for the city of London, Mr. Oliver wrote for anſwer, that he was determined not to ſerve in the office of ſheriff with him becauſe he really did not think his political aims were ſimilar to his.

We are aſſured that Mr. Bull has not promiſed to ſerve as ſheriff with Mr. Wilkes, nor has he declared his acceptance of the office of treaſurer to the Bill of Rights.

Mr Alderman Kirkman having refuſed to be a Candidate with Mr Wilkes for the Office of Sheriff, Mr. Alderman Roſſiter has at length been prevailed upon to afford Mr. Wilkes the Credit of his Name, and be his Fellow Candidate for that honourable and important Office.

They write from Leghorn, that when the Poſt left Conſtantinople an Inſurrection was beginning in that City, on Account of the great Succeſs of Ali Bey againſt the Turkiſh Arms in Egypt and Syria.

This morning at eleven o'Clock the Lord Mayor and Mr. Oliver are to attend the Court of Common Pleas in Weſtminſter Hall, in conſequence of their application for a writ of Habeas Corpus.

April 20 Prince Galitzen, the Ruſſian Miniſter at the Hague, has received a letter from Count Romanzow, dated March 15, giving an account of his having taken the town and fortreſs of Giurgio, on the Danube, which was defended obſtinately by 10 000 Turks and covered by two intrenchments, from both of which they were driven, with the loſs of 4000 men killed; after which the remainder retired to the caſtle for ſeveral days, when a magazine of powder blowing up, the remainder, amounting to about 3000, on account of the want of proviſions, were ſuffered to join the main body of their army. Sixty two pieces of braſs cannon two mortars, and a vaſt quantity of warlike ſtores, were likewiſe taken. The Ruſſians had only 400 killed, and 100 wounded; among the latter the Generals Gottenhelm and Molico, and Col. Count Natali.

There has been no ſhock, no miſunderſtanding at St. James's; the K— will not give way: Lord North is firm and acceptable to him, his Conduct is approved of and has met with applauſe and grateful acknowledgment. No change was dreamt of—none will happen. The meaſures of government, tho' moderate, are determined and unalterable: Thoſe of oppoſition have left ſuch a ſtigma of folly and Brutality on their names, that to admit them into office, would add contempt and diſgrace to ruin.

LONDON.

April 19. Mr. Ridley had determined to move on Wedneſday in the Houſe of Commons for the releaſement of the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver, from the Tower, he applied to a gentleman to ſecond him, who replied—'No, I will have no hand in any part of this infamous buſineſs; let thoſe who ſent them thither get the Aldermen out of the Tower, and themſelves out of the ſcrape how they can; I ſhall not aſſiſt them." Mr. Ridley at length perſuaded Sir William Meredith to ſecond the motion; but finding neither ſide of the houſe willing to countenance it was denied.

An expreſs is arrived from the iſland of St. Croix, in America, which brings the news of the diſcovery of a gold mine, the vein is eleven feet wide ſolid. Four expreſſes are diſpatched for Copenhagen, with this great news for the King of Denmark. The mine is on the eſtate of Baron Von Britton.

Betts were yeſterday upon Change five to one, that Mr. Wilkes will not be choſen ſheriff this year.

A CARD to Lord NORTH.

The compliments of fifty thouſand of his Majeſty's moſt faithful ſubjects wait on Lord North, and requeſt the favour that no motion be made for the enlargement of the Lord-Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver, now in the Tower, till they have improved the preſent opportunity, and from the nearer and moſt diſtant parts of the kingdom, have ſent up their dutiful and affectionate acknowledgments to theſe ſtate priſoners, for their glorious defence of the good old conſtitution of this country.

Dated Eaſt,
Weſt,
North
and South } of England, April, 1771.

This Morning a great many people aſſembled in Weſtminſter Hall expecting the Lord-Mayor and Mr. Oliver to appear in the Court of Common Pleas, as was intimated in the morning papers.

Town of Bedford. } At a Court of Common-Council holden in the Council Chamber adjoining to the Guildhall of the ſaid town, on Monday the 8th day of April, 1771, viz.

It is unanimouſly agreed, that the Right Hon. Braſby Croſby, Eſq; Lord-Mayor of London, be preſented with the freedom of this town without Fee or Reward.

RICHARD CAVE, Mayor.

April 20. It is ſaid the Right Hon. Lord North will addreſs the Houſe of Commons in a Speech of a peculiar nature in a few days, which will greatly ſurprize the nation in general.

The public prints contain a number of Addreſſes to the Lord-Mayor & Alderman Oliver, in the Tower: they were from the Inhabitants of the Wards of the Tower, Billingſgate, Cheap, Queenithe, and from the Burgeſſes of the Corporation of Newcaſtle upon Tyne: The Corporation of Bedford preſented the Lord-Mayor with the Freedom of that town.

The laſt Account of the proceedings of the houſe of Commons was the 18th of April, the debates then were chiefly relating to the Durham yard imbanking bill; and a bill for prohibiting the exportation of proviſion for a limitted time.

By the NEW-YORK POST.

NEW-YORK, June 6.

On Tueſday arrived the Ship Prince of Wales, Capt. M'Kenzie in 5 Weeks and 4 Days from Belfaſt, by whom we have a public Print of the 19th April. And Yeſterday arrived the Ship Hopewell, Capt. Fullerton, in 41 Days from Dublin. From a Dublin Paper by this Ship of the 22d April, and the above we have the following Advices, viz

ROME, (in Italy) March 20.

THE Pope is going to make a new ſaint, to wit, Cardinal Burallo, whoſe beatification is already approved of. Brother Nicholas Longobardi is likewiſe in a fair way of being a citizen of heaven.

Conſtantinople, (in Turky) March 4. On the 18th paſt, at Midnight a dreadful fire happened at Galate which conſumed two thouſand five hundred houſes and ſhops. It broke out near the gate of Tophana and a very high northerly wind ſpread the flames with rapid vehemency; ſo that the fire raged for fifteen hours. The miſerable inhabitants were chiefly Greeks Armenians, and Jews, and ſuffered much from the cold which was ſo intenſe, that a continual ſnow fell to the ground, frozen like hail; ſome children and ſick people are ſaid to have loſt their lives by it; but we do not hear that any periſhed in the flames. Two other fires began the ſame night at Conſtantinople; the one laid twelve houſes in Aſhes the other three, before it could be extinguiſhed. It is ſaid to be diſcovered that all the three fires were cauſed by Incendiaries, and that an attempt was made the ſame night to ſet fire to the quarter of the Greeks at Fanal in Conſtantinople.

LONDON, April 9 10, 11, and 22.

It is confidently ſaid that a certain Nobleman, not a Jacobite, has ſatisfied a very great Perſonage, that it is not for the intereſt of the Crown that the King's Miniſter ſhould ſhelter himſelf under the privilege of the Parliament, and thereby exert, with ſecurity, a more abſolute dominion over the people, than was exerciſed by the moſt arbitrary King in the days of unlimitted prerogative.

It is currently reported, that a certain great Lady, concerned at the complaints of the people has been very preſſing to her Conſort in favour two conſcientious Magiſtrates, as ſhe calls them; and it is imagined ſhe has been ſo ſucceſsful; that for the future there will be but one cabinet.

We are aſſured, that a great perſonage moſt ſeverely checked one of the miniſterial party for ſpeaking ludicrouſly of the citizens of London.

We can aſſure the public that the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver, will certainly be releaſed from the Tower before the end of this week.

We hear from Cadiz, that the grand rendezvous of 20 ſail of Spaniſh men of war, that were ordered to be equipped, is to be at Ferrol, and that beſides their uſual complement of ſea men, ſome land forces are to go on board.

The Committee for inquiring into the cauſes of the late riots has met with a terrible misfortune Yeſterday, when they were to give in their report the requiſite number of members did not aſſemble; and therefore nothing was done. Is not this the mountain in labour of a mouſe? Alas poor Wedderburne! how diſappointed how ridiculous thou art!

When Lord North was attacked on Wedneſday ſe'nnight by the mob, he cried out, 'Gentlemen! Gentlemen! Is this liberty? Do you call this liberty?—Yes. (replied a wag) and great liberty too."

LONDON, April 13 15 and 16.

From the general face of peace over all Europe, and the inability of France to enter into a war at preſent, Lord North is opening his budget, on Wedneſday, took notice, there would be no need of any ſupply to be granted this year to his Majeſty This declaration had a general effect upon all the ſtocks that is to ſay; they all roſe in nearly the ſame proportion, which is one of the beſt Barometers in the Alley.

On Friday Mr Wilkes waited on Mr Alderman Oliver in the tower, and told him the reſolution he had taken to be Sheriff next year with Mr. Oliver. Mr Oliver gave him many ſtrong public reaſons why he ought not to attempt it; but he was not able to prevail over the private reaſons of Mr. Wilkes.

The cauſe of ſome gentlemen's diſapprobation of Mr. Wilkes' intention ſo ſerve the office of Sheriff next year, is ſaid to be, that ſhould Mr. Luttrel vacate his ſeat, when Mr. Wilkes is Sheriff, the county of Middleſex will be betrayed, and the grand queſtion of the right of election be left undecided.

We hear the preſent attempt of the Shelburne party to ſet aſide Mr. Wilkes from being Sheriff meets with the general abhorrence of the livery.

It is aſſerted that the Lord Mayor, Sir Joſeph Mawby, and many other gentlemen of the beſt character and fortune, have expreſſed in ſtrong terms the diſlike of the preſent attempt to ſet aſide Mr. Alderman Wilkes.

It is ſaid that a diſſolution of the Parliament has been ſtrongly debated in the cabinet, and determined on. Lord North, it is reported, was diſſentient in the ſhigheſt terms.

This day there was no Court of Aldermen held for want of a proper number to conſtitute a Court.

We hear, that if Mr. Wilkes ſhould be choſen Sheriff, he will not deſert the freeholders of Middleſex. Should the Miniſtry vacate Mr. Luttrel's ſeat, Mr. Wilkes, as Sheriff will take no notice of the writ, as knowing no ſuch man ever was member for Middleſex; But if the Parliament ſhould be diſſolved, as is talked of, then Mr. Wilkes will put up for the city and liberty of Weſtminſter.

It is aſſerted for fact, that Lord North was not conſulted in the apointment of a Governor, &c. to the Prince of Wales.

Laſt night the Durham yard bill paſſed: The numbers in favour of the embankment were 44 againſt 14. Mr. Dunning ſpoke for an hour and an half against the embankment. Meſſrs. Glynn, Townſend, and Sawbridge, ſpoke very ably upon the occaſion.

A fleet of four ſail of the line ſailed from Cadiz for the Havanna the 20th ult. having on board two companies of artillery, and great ſtore of proviſions.

HARTFORD, June 11.

Laſt Tueſday departed this Life of a lingering Illneſs, Capt. JOHN TALCOTT, eldeſt Son of the Hon, Joſeph Talcott, Eſq; formerly Governor of this Colony.

Laſt Thurſday the General Aſſembly of this Colony broke up, having finiſhed the Buſineſs of the Spring Seſſions.

Laſt Week the Body of a drowned Man was taken up at Rocky-Hill—He had on a Pair of double-ſoald Shoes, tied with Strings, and a check'd woolen Shirt, and had his Cap in his Hand. The above is all the Diſcription of the Body we have been able to obtain.

To be ſold much cheaper than any in America, large, valuable, and commodiouſly ſituated tracts of LAND, lying between the eaſt branch of Delaware river, and Soſquehannah river. Theſe tracts are extremely well covered with timber, fit for Philadelphia or Maryland markets, and has water carriage to both places, particularly to Philadelphia —they go in boats carrying eight hundred buſhels of wheat, and is about forty miles land carriage to Euſopus, on Hudſon's river——and both Delaware and Suſquehannah are better ſtored with fiſh than any rivers in the north parts of America. Such as do not chuſe or are unable to purchaſe, may have leaſes forever, paying thirty ſhillings New York currency per hundred acres, three years rent free, and may have any quantity not leſs than one hundred acres—Several townſhips are already ſpoke for, and each ſetler is to take a right of four hundred acres for which they are to have deeds forever, paying at the rate of thirteen pounds York currency for every hundred acres, ſuch as are not able to pay the whole purchaſe money, to pay one third of it, and ſecurity will be taken on the lands for the remainder. Such as incline to purchaſe or leaſe any of theſe lands, may apply to Col. John Bradſtreet at Albany, Mr. Egbert Demond at Euſopus, Mr Samuel How, or Capt. John Stevens at Canaan, and Mr. Andrew Stevens on the premiſes.

LONDON,

The Eaſt-India expedition is ſuſpended, and it is believed will be totally laid aſide. It was to Balambangam. When our miniſters reſolved upon making a ſettlement there, they had no knowledge of a proteſt, which the court of Spain againſt the deſign, and which proteſt lay among the papers of the Eaſt-India company, till Governor Pownall called upon them publickly, by moving that it ſhould be laid before Parliament. This circumſtance it ſeems, has ſo alarmed and frightened them, that they have laid aſide the expedition, after putting the nation to a great expence in equipping it.

The proſecutions againſt the Printers, and the whole courſe of the city quarrels, have certainly been carried on ſolely by private influence, no ſanction having been given to them by any perſonage in the higher departments of ſtate. Lord North diſavows the whole proceedings; the Lord Chancellor has not been conſulted; and Lord Halifax totally diſapproves them, for which reaſon he has not yet aſſiſted at any Councils held on the buſineſs of the Printers.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman of Character, dated London, April 6.

SINCE my laſt I have received your obliging Preſent of the Trial of the Soldiers. The Evidence, on my Peruſal of it, appears to me very ſatisfactory, and fully juſtifies the Verdict given by the Jury. I confeſs I did not expect to find the Evidence in all Reſpects as favourable as it now turns out.

Parliament is entirely taken up with attention to Riots and other Inſults on its Privileges. I fancy the Accounts of them appear more formidable in the Colonies, from our News Papers, than in Truth they are in themſelves: Important Conſequences are not I believe to be feared from them, yet they are at preſent very vexatious and provoking.

The States of Europe are all armed and ready for War, if not diſpoſed to it, make it poſſible at leaſt it may be involved in a War with very little Notice, which makes it therefore neceſſary we ſhould be provided for.——This Proviſion takes up much of the Time of Parliament.

THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic

From TUESDAY, JUNE 11, to TUESDAY, JUNE 18, 1771.

Mr. WATSON,
SIR,

AS your public paper (No 336) has been improved for the purpoſe of ſpreading a great number of ſlanderous falſhoods, tending to the prejudice of a reſpectable body in the colony, (viz.) the Rev'd Corporation of Yale College in New-Haven; I dont therefore meerly aſk it as a favour, but think I may claim it as an indiſpenſable piece of juſtice, not only to the corporation, but the public, that you make your paper the inſtrument of conveying truth, as extenſively, as it has been improv'd for ſpreading falſhood.—Were it barely the character of the corporation that had been concerned in this affair, we ſhould have paſs'd it over with that ſilent contempt, which its ſcurrility deſerves; but as many of the leſs-thinking, honeſt people may be in danger of giving it at leaſt ſome credit to the repreſentation, and ſo by that means concieve an unjuſt and unfavourable opinion as to the ſtate and government of college, I therefore think it incumbent upon me, to aſſure them, not from information but my own perſonal knowledge, that all the facts there related to the prejudice of the corporation, are ſo far from the truth that the whole piece as to the ſubſtance of it, is one complication of the moſt glaring and injurious falſhoods. *

WE are freely willing the world ſhould be fully acquainted with the whole truth of facts, relative to the proceedings of the corporation in the affair; and though there are obvious reaſons which forbid the publication of theſe matters at large in a news paper, yet we are ready at all times to give full ſatisfaction to any gentlemen who ſhall think fit to enquire into them.—We mean not to take up a controverſy upon the ſubject with any anonymous defamer, who ſecure as to his own character, can when he liſts, throw out the moſt injurious reflections and glaring falſhoods, without danger to himſelf, and with no better view than to raiſe a tumult, & ſpread the flames of jealouſy in the community.

I would only add by way of remark, how eaſy it is for any evil minded ſcribler, to throw out the moſt groſs and injurious aſperſions upon any particular perſon, or body of men, or the proceedings of any court in the colony, even the hon. General Aſſembly not excepted.——That ſome difficulties ſhould at times ariſe among the youth at any college, even under the direction and government of the wiſeſt and beſt of men on earth, ſhould not be thought ſtrange or unaccountable, and however unexceptionable the governors may be in their adminiſtrations at ſuch times, 'tis no wonder if there appear ſome who would endeavour to their utmoſt to vilify their characters by repreſenting their proceedings in the moſt diſadvantagious and injurious light.

NAPHTALI DAGGETT.

New Haven, June 12, 1771.

* Beſides many falſe oblique inſinuations, I find there are near twenty articles of material and palpable falſhood, as to facts.

LONDON, April 11.

IT was yeſterday expected that a motion would have been made by a miniſterial member, for the diſcharge of the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver; but from the diſpoſition of the Treaſury bench, we can ſafely aſſure the public, that no ſuch thing is intended; and it is now ſuppoſed they will remain in the Tower till the Parliament riſes.

Notwithſtanding it is daily and confidently aſſerted, that the Parliament will ſit till after Whitſuntide, yet ſeveral of the Miniſtry aſſerted yeſterday, that it will riſe either the end of this month or very early in May.

There was much conſternation on Monday at St. James's, in conſequence of one of the Court emiſſaries having upon his ſcout picked up a peice of falſe intelligence. This attentive liſtener had collected a report that a number of bad perſons intended to proceed yeſterday in ſolemn proceſſion to Tower-hill, with the effigy of a very great perſonage, and there perform the rites of execution; and that it was alſo intended to make the parade go cloſe to the palace gates. In conſequence of this information, the uſual precautions were determined on; that is, private orders were to be communicated to the guards on the firſt appearance of the proceſſion; and ſpies to be ſet to work to obſerve and mark down. The intentions of the L—d B——d, and others conſulted on this occaſion, received, however no opportunity of execution, ſince nothing of the kind occured; and people in general imagine that the ſtory itſelf was raiſed by ſome perſons to hum the Court runner, who very readily ſwallowed the bait.

Monday, the 8th of April, 1771.

Committee to aſſiſt the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen Wilkes and Oliver in their defence, &c.

Reſolved, That it be recommended to my Lord Mayor, that he do not iſſue precepts for a common hall, until the whole buſineſs propoſed to be there agitated be laid before his Lordſhip, and received the approbation of a committee of the common Council. HODGES.

The following are the names of the Gentlemen of the Grand Jury, who on Monday found the Bill againſt the Meſſenger of the Houſe of Commons, for an aſſault upon the printer of the London Evening Poſt: Thomas Nowell, Foreman; Thomas Goodwin, Thomas Aſhton, John Woollaſton, John Champion, Guy Warwick, Thomas Scattergood, Alexander Grieve, William Whitehead, John Sampſon, Thomas Honiborne, Holloway Brecknock, George Ritherdon, William Ubley, Joſeph Wiſe, Abraham Atterbury, and George Baugham.

It is ſaid that the King of Pruſſia has declared an intention to paſs ſome months in England in a private character this enſuing ſummer, & that directions are already given for fitting up a ſeat, within a ſmall diſtance from London for his reception and accommodation.

His Majeſty's ſhip the Barfleur, of 60 guns, Capt. Hamond, now at the Nore, in which Lord Howe was to have proceeded to the Mediterranean, is ordered to Spithead.

All the ſhips of the line of battle, in commiſſion at Plymouth, are likewiſe ordered up to the general rendezvous at Spithead.——This occaſions ſome ſpeculation.

It is ſaid that all proceedings in Doctors Commons between a certain Lord and his Lady are ſtopped.

Three French battalions are ordered to embark at Marſeilles to quell the rioters in Corſica, who, to the amount of ſome hundreds, harbour in inacceſſible places in the mountains.

It is ſaid that Lord North, when he opened the budget yeſterday, acquainted the Houſe that a ſum of 200 000l. was to be raiſed by lottery; the ſcheme to be the ſame as that of laſt year, with this difference, the tickets at 13l. per ticket, and 10 per cent. to be deducted out of every prize.

It is ſaid, that to morrow the Gentlemen of the Inqueſt of the Tower Ward will pay their compliments to the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver in the Tower.

Yeſterday the Deputy and Common Council of Billingſgate Ward waited on the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver, their Alderman, with their Addreſs, for their ſteady ſupport of the city's and the nation's liberties.

Laſt Sunday the Lord Mayor's Chaplain was not allowed to preach at the Tower, leſt he ſhould preach up Liberty to the Third regiment, and alter the Political Creed of thoſe docile gentlemen.

A Noli Proſequi will certainly iſſue to ſtop the proſecution againſt the Meſſengers: but cannot hinder the Printers from bringing actions of aſſault and falſe impriſonment; it can only ſtop the preſent mode of proceeding by indictment, as the Crown is in this caſe the proſecutor.

To pacify the doubts of many of your readers, who may have large concerns in the Alley, you may aſſure them there is not the moſt diſtant probability of any rupture at preſent between the Courts of Great Britain and Madrid, Prince Maſſerano having ſigned all the neceſſary documents for the ſurrender of Falkland's Iſland to the Crown of Great Britain, the day before Capt. Stott's, and the other two King's ſhips failed for that iſland. In conſequence of this amicable ſigniture, Mr. Potter was again diſpatched for Madrid on Thurſday laſt, with orders to ſtop at Verſailles, and inform the Engliſh courier, who was expected in London as yeſterday, that he need not be in any very extraordinary hurry, matters having been finally and happily adjuſted with the Crown of Spain.

This day it is expected an extraordinary manœuvre, relative to the five Engliſh ſhips of war which lately ſailed from the Eaſt Indies, will be made public, and which was planned by the Firſt Lord of the Admiralty, through whoſe ſole advice this meaſure was carried into execution.

LONDON.

April 19 At a very full Meeting of the Bill of Rights, a very violent Altercation paſſed, as uſual between Mr Wilkes and Mr Horne, replete with the common Expreſſions of falſe, ſelfiſh, malignant, ſurreptious, inſolent, and ſo forth. Mr. Wilkes, in particular, declared that Mr. Horne's Conduct, both to him and the Public, had neither been conſiſtent with the Truth of a Clergyman, or the Faith and Honour of a Gentleman. Mr. Horne ſaid, that the Society was become nothing more than a Scene of perſonal Quarrel; the public Intereſts were abſorbed in the petty Faction of one Individual; that Regularity, Decency, Order and Concord, were baniſhed together; he therefore moved, "That the Society ſhould be diſſolved." It was in vain objected, that a Motion of that conſequence ſhould not be put ſo ſuddenly, whatever Cauſe to it the preſent Diſturbances might afford; that, in fact, the Ferment in which the Society then was ſhewed an improper Temper of diſcuſſing ſo ſerious a Queſtion; and that at leaſt, the Senſe of the Society ſhould be firſt taken, whether they would reſcind the deſtructive Reſolution againſt opening any new Subſcriptions whatſoever, but for the private Purpoſes of Mr. Wilkes, till the whole Liſt of Debts was diſcharged; as the Charge againſt the Society for exiſting only in the Capacity of Mr. Wilke's Committee, might then be obviated. Both Parties equally ſure of a Victory, or deſirous of Meeting their Defeat, were eager to put the Queſtion. The Motion to defer the Conſideration of a Diſſolution, was only ſupported by five Members, among whom were Dr Lee, Mr. Morris, Mr. Grieve, &c. The main Queſtion was then put, when their appeared for the Diſſolution, 24; againſt it, 26. Mr. Alderman Townſend was in the Chair, and the whole Number preſent at the Meeting was 53, being the fulleſt Meeting which had ever been held in the Society.

"The 18th of March laſt, was tried and convicted at a Court of Oyer and Terminer, held here, Capt. Zachary Day, for the Murder of Samuel Long his Boatſwain, on the high Seas, near the iſland of Cuba; and on the day following in the ſame court was convicted Thomas Bell, late chief mate of a ſloop belonging to Montego Bay, for piratically robbing and plundering a Spaniſh ſchooner, near Cuba, of 14 000 dollars——this is the perſon who was concern'd with capt. Yarr, in October laſt, in the above mentioned piracy; they were convicted upon the teſtimony of ſome of their veſſel's crew, whom they had turn'd adrift at ſea (to the number of 12 in the Spaniſh ſchooner, after they had robbed her) without water or proviſions, but who fortunately arrived here a few days afterwards. Day was executed the 25th day of March, and Bell the 1ſt of April; the former had taken a quantity of Laudanum, in rum, and was very much intoxicated, tho' he had, with Bell, taken the ſacrament the day before. The latter died very penitent.

BOSTON, June 13.

Account of a bloody Battle at Alamanſee, North-Carolina, between the Loyaliſts and Regulators, ſo called

The following Account of Governor Tryon's ſetting out, is taken from the Southern Papers.

CHARLESTOWN, South Carolina.

MAY 20.

ADVICES from North-Carolina, by Poſt, inform us, That his Excellency Governor TRYON marched from Newbern on Wedneſday April 24th, attended by ſeveral Members of his Majeſty's Council, and other Gentlemen at the Head of Three hundred Men, a Train of Artillery, and a Number of Baggage-Waggons, for the Settlements of the People called Regulators. The ſame Advices add, That his Excellency was arrived at Colonel Bryan's on Neuſe River, appointed for the general Rendezvous where he reviewed the Troops under his Command, amounting to Twelve hundred Men, all in Health and high Spirits. An Expreſs was arrived at the Camp from General Waddel to the Governor, informing his Excellency that the General was at Saliſbury, in Rowan County at the Head of Eight Hundred Men, ready to march. The whole Body was expected to be at Hillſborough, in Orange-County, the principal Reſort of the Regulators, on Wedneſday laſt the 15th Inſtant.

NEWBERN, North Carolina, April 26.

The dangerous and precarious ſituation of the Province, in having ſuch a Number of deluded and infatuated Men, armed in the Heart of it, made it abſolutely neceſſary to Oppoſe them with a Force that may at once be Deciſive, and reſtore Peace & Tranquility to that Part of the Province.

The very ſhort Time in which ſuch a Number of Men have been enliſted, the Cheerfulneſs, Spirit and Alacrity, with which they marched, and the Great emulation among Gentlemen of the firſt Rank and Fortune in the Province to attend the Capaign, bids Fair, under divine Providence to quell this dangerous Inſurrection, and Return to their Allegiance a Body of Men, who, under Colour of redreſſing nominal Grievances, have had nothing more in View, than overturning the civil Government of this Province, and reducing it to a State of Anarchy and Confuſion.

His Excellency our Governor, is now appointed to the reſpectable ſtation of governor of New-York, and, did he conſult his eaſe and intereſt, would be preparing to repair thither, with all imaginable ſpeed and convenience. Inſtead of which we ſee him at the head of the provincial troops of this province, undergoing a tedious and painful march of near 200 miles, expoſed to all the perils of war, and ſacrificing health, and domeſtic felicity, to the internal peace and good government of this province. Such a conduct can be actuated only by a true regard for the honour and ſervice of his royal maſter, and the eaſe and happineſs of the people of a colony committed to this government.

Yeſterday Morning arrived here Capt. Freeman from Cape Fear, who has favoured us with the following Account,

From the CAPE-FEAR MERCURY

WILMINGTON, May 22.

ON Wedneſday laſt his Excellency the Governor marched at the Head of 2000 Men in the Regulators Encampment near great Alamanſee; being told the Regulators intended to ſurround him he ordered the Artillery to fire, which they returned with a fire of ſmall Arms; a hot engagement enſued, which laſted an Hour and three Quarters with an almoſt inceſſant Fire on both Sides.

BUTLER, one of their Principals, and above 40 other Regulators were killed, and a great many wounded. Of the Loyaliſts 7 were killed, their Names unknown, but no officers of Diſtinction. Col. Harris of Grenville and Mr. Cornell were wounded; A Ball went through the Butt of the Governor', Gun, but his Excellency was not hurt, as was at firſt reported.

The Regulators had 2300 Men and they expect a Reinforcement of 1000; when that arrives they intend to attack the Governor. His Excellency has ſent Orders to different Counties to have more Men raiſed. General Waddell has not yet joined the Governor, and Mr. F. Campbell did not get up till after the Battle.

Mr. Gibſon is raiſing a Company of Light-Horſe at Croſs-Creek, and every body there, that can, is going to join the Governor. It is hoped the ſame noble Spirit will prevail here.

Some days before the Engagement, the Regulators took Lieutenant Aſhe and Mr, John Walker, whom they whipped and would have put to Death, but for the Interceſſion of Rednad Howel; who was next Day taken by the Loyaliſts, when Mr. Aſhe and Mr. Walker returned Howell's Civility, by interceeding for him with the Governor.

There are ſome Letters in Town which ſay, James Hunter was ſuppoſed to be mortally wounded——that the Engagement laſted only half an Hour and that the Regulators fled, leaving the Loyaliſts Maſters of the Field.

⁂ The length of Mr. Smith's Advertiſement, obliges us to omit the remainder of this account till our next.

SUPPLEMENT to the CONNECTICUT COURANT.

TUESDAY, June 18, 1771. [No. 338.]

From the LONDON PACKET.
Or, NEW EVENING POST,
For APRIL 3, 1771.

To the KING.

SIRE,

THE time has at length arrived, in which you are undeceived, and informed by the teſtimony of your own Senſes of the Sentiments of your Subjects. Laſt Friday you were feelingly convinced of the great Difference between the abject Flattery of venal Courtiers, and independent Voice of unbought Freemen. Thoſe Groans, thoſe Hiſſes, and Execrations, with which your Ears were ſaluted, muſt have at laſt ſatisfied you, that the Repreſentations of your Miniſters were fallacious, and that the Body of the people diſapproves not only of their, but of your Conduct. This Truth, indeed, was long ago obvious to every diſcerning Eye. The numerous Petitions and Remonſtrances, which arrived from every uninfluenced Part of the Kingdom, rendered the matter clear as Noon Day.——What excuſe can your Majeſty give for remaining ſo long hood-winked? Notwithſtanding all the Arts of thoſe unprincipled Men, who repreſent all the preſent Ferment as the Work of a deſpicable Faction, common Sagacity would have taught you, that the Majority of the Nation is not to be brought into Action by Words, but by Deeds. Had not the Miſdeeds of your Miniſters been notorious, the different Counties and large Corporations would have ſtill remained quiet; nor would you have been ſhocked with the ſound of, No Lord Mayor! No King! When a Citizen of London can be wrought to ſuch a Degree of Fury, what can you expect from the more illiterate Part of the Kingdom? London has been till now, the Bulwark of your Family as well as of Liberty; and, when it deſerts you, it is a clear proof that there is ſomething rotten in the State, that there are ſome hoſtile Deſigns formed againſt the Conſtitution. No man of common Underſtanding now doubts that is the Caſe. Your Miniſters are fully determined to render the Crown abſolute, and to ſacrifice the Rights of the People to the Poſſeſſion of their places. When Matters are thus circumſtanced, where is the Wonder that there are Mobs and Tumults? The Wonder would be, that there were none. If the People were ſo tame and puſillanimous, we might conclude that our Freedom was gone forever, and that we were come to the calm and ſilent Reign of Deſpotiſm. Your Miniſter, I doubt not, imagined that the Terrors of the Houſe of Commons had already bro't the Nation to this bleſſed State; but he found himſelf miſtaken. He diſcovered too late that Aſſembly to be formidable no longer than it coincided in Opinion with the Nation. Being but the Repreſentative of the People, it loſt its Importance, when it does not lean upon them for Support. I wiſh your Majeſty may not find the ſame Maxim applicable to you; as you bear the Name of Majeſty, becauſe you repreſent the Majeſty of the People. Their late Treatment of you ſeems to indicate that they are ſenſible of this Truth. They endeavoured to make you ſenſible, that you are not a jure divino King, but the Creature of the People. Theſe Truths may appear bold, and be unwelcome to your delicate Ears. Did not the Time call for blunt, but wholſome, Counſel; I would be more tender of your Feelings which undoubtedly have been greatly ſhocked with the ungracious Reception, which was given you lately by Eighty Thouſand unbiaſſed Subjects, I am ſorry to ſay it, but the public Cauſe extorts it from me; unleſs the preſent Plan of Government is altered, you have I fear, ſeen but the beginning of Sorrows. Suppoſe that no Diſaſter ſhould happen during your Reign, may they not make the Crown of your Succeſſor a Crown of Thorns? What Reparation can your Miniſter make to your Family for the Loſs of that Predilection, which the People have long entertained for it? His Head will be but a poor Attonement. The People would not have been fully ſatisfied with the Peine forete et dure, which they intended to inflict upon him, if they had not been prevented by the Interpoſition of a Man, who is generally moſt brave, where there is no Danger.

The Freeholder.

From the MIDDLESEX JOURNAL.

To the PRINTER.

I Arrived at Cork from Madrid the 12th of this month, where I have been for near eight months; and being well acquainted with ſome of the heads of that place, I had an opportunity of being informed of many particulars relative to the late diſputes between Spain and England; and to aſſure you, that a plan is concerted by Spain, which will ſoon aſtoniſh all Europe. The ſcheme is kept very ſecret, and is intended to be carried into execution in leſs than three months. Their army now is in full march in all parts of Spain, are well diſciplined, and joining in large bodies marching cloſe to the ſeaports, in order to hold themſelves in readineſs to embark on the firſt notice. Their marine diviſions are in good order, and their ſhips are well ſupplied with ſailors, many of whom are Engliſh, Iriſh and Scotch. I was told by ſome of the officers, that they expected to attack our fleet at Gibralter, which they were aſſured would be beat; and that they would beſiege that place by ſea and land, for which purpoſe they intended to aſſemble a great fleet of men of war, and, by forming a chain of Spaniſh ſhips acroſs from Gibraltar to Tetuan, to prevent our ſhips from paſſing the Gut. They ſay that Gibraltar will ſurrender in five days after they make the attack—Ceuta is now full of ſoldiers with that intent, as well as Old Algiers. The great Army now before Gibraltar, as well as thoſe on the hill of St. Torowk, it ſeems is alſo to make a deſcent upon the iſland of Minorca; and to aſſiſt in that expedition, they have an army at Majorca, as well as in Barcelona—but Gibraltar is the place where they intend to ſtrike the firſt blow. They ſay, that when they have taken Gibraltar, they are ſure of Minorca, and all the Engliſh ſhips of war that are now in the Mediteranean. They declare that Prince de Maſſerano was ſent to England, with no other intent than to patch up a kind of declaration, in order to blindfold England for a little time, till Spain is ready for war. They ſay they will then begin a fadango; which dance will be led off by their old friends the French. I was in company with an officer of diſtinction in Madrid who ſaid, he did not doubt, but that in leſs than two years Spain and France would make a riding ſchool of England for their dragoons. He declares, they would give no quarter to the Iriſh, as to the Scotch, he ſaid, they had often invited them over. The company preſent drank many toaſts againſt England and Ireland, but ſeemed tender of the Scotch. They alſo ſaid, that England need not expect any money for the Manilla ranſom; and that if ſhe inſiſted on it, ſhe might expect for payment powder and ball.

That England may be aware of the duplicity of Spain, I have ſent you, Mr. Printer the above intelligence.

JOHN WENTWORTH.

LONDON.

It is thought the intention of ordering all the men of war to Spithead, is for a generel review of the fleet, and that their Majeſties purpoſe to viſit Portſmouth this ſummer, a yatcht being ordered to be got ready in the river, and to go round to that port to be in readineſs for their reception.

Their late Treatment of you ſeems to indicate that they are ſenſible of this Truth. They endeavoured to make you ſenſible, that you are not a jure divino King, but the Creature of the People. Theſe Truths may appear bold, and be unwelcome to your delicate Ears. Did not the Time call for blunt, but wholſome, Counſel; I would be more tender of your Feelings which undoubtedly have been greatly ſhocked with the ungracious Reception, which was given you lately by Eighty Thouſand unbiaſſed Subjects, I am ſorry to ſay it, but the public Cauſe extorts it from me; unleſs the preſent Plan of Government is altered, you have I fear, ſeen but the beginning of Sorrows. Suppoſe that no Diſaſter ſhould happen during your Reign, may they not make the Crown of your Succeſſor a Crown of Thorns? What Reparation can your Miniſter make to your Family for the Loſs of that Predilection, which the People have long entertained for it? His Head will be but a poor Attonement. The People would not have been fully ſatisfied with the Peine forete et dure, which they intended to inflict upon him, if they had not been prevented by the Interpoſition of a Man, who is generally moſt brave, where there is no Danger.

The Freeholder.

From the MIDDLESEX JOURNAL.

To the PRINTER.

I Arrived at Cork from Madrid the 12th of this month, where I have been for near eight months; and being well acquainted with ſome of the heads of that place, I had an opportunity of being informed of many particulars relative to the late diſputes between Spain and England; and to aſſure you, that a plan is concerted by Spain, which will ſoon aſtoniſh all Europe. The ſcheme is kept very ſecret, and is intended to be carried into execution in leſs than three months. Their army now is in full march in all parts of Spain, are well diſciplined, and joining in large bodies marching cloſe to the ſeaports, in order to hold themſelves in readineſs to embark on the firſt notice. Their marine diviſions are in good order, and their ſhips are well ſupplied with ſailors, many of whom are Engliſh, Iriſh and Scotch. I was told by ſome of the officers, that they expected to attack our fleet at Gibralter, which they were aſſured would be beat; and that they would beſiege that place by ſea and land, for which purpoſe they intended to aſſemble a great fleet of men of war, and, by forming a chain of Spaniſh ſhips acroſs from Gibraltar tc Tetuan, to prevent our ſhips from paſſing the Gut. They ſay that Gibraltar will ſurrender in five days after they make the attack—Ceuta is now full of ſoldiers with that intent, as well as Old Algiers. The great Army now before Gibraltar, as well as thoſe on the hill of St. Torowk, it ſeems is alſo to make a deſcent upon the iſland of Minorca; and to aſſiſt in that expedition, they have an army at Majorca, as well as in Barcelona—but Gibraltar is the place where they intend to ſtrike the firſt blow. They ſay, that when they have taken Gibraltar, they are ſure of Minorca, and all the Engliſh ſhips of war that are now in the Mediteranean. They declare that Prince de Maſſerano was ſent to England, with no other intent than to patch up a kind of declaration, in order to blindfold England for a little time, till Spain is ready for war. They ſay they will then begin a fadango; which dance will be led off by their old friends the French. I was in company with an officer of diſtinction in Madrid who ſaid, he did not doubt, but that in leſs than two years Spain and France would make a riding ſchool of England for their dragoons. He declares, they would give no quarter to the Iriſh, as to the Scotch, he ſaid, they had often invited them over. The company preſent drank many toaſts againſt England and Ireland, but ſeemed tender of the Scotch. They alſo ſaid, that England need not expect any money for the Manilla ranſom; and that if ſhe inſiſted on it, ſhe might expect for payment powder and ball.

That England may be aware of the duplicity of Spain, I have ſent you, Mr. Printer the above intelligence.

JOHN WENTWORTH.

L O N D O N.

It is thought the intention of ordering all the men of war to Spithead, is for a generel review of the fleet, and that their Majeſties purpoſe to viſit Portſmouth this ſummer, a yatcht being ordered to be got ready in the river, and to go round to that port to be in readineſs for their reception.

Hartford, June 11, 1771.

ALL Perſons indebted to Capt. Timothy Seymour of Hartford by Book or Note, are deſired to ſettle and adjuſt the ſame with Mr. Timothy Seymour, or with the Subſcriber, as they will prevent a Suit at Law. Wm. Judd.

A Number of

SCYTHES,

Of the beſt Kind, to be ſold by

Cotton Murray,

At the Printing-Office in Hartford.

To be ſold much cheaper than any in America, large, valuable, and commodiouſly ſituated tracts of LAND, lying between the eaſt branch of Delaware river, and Suſquehannah river. Theſe tracts are extremely well covered with timber, fit for Philadelphia or Maryland markets, and has water carriage to both places, particularly to Philadelphia—they go in boats carrying eight hundred buſhels of wheat, and is about forty miles land carriage to Euſopus, on Hudſon's river——and both Delaware and Suſquehannah are better ſtored with fiſh than any rivers in the north parts of America. Such as do not chuſe or are unable to purchaſe, may have leaſes forever, paying thirty ſhillings New York currency per hundred acres, three years rent free, and may have any quantity not leſs than one hundred acres—Several townſhips are already ſpoke for, and each ſetler is to take a right of four hundred acres for which they are to have deeds forever, paying at the rate of thirteen pounds York currency for every hundred acres, ſuch as are not able to pay the whole purchaſe money, to pay one third of it, and ſecurity will be taken on the lands for the remainder. Such as incline to purchaſe or leaſe any of theſe lands, may apply to Col. John Bradſtreet at Albany, Mr. Egbert Demond at Euſopus, Mr Samuel How, or Capt. John Stevens at Canaan, and Mr. Andrew Stevens on the premiſes.

Albany, May 22. 1771.

This is to give Notice

to all Perſons, that we the Subſcribers with Thomas Darling, Eſq; Committee from the General Aſſembly of the Colony of Connecticutt, on the Petition of William Jepſon of Hartford, in ſaid Colony, praying to be diſcharged, upon his reſigning up all his Eſtate for the Benefit of his Creditors,—Shall meet to hear ſaid Petition, with the Objections of the Creditors (if any they have) on the 20th Day of Auguſt next, at the Houſe of Capt. Hugh Ledlie in ſaid Hartford. Hartford, June 10th, 1771.

OLIVER WOLCOTT, } Committee.
JOSEPH TRUMBULL. }

This is to give notice

to all perſons that are creditors to George Caldwell late of Saliſbury in Litchfield county, now of Hartford, in Hartford county, inſolvent debtor, that purſuant to an act of the General Aſſembly held at Hartford on the ſecond thurſday of May, A.D. 1771, there is to be a meeting of ſaid Caldwell's creditors at Mr. David Bull's innholder in ſaid Hartford, on the firſt Thurſday of October next, then and there to exhibit their debts, and to agree on the beſt method for recovering, diſpoſing of, and diſtributing ſaid Caldwell's eſtate for and among ſaid creditors.

By the NEW-YORK POST.

NEW-YORK, June 27.

Thurſday laſt arrived the Duke of Cumberland Packet, Capt. Marſham in 6 Weeks and 4 Days from Falmouth by whom we have the following Advices, viz.

LONDON, April 30.

THIS day the following bills received the royal aſſent, by a Commiſſion from his Majeſty.

The bill for applying the ſum granted for the pay and cloathing of the militia for the year 1771.

The bill for embanking that part of the Thames adjoining to Durham Yard, in the Strand.

The bill for making a navigable cut, or canal from Bradford, to join the Leeds and Liverpool canal, at Winchill, in the townſhip of Idle, in Yorkſhire, and many other bills.

On Saturday ſome of the Common Council men and principal inhabitants of Bridge Ward Within went to the Tower in ſeventeen coaches, and preſented an addreſs to the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver.

Yeſterday Sir George Rodney ſet out from his houſe in Welbeck ſtreet for Portſmouth to take upon him the command of the ſquadron deſtined for Jamaica.

So greatly have adminiſtration increaſed their power of late by an enormous number of dependants that above 700 000l. per ann. goes to the ſeveral officers concerned in collecting the various taxes.

The army have ſhewed that they retain the ſame ſpirit of liberty which Engliſh armies have always ſhewn: they have had the judgment, in the firſt inſtance to ſtop the attempt of introducing foreign troops into the Engliſh dominions and have dared to vote in ſpite of influence, againſt the bill for the more effectually raiſing a military force for the protection of the ſettlements and poſſeſſions of the Eaſt India Company, and threw it out to the great joy of all thinking men, who are friends to his Majeſty's and the houſe of Hanover, and the liberties of England.

Diſpatches, the contents of which are kept a profound ſecret, have, within theſe few days, been ſent off for the naval commanders on the American ſtation.

Extract of a letter from Portſmouth, April 27.

"We daily expect Admiral Rodney here from London, in order to ſet ſail for the Weſt-Indies, his ſquadron being ready for ſailing.

"We expect 16 ſhips to be paid off here, but the men turned over to other ſhips.

May 1. Yeſterday the Lords North and Rochford, had a long conference with his Majeſty at the Queen's palace.

Yeſterday morning the Earl of Hillſborough, as ſecretary of ſtate for the colonies, had a grand levee of colony Governors, Agents and American merchants, at his houſe in Hanover ſquare.

The ſame morning Lord Sandwich had a grand and numerous levee of admirals, and other naval officers at his houſe at the Admiralty.

It was yeſterday reported (but we cannot vouch for the authenticity of the aſſertion) that the Earl of Halifax died on Monday evening at his ſeat at Buſhy Park.

The Sheriff of Middleſex, when he enters into his office, ſwears, That he will truly RETURN all the King's writs. It is probable Mr. Wilkes did not know the nature of the ſheriffs oath, when he talked of refuſing to make a return in caſe of Mr. Lutterell's ſeat being vacated as member for the county of Middleſex. Beſides, if it were poſſible to get over the perjury by the ſtatutes of 8 Henry VI c. 7. and 23 Henry VI c. 14 a ſheriff by ſuch refuſal would incur the penalty of two hundred pounds, one to the King and the other to him who ſhall ſue, and will likewiſe ſuffer a year's impriſonment.

The houſe of Commons will certainly finiſh buſineſs to morrow, when they will adjourn till Monday or Tueſday, as it is thought impoſſible for the upper houſe to finiſh the whole of their buſineſs till to morrow ſe'nnight ſo that the prorogation is now fixed for Thurſday ſe'nnight.

Extract of a letter from Liſbon, March 23.

"A very extraordinary event has happened lately here, in regard to commerce. Some days ago French cloths were refuſed diſpatch in the cuſtom houſe and ſtopt; and ſince then a general order has been ſent to that tribunal, to ſtop all goods of French manufacture which are either compoſed of wool, or have any mixture of that material in them; even their druggets are comprehended. You may eaſily conceive what an uproar this has occaſioned among the French merchants; they have applied to their envoy here, who has ſent home their caſe and written to his court for inſtructions."

May 2. Yeſterday the common council and principal inhabitants of the Ward of Cripplegate Within, in a long proceſſion of coaches, waited on the Lord Mayor with an addreſs.

Yeſterday the principal inhabitants of the ward of Aldgate waited on the Lord Mayor in the Tower, and preſented his Lordſhip an addreſs, expreſſing their approbation of his late conduct.

It is a miſtake that Mr. Wilkes at Mile end talked of making no return to the writ. He mentioned not obeying it ſo far as to call the county together, when there was no legal vacancy and returning the writ with the ſpecial matter endorſed on the back.

They write from Peterſburgh, that her imperial Majeſty has lately recalled all of her ſubjects whomſoever from baniſhment in Siberia, who had reſided in that inhoſpitable deſert for the term of ſeven years.

The houſe of Peers was very full yeſterday, all the Lords having been ſummoned, on a motion of the Earl of Chatham's for an addreſs to diſſolve the preſent p——t. None were admitted but peers. The debates were continued very late, when, we are informed, it paſſed in the negative.

The ſtate of the corn trade, for allowing the exportation of grain, &c. from America duty free, is dropt.

On Friday evening laſt a maſquerade was given for the amuſement of the children of Nobility in Soho ſquare at the houſe of Lord Pigot. Nurtured in the boſom of frivolity and luxury, it is not to be wondered if they wiſhed to imitate their pappas and mammas, the bigger children at Mrs. Cornley's.

May 4. It is ſaid the following motion was made on Wedneſday by the Earl of Chatham, in the upper houſe: "That an humble addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, moſt dutifully and earneſtly beſeeching his Majeſty that under the late violations of the rights of the electors of Great Britain, in the election for Middleſex, ſtill unredreſſed, and in the preſent conflict which has ſo unhappily ariſen between the claims of privilege of the houſe of commons on one ſide and thoſe of the magiſtracy on the other, his Majeſty will, in his paternal wiſdom, deign to open the way to compoſe this alarming warfare; and that in order to prevent the ſaid houſe and the Nation from being involved in intemperate diſcuſſions of undefined powers, which in the extreme may endanger the conſtitution, and tend to ſhake the tranquility of the Kingdom, his Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to recur to the recent ſenſe of his people, by diſſolving, after the end of this ſeſſion the preſent parliament, and calling, with convenient diſpatch, a new parliament; 23 for it, 72 againſt it.

We hear a proteſt is entered againſt the Durham Yard embarking bill, ſigned by Lord Shelburn, and two other Lords.

We are aſſured that upon the day the parliament is prorogued, the whole city of London will meet upon Tower hill and places adjoining, in carriages and on foot, to attend the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver to the Manſion houſe. All the bells in the city of London and ſuburbs will ring the whole day, and the illuminations are expectated to be more general than ever were known upon any other occaſion.

Run away from the ſubſcriber in Canady, in Windham County, Jeremiah Durket, an apprentice Boy about 17 years of age, had on and carried away two felt hats four ſhirts, and all his other cloaths. is about five feet nine inches high, and a little croſs eyed goes lame his left great toe is cut off. Whoever will take up ſaid runaway and bring him to me, ſhall have three dollars reward, and all neceſſary charges paid by Nathaniel Moſeley, jun.

N. B. Two more went with him one Badlok, and one Fuller.

July 2, 1771.

ANNAPOLIS, June 20.

Extract of a Letter from a Gentleman in Virginia, dated June 9.

I am juſt returned from the South Side of James River, where I have ſeen the moſt dreadful calamity which has ever yet befallen this country. The damages done by the late ſevere freſh cannot amount to leſs than five Hundred thouſand pounds; upon James River only, not leſs than five hundred houſes have been ſwept away, 2000 hogſheads of tobacco from Shockoe's, Byrd's, and near as many more from the tobacco houſes of different people; the wholeſale ſtore houſes of every merchant in Shockhoe, Rocky Ridge and Warwick: Thoſe at Oſborne's were afloat, but fortunately ſaved, by being tied to large trees, though all the goods were damaged, as the waters were up five or ſix lengths of ſhingles upon the roofs. All the iſlands and low grounds were under water; their laſt year's corn, and their preſent crops of corn, wheat and tobacco, with all their ſtock, and ſome negroes, not only carried off but the very ſoil itſelf waſhed away. Upon Roanoke they ſay it has been ſtill worſe. Shannadoe has ſuffered greatly, and the crops upon the low grounds of Pomonkey and Mattapony ruined. The freſh has alſo done great damage upon Rappahannock but not ſo much as upon Roanoke, James River, and Shannadoe. The crop of tobacco now growing muſt be leſſened at leaſt 25 000 hogſheads.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.

By a Gentleman from Mecklenburg County, in North-Carolina, we are informed, that he came through Orange County and was at the Governor's Camp 2 Days after the late Battle with the Regulators, where he learnt the following Particulars, viz. That on the 15th of May, a party of the Regulators came up with one of the Provincials at ſome Diſtance from the main Body, whom they cut to pieces; that on the 16th juſt before the Action, one of the Regulators, named Thomſon, came up to the Governor and groſly inſulted him with threatening Language, bidding him fire for they did not regard him, nor all his Forces, on which he ſhot him dead, when the Engagement enſued, by a heavy Fire, killed nine or ten of the Principals, and wounded about 60; that the Regulators being badly diſciplined and under no Command, attacked the Governor very irregularly afterwards; that the Action laſted near two Hours, when the Regulators began to diſperſe; that upwards of 250 of them were killed, a great Number wounded, about 100 taken Priſoners; that on the 17th the Governor iſſued a Proclamation, offering his Pardon to thoſe who would come in, lay down their Arms, and ſwear Allegiance to his Majeſty within a limited Time; that upwards of 300 had come in and there were continually ſurrendering themſelves, and it was thought that moſt if not all of them would ſurrender, except about 63, who were out outlawed; that one James Pew, an Outlaw, was hanged in the Governor's Camp; and that on the 20th, the Day he came away, a Court was to be held at Hillſborough, for the Trial of the Priſoners.—He further informs, that as he came through Virginia, he was told by ſeveral People that one who's Family at Green Briar, on the Frontiers of that Province, were killed by the Cherokee Indians, in their Excurſions.

By Letters, &c. from North Carolina, we learn, that in the Action on the 16th, as mentioned above, there were 300 of the Regulators left dead on the Field, and that the Number killed and wounded amounted to 900, and that ſince the Action 1500 of them had come in, thrown down their Arms and ſworn Allegiance. It is ſaid that Hunter, one of the Leaders of the Regulators, was killed in the Battle, and that Herman Huſbands, the other of their Chiefs, after aſſuring them of Victory and encouraging them, rode off. The Governor's Party have deſtroyed the Houſe and laid waſt the Plantation of ſaid Huſbands, and were in purſuit of him, when the laſt Accounts came away.

NEW-YORK, June 27.

A Gentleman who was in the Engagement with Governor TRYON, in North Carolina, againſt the Regulators, in his Letter to a Gentleman in this City, ſays, "Some Days before the Battle, a Number of Gentlemen from the back Country on Horſeback, properly equipped, joined the Governor who formed them into a Troop and were of great Service; that before the Battle the Governor ſent a Meſſage to the Regulators deſiring them to lay down their Arms, and deliver up their Principals, which they refuſed; that he ſent them a ſecond Meſſage by the High Sheriff, agreeable to an Act of Aſſembly paſſed laſt Seſſion, acquainting them if they did not diſperſe in one Hour, he would fire on them, which they refuſed; that when the Hour was expired, he ordered the commanding Officer of the Artillery to fire, which was immediately obey'd; in Conſequence of the Governor's Proclamation, in 12 Days after the Engagement, 1300 of the Regulators had ſurrendered their Arms, took the Oath of Allegiance and were pardoned."

SALEM, June 25.

On the 10th Inſtant, about 9 o'Clock in the Evening, Mr. Edward Cambridge, of Lynn, returning home from this Town, on horſeback, juſt on this Side the Old Sluice, (ſo called) 5 or 6 Miles from hence, was attacked by a Highway Robber, who ſeized the Horſe's Bridle cloſe to his Mouth, and accoſted Mr. Cambridge thus—Dam you, deliver your Money,—Mr. Cambridge ſaid, I have no Money.——The Robber then ſaid, Dam you, I'll have your Money or your life, The Inſtant of his uttering theſe laſt Words the Horſe ſuddenly inclined backward, and very providentially prevented the Contents of a loaded Piſtol from entering Mr. Cambridge's Body, which he felt paſs by his Breaſt, and which was diſcharged by the Highwayman immediately on ſpeaking the Words laſt mentioned. The firing off the piſtol occaſioned the Horſe to ſtart forward with ſuch Force as to diſengage the Bridle from the Villains Hand, when Mr. Cambridge rode off, and happily got clear.—The Robber had on a Dutch woolen Cap, a ſhort dark colour'd Jacket, and long Trowſers.

HARTFORD, July 2.

Laſt week a man in Middletown bathing in a Mill Pond was drowned. He was about 21 years of age, we have not been able to obtain his name.

Laſt Friday a Child of Mr. Coleman of Weathersfield, about 7 years of age, riding in a cart with his father, fell from his ſeat to the ground, before one of the wheels, which (before his father could ſtop his cattle) went over his head and kill'd him in a moment.

A Letter from a Clergyman to a Quaker, who was a Watchmaker.

From Berwick in Elmot, the Reſidence of my fleſhly Tabernacle, the ninth Day of the ſixth Month, in the Year 1706 according to our Computation, where thou mayeſt be welcome to ſuch Creatures as I have.

Friend,

I Have ſent an erroneous Watch to receive thy friendly Correction and Reproof. She hath been long guilty of Lying, and would ſeldom ſpeak the Truth; ſo that by her Leaſing I have often been deceiv'd, and led into Miſtakes. She hath been twice at thy Schoo for Amendment; but, as yet, hath profited nothing under thy Hands. Thou telleſt me in thy Note, thou haſt rectify'd the Centre Wheel, yet the whole Machine goes wrong; that thou haſt clean'd her, yet her ill Tricks remain; that thou haſt taken out her Bruiſes, yet the old Sores continue; that thou haſt turn'd the Top of her Teeth, and yet ſhe remains unconverted from her Faults: So that in a Senſe literal I may ſay to thee, O Watchman, thou haſt watched in vain, and haſt buſied thyſelf to no Purpoſe!

I tell thee Friend, mark me, I confide much in thy outward Skill and Ability, and hope thy Integrity is equal to them. If theſe Imperfections proceed from any Defects in the inner Man (I mean the Spring) or from any other Cauſe I deſire thou wouldſt rectify them; caſt the Spirit of Untruth out of her, make her go in the Ways of Truth and Verity, and inſtruct her to point at that which is right.

I own, thou art worthy of recompence, when they [illegible] profits me. I have once more ſent her to thee; pray enter into a friendly Conference with her, in reſpect of her Evils. I will board her with thee for ſome Time, and pay thee for her Table, if thou doſt requeſt it of me. Thus committing her to thy friendly Care and Correction,

I remain thy Friend,
GEORGE PLAXTON.

WE the ſubſcribers being appointed by the hon. Judge of Probate for the diſtrict of Hartford, commiſſioners on the eſtate of John Rumrill, late of Enfield deceas'd, (repreſented inſolvent) hereby give notice, that we ſhall attend the buſineſs on the firſt mondays of Auguſt, September and October next, at one o'clock afternoon, at the Houſe of Capt. Ephraim Peaſe innholder in ſaid Enfield.

THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic

From TUESDAY, July 2, to TUESDAY, July 9. 1771.

By the laſt Accounts from North Carolina, publiſhed in the late Papers here, the Circumſtances of the Colony appear to be truly alarming. No Man will believe that the People would riſe in Arms againſt the Government there, without ſome Reaſon for it. They are called Factious and Rebels. Theſe are Terms of Reproach uſually apply'd by Oppreſſors to thoſe who reſiſt Oppreſſion; and however ready ſome who have taken to themſelves the Appellation of Friends to Government may be to fix ſuch odious Terms on the People, when they murmur at and complain of the Meaſures of Government, be it remembered that it is poſſible for the Government itſelf to rebel, and when thoſe who are entruſted with the Conduct of the Affairs of the Public, oppreſs the People, inſtead of protecting them, and do them wrong, inſtead of diſtributing impartial Juſtice among them, they and not the People who reſiſt them, are Rebels. We have lately ſeen the Accounts of the Conduct of the Governor of North Carolina and the Loyaliſts as they call themſelves, and thoſe who are called Regulators, printed by Authority; Audi alteram partem: Hear both ſides; This is juſt; but it may be full as difficult for thoſe People in the back Parts of that Colony, who ſay they are oppreſſed, to make known their Grievances to the World, as it would have been for the Counties of Hampſhire and Berkſhire, or Cumberland and Lincoln in this Province, in Caſe they had been alike aggrieved, and the Preſs in Boſton had been under the Controul of thoſe who oppreſs'd them: Hence it may be that we have been, and are ſtill at a Loſs to find the particular Cauſes of the Commotions which have already iſſued, and the Bloodſhed of our Fellow Subjects on both Sides —— May God prevent any further! It is to be hoped we ſhall have a full Account of this important Matter before long; in the mean Time the Reader is preſented with the beſt Light we can at preſent afford, in the following Letter publiſhed in Newbern North Carolina, Dec 7 1770.

To the Hon. MAURICE MOORE, Eſq; of Newbern.

SIR, ORANGE, Nov. 25 1770.

THE other day I received an open letter from you, by the hand of Mr John Butler, and obſerve the contents. You ſay it is an anſwer to a letter you received from a perſon who ſtiles himſelf A True Regulator, and ſuppoſe it to be from Mr. Huſbands and me. As to the letter I know nothing about it, or the author, I having always ſubſcribed my name to all the letters I ever wrote; however, as your anſwer relates to the regulation, I ſhall chearfully undertake to anſwer it, eſpecially as you have charged us with what we are wholly innocent of, and ſome things we are wholly unacquainted with. You charge Huſbands and me with being the eſſence of that regulation, which has produced ſo much irregularity in the province. If you would only turn yourſelf round, and view the many enormities, extortions, and exactions, daily practiſed on us by lawyers, clerks, regiſters, ſheriffs, &c. I am ſure you could not in truth count us the eſſence of it.

As to charging you with writing friendly to Col. Fanning, I never charged you or any other man about it, except Col. Fanning himſelf, for expoſing your private letter. However I obſerve you plead much in his behalf, to excuſe his extortion, even to the calling our laws and table of fees intricate and confuſed; ſo that no two judges can agree in the conſtruction of them, & then recommend us to uſe charity on his plea of ignorance, &c. Pray, Sir, uſe that ſame charity towards us and our ignorance, and I am ſure you will not wonder the people are confuſed alſo under ſuch laws, eſpecially as we have ſo many ſimilar caſes of convulſions and confuſions daily publiſhed in every news paper. But pray, Sir, obſerve, by the way, Fanning had not one ſimilar caſe in the whole province, not even his predeceſſors; and it is obſervable alſo that he could not poſſibly raiſe ſuch a fortune from nothing in a few years, and maintain ſuch extravagance as he did, but by extortion, and grinding the face of the poor. Beſides, he endeavoured to enlarge the regiſters in ſome other counties to follow his example, but none of their conſciences proved large enough. As to Teyel's caſe I always thought his crime did not deſerve to take his life, nor indeed all his fortune. And as to Mr Huſbands's caſe, almoſt every man in the whole county was eye and ear witneſs to it themſelves; and ever ſo much ſcholaſtic ſtatings of facts, that you or any other can contrive, will not beat us out of a known truth. How were Milner and Naſh ſtrangers to them that impriſoned Huſbands? You ſay Huſbands, you believe, was impriſoned at the ſuit of the Crown; but I believe the Crown had commenced no ſuit againſt him till after the giving them bonds. He was impriſoned by guards procured by lawyers, clerks, and other extortionate officers, collected for that purpoſe, and ſuch officers got his bonds, and was there in company with them. How is the caſe then, ſuch as you have ſtated it? Every Body believes there was a joint confederacy of extortionate officers to cow him from bringing their example. [illegible] I believe, had evidence been allowed, it would have appeared ſo to the jury. How could it appear otherwiſe? He was firſt taken without a warrant, not by any ſheriff or civil officer, but by a banditti of lawyers, clerks, tavern keepers, &c ſent to goal without a mittimus, then taken out at midnight, put under guard, tied his feet under the horſe's belly, a gallows fixed in the goal, and his trial to be under the mouths of cannon, and could not even walk within the limits aſſigned him, but baydnets thruſting at him, and other weapons of war; and after all, not one jot or tittle could be proved againſt him. You ſay Mr Hooper well knew no ſuch allegation as dureſs could be proved againſt Mr. Milner. It was not poſſible Mr. Hooper could well know any ſuch thing. Huſbands had ſeveral meſſages ſent him before the court that 300 l. was the ſum agreed on for him to pay. This firſt put it in his head that ſum would pacify them, for it was no matter to whom it was paid, ſo it went among the fraternity; and I verily think, on the whole, it would have appeared dureſs to every man who had the ſmalleſt degree of candour or humanity in their compoſition. So much for that caſe: And now I will endeavour to anſwer in order every queſtion you have aſked, that ſam, or ſo far as I am concerned. And as to your firſt queſtion, I can take God to witneſs that it was for the ſake of public Juſtice that we proſecuted every officer, and not for reſentment, ſpite, malice, our gain; but the motive that ſtired me up, was the repeated cries of the poor oppreſſed people.

2dly. It was for the reformation of Magiſtrates, and other officers, that we ſued on the penal laws, and not for the ſake of the penalty. We had bound ourſelves up not even to bear expences with the money, but to apply it to pay off extortionate fees. You took care, however, among you, that we ſhould get little money that way, or let many of them be reformed, but they were rather eſtabliſhed in their curſed evil extortionate practices.

3dly. To anſwer to your third queſtion, Solomon ſays, "Oppreſſion will make a wiſe man "mad, and if you tread upon a worm it will "turn and fight." We are wholly deprived of juſtice. I dare ſay, try it when you will, three-fourths of the people in this county will ſay, even on oath, that they verily believe we were deprived of juſtice.

4thly. As to the ambuſcade being laid for Mr. Henderſon and Fanning, the report is entirely groundleſs, as it is as far as I know.

5thly. I can truly ſay it is out of pure love to our ſelves, our neighbours, and our poſterity, that we contend unweariedly for our conſtitutional rights and privileges, and not to protect any particular or private property whatſoever.

6thly. It is in ſupport of government that we chuſe to keep our money until we have ſome probability or aſſurance that it will be applied towards the ſupport of government.

Can any juſt man blame us for this, or ſay we have not a juſt cauſe to withold it, when we have had but one ſheriff theſe thirteen years who have ſettled their public accounts.

As to the 7th queſtion, I am concerned to anſwer it, having never beat a ſheriff in my life; and as to Demoſthenes, Cicero, or the P. S. of the letter, I know nothing about, nor who they were: And I ſhould think it the happieſt day I ever ſaw, if I could with ſecurity to my property betake myſelf to a quiet and honeſt induſtry, it is all my heart's deſire. And as to running the country to 7 or 8000l. coſt, it is aſtoniſhing to think that any government ſhould run to ſuch coſt purely to ſcreen and uphold a few of a pack of unjuſt extortionate officers, inſolvent ſheriffs, roguiſh bonds &c. and as quelling us by a military force rather than allow us the juſt execution of that confuſed law you ſpeak of; for that juſtly executed, would ſatisfy every one. But if we muſt fall a ſacrifice to that military force, we ſhall not be the firſt but muſt bear it, for death itſelf is better than ſuch ſlavery. Is it poſſible you cannot know our juſt complaint, or are you wilfully blind and deaf to our calamities? Some for a debt of 43s. have paid 56l. coſt, and executions out for 148l. more. Another lent a horſe to an Attorney, and for aſking him again was put in priſon, and [illegible]. But am I going to undertake? It would take a large folio volume to contain our complaints of that nature. You ſay if any perſon has been unjuſtly dealt by let him apply to the law, and he ſhall be redreſſed. Alas! Sir, ſome of us have attended court after court, this two years and upwards, with our complaints, to your knowledge, and have almoſt brought ourſelves to the brink of ruin, by attending court, and paying the coſt of malicious proſecutions; and are no nearer redreſs than we were at firſt. I ſhall now in return aſk you a few queſtions, and ſhall be glad to receive direct anſwers to them; 1ſt. When the Governor had promiſed us the Attorney General's Aſſiſtance, ſignifying the King hated nothing more than extortion in his officers, why did you put off the trials except a few againſt Col. Fanning, the firſt court, court after court, till the evidences were tired out, and then ſhew ſuch a diſlike to our proſecuting them as you did, both perſonally in court, and by this your letter? 2dly. Why was you ſo careful on every of the ſaid trials, except the firſt, as to hide from us the juſt fees? Was not this to keep us juſt where we were, at an uncertainty what they ought to take, that they might ſtill carry on their extortion? 3dly. was the ſuit againſt Patrick Craton, for a malicious proſecution; and againſt Mr. Huſbands, continued from court to court, and never ſuffered to come to trial? Was it not becauſe the laws are ſo clear in their favour that they would certainly be cleared, and the county then would be afraid no longer to proſecute officers? Many of theſe queſtions I might aſk, but leſt I ſhould tire your patience, I conclude, and ſubſcribe myſelf, Sir,

Your humble ſervant,
JAMES HUNTER.

P. S. There is one queſtion occurs, which I think too material to be omitted; that is, when you ſhewed ſo much earneſtneſs to proſecute rioters, on the ſide of the country, and yet when Fanning and Hart, who were officers, were indicted for a riot, and the bill found, why were thoſe ſuits never ſuffered to come to trial at all? J. H.

LONDON, April 21.

We are informed that Mr. Alderman Wilkes received a letter by the penny poſt containing only this ſingle queſtion, What is the Government? To which the patriotic Alderman returned for anſwer, A ſet of Knaves and Fools.

An Anecdote.—Soon after the revolution, when every act had paſſed that human prudence could deviſe, to ſtrengthen the conſtitution, upon the ſtrongeſt and moſt permanent foundation, King William thought ſomething ſtill wanting to compleat the ſtructure: He accordingly ſent Lord Somers to the leaders in adminiſtration, both Lords and Commons, requeſting they would conſider and draw up an act in the moſt extenſive manner they thought proper, reſpecting their privileges: In conſequence of the meſſage many conferences were held; but ſo jealous were both houſes in defining what was, and what was not, proper to reduce into a record, that at laſt it was thrown out as either impoſſible or abſolutely improper to be defined.

April 23. In opening the budget, a noble Lord obſerved, that the oppoſition had ſtudiouſly contrived to lead the houſe into ſuch dilemmas, that they could not be moderate without being accuſed of timidity: or vigorous without being charged with oppreſſion. Mr. Bourke in his anſwer obſerved, "That moſt people who had been brought into dilemmas, were content to take only one part of the evil alternative; but this miniſtry had managed matters ſo as to fall into both the evil extremes. They had with great dexterity contrived to be at once remiſs and rigorous; but in ſuch a manner that their moderation ſhould always evidently appear to the world the effect of fear, and their rigour the effect of injuſtice. They ſhewed their ſpirit by impriſoning two members of their own who, in obedience and deference to their orders, had put themſelves into their power; and they ſhewed their lenity, by ſuffering Mr. Wilkes to eſcape who had diſpiſed their authority."

He animadverted on their expedient of adjourning over laſt Monday, for the purpoſe of flying from Mr. Wilkes who had been ordered to attend that day. "They pretend this, ſaid he, to be out of contempt;" but that pretence only diſcovered more fully their dread of him; for if they deſpiſed him too much to ſee him on the day of their order, why did they make an order for his attendance? why did they renew their order? Their effacing a day from the Kalender might, ſaid he, be an improvement in aſtronomy, but it made a miſerable figure in politics, ſince ſo ſtrong a meaſure by which they cut off a day from their buſineſs, without any other reaſon or pretence, declared in the moſt deciſive manner to the world, how much they dreaded to have any thing to do with an adverſary who had given them ſo much trouble."

By expunging that Monday from the parliamentary Kalender they rendered it memorable forever. It will ſaid he, always hereafter carry the name of Wilkes's Monday. He had before been their martyr: he was now their ſaint. He obſerved that the fortune of that gentleman was ſingular, and in almoſt all points the leaſt conformable to what was to be expected from his natural complexion; that the laſt characters he ſhould have expected to have found Mr. Wilkes in were thoſe of an alderman and a ſaint; but this was a proof, the only remaining proof of the omnipotence of the houſe.

It is ſaid a certain noble family have ordered medals to be ſtruck in gold and ſilver with emblems expreſſive of the wound Britannia has received in the impriſonment of her firſt magiſtrate.

WESTMINSTER HALL INTELLIGENCE.

Court of Exchequer. After Serjeant Glynn had finiſhed his ſpeech for the diſcharge of Mr. alderman Oliver on Tueſday laſt in this court, every body preſent except four, was ſo convinced, by the ſtrength of argument and the irreſiſtable force of the learned Serjeant's reaſoning as well as animated by the love of liberty which more than ordinary inſpired the Serjeant on that occaſion, that no body doubted the determination in favour of fixed laws againſt undefined privilege. The two learned council who ſpoke after Serjeant Glynn, followed his example. The arguments took three hours upon this moſt important queſtion. It was decided by the court in almoſt as many minutes, that Mr. Oliver ſhould be remanded back to the Tower.

But, as uſual, as if the agents to the crown were friends to liberty, ſeveral flaws were diſcovered in the return, which might have been fatal to the Carlton Houſe Junto, if Mr. Oliver, as if he had a mind to be at croſs purpoſes too, had not ſtood up for arbitrary power: When the Lieutenant of the Tower had by his blunders in the return left open a window for the honorable priſoner to eſcape, he preferr'd captivity to liberty on ſuch terms; and while the crown lawyers were confounded at the diſgraceful blunders and ſaw as it were, their priſoner ready to ſlip through their fingers Mr. Oliver roſe up and ſaid, If your Lordſhips will not releaſe me on the general and public ground I do not wiſh to take advantage of theſe miſtakes.——What could Regulus have done more!

LONDON, May 4.

Lord Chatham never appeared in Parliament with a greater luſtre than on Tueſday laſt. No man queſtions the intrepidity of his ſpirit; no man denies the wonderful extent of his abilities. The dignity, firmneſs, and conſiſtency of his conduct make his character compleat.——After giving the warmeſt ſupport to the Duke of Richmond's motion on Tueſday, he entered largely into the conſideration of the melancholy ſtate of the country; the depraved ſyſtem of government, which had, in a very few years, reduced us from a moſt flouriſhing to a moſt miſerable condition. He went thro' the whole proceedings of the Houſe of Commons in the late buſineſs of the printers, and arraigned every part of it in the ſtrongeſt terms. He warmly defended the magiſtrates in the conſcientious diſcharge of their duty;—that the Houſe, in committing them to priſon without hearing their defence upon the point of priviledge, had been guilty of a groſs and palpable act of tyranny;—that they had heard the proſtituted electors of Shoreham in defence of an agreement to ſell a borough by auction, and had refuſed to hear the Lord Mayor of London, in defence of the laws of England;—that their expunging by mere force, the entry of the recognizance, was the act of a mob, not of a Parliament; but that their daring to aſſume a power of ſtopping all proſecutions by their vote, ſtruck at once at the whole ſyſtem of the laws;——that it was ſolely to the meaſures of government, equally violent and abſurd, that Mr Wilkes owed all his importance:—that the King's miniſters, ſupported by the ſlaviſh concurrence of the Houſe of Commons, had at once made him a perſon of the greateſt conſequence in the kingdom;——that they in effect had made him an Alderman of London, and Repreſentative of the county of Middleſex; and now it ſeems they intend to make him ſheriff, and, in due courſe, Lord Mayor of London;——that the proceedings of the Houſe of Commons, in regard to this gentleman, made the very name of Parliament ridiculous;—that after repeated reſolutions, by which they had made him amenable to their juriſdiction they had ſhamefully given up the point at laſt; and, in the face of the world, acknowledged him to be their Lord and Maſter.——That there remained but one poſſible remedy for the diſorders, with which the government of this country was univerſally infected;—That to ſave the name and inſtitution of Parliaments from contempt the Houſe of Commons muſt be diſſolved. This he hoped might reſtore good government on one ſide,——good humour and tranquility on the other; yet that this was rather a hope in him than any ſanguine expectation. He feared that it might prove only a temporary and partial remedy; that to reſiſt the enormous influence of the crown ſome ſtronger barriers muſt be erected in defence of the conſtitution. That formerly the inconveniencies of ſhortening the duration of Parliament has had great weight with him; but that now it was no longer a queſtion of convenience;—the Summa Rerum is at ſtake;—your whole conſtitution is giving way;—and therefore, with the moſt deliberate and ſolemn conviction to his underſtanding, he now declared himſelf a convert to Triennial Parliaments.—His Lordſhip concluded with deſiring a call of the Houſe for next day, and declared his intention to move an addreſs for the diſſolution of the preſent Parliament. Accordingly on Wedneſday his Lordſhip made the motion, but it was overruled, 72 againſt 23.

The other day the French King found, under a plate that was ſet for him at dinner, a ſcroll of a paper, on which was written, "the firſt Damien miſſed his aim, the ſecond will be ſure."

The diſputes between the French King and his Parliament, it is thought, will be carried to much greater lengths than were at firſt imagined, as that Monarch is not ſatisfied with the diſſolution and baniſhment of the members, but is determined to compel them to reſume their nominal dignity; and, however repugnant to their inclinations, or conſciences, to oblige them to ſubſcribe to the meaſures he ſhall chooſe to purſue. Deſpotiſm, thank heaven, a Britiſh conſtitution, as yet, knows nothing of!

Anecdote of the life of the late King.

IN 1745, when the rebellion exiſted, the city of London opened their chamber for ſubſcriptions to raiſe men and money for the ſafety of his majeſty and the conſtitution, as we had very few forces at home. The train bands were well exerciſed, but our army, then under the late Duke of Cumberland, could not be ſoon brought over. The pretender, and ſecretary Murray, with their rebels, had advanced to Derby; one of the Lords in waiting adviſed the King to go to Hanover till peace ſhould be reſtored at home, as he did not conceive that the whole force in Britain, if collected together, could face the rebels. (At this time news was brought that the pretender had began to march from Derby towards Nottingham and London.) His Majeſty like a man of honor anſwered, "I thank you, my lord, for the concern you have for my perſonal ſafety. Let the Pretender advance; I am ſure the city of London will march to my ſtandard at Finchley Common and there, with the city's train bands, I will fight the Pretender and his Rebels; I am ſure to defeat them. I am King of England, and will die King in England, at the head of my Londoners, much rather than run away from the Pretender." Here was the moſt ſincere confidence on each ſide; the city of London ſurrounding the Throne, protecting their King; all England animated by them, and following the loyal example.

RELATION of the battle at Almance on thurſday MAY 16.

ON wedneſday evening the 15th inſtant, his Excellency received certain information that the inſurgents were aſſembled at about 5 miles from the camp at great Almance. a council of war being called, it was unanimouſly reſolved to march the next morning againſt them; accordingly on Thurſday the 16th, the army leaving the tents ſtanding and all the baggage and proviſions in camp, under the guard of a field officer and about 30 men, began to march at about 8 o'clock in the morning and advanced to an old field within half a mile of the rebels, when his Excellency formed the order of battle in two lines, a part of the artillery on each wing, and the remainder in the centre of the firſt line.——His Excellency then ſent one of his aids du camp and Sheriff of Orange, with a letter to the rebels, requeſting them to lay down their arms; ſurrender their outlawed ringleaders, and ſubmit to the laws of their country; allowing them one hour to accept of the terms to prevent the effuſion of blood, that muſt enſue, as they were at that time in a ſtate of war and rebellion againſt their king, their country and their laws.—In the mean time, the army kept advancing near the enemy——the meſſenger ſoon afterward returned, and reported to his Excellency, that the rebels had received his offers with diſdain, and the general cry among them was BATTLE, BATTLE. Immediately after, a conſiderable body of them appeared in ſight, and waved their hats, daring us to advance.—Upon which the army continued moving towards them until they were within 30 yards of the enemy, when his Excellency ſent his aid du camp to inform them the hour was elapſed, and that he ſhould immediately fire. They cried out, "that he might fire and be dam'd."—Upon the return of the aid du camp, the action began, and a hot fire was kept up on both ſides for about an hour and a quarter when it abated a little from the enemy. The cannon was then ordered to ceaſe firing and the whole army to advance. Then the firſt line after engaging three quarters of an hour longer, drove the enemy out of the field and gained a compleat victory——Their camp was taken with many horſes, arms, ammunition, cloaths and proviſions.

It is computed that the rebels muſt have had killed in the battle about one hundred men, two hundred more wounded and upwards of twenty taken priſoners. The loſs of the loyaliſts was nine killed and about ſixty wounded. The number of the rebels from the beſt information could not be leſs than two thouſand three hundred, our army did not exceed one thouſand men, of which not more than ſix hundred were engaged—the artillery was well ſerved and did great execution. The behaviour of the Officers and men, on this occaſion, will appear by what the governor gave in orders the next day.

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.

At the laſt meeting of the American Philoſophical Society held in this city, were exhibited ſeveral ſpecimens of flint glaſs, viz. decanters, wine glaſſes, beer glaſſes, &c. manufactured by William Stiegel, of Lancaſter county, which were judged equal in beauty and quality to the generality of flint glaſs imported from England; and entitles the ingenious and public ſpirited manufacturer to the particular encouragement of this province and country.

A letter from So. Carolina, June 11.

"I received laſt night, letters of the 5th inſt. from North Carolina, adviſing, that upon Governor Tryon's iſſuing a proclamation, offering pardon to all that would come in (except the outlaws) lay down their arms, pay the taxes, and take the oath of allegiance, 2000 Inſurgents had come in, but that ſuch of the ringleaders as were not taken were run off: That the judges are gone to Hillſborough, to hold a court for trial of ſuch as had been taken in arms. One FEW, an officer among the Regulators, was hang'd at the head of the Loyaliſt's camp, directly after the battle.—So that order is likely to be reſtored in North-Carolina."

Extract of a letter from London, April 22.

"You have no doubt heard e'er this time of the Lord Mayor's commitment to the Tower by the Houſe of Commons. The affair has made great noiſe here, but is likely to end very quietly. The minority decline daily—Wilkes has loſt his former popularity, and ſeveral others who bid fair to ſucceed him in the good opinion of the people have been "bought off" (as they call it) by the Miniſtry. This is notoriouſly the caſe of Mr. Wedderburne, who having accepted a place under the Crown, contradicted in one week every thing that he ſaid in the Houſe of Commons in the week preceding. I ſaid the affair of the Chief Magiſtrate's commitment was likely to end quietly: By which I mean, that it would end without mobs in the City, or remonſtrances at Court: But it ſeems the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver mean to proſecute Sir Fletcher Norton, as the Signer of an illegal warrant—and where that proſecution will end, the Judges muſt be called upon to determine."

"Much has been ſaid lately about a war with Spain; but by what I can collect, I cannot believe that event will take place within the preſent year. And yet it is very certain that Spain has been preparing herſelf for the purpoſe. In general people here do not ſeem diſpoſed to enter upon a war. American affairs have been abſorbed this ſeſſions in matters of a more general concern. We are really not of that conſequence to this country, which we have been taught to think ourſelves. It would raiſe the higheſt indignation in you, to hear ſome members of Parliament haranguing about "OUR American Plantations," as though the abſolute diſpoſal of every thing there, was veſted ſolely in themſelves.——Thoſe members who moſt warmly eſpouſe our cauſe, are Burke, Barre, Sir George Saville, and Mr. Pownal; to theſe Gentlemen, the Colonies are much indebted for many excellent defences."

NEW-YORK, July 4.

By the Brig Polly, Capt. John Walſh, in 29 Days from the Bay of Honduras, we learn that the Logwood Cutters had, for ſome Time paſt, removed with their Families from the different Rivers to St. George's Quay, apprehenſive of a Rupture betwixt Great-Britain and Spain, but in conſequence of Diſpatches from the Governor of Jamaica, received by a Veſſel which was hired to go Expreſs thither, they were happily enabled to return to their Occupations; this Alarm was notwithſtanding been productive of great Loſs to them, little or no Logwood having been cut during that Time.

That the Indians, from the great want of Corn (which has been deſtroyed by the Catterpillars) and the ill Treatment of the Spaniards, continue daily to deſert from the different parts of the province of Jucatan, to the Engliſh Settlers, from whom they receive ſuch Hoſpitallity as endears them to the Latter, and muſt in Time prove a noble Barrier againſt the Depredations of the Spaniards, who have of late behaved with great Inſolence, affording a ſecure Aſylum to ſuch Negroes as deſert to them, and in many Inſtances have been principal Abettors of ſuch Deſertion.

Before Captain Walſh ſailed from the Bay, his Majeſty's armed Schooner Earl of Egmont, commanded by John Bitham, Eſq; was arrived there, in order to obtain an exact Account of the Loſs ſuſtained by the Logwood Cutters, by their Negroes being detained by the Spaniards, which amounts to near Ten Thouſand Pounds Sterling, and to tranſmit the ſame to Commodore M'Kenzie at Jamaica.

THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic.

From TUESDAY, July 9, to TUESDAY, July 16, 1771.

Mr. Watson,

Pleaſe to put the following in your paper. I hope it will be the laſt on the occaſion.

I intimated in my laſt, of the 19th of January, in anſwer to one publiſhed, in your paper 8th of January, which contained many reflections on the miſſion at Stockbridge: that I would for the ſatisfaction of the public, if I was put to anſwer again, give a ſhort and conciſe narration, of the beginning, and continuance of the miſſion, down to this time: that the public might judge, whether thoſe aſperſions were, or were not groundleſs. But I muſt be brief, leſt I ſhould take up more of your paper, than my part, and ſo deprive the public of that which is more valuable. But before I begin this account, I muſt be allowed to premiſe two or three things. Firſt, when an author keeps himſelf ſecret, it generally indicates a bad deſign, unleſs where it is to prevent oſtentation, and the praiſe of men. Secondly, every man who has a right, and it is his duty, to blame others and call them to account, need not fear to make himſelf known. Thirdly, that common obſervation verifies the apoſtles aſſertion, that every man ought to be quiet, and abide in the calling wherein he is called: and not to be buſy bodies in other mens matters.——I proceed now to give a brief account of the miſſion at Stockbridge, from the beginning down to this time. Anno Domini 1734, the honorable and reverend commiſſioners, for propagating the goſpel in and about New England, by advice, opened a miſſion to the Houſatonnuck tribe of Indians: this part of the province then being an extenſive, and uncultivated wilderneſs, and the hunting grounds, and ſettlements of ſeveral ſmall clans of the Hudſons river Indians, as alſo of ſome of the Iroquois, or five nations. The commiſſioners made choice of Mr Sergeant, a gentleman excellently qualified for the buſineſs, for their firſt miſſionary. When he came to his miſſion, he found about ſixty Indians old and young, male and female, ſettled in little clans, upon the Houſatonnuck river, at ſome diſtance from each other; he applied himſelf with great aſſiduity to his buſineſs; but found himſelf embaraſſed by the ſituation of the Indians. The government being apprized of this difficulty, ſoon provided a remedy, by making proviſion for the Indians ſettling in a compact body, at the place now called Stockbridge, and there built them a houſe for public worſhip. And alſo made a further proviſion for the ſettlement of ſix Engliſh families among the Indians: and to this little Engliſh auditory, Mr. Sergeant pray'd twice with, and preach'd twice to, on the Lord's days; and alſo preach'd and pray'd twice, to the Indians in their own language, and pronounc'd the bleſſing in both languages, and would not receive any thing of the Engliſh for his ſervices; it being his opinion, that the Engliſh under their circumſtances ought to have the goſpel freely preach'd to them: and beſides his ſabbath exerciſes, he ſpent much of the week in inſtructing the Indians, and exhorting them to live the life of chriſtians.

Mr. Sergeants faithfulneſs and fame in a few years, drew together from ſeveral parts, a conſiderable congregation of Indians, to be inſtructed in the chriſtian religion: and all things ſeem'd to ſucceed well, till a war broke out with France. Stockbridge being a frontier town, put the inhabitants to great charge, difficulty and danger. The Indians engaging on the ſide of the Engliſh went into the ſervice, which in ſome meaſure corrupted their morals. After this ſervant of God had laboured in his maſters vineyard, about twelve years, his Lord by death, call'd for him, to receive the reward of his faithful ſervices, ſoon after the peace was concluded with France. The miſſion being vacant two years, the commiſſioners obtained the worthy, and pious Mr. Edwards to ſupply it; which was greatly to the ſatiſfaction of the Engliſh families, being then but ten in number. The commiſſioners ſettled his ſalary at ſeventy pounds ſterling per annum, he having a large & expenſive family. For his further ſupport, the Engliſh inhabitants engaged to pay him, ſix pounds thirteen ſhillings and four pence lawful money, and twenty loads of wood yearly, as long as he continued in the miſſion. He carried on the public exerciſes of religion, as Mr. Sergeant had done, only he had not the Indian language, and was obliged to preach by an interpreter. During his miniſtry another war commenced between England and France. In ſomething more than ſix years, after Mr. Edwards was inducted into the miſſion, he was removed to the preſidentſhip of New-Jerſy College; by which means the miſſion was again vacant, for about one year & an half, until the commiſſioners engaged Mr. Weſt, the preſent miſſionary to undertake the ſervice; the commiſſioners ſettled ſixty pound ſterling as his ſalary yearly.—The Engliſh families by that time, it being in the year 1759 had increaſed to the number of ſixteen. Theſe families for Mr. Weſt's further encouragement, gave him forty pounds lawful money, to aſſiſt him in procuring a ſettlement, and continued to him the ſame annually as they gave Mr. Edwards, and beſides that ſum, forty loads of wood yearly. In the laſt war, the Indians were for ſeveral years, near all the men that were able to bear arms, in the ſervice of the country, a conſiderable number of them periſhed in the war, by being kill'd, captivated, and dying with ſickneſs, who left ſeveral widows, and many helpleſs orphan children. And thoſe that ſurvived, contracted a habit of idleneſs, drunkenneſs, and deſoluteneſs in morals; and diſſipation of religious ſentiments. And of their difficulty and danger, they do not ſeem to be ſenſible or attentive; notwithſtanding all the care and pains the miſſionary can take with them; who have two public exerciſes with them on the Lord's day, through the year, and but one with the Engliſh, ſix months in the year, viz. from fall to ſpring. In the ſummer ſeaſon there are two religious exerciſes to the Engliſh, and two to the Indians, yet I would not be underſtood to mean that this degeneracy is univerſal, for ſome of the Indians retain a better diſpoſition. But their decline from their former profeſſion and appearance of chriſtian virtue, is too general and too evident. And as they have worn out all their old improved lands, and by bad huſbandry rendered them unfertile, and having no diſpoſition to clear and cultivate new lands, and their former hunting grounds being every where ſettled with Engliſh: thoſe that are diſpoſed to hunt, which Indians are more inclined to than to huſbandry, are obliged to go long marches, and make little or no returns of profit. And as theſe ſources of ſupport fail, they neceſſarily become poor, and nature ſtill making a demand for food and rayment, for themſelves and children, and their ſtrange propenſity to ſpirituous liquors, has been the means of their contracting large debts from time to time, which to diſcharge, they have been neceſſitated to avoid a priſon, to diſpoſe of much of their land; by which means there has of late years, been a conſiderable increaſe of Engliſh families in town, and the Indians have of late years decreaſed. Still there is at leaſt double the number of Indians, now alive in the town of Stockbridge, to what there were when the miſſion firſt began, and a conſiderable number generally attend the public worſhip—and their children the ſchool.

Nevertheleſs, the commiſſioners taking notice of the late increaſe of the Engliſh, have had this matter in contemplation for ſome time paſt, whether the Engliſh inhabitants ought not to bear a greater proportion toward the ſupport of the goſpel, than, heretofore they had done; and came to a reſolution laſt year, (notwithſtanding great part of the late ſettlers, are ſcarcely able to provide themſelves, the neceſſaries of life, being on a new, rough and heavy timber'd land) to withdraw one half of Mr. Weſt's ſalary, viz. forty pounds lawful money, and the Engliſh Inhabitants have taken on themſelves to pay Mr. Weſt that ſum for his ſervices to the Engliſh.

LONDON, April 10.

The Gazeteer gives the following from an anonymous Correſpondent: It is a notorious fact, of which the public will be very ſoon convinced, that there have been diſcovered in an out-houſe near the dwelling-houſe of a certain Alderman of the City of London, arms ſufficient to put into the hands of 20,000 fighting men; near the ſame place a quantity of powder and ball was lodged; and there is great reaſon to think, that, upon cloſer ſearch, more arms and ammunition will be found out.

The laſt accounts from the Baltic are full of the vaſt preparations, both by ſea and land, on the Eaſtern Coaſt thereof, as if more powers than one were ſoon to be involved in a war.

Extract of a Letter from Warſaw, dated March 23.

"The Courts of Vienna, Peterſburgh, and Berlin, have agreed to re-eſtabliſh tranquility in Poland, and we hear that this affair was ſettled brought into order during the ſtay of Prince Henry of Pruſſia at Peterſburgh, and that the Courts of Vienna and Berlin have taken the quieting the diſturbances of that kingdom on themſelves. As ſoon as Mr. Saldren is return ed hither, a beginning will be made in this important buſineſs, and it is further ſaid that the Courts of Vienna and Paris will ſend Ambaſſadors to this city, whom we hear are already appointed."

We hear ſome papers of dangerous tendency were found on Saturday morning near the Royal Exchange.

LordNorth has often ſaid, that he has broght the Court of Spain to comply with every article that they could in honour agree to: But it is greatly feared his Lordſhip has had too great a regard for their honour, and ſacrificed ſome of the moſt ſubſtantial points of Engliſh honour, to ſome of the moſt romantic punctilios of Spaniſh honour

April 30. The expence of the Parliament buſineſs done this ſeſſion on account of the city, it is ſaid, already amounts to near 4000l.

Laſt Friday ſeveral Conſtables were examined before the Committee, relative to ſome late riots; but they could give no information of any particular perſon, except one Keys, for pelting the Conſtables; and he is out upon bail.

The following remarkable paſſage occurs in Mr. Dunning's ſpeech, in favour of the Lord Mayor ——" Suppoſe (ſaid he) you ſhou'd actually commit theſe gentlemen, what will be the conſequence? They will be brought by habeas corpus before the judges, and they will be releaſed, if the judges chooſe to pay any regard to the law. For as they are not committed for treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace, the judges are obliged by that act to diſcharge them upon ſufficient bail. Commitments by the Houſe of Commons are not excepted in it; and if ſuch a thing was meant at the time of making the act, it would have been ſpecified, as the Houſe was ſufficiently appriſed of every circumſtance. As the law is general, the judges muſt make no arbitrary exception. Judge then how much this ſtep will degrade your authority. You have not even a criminal juriſdiction, as the act requires in every commitment. With what face then can the expounders of the law adjudge your commitments legal?"

" If ſome letters from Madrid may be relied on, there ſeems to be a coldneſs between the courts of Madrid and Verſailles, occaſioned it is ſaid by the King of Spain having been informed that the French King has ſome thoughts of re eſtabliſhing the Jeſuits within his dominions; a ſtep which hath ſo much affected the Spaniſh Monarch, that, he hath ſent orders to his ambaſſador, reſident at Paris, to declare to the court of Verſailles, that if it ſhou'd take the reſolution of re eſtabliſhing that ſociety in its ſtates, at a time when affairs are in ſo good a train to annihilate totally that pernicious ſociety by whoſe deſtructive machinations France, to all other kingdoms, hath too ſeverely ſuffered his Catholic Majeſty will find himſelf obliged to break the treaty known by the name of The Family Compact, and to declare that he will no longer, in any manner be bound by it; and that he will recal his ambaſſador fromParis. The Lord Mayor finding himſelf ſeized yeſterday morning with a ſlight fit of the gout, by the advice of his friends, ſet out for his houſe at Dulwich, to ſpend a few days there for the recovery of his health, and Sir William Stephenſon ſat in the manſion houſe in his room.

Sir Fletcher Norton had a grand levee at his houſe on Wedneſday evening, where the mobility and others that paraded the ſtreets that evening repaired, and teſtified their reſpects, by breaking moſt of the windows.

The mob on Wedneſday Night broke a great number of windows in the Strand, & left not a whole pane in Somerſet houſe Coffee room.

The reaſon aſſigned for breaking open the iron gates at Serjeant's Inn, is, that the populace got intelligence that the Recorder of London, who lives there, had given directions to have the gates ſhut much ſooner than uſual, to prevent any illuminations in the Inn.

Wedneſday night a deſperate fray happened between the mob and a party of chairmen, in St. James's Square, when two of the former, it is ſaid, were killed on the ſpot, and ſeveral on both ſides dangerouſly wounded.

May 11. There are ſeveral letters in town, which poſitively affirm, that the interior provinces of Ruſſia are almoſt depopulated, by means of the wars, notwithſtanding the ſucceſs of their arms.

They write from Brimingham that 15 000 muſkets, with bayonets and cartouch boxes, were ſent from thence in waggons, to be ſhipped at Briſtol for St. Peterſburgh, on the Empreſs's account the 24th ult.

When the Lord Mayor came out of the tower, he gave ten guineas to the wardens, as a compliment, for the civility they ſhew'd to him and his friends, whilſt he was under confinement.

Laſt wedneſday night the mob aſſembled before Lord N—— 's houſe in Downing ſtreet and broke ſeveral of the windows; likewiſe the fan light, and the two lamps over the door.

Sir F. N. came home not above half an hour before the mob aſſembled in his court yard; they threw ſtones ſo faſt at the widows, that the family were obliged to remain all the time in the back apartments.

A gentleman ſent a complementary card to Sir Fletcher Norton yeſterday morning, deſiring to know how he did after the riot; to which he is ſaid to have returned for anſwer, " That he was very eaſy, for he had not one Pane left."

This morning their Majeſties came from Richmond to the Queen's palace, where Lord Rochford attended, to deliver an expreſs to the King, which arrived laſt night in haſte from the Hague.

On Wedneſday night his Majeſty's wardrobe at Richmond was broke open, and robbed of valuables to the amount of 6000l.

We are aſſured that ſome very important ſecrets, relative to the expediture of a large ſum of the national treaſure, have been brought to light, within theſe few days, by the indefatigable zeal of ſome patriotic members.

We are aſſured, by recent letters from Paris, that the States-General have preſented a remonſtrance to the French King touching the injuſtice done to the ſubjects of Holland, who hold annuities in that kingdom.

A loan of 500,000l. is now negotiating by an agent in London, at 5 per cent. for the King of Pruſſia.

The ſudden change of affairs in Liſbon, in favour of the Engliſh traders we are aſſured was effected by a Remonſtrance ſent our Court by Captain Belfour, in the Venus Frigate.

It is a fact, that the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor received yeſterday a letter, highly approving his conduct with reſpect to the Printers, from a perſon in a diſtinguiſhed office at Court.

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, ſince his arrival at the Manſion Houſe, has received upwards of 200 cards of congratulation from the Minority, on his releaſement from the Tower; to all which his Lordſhip returned ſuitable anſwers.

We hear that the ball and entertainment, intended to be given by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor at the Manſion houſe, will be on the 20th inſtant.

Thurſday commiſſions were ſent to Birmingham and Sheffield, to the amount of 50,000 l. for goods to be got ready for exportation to America.

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.

Extract of a letter from London, dated May 1.

" Things continue exactly in the ſame State as they have done for ſome time paſt: The Peace is now become, in all Probability, permanent, both the Spaniards and we having actually diſarmed. Fifteen ſhips of the Line were ordered the other Day to be paid off; and yet it is intended to keep in Commiſſion a much larger Number of Ships than we had before our late Armament. It now appears pretty evidently, that neither the Spaniards nor the French meant, in earneſt, to break with us upon this Occaſion. Happily for Great Britain, the internal State of France, and the various Cauſes of Diſcontent, which rather encreaſe than abate among that People and which actually threaten to terminate in ſome great Convulſion, leave us little Room to dread any Diſturbance from that Quarter for a great while to come. And, ſo far as I am able to judge, the preſent Miniſtry, and every Thing elſe, reſpecting the Public will remain for ſome Time in their preſent Situation.

" The Papers will inform you, that our Patriots are now falling out among themſelves. The Seceders from the Supporters of the Bill of Rights now call themſelves The Conſtitutional Society. Townſend Sawbridge and Oliver, are in Oppoſition to Wilkes & his perſonal Friends, the latter refuſing to ſtand along with him for the Office of Sheriff next Midſommer Day. Horne and Wilkes, in particular, are at mortal Enmity; which ever Party prevails, it muſt end in their Deſtruction. Wilkes himſelf is indefatigable in acting his Part; but I am convinced his utmoſt Efforts will be fruitleſs, and that his Glory is upon the Wain.

" American Affairs have not been ſo much as mentioned of late. Probably they will be reſumed next Seſſion, and ſome Regulations regarding Trade propoſed, that will tend to our mutual Benefit.

" We have had a very long and hard Winter, and hardly any Appearance of Spring yet; ſo very backward a Seaſon I never remember before The Price of all the Neceſſaries of Life are nearly doubled within theſe few Years. Notwithſtanding which, as Money is much circulated and every Body in full Employment, we hear very few Complaints."

NEW-YORK, July 11.

On Monday laſt, in the Sloop Sukey, Captain Yarborough, in five Days from North Carolina, His Excellency WILLIAM TRYON Eſq; our newly appointed Governor with his Lady and Daughter arrived at the Narrows about 3 o'Clock in the Morning, and between 12 and 1 came up to town where at his landing he was welcom'd by a ſalute of 15 Guns from the Fort, to which he was conducted by the Gentlemen of the Council, and others who waited his Landing.

On Tueſday the Gentleman of his Majeſty's Council aſſembled at the Fort, where his Excellency's Commiſſion was read, Oaths of Office adminiſtered after which, attended by the Mayor and Corporation the Sheriff and other Officers of the City, with many other Gentlemen, they marched in Proceſſion to the City Hall, where his Commiſſion was publiſhed; and after the cuſtomary Formalities, His Excellency, with the Gentlemen of the Council, return'd to the Fort, where an elegant Dinner was provided. At Night the City was illuminated.

We hear that Col. JOSIAH MARTIN, now in this City, who ſucceeds to the Government of North Carolina, will next week depart for that Place, in the ſame Veſſel in which his Excellency our Governor lately arrived from thence.

BOSTON, July 8.

Laſt Friday His Excellency the Governor was pleaſed to Prorogue the Great and General Court of this Province, to Wedneſday the 4th of September next, then to meet at Harvard-College in Cambridge.

BOSTON, July 11.

Yeſterday the Select-Men of the Town viſited the Public Schools, at whoſe Invitation His Excellency the Governor, His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, ſeveral of his Majeſty's Council, and a Number of other principal Gentlemen, with ſome of the Rev. Miniſters, attended, who all expreſſed great Satisfaction in the good Order and Proficiency of the Youth in the reſpective Schools, which did great Honor to their ſeveral Inſtructors.

Medford July 6 1771.

AS Thomas Warren, Son of Deacon Warren of this Town, was travelling to Weſtown, laſt Monday morning (having roſe very early for that purpoſe) there appeared, about 3 o'Clock, out of the buſhes, near a ſmall bridge at ſome diſtance from Quarry Hill between here and Cambridge, a Man, who ſeizing his horſe's bridle accoſted him thus, Dam you deliver up! Deliver up what? anſwer'd young Warren. Why deliver up your Horſe and Money, or I'll ſend you into eternity very ſoon, and utter'd many prophane oaths and imprecations; on which Warren told him he talk'd very prophanely, upon which the Man threatned to ſtrike him with a club about four or five foot long ſaying he would ſend him to hell before the ſun roſe if he did not deliver up; but Warren having conſiderable preſence of mind, tho' very much ſurprized told him, 'twas not in his power to ſend him to hell, and ſaid there were company behind him who would prevent him from his intended robbery, on which he ſaid he would kill them and him too for half a copper; on which inſtant a young colt, ſeeing him go by with his horſe juſt before, jump'd out of the paſture at ſome diſtance behind, which the fellow hearing the noiſe of as he was galloping along after the horſe, immediately let go the reins of the bridle, and ſtruck a blow with his club in both hands, but Warren leaning forward, happily miſſed it, but it fell upon and lamed the horſe conſiderably.——The man damning him, immediately ran into the buſhes from whence he came——The man had on a blue double breaſted Jacket, a pair of trowſers, and a Dutch cap.

NEWPORT, July 8.

In North-Carolina a Dollar paſſes for Eight Shillings; and we are aſſur'd that the Sheriffs there often ſell fine fat Cattle at 14 Shillings a Head, and the beſt Sheep at 2 Shillings (which is one Dollar and three Quarters for Cattle, and a Quarter of a Dollar for a fine fat Sheep) to pay Rates; and that very frequently, after the Sheriffs have collected large Sums they puſh off Robberlike to ſome of the back Parts of Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, &c. and leave the People to pay the Whole of their Taxes over again. Now is it poſſible for any Man, unleſs he poſſeſs the Soul of a real Cannibal, to wiſh Succeſs to an Adminiſtration ſo corrupt, ſo abſolutely void of Humanity, and every Chriſtian Virtue, as that of North Carolina.

HARTFORD, July 16.

Laſt Week on Monday, the following melancholly Accident happened at Farmington, viz. As a Number of People were raiſing one of the principal Rafters of a Meeting-Houſe in that Place, the Strap of one of the Blocks gave Way, when the Rafter fell, and knock'd off three men, (viz. Lieut. Abner Curtiſs, Allen Merrells, and Jonathan Mountogue.—Merrells's Scull was fractur'd by the Fall, and he was otherwiſe much bruiſed, ſo that he died the Thurſday following. Curtiſs had one of his Shoulders broke, and his Arm much wounded, which has occaſioned a Mortification in it, and his Life is deſpaired of. Mountague was wounded in one of his Hips, and other Parts of his Body, but is in a fair Way of Recovery.

The ſame Day one Jonathan Higley of Simſbury in attempting to croſs a River in that Place, where there was a ſwift Current, was carried down by the Stream and drowned. His Body was taken up on Friday laſt, about three Miles below the Place where he was drowned, and decently interr'd,

To the PUBLIC.

THOMAS BROWN of Hartford, in Connecticut, hath lately diſcovered a way through the woods from Montreal, to the ſettlements on the weſt ſide of Connecticut river, at a place called Waits-Town, above Doctor Wheelocks college. He ſet out from Montreal on the 8th of June laſt, with nineteen horſes, ſeven Frenchmen, and two Indians——Croſs'd the river Lacol, at a place call'd Nut Iſland, thence travelled ſix days on good feazable land for a road, and headed the bay of Miſſiquie, and from thence a ſouth eaſt courſe, till he came to Connecticut river aforeſaid, was 15 days in the woods, and brought in all his horſes well, and from thence to Hartford; he made ſuch remarks and diſcoveries on his way, as that he can with ſuitable incouragement eaſily find and open a communication by land from Montreal and Quebec to Connecticut river, in the diſtance of about two hundred miles and that after a ſuitable road was cleared, it might be travel'd in the ſpace of five or ſix days.—And as ſuch a diſcovery muſt be very beneficial to the colonies in general, he would readily undertake it if a proper reward might be provided him.

Mr. Watſon,

As your paper is deſign'd to ſerve the public good, please to inſert the following recipe to cure the horn diſtemper in cattle, of which a great many have lately died

CUT the horn off near the head, then take urine and ſalt it till it is almoſt brine, and diſſolve in it a ſmall quantity of blubber and ſqueeze it into the horn every day, keep the horn open that it may diſcharge the putrid matter. I lately cured an ox in a ſhort time, whoſe head was ſo rotten, that when I began with him the liquor would run directly out at his noſtrils.

POET'S CORNER.

Mr. Watſon,

If you think fit you may inſert the following lines, perhaps they may ſhew ſomething of the ill conſequences of a religious paper war.

WHen late involv'd in war Britannia ſtood,
And foes unnumber'd thirſted for her blood,
When potent France, in league with haughty Spain,
Oppos'd great George, the monarch of Britain.
With curs'd deſign pronounc'd theſe diſtant land,
A field of blood, a prey to ſavage band,
When fell deſtruction glar'd on every ſide,
And man array'd in all his horrid pride.
Like ſome infernal fury breath'd menace,
To us deſtruction, to our king diſgrace:
Had ſecret diſcord ſpread her helliſh taint,
And open faction rais'd her loud complaint,
Thro' court and camp the councils of the great,
Of officers and miniſters of ſtate,
Had officers to whom it did belong,
To execute the orders of the throne,
Unto the royal will oppos'd their own.
How ſure had triumph led the gallick band,
And we been helpleſs captives in their hand,
Our vanquiſh'd troops had breathleſs ſtrow'd the plain
While Britain yeild the empire of the main
Our monarch throne had toter'd from the baſe,
And all the nation plung'd in foul diſgrace,
Thus ſure deſtruction to the chriſtian cauſe,
Contempt of Chriſt his goſpel and his laws,
Flow from religious feuds and holy jars,
(Of all the moſt deſtructive bloody wars)
Its foes with triumph ſee departing peace,
And ſhout when diſcord uſhers in diſgrace.
Lo all the powers of earth and hell combine,
To hurt the cauſe and blaſt the kind deſign,
Athieſts and Demons riſe againſt the Lord,
And call in open vice to oppoſe his word,
Shoot poiſon'd arrows at the little flock,
And ſtrive to ſhake what's founded on a rock,
But while with humble love and holy fear.
It joins in cries to the Almighty ear,
While bound in charity's harmonious ties,
With hearts enraptur'd, & with watchful eyes
Are ſin and hell their fouleſt enemies.
Paſtors united under Chriſt their Lord,
With zeal and love diſpence the ſacred word:
To Chriſt their head they look for his command,
And wiſely ſtrengthen one anothers hand.
Zion may ſhout victorious in her king,
And while her foes menace, his praiſes ſing.
Would God that all Chriſt's miniſters would ceaſe
Their paper war, follow the prince of peace,
Forbear to wrangle with their ſcribling pens,
And ſhew the world that chriſtians can be friends

(Remainder of the piece begun in our laſt)

THUS I have given the public a juſt, but ſhort account, from the beginning to this time of the miſſion at Stockbridge, that they may judge of the ignorance, and arrogance of the writer of a piece publiſhed in the Connecticut Courant, Hartford Jan 8th; wherein the author undertakes to charge the honourable and reverend commiſſioners, of unfaithfulneſs in their truſt, and in a very imperious and ſupercilious manner, calls them to give an account of their miſ doings, eſpecially to account for their conduct in ſpending charitable money, in ſupporting a miſſion at Stockbridge, for chriſtianizing the Engliſh. The miſſionary next comes under his laſh, for ſpending his time to chriſtianize the Engliſh at Stockbridge, when he has eighty pounds a year, of money appropriated to the ſole uſe of chriſtianizing the heathen——one would judge by his manner of expreſſion, that he viewed the Engliſh at Stockbridge, to be heathens. And why does he then find fault, for he allows the fund to be for this end: and this author might do well if he would come to Stockbridge, and partake of the inſtructions, with his brother pagans and be chriſtianized, and ſo learn not to intermeddle where he is not called to it; nor to accuſe people of knavery indiſcriminately, as he has the town of Stockbridge. When he was charged in a peice, publiſhed January 19th in the Hartford paper, of unjuſt repreſentations: In his anſwer, March 26, he ought and it was juſtly expected, in order to maintain his character with the public, he would have produced ſome ſort of evidence, in ſupport of the things he had in his former piece given out to the public as truths. As he made the charge upon the commiſſioners, their miſſionary, and the people of Stockbridge, he took the burden of proof on himſelf and until he proves what he has aſſerted, he ought to lye under the imputation of a ſlanderer, which he has not attempted to do. And if the narrative foregoing is true, reſpecting what the Engliſh have done, toward the ſupport of the miſſion, what he has ſaid will always remain untrue; and for the truth of what is declared, the Engliſh precinct records in Stockbridge makes it evident. Further, the Engliſh bear the burden of all public charges, and the highways and bridges coſt them about one hundred pounds a year, while the Indians do nothing. The truth of the caſe is, the Engliſh have not been wanting in doing their full proportion in ſupport of the miſſion, all things conſidered, from the beginning to this day. I write theſe things to ſhew the vanity and imbicility of the author of the piece publiſhed in ſaid paper Jan 8th; wherein he undertakes to inform the public of things he is very ignorant of. And in his piece publiſhed the 26th of March, which he pretends is an anſwer to one publiſhed Jan. 19th, in this the reader will find but a little more than a continual repetition of the ſpirit, heat, zeal and warmth, of the piece he is anſwering. Theſe and other like things, are introduced in the place of reaſon, and argument, and inſerted only to make out his harangue, determining he would ſay ſomething, although it was nothing to his purpoſe, but only to make manifeſt his vindictive ſpirit. He had in the piece he undertook to anſwer once and again, been charged with publiſhing things that were not true; and how does he vindicate himſelf from this charge? Why he ſays the author that he is anſwering, did not improve his abilities in the wiſeſt and moſt advantagious manner for his cauſe: be it ſo, this no ways proves him innocent of the charge alledg'd againſt him, but he ſcatters fire brands, arrows & death; neither does this prove but he is guilty of the charge laid againſt him. But to whom does this character properly belong of, ſcattering fire brands, &c? To the perſon that ſecretly wounds his neigbours reputation, or to him that warmly condemns that practice? If it belongs to the former, as undoubtedly it does, then according to the conclusion of my antagoniſt, he muſt be conſcious of perſonal guilt. He continues his method of proving and ſays the truths contained in his piece has nettled the author he is anſwering, and ſet him all on fire. Unhappy man! he has yet to make out, that there was a word of truth in any thing he wrote. All the pain I endure from his nettles & fire, is, that I have troubled myſelf in a contraſt with ſo impotent an adverſary.

The next tack the author takes, is to collect a number of words from the ſeveral parts of the peice he is quarreling with, which he calls hard words, and in a kind of triumph, cries out, behold the ſpirit of the man, and the ſtile of his writing, full of invectives, now he ſeems to imagine he has overſet the whole at one blow: but with all his victory, he does not attempt to ſhew, but that every word was properly uſed, and fitly applyed; and I believe he thinks they were, and thus far I agree with him. His next argument is his paroxyſm, and as I was not thrown into a fever nor ague, nor any other diſeaſe, but a deſire to rectiſy the errors of his miſguided mind; and when that is done both will be pretty well. A thouſand hard words he ſays don't amount to an argument, nor deſtroy a fact; it is ſo; neither does that number of falſe ones. He ſays the weapons uſed againſt him are the only ones that can be uſed, and that begets ſuſpicion in the reader that the cauſe is not good: it is difficult to know what weapons to uſe, when we don't know who they are to be uſed upon. Truth irritates, again he ſays, was it ſo, perhaps it might, but ſince it is not, it muſt be ſomething elſe. But he inſiſts upon it, this proves that is the writer, he is anſwering, ſome way or other, acceſſory to the decline of the miſſion; I have no conception of his mode of evidence, it being new to me, but I don't perceive any witchcraft in it, but was it not for the reverence I bear to the gentlemen in the miniſtry I ſhould be apt to ſay it was prieſtcraft, which is next to it.

He further ſays, that in thoſe plain words, that ſome people that don't live in Stockbridge love ſpiritous liquors too, there is ſome ſtrong implication, that the writer had in view, beſides the matter expreſs'd, if he knows of any myſterious meaning in them words; I will be as fair with him as he is with me, and leave him to make his own application, in his own time and way. The author he is writing againſt he ſays is careful to inform the public, of his having no particular intereſt in the miſſion. He endeavours to fix it in the minds of people, that the author he is controverting with, laid great ſtreſs on this, and ſome other things that were but juſt mentioned, as they naturally fell in. Thoſe accidental matters were not the things in controverſy.—The matter that was and now is in controverſy, is, whether the writer I am contending with, did not ſhamefully revile people, without reaſon or right, & impoſe on the public by miſrepreſentations. This author alſo ſays there were many things ſaid in the piece he is writing againſt not to the purpoſe, and but few that were; we have his ſay ſo for it, but no pretence to ſhew wherein. But I am weary of following this gooſe chaſe, and ſhall leave this author with his own paroxyſms, eccentricks, lamentations and tears of blood, till another opportunity; only juſt obſerving that a mind not calous to the ſentiments of ſocial virtue, and feelings of conſcience and benevolence; would not tolerate ſuch a practice as I have undertaken to condemn. And I do now declare, what I have wrote is with a pure deſign to diſcountenance ſuch unchriſtian practices: not having the leaſt apprehenſion that all this author can ſay or do, will have any influence on the miſſion, that he has been aiming to overthrow, or the perſons he has undertaken to vilify. I confeſs I do not like this wrangling in the dark: I always love to know who I have to do with, whether a chriſtian, an infidel, a Turk or a Jew. But if my antagoniſt likes obſcurity, he may remain in it: yet he ought to remember, that they which love darkneſs rather than light, it is becauſe their deeds are evil.

As to his not making friendſhip with an angry man, he may do as he pleaſes: and as to his getting a ſnare to his ſoul, he has done that already: and the beſt advice I can give him to get out of it is, as he has wounded in ſecret, ſo to weep; and ſhed (with a due ſenſe of his fault) a few penetential—natural, watery tears, for no blood is required; and then he will find a forgiving and true friend.

BOSTON, July 18

Yeſterday arrived here the Brig Dianno, belonging to Piſcatoqua, Capt. Perkins from London, by whom we have the following Articles, viz.

LONDON,

May 8. This morning as ſoon as it was certainly known that his Majeſty would go to the Houſe, to put an end to the Seſſions of Parliament, Summonſes were iſſued from Guildhall to the Aldermen and Common Council to attend. At two o'clock ſome of the Aldermen and a great Number of the Common Council went from thence to the Tower. On the Lord Mayor and Mr. Oliver being brought to the Tower gate by the proper officer of that fortreſs, they were ſaluted by 21 pieces of Cannon belonging to the Artillery Company, the Members of which accompanied the proceſſion in their uniforms, which made a fine appearance; there were 53 Carriages in the train. Sir William Stevenſon, and the Aldermen Townſend, Sawbridge, Wilkes, and Trecothick were in the Proceſſion: Only one of the Sheriffs Mr Martin, was preſent. The greateſt Acclamations were continued all the way to the Manſion Houſe, not only from the People aſſembled in the ſtreets, but amazing numbers teſtified their ſatisfaction from the windows of the houſes by which they paſſed. On the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver's arrival at the Manſion-Houſe, the Artillery Company ſaluted them. They then ſat in the ſtate coach till all the carriages of the Common Council had paſſed, in order to return their ſalutes. The Lord Mayor and Mr Oliver then aſcended the ſteps at the Manſion-Houſe, preceded by the mace and ſword bearers, and accompanied by the Aldermen and Sheriffs amidſt the inceſſant ſhouts and roars of applauſe of an incredible number of their grateful fellow citizens. On their arrival at the baluſtrades fronting the great gate, the Lord Mayor and Mr Oliver bowed in return to the people aſſembled, and were again ſaluted with loud and univerſal huzzas.

"My Lords, and Gentlemen,

AS the ſtate of public buſineſs no longer requires your attendance, I think it right, at this ſeaſon of the year, to put an end to the preſent Seſſion of Parliament.

"The ſatiſfaction I have obtained from his Catholic Majeſty, for the injury I had recieved, together with the proofs which the Courts of France and Spain have given me, by laying aſide their armaments, of their ſincere diſpoſition to preſerve the general tranquility of Europe, have enabled me to reduce my forces by ſea and land. The zeal with which you have exerted yourſelves, upon the apprehenſion of a rupture with Spain, muſt convince the world of your affectionate attachment to me, and of your conſtant regard for the true intereſts of your Country. On that ſupport I ſhall always rely for the defence of my honour, and for the ſecurity of the rights of my people.

"With regard to the troubles which ſtill agitate ſome parts of the Continent, my endeavours have never been wanting to bring them to an end; and in thoſe Endeavours, you may be aſſured, I ſhall perſevere."

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"It was with real Concern that I found myſelf called upon, by the Situation of public Affairs, to aſk of my faithful Commons more than ordinary Supplies for the Service of the current Year; and I cannot ſufficiently thank you for the Unanimity, Cheerfulneſs, and public Spirit, with which they have been granted."

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"While we acknowledge the Goodneſs of Divine Providence in preſerving us from theſe Calamities with which ſome Parts of Europe have been afflicted let me exhort you to employ your beſt Endeavours, in your ſeveral Stations and Countries, to render the National Happineſs compleat, by diſcouraging and ſuppreſſing all groundleſs Suſpicions, and domeſtic Diſturbances.—— ——I have no other Object and I can have no other Intereſt, than to reign in the Hearts of a free and happy People: And it is my earneſt Wiſh that my Subjects may not be prevented, by any Miſtakes or Animoſities amongſt themſelves, from enjoying, in the fulleſt Extent, the Bleſſings of a mild & legal Government. The Support of our excellent Conſtitution is our common Duty and Intereſt: By that Standard I would wiſh my People to try all public Principles and Profeſſions, and to look upon thoſe as their moſt dangerous Enemies, who, under any Pretence whatſoever, wou'd perſuade them to violate theſe Laws, and undermine that Authority, which the Conſtitution has provided for the Purpoſe of preſerving the general Liberty and Happineſs."

Then the Lord Chancellor, by his Majeſty's command prorogued the Parliament to Tueſday the 23d of July next.

Sir Fletcher Norton, in his Addreſs to his Majeſty yeſterday, obſerved, that the Commons hoped a proper uſe would be made of the Supplies granted this Seſſions, which were larger than had been voted by that Houſe on any former occaſion.

We are informed, that as ſoon as news was carried to Hayes, that the Right Hon. the Earl of Chatham had carried his Cauſe in the Houſe of Lords every houſe was illuminated, and the populace were entertained at his Lordſhip's charge.

Lord Chatham towards the concluſion of his ſpeech on Wedneſday ſe'nnight in the houſe of Lords, on his motion for a diſſolution of parliament ſaid "That though no man prized himſelf more on his attachment to his native country, the proceedings of thoſe people who call themſelves its governors had rendered it ſo diſagreeable to him that was he but ten years younger he would ſpend the remainder of his days in a country (meaning America) which had already given ſuch earneſts of its independent ſpirit; nor ſhould my advanced age (continued that ſpirited Nobleman) even now prevent me, did not conſiderations of the laſt conſequence (my bodily infirmities) interfere.

The ſame Nobleman ſpeaking of the Shoreham election ſaid, "he hoped that that Borough which has been ſo long the property of Bengal and Indoſtan would be at laſt found to belong to the county of Suſſex.

NEWBERN, (N Carolina) June 28

The Supreme Court of Oyer & Terminer for the Tryal of the Regulators in the Back County began at Hillſborough the 30th of May and continued to the 20th of this Inſtant June; during which Twelve were tried and condemned for High Treaſon, the evidence againſt them being clear, that they, with a large Body of Regulators, withſtood and oppoſed the Forces under his Excellency's Command, in the Battle of the 16th of May laſt; which Act is declared to be Treaſon by a Law of this Province, paſſed the laſt Seſſion of Aſſembly. Bills of Indictment were found againſt Two others upon the ſame Charge but the Petit Jury acquitted them. His Excellency the Governor was pleaſed to ſuſpend the Execution of Six out of the Twelve, till his Majeſty's Pleaſure be known; the other Six were executed on Wedneſday the 19th Inſtant at Hillſborough. Among theſe laſt the moſt diſtinguiſhed was Benjamin Merrill who had for ſome Years been a Captain of Militia in Rowan County.

Benjamin Merrill you have been indicted and found guilty by your Country of High Treaſon which is the greateſt Crime that any Man can commit, conſidered as a Member of the Community; becauſe thereby he would overturn the State of Order and Civil Government which ſecures to us every Thing that is valuable or deſirable in Life.

To complain of Grievances, and to endeavour a Redreſs of them in a lawful Way, is not only juſtifiable, but Praiſe worthy; but to ſnatch the Sword from the Magiſtrate and to refer to the Deciſion of Arms, what the Laws of your Country ſhould alone determine is a moſt deteſtable Crime; for it brings on the Miſeries of an inteſtine War which is perhaps the greateſt Evil that any Nation or People can ſuffer.

It is probable, that when you firſt formed your fatal Connection with the People called Regulators, you did neither intend or foreſee the Miſchiefs they would lead you into, but greatly infatuated as you was it is Matter of Aſtoniſhment that the Act of Aſſembly paſſed the laſt Seſſion, could not reſtrain you from the raſh and vain conſtruction which has now brought you to the Bar of this Court. That Act ordained, that if any Body of Men ſhould withſtand or oppoſe an armed Force raiſed in Virtue thereof, that in ſuch Caſe they ſhould be adjudged Traitors, and it ſo accordingly Divine Providence, which ever acts for wiſe & gracious Purpoſes, permitted you & your deluded companions to deſpiſe this Law; you daringly withſtood his Majeſty's Troops, and warned, and wilful, ruſhed upon your Fate.

I earneſtly beſeech you to employ the ſhort Time you have to live in a Manner ſuitable to your unhappy Condition, that ſo, after having ſatisfied the offended Juſtice of your Country, we may yet piouſly hope, that you will obtain Forgiveneſs at the Throne of GOD.

I muſt now cloſe my afflicting Duty, by pronouncing upon you the awful Sentence of the Law; which is That you Benjamin Merrill, be carried to the Place from whence you came, that you be drawn from thence to the Place of Execution where you are to be hanged by the Neck; that you be cut down while you are yet alive, that your Bowels be taken out and burnt before your Face, that your Head be cut off, your Body divided into Four Quarters, and this to be at his Majeſty's Diſpoſal; and the Lord have Mercy on your Soul.

From the CAPE-FEAR MERCURY, of May 29.

Extract of a letter from an officer of diſtinction to a Gentleman in Brunſwick, dated Alamanſee-Camp, May 18. 1771.

—"WE halted two days at Hilſborough, during which time an expreſs arrived with the diſagreeable news, that the Regulators had ſurrounded General Waddell with a force more conſiderable than it was imagined poſſible for them to muſter, and that in conſequence of the deſertion, or what is much the ſame, the connexion he diſcovered to ſubſiſt between his own camp and the inſurgents, that brave officer had the mortification to find a retreat to Saliſbury the only reſource he had. Upon this intelligence, his Excellency marched immediately for the ſettlements of theſe rebels, who had returned with avowed intentions of oppoſing his march, and being in appearance as deſirous of meeting us, as we could poſſibly be of meeting them, a very few days brought us within three miles of each other. It was expected that they would have oppoſed our paſſage over the Haw river, where the ſword was ſo defencible that it muſt have coſt a good deal of blood to have effected a paſſage; but by a briſk march, we happily arrived there a day ſooner than they expected us, and arrived where we are now, the 13th inſt. The people round about as being generally diſaffected to government, it was impoſſible to obtain any intelligence relative to the inſurgents that we could depend upon, except that their number was conſiderable, and that they were determined to give us battle. On the 15th they ſent to his Excellency a paper they called a petition, purporting, that they deſired his Excellency to redreſs their grievances in a manner ſatisfactory to them as the only means of preventing that bloodſhed, which, from the ardour of the leaders and the troops on both ſides, muſt otherwiſe enſue; and deſired an anſwer in four hours. Their meſſenger was diſpatched with a reply, that his excellency would ſend them an anſwer by twelve o'clock the next day, notwithſtanding which, Mr. John Aſhe (ſon of Mr. Samuel Aſhe) and Mr. John Walker, who were ſent out of camp upon duty, were ſeized by theſe people on the very ſame night, not far from our camp, tucked up to trees and ſeverely whipped, and made priſoners till we releaſed them the next day. On the 16th, in conſequence of a reſolution unanimouſly entered into the evening before, we marched about three miles from our ſtation. When we came within half a mile of them, three guns were fired as a ſignal to form in order of battle, which was immediately done in two lines about an hundred yards from each other: They anſwered our guns by three huzzas and by beating to arms, by which they were to give us battle; we proceeded to advance upon them till we came within two hundred yards of them, where we halted. I forgot to tell you, that, previous to this, his Excellency had ſent them, in anſwer to their petition, that as he had in every circumſtance, both in his particular and legiſlative character, purſued every meaſure that was in his power to quiet them without effect, that nothing was left him now to offer but an immediate ſubmiſſion to government, a promiſe of payment of their Taxes ſo long withheld from the public, an immediate return to their habitations, that they would no longer protect thoſe perſons indicted, from being brought to a fair trial for their offences, that he gave them an hour to conſider of it, and, if they did not agree to propoſals ſo fair, the conſequence that followed muſt be imputed to them. When our meſſenger arrived, they had not patience to read the propoſal, but bid him return to BILLY TRYON, and tell him that they defied him, & that battle was all they wanted. Some of their leaders, however prevailed on them to liſten; [illegible] they again expreſſed impatience to engage, with [illegible] the moſt horrid oaths of putting every one of us to death. We then, as I ſaid before, advanced within two hundred yards of them and halted.

They were alſo advancing in order of battle, and their number ſurpriſed us. We did not believe it poſſible that ſo many people could implicitly be under the influence of ſuch men as Huſbands, Hunter, &c. and in ſo villainous a cauſe. They came in that order to a ſtrait reach of the road, when they halted, waving hats to us to advance, and daring us to do it. His Excellency then ſent a magiſtrate with an officer, with the proclamation, agreeable to act of Aſſembly, ordering them to diſperſe within an hour, which he read accordingly; but they diſdained to liſten.——Battle, battle, battle was their cry; which they ſaid they impatiently expected, that they waited only for us to fire the firſt gun, which they dared us to do. This conduct incenſed our people to ſuch a degree, that it was difficult to keep them from ruſhing upon the enemy. The unfeigned ardour they expreſſed to engage, was a happy preſage of the victory which enſued, and gave the officers of the army the pleaſing and certain aſſurance of not being deſerted by their men; which in men new raiſed, and many of them connected with the Rebels, was a circumſtance not impoſſible to ſuppoſe might happen. The Governor with a coolneſs peculiar to himſelf, bore theſe inſults with patience till the hour expired, which time he ſpent in viſiting the lines, company by company, putting every thing in order, recommending to the officers and men, not to fall into diſorder, and ſhewing, by his ſteadineſs and ſerenity, and by the judicious diſpoſition he made of the troops, that courage, and that military ſkill every General ought to poſſeſs.

Being informed the inſurgents had an intention of putting Walker and Aſhe in the front of their line, a meſſage was ſent them by his Excellency, that as he ſhould keep the priſoners we had in a place of ſafety, he depended they would do the ſame by Meſſieurs Walker and Aſhe. They returned no direct anſwer to this, but ſaid, they would give them up provided his Excellency would give up all we had taken of theirs. This unequal exchange was extremely grating to the Governor, as it implied a conceſſion on the ſide of government not quite conſiſtent with the reſolutions we had taken; but all of us joining in a petition to his excellency to comply with it, leſt they ſhould hang up Walker and Aſhe, he was ſo good as to grant our requeſt, and ſent them word, provided they would ſend the gentlemen to him, he would ſend our priſoners (in number 7) immediately to them. They agreed to this, but being very tardy in the execution, and our people complaining that ſtanding in the ſun began to make them faint, and clamouring to advance upon the enemy, it was thought adviſeable to lead them on. We marched in profound ſilence and exact order upon them, till their advanced guard, and our firſt line met almoſt breaſt to breaſt. Our troops were ordered not to fire till they received his Excellency's orders, ſo that they were almoſt mixed with thoſe of the enemy, who were ſtationed a little before their main body; then they ſlowly retreated to join their army, bellowing forth defiance, and daring us to fire. We proceeded till within 20 or 25 yards of them when we halted. They continued reviling us, daring us to fire, and aſking us why we delayed? That battle, battle was their wiſh, many of them advancing towards the enemy, opening their breaſts, and defying us to begin. Here we loſt a glorious opportunity. The greateſt part of their army were then open to us, and within 30 yards, but his Excellency had promiſed not to fire upon them till the priſoners were delivered up, and till he gave them notice; and ever punctual to his word, he would not break it even to thoſe wretches. During this time we ſaw them going to the places they had agreed to occupy, and theſe were beſt calculated to ſecure themſelves, and annoy us. They had waited to receive us, ſo had an opportunity to chooſe their ground, and it muſt be confeſſed they choſe it with judgment. The ground they paraded upon was the place they wiſhed us to ſtand at, and as they had contrived wh[illegible] themſelves, it was the only ground to ſtati[illegible] without action obtain. We were entirely open to their fire, moſt of them as well ſecured as poſſible from ours, and as the greateſt part of our artillery was in the road, they diſpoſed their beſt troops to attack it.

In this ſituation we impatiently expected the word fire. Upon the return of an Adjutant, ſent to receive Walker and Aſhe, who brought word they would deliver them in half an hour, they were told we could wait no longer, and if they did not directly lay down their arms, we ſhould immediately fire upon them. Fire and be damn'd was their anſwer. The joyful word was given, and the action immediately began, and as immediately became general.

The Governor's conduct can never be too much commended. He ſeemed preſent at every place, gave his orders with a compoſure and judgment which did him honour, and greatly contributed to the ſucceſs of the day. The officers and men behaved with a bravery truly commendable, every order received was punctually executed; a regular and continual fire was kept up, and no expoſure of perſons was dreaded or avoided, the hotteſt fire fell upon the artillery company, who both officers and men, behaved in a manner truly brave and ſpirited. The artillery was ſerved in a manner which did as much ſervice to the cauſe, as honor to thoſe concerned in the direction of it; about thirty were killed and wounded out of this ſmall corps, which in proportion to their number, you will think conſiderable, as it was ſerved by two ſmall companies. They killed and wounded a good many of our people (the number I do not know exactly) and amongſt theſe are one or two officers, only one killed. I have the pleaſure to acquaint you that few of your intimate acquaintances are hurt, though many of them were in the hotteſt of the action, and I have ſtill greater pleaſure in informing you they all behaved well.——Mr. Harnet, who behaved with great ſpirit and bravery, received a ſmall ſtroke on his breaſt with a muſquet ball, but it had ſtruck againſt ſomething that had weakened its force, that it did not enter his body, and he is now quite well.

By accounts we received from the inſurgents, and from ſome who have ſince the battle come in and ſurrendered themſelves, they had above 200 men killed and wounded. They fought us with a ſpirit that would have done them honour in a good cauſe. May the blood, which by their means has been ſhed, bring theſe people to a proper ſence of their duty and ſerve to convince thoſe perſons in our part of the country, who blamed the meaſures taken againſt them, that nothing but chaſtiſement could have reſtored peace to the community preſerved the conſtitution of the country or protected government from outrage and inſult. To continue in another opinion would be a high inſtance of ingratitude and obſtinacy.

We have taken a good many priſoners, among them ſome outlaws, who, I fancy, will be inſtantly hung up. Never was victory more compleat. We took their proviſions, ammunition, baggage, horſes, ſaddles, &c &c. &c. We purſued them a good way from the field of battle; but our men being greatly fatigued, and our wounded men requiring attention, we were ordered to return to the field, from which we marched into camp, where now we are. To-morrow we march to Hunter's, where it is imagined we ſhall halt and ſend our detachments to collect the taxes, and to diſperſe the rebels wherever they are. News is juſt now brought that they have again collected themſelves, and are determined, by a deſperate puſh to retrieve their affairs; and that they expect to be joined by a thouſand from Grenville. We ſhall ſoon know the truth of this, and, if it is ſo, ſhall I dare ſay prevent their junction. Their number, when they fought us, was certainly two thouſand; our number about half that. I have now given you as exact an account of the action as the ſituation I am in will admit."

SUPPLEMENT to the CONNECTICUT COURANT.

THURSDAY, July 25, 1771. Seqr N°. 343.

NEWBERN, (N. Carolina) June 19.

SUndry papers and letters have been found in the houſe of Hermon Huſbands (the Cataline of this province) by which it appears, the inſurgents were confident they ſhould defeat the Governor, and were determined to put every man in his army to death——that they looked upon themſelves ſo much maſters of the province; that many of the public offices had been already diſpoſed of—ſuch were the views—ſuch were the deſigns of theſe people, of whom it has been iniquitiouſly reported, "that they wanted only to obtain juſtice for their poor oppreſſed brethren." But theſe diabolical ſchemes are now happily defeated, and Alamance is made their court of record. Yet, though every friend to his country muſt rejoice at the ſucceſs of the Loyaliſts, it is impoſſible not to lament the fate of thoſe unhappy people, who, through their own ignorance, have been perſuaded by a few artful and deſigning men to join with them and impiouſly attempt to ſubvert the conſtitution of the province.

June 28. On Monday evening laſt his Excellency the Governor, returned to the Palace, in good Health, from the Expedition againſt the Regulators; and tho' it was late in the Evening before he arrived, yet as ſoon as it was known, the whole Town was inſtantly illuminated, and a Bonfire kindled. Many Gentlemen, met, and ſpent the remainder of the Evening in feſtive joy, for the ſafe Return and happy Deliverance of his Excellency's Perſon from the imminent Perils to which it has been expoſed in the late Battle with the Regulators.

Juſt before the Battle between our Troops and the Regulors began, they ſent his Excellency the following Petition.

To his Excellency WILLIAM TRYON, Eſq; his Majeſty's Governor in Chief, in and over the Province of NORTH CAROLINA.

The PETITION of us the Inhabitants of Orange County,

Humbly ſheweth,

Firſt, THAT we have often been informed of late, that your Excellency is determined not to lend any kind of Ear to the juſt Complaints of the People in Regard to having roguiſh Officers diſcarded, had others more honeſt propagated in their Stead; and Sheriffs and other officers in Power who have abuſed the Truſt repoſed in them, to be brought to clear, candid, and impartial Account for their paſt Conduct, and other Grievances of the late nature, we have long laboured under, without any apparent Hopes of Redreſs.

Secondly. That your Excellency is determined on taking the Lives of many of the Inhabitants of this County, and others adjacent to it; which Perſons being nominated in the Advertiſement, we know them to be Men of the moſt remarkable honeſt Characters of any in our Country. Theſe Aſperſions, though daily confirmed to us, yet ſcarcely gains Credit with the more polite amongſt us, ſtill, being ſo often confirmed, we cannot help having ſome ſmall Jealouſies abounding among us. In order therefore to remove them, we would heartily implore your Excellency, that of your clemency, you would ſo far indulge us as to let us know (by a kind Anſwer to this Petition) whether your Excellency will lend an impartial Ear to our Petition or not; which, if we can be aſſured of, we will with joy embrace ſo favourable an opportunity of laying them before your Excellency, with a ſmall Detail of all our Grievances, and remain in full Hopes and Confidence of being redreſſed by your Excellency, in each and every of them, as far as lies in your Power, which happy change would yield ſuch Alacrity, and promulgate ſuch Harmony in poor penſive North-Carolina that the ſad preſaged Tragedy of the warlike Troops marching with Ardour to meet each other, may by the happy Conduct of our Leaders on each ſide be prevented. The Intereſt of a whole Province, and the Lives of his Majeſty's Subjects, are not Toys, or Matters to be trifled with. Many of our common People are mightily infatuated with the horrid Alarms we have heard; and we ſtill hope they have been wrong repreſented. The chief Purport of this ſmall Petition, being to know whether your Excellency will hear our Petition or no: We hope for a ſpeedy and candid Anſwer. In the mean Time, your humble Petitioners ſhall remain in full Hopes and Confidence of having a kind Anſwer.

And as in duty bound ſhall ever pray, &c.

Great Almance Camp, May 16, 1771.

IN Anſwer to your Petition, I am to acquaint you that I have ever been attentive to the true intereſt of this Country, and to that of every Individual reſiding within it; lament the fatal Neceſſity to which you have reduced me, withdrawing yourſelves from the Mercy of the Crown and the Laws of your Country, to require you who are aſſembled as Regulators, to lay down your arms, ſurrender up the outlawed Ringleaders, and ſubmit yourſelves to the Laws of your Country, and then reſt on the lenity and mercy of Government: By accepting Terms in one Hour from the delivery of this Diſpatch you will prevent effuſion of Blood, as you are at this Time in a ſtate of War and Rebellion againſt your Country, and your Laws.

To the people now aſſembled in Arms, who ſtyle themſelves Regulators. }

LEGHORN, April 12.

THE day before yeſterday was brought into our port a French ſhip which the Ruſſians had taken, under the pretext that ſhe was carrying to Conſtantinople the merchandizes with which ſhe was laden; and in a few days her cargo will be ſold.

Genoa, (in Italy) April 20. The ſmall Council of this Republic has balotted ſeveral times to chuſe two perſons to compleat the ſix, out of which the Great Council was to chuſe one, to fill up the vacant dignity of Doge. On the 15th inſtant, they ballotted twice; and Marcello Durazzo, and Sig. Jean Baptiſte Cambiaſo, appeared to have a legal number of votes; and, on the 16th inſtant, the Great Council met, and made choice of Sig. Jean Baptiſte Cambiaſo.

Berlin, (in Germany) April 30. Laſt Sunday the different regiments which compoſe this garriſon marched out of town, and were exerciſed by his Pruſſian Majeſty, in the preſence of the King of Sweden, and of his Brother Prince Frederick Adolphus, who both expreſſed great admiration at the celerity and exactneſs with which the troops performed their various exerciſes and evolutions.

Petersburg, (in Ruſſia) April 12. We are equipping, with great activity, a new ſquadron for the Archipelago. It will ſail in the courſe of this Summer.

Temeſwaer, (in Hungary) April 18. The Ottoman army is actually on its march towards the enemy, and is 150 000 ſtrong. Huſſey Bey, Pacha of Romelia, commands the advanced guard, which conſiſts of a body of 30 000 men, as well Albanians as Boſniacs. The Grand Viſir is advancing by the way of Kirkel, with the grand army and the artillery, which is very numerous. He has already traced out and fortified a camp between Bazargic and Siliſtrie, from whence he intends to carry on its operations againſt the Ruſſians.

Warſaw, (in Poland) April 26. Prince Dolgorucki, Commander of the ſecond Ruſſian army, is preparing for the ſiege of Oczakow, and for the conqueſt of Crimean Tartary. The Ruſſian ſquadron will attempt to force the Dardanelles, upon the arrival of Count Alexis Orlow.

Otranto, (in Italy) April 10. Letters from Raguſa mention, that the Montenegrins have recommenced their operations againſt the Turks.

LONDON, May 11.

Yeſterday the Hon. Henry St. John kiſſed his Majeſty's hand, on being appointed one of the Grooms of the Bed Chamber to his Majeſty, in the room of the late Col. Nugent. As did Sir Ralph Payne, on being appointed Governor of one of the Leward Iſlands.

Lord Sandwich, Firſt Lord of the Admiralty, viſited the dockyard and ſhipping at Deptford yeſterday. He was attended by ſeveral other Lords, and the Commiſſioners of the Navy. This day his Lordſhip will viſit Woolwich yard, and to morrow he will go on board the yatch in the river to viſit Sheerneſs and Chatham.

When the ſhipping and fortifications ſhall have been reviewed by Lord Sandwich, it is ſaid they will be repaired, and put into the beſt ſtate of defence.

It is ſaid the Common Council of Mr. Wilkes's Ward will make him a preſent of a fine chariot, and a pair of horſes, if he ſhould be choſen Sheriff for the year enſuing.

On Tueſday laſt ſeven ragged fellows were poſted in Guildhall at the time that the Court of Aldermen met. Mr. Townſend and Mr. Sawbridge came together; ſo ſoon as they entered the Hall, one of the ſeven cried out—"No deſerters, no deſerters." Another of them cried—"Damn the Conſtitutional Club." Mr. Sawbridge ſtopped ſhort, and ſeeing no perſons in the Hall but theſe ſeven in a huſtle, he counted them with his finger, and ſmiling ſaid,—"Hey day! what only ſeven of you, and in ſuch a ragged plight! Mr. Wilkes ſhould take more care of your cloathing, when he ſends you of ſuch errands; his French ſervants have better liveries."

A letter from Copenhagen ſays, "Our King gains upon the hearts of his People, approaching to adoration. His whole ſtudy ſeems bent towards making them a happy nation. He ſeems to bid fair to realize the idea of a Patriot King. As Princes are but a ſort of Truſtees for the People, and are poſſeſſed of the means to make them happy, it is matter of wonder that ſo few ſhould have the inclination."

They write from Vienna, that though the preparations for the opening the campaign are continued with the ſame expedition, and artillery and warlike ſtores daily ſent off for Hungary yet no time is mentioned for the Emperor's departure. This makes many people imagine, that his Imperial Majeſty will not fix the time 'till after the arrival of a Courier from Prince Lobkowitz at Peterſburg.

Private letters from Vienna mention, that an interview is propoſed to take place this Summer between their Sovereign and the King of Pruſſia.

A private letter from Rotterdam, received by the laſt mail, mentions the arrival of the Earl of Bute in that City, on his way to England; and that he propoſed to come over in the next packet. It is added, that his Lordſhip is extremely weak, is unable to ſtir out of his apartment, & eats nothing but milk and vegetables.

A Correſpondent obſerves, that the clamour made about a mob being hired to huzza a great Perſonage, is not an unprecedented meaſure, but was frequently done in both the late reigns; and that the then Duke of Newcaſtle was well known to have hired and headed mobs in behalf of thoſe Monarchs on ſeveral occaſions.

We are informed that the buſineſs relative to the impriſonment of the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver in the Tower, on which two eminent Council are employed, will come on before the Common Council, at Guildhall, on Wedneſday next.

Extract of a letter from Vienna, April 27.

"A report prevails here, that the Emperor has declared to the foreign Miniſters, That he cannot look with an indifferent eye on the great advantages which the Ruſſians have gained over the Ottomans; and that he is reſolved to make uſe of his forces to oppoſe the paſſage of the former over the Danube, ſhould they attempt it to augment their conqueſts; that in conſequence he has ſent Prince Lobcowitz to Peterſburg to inform the Empreſs of this reſolution; and that if her anſwer which is expected the 20th of next month, ſhould not be conformable to his expectation, he will immediately order his troops to prevent the Ruſſians from paſſing the Danube."

Yeſterday a remarkable cauſe was determined in the King's Bench in favour of a Merchant, who had demands on a perſon protected by a foreign Ambaſſador, that no perſon not being a real ſervant brought over with the Ambaſſador, but having procured his protection.——Of all the cauſes determined within theſe 20 years, perhaps no one is of more importance than the preſent, hardly excepting that of General Warrants. The power of defrauding the Engliſh in this and many other cauſes, is too frequently lodged in the hands of foreigners, but it is hoped there never will be wanting men of ſpirit to aſſert their rights, and that this cauſe, and a former one in the year 1754, when B——ti's protection was taken off by an Engliſhman's application, will ſhew that Foreigners can never injure us with impunity.

Yeſterday at the Seſſions at Guildhall the trial of Mr. Witham, the Meſſenger, for an aſſault on Mr. Miller, the Printer, was put off, on account that Mr. Serjeant Glynn (retained for the Proſecutor) could not attend.

According to letters from Vienna, a ſecret treaty is ſaid to be now on the tapis between the Emperor and Court of Verſailles.

It is ſaid, that laſt night at Almack's, there were between 30,000l. and 40,000l. won and loſt.

Yeſterday ſome intereſting diſpatches arrived at the Secretary of State's Office, from the Court of Berlin.

It was rumoured this morning, but we know not on what foundation, that the Chevalier D'Eon was lately ſeen at Calais under a ſtrong guard.

We are informed that there are 60,000 l. and upwards, to ſettle upon the Policies relative to the Chevalier D'Eon.

Witham, the Meſſenger, it is ſaid, has made an affidavit that he intended no aſſault againſt Mr. Miller, and that every thing he did was as an officer of the Houſe of Commons, acting under their directions, & in conformity to their orders.

May 18. Yeſterday public notice was given in the drawing room at St. James's that her Majeſty would appear no more there till after her lying in.

The ſame day Lord Camden was at court and ſtayed for ſome time.

We hear that yeſterday a paper containing treaſonable matter, was ſent to the right hon. the Lord Mayor, and his Lordſhip immediately tranſmitted the ſame to one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State.

It is ſaid the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor is ſo far recovered of the gout as to entertain hopes of being capable to reſume the functions of his high office next monday at the Manſion Houſe.

Preparations are making at Lord Bute's houſe in South Audley ſtreet Groſvenor Square, for his reception, he being expected in town by the 29th inſtant. Part of his baggage is already arrived.

May 21. The Marchioneſs of Rockingham lies dangerouſly ill at his Lordſhip's houſe in Groſvenor ſquare, attended by Doct. James and other phyſicians.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, May 14.

"According to letters from Madrid, the King of Spain is firmly reſolved, and invariably determined to effect, let the conſequence be what it will, the ſuppreſſion of the ſociety of Jeſuites; in order to which his Catholic Majeſty has ſent a new order to Mr. Azpuru his ambaſſador reſident at Rome to inſiſt on and labour the point moſt ardently with the pope for the diſſolution of that pernicious ſociety.

"We are informed that the averſion of the Spaniſh Monarch to the Jeſuites is increaſed ſince a farther and more ſcrupulous ſearch has lately been made in the houſes which theſe ſons of Loyola poſſeſſed in Spain; whereby it was diſcovered that theſe hypocrites had concealed to the value of near 70 millions of piaſtres, and many papers of importance."

It is ſtrongly reported that Lord Bute landed at Dover yeſterday morning; and that he is expected at his houſe in South Audley Street this day.

May 23. A Man in Office, whoſe letter is dated St. James's May 21, ſays, "you may aſſure the public Lord North will moſt certainly be out of office before the 24th of June next. He knows it, and is buſy in providing for all his poor relations.—The King has come into the meaſure at expreſs requeſt of all his ſervants, who can no longer bear his brutality and ſhameleſs capacity."

The Head-dreſſes of the Ladies in the Year 1771, is ſo enormouſly high, that a plan is ſaid to be in agitation to raiſe the roofs of the hackney coaches to prevent the ladies being incumbered in riding.

The Right. Hon. the Lord Mayor has but the ſlighteſt relict of the gout in his left hand, and yeſterday rode on horſeback.

The Britiſh Court, on the 23d of May, went into Mourning for his Royal Highneſs Francis Xavier, Infant of Spain, lately deceaſed.

A letter from Bergen, in Northway, April 26, ſays, "A fire broke out here the 2d inſt. which laid the moſt opulent and extenſive quarter of the City in aſhes. The damage is computed from 100,000l. to 150 000l. ſterling; the number of houſes burnt, beſides warehouſes is reckoned 120."

Extract of a Letter from Paris, April 20.

"There are great doings here in the political way. On Saturday there was a ſecond Bed of Juſtice at Verſailles. The King appointed the Members of this great Council in the place of the Parliament of Paris, which is now entirely diſſolved. The Duc D'Aiguillon is Miniſter for foreign affairs. There were none of the Princes of the Blood, except the Count de la Marche, at Verſailles on Saturday. They had all however been ſummoned; and not appearing, they are henceforth forbid the Court. All the Peers preſent, it is ſaid, adhered to the proteſt of the Duc de Uze's, the oldeſt Peer in France. The Princes, of the Blood, who, as I have ſaid, were not at Verſailles, gave in their proteſt at Paris, to the Greffier or Clerk of the Parliament. A thouſand things beſides are ſaid, but this is enough to ſhew you the diſſenſions in this country."

The following is Mr Wilkes's Anſwer to the Addreſs of the Grand Jury of the County of Carmarthen, in South Wales

Princes court, May 4. 1771.

"Gentlemen,

"THE very honourable mark of the approbation of the Grand Jury of the County of Carmarthen, which I received from Watkin Lewis, Eſq; fills me with gratitude. My poor ſervices are overpaid when I am thanked in ſo polite a manner by thoſe who are themſelves diſtinguiſhed by an ardent zeal for Liberty, and by the moſt noble efforts for its preſervation, againſt the common enemies of our excellent Conſtitution.

"The conduct of the preſent venal Aſſembly at Weſtminſter, continues to ſpread horror through the Nation. We have ſcarcely a Right which they have not invaded. Without any account they have voted away the property of the People, to diſcharge a long arrear of civil liſt debts, contracted for purpoſes ſubverſive of parliamentary Independency. They have violated the Rights of Election, uſurped the legal Powers of Juries, impriſoned our Fellow-Subjects, under the pretence of their Privileges contrary to Law, refuſed even to inquire into fouleſt Murders, becauſe perpetrated by the connivance, at leaſt, of Adminiſtration; and at length proceeded to the mad violence of erazing a judicial Record, in open contempt and defiance of the firſt principles of juſtice. This laſt odious act of their tyranny, more ſuited to the meridian of France than of England, will, however, be rendered entirely ineffectual by the firm and upright conduct of the Magiſtrates; and I am ſure that the Laws will always find two intrepid Guardians in the Gentlemen who have now the honour of ſuffering impriſonment for a great public cauſe.

"As to myſelf, the only appeal I ſhall make for the truth and validity of my declarations, is the integrity and conſiſtency of my future conduct. By that moſt infallible teſt I deſire to be judged; and I truſt it will always confirm the favourable opinion which your obliging partiality entertains of Gentlemen,

Your moſt reſpectful and obedient humble Servant, JOHN WILKES."

From a late Britiſh MAGAZINE.

On the epidemical Madneſs of the Times.

IT is very manifeſt, we are all of us under the influence and government of a woman. Do not imagine, Sir, I ſquint at Carlton-houſe. I think no ſuch thing; I mean under the influence and management of Madam Luna. It is a mad world we live in, and we are all mad in it; and though my reſidence is not at preſent in the manſion-houſe of Moorfields, yet I candidly confeſs to you, Sir, I am a downright lunatic; but mad as I am, I will undertake to prove, that every mortal elſe, from the K— to the cobler, is ſo too. You will perceive I am no party man; neither for or againſt the miniſtry, as I think both ſides are mad. The ins are mad at the oppoſition, and the outs are mad to get into their places. Is not the K— mad to quarrel with his people? Lords and Commons are mad after places and penſions, and biſhops are mad after tranſlations. The plump dean is mad after pluralities, and the lean curate is mad for meat to fill his belly. The formal phyſician is mad for his fee, and the patient is mad in ſending for him. Every lawyer is mad to be Lord High Chancellor, and every ſoldier to be a ſtaff officer. Citizens and tradeſmen are mad after the faſhions and follies of the court, after keeping coaches, country houſes, and neglecting their buſineſs; and all the common people are mad to live as high and luxurious as their ſuperiors. Nor are women leſs lunatics than men.—Maidens are mad after huſbands, wives are mad to get rid of thoſe they already have, and widows are ſtarkſtaring mad for a ſecond. And now, Sir, let us wind up our bottom, by concluding with ourſelves. We writers are undoubtedly mad in producing ſuch miſerable ſtuff, as few will read, and none regard; and you printers are certainly mad in publiſhing it.

St. CHRISTOPHER's, May 2.

By a ſloop from Porto Rico we learn, that a veſſel had lately arrived there from Cadiz with an account that the King and Royal Family had removed from Madrid to Seville; that they were ſtill buſy in repairing the fortifications in the different parts of that kingdom, manning their ſhips of war, and compleating the troops, notwithſtanding the reports of an accommodation with the Court of Great Britain; that general O'Reily, with 15 ſail of the line and ſome troops, were to ſail in a few days after the veſſel left Cadiz, for Porto Rico. The above ſloop alſo brings intelligence, that the greateſt preparations for a vigorous defence were making at Porto-Rico, in caſe they ſhould be attacked by the Engliſh.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.

"We hear from N. Carolina, that an Officer of repute, in the Governor's Army, relates the following Circumſtance, as Matter of Fact: That after ſeveral Meſſengers had paſſed between the Regulators and Governor, and the Time allotted being almoſt, though not quite, expired; when one of the Regulators, who had waited on the Governor, and received for Anſwer—That he would not have any Thing further to ſay to them, unleſs they delivered up their Ringleaders, laid down their Arms, &c. with which Meſſage he was returning to his diſtreſſed Brethren; when an Officer ſaid to the Governor, that he tho't, that the Meſſage the Man was carrying, would only put the Regulators on their Guard, and give his Excellency more Trouble: on which the Governor told the Officer to call the Meſſenger back. The Officer obeyed, but the Meſſenger refuſed; on which his Excellency called to him, and told him he ſhould be ſhot if he did not return: The Man returned for Anſwer, that he ſhould deliver his Meſſage, and kept on his Way, when he was fired at, ſhot through the Back and killed on the Spot. He immediately told his Aid de Camp to order the Captain of the Artillery to fire; but the Captain anſwered, it was a Thing of Conſequence, and would not fire without the Governor's written and perſonal Orders: Upon this the Governor came up and gave Orders, and the dreadful Slaughter began, while the Regulators were ſtill in Council and Numbers were killed by the firſt Diſcharge of the Cannon, before they expected it, or the Hour allowed them, by the Governor, was expired."

NEW-HAVEN, July 26.

A few Days ago a Letter from the notorious Richard Steel (now in Fairfield Goal, and who is to be tried for his Life for Burglary at the next Superior Court) directed to a Woman belonging to Milford, named Alling was intercepted, the Contents of which was to deſire her to be out of the Way at the Time of his Tryal, ſhe being the principal Witneſs againſt him;—but to prevent her Eſcape ſhe was laſt Evening committed to the Goal in this Town; not being able to procure Bail.

By the NEW-LONDON POST.

New-London, July 19.

Laſt Friday Night came to Town from Philadelphia, Mr. Jaſon Cheſter of Groton, late Mate of the Sloop Fancy, Capt. Richard Hubbard, owned by Mr. Richard Alſop, of Middletown; which veſſel ſailed from this Port the 19th Dec. laſt, bound to the Weſt Indies with a cargo of Horſes, and on the 25th of the Month in lat 36 long 63, in a moſt violent gale of Wind the Veſſel overſet, and while they were cutting away the Maſt a Sea ſtruck the Veſſel which ſwept the Deck of every Thing thereon, filled her with water, and waſhed every Perſon overboard, when the Capt. and ſuper cargo (Mr. Samuel Farnſworth of Hartford) and five of the People were all drowned, but the Mate and two of the Hands named —— Gilbert and Joſhua Taylor, both of Eaſt Haddam, got on board again, and ſecured themſelves on the Bowſprit; three Days after this a Schooner hove in Sight, and beat the whole Day to get to them, but the Wind being ſmall they at Night ſtood from them, tho' within a Mile of each other. On the 1ſt Day of Jan. they were all waſhed off the Bowſprit by a Sea, when Gilbert was drowned, the other two again ſecured themſelves on the Bowſprit, and on the 2d of Jan. Taylor, thro' Hunger, Fatigue, and Deſpair grew delirious, when Cheſter at Night ſecured him with a Rope, but the next Morning he untied himſelf, while Cheſter was aſleep, who was waked by his falling into the water when he was drowned. About 6 Hours after Taylor's death, a Snow from Philadelphia, Capt. Dean bound to Liſbon, was diſcovered by Cheſter in a direct Courſe for him, but when at about a League Diſtance ſhe tacked and ſtood from him, and after an Hour or Two ſhe tacked and ſtood for him and came within a Mile, when the Snow was again putting about to leave him but providentially one of the Hands at that Inſtant, diſcovered him, when a Boat was ſent and took him on Board. Cheſter was ſo weak that he was not able to ſtand for a Month, and it is owing to the kind Uſage and prudence of Capt. Dean, under God, that he recovered; great Part of his Cloths were waſhed off his Back and his Fleſh much chafed and worn off. The Day after the Veſſel foundered they got a Caſk of Water out off the Hold, which two Days after was carried off by a Sea; they alſo got ſome Pork which floated out of the Fore peak.

PORTSMOUTH, July 12.

We hear from Damiſcotte, that about three Weeks ago, three Men being in a Canoo, fiſhing, about half a mile from Shore, a large Shark came along ſide, after going ſeveral Times round the Canoo, came up and took the man ſtanding in the middle, overboard, bit him in two Pieces and ſwallowed both Parts; afterwards came up to the Canoo again when the other two, being greatly terrified, hove over all their Fiſh, and laid themſelves down on the Bottom, on which the Shark made towards a Boat, lying at a little diſtance, and luckily one of the People had a Gun, and on the Shark's coming up along Side, ſhot him inſtantly dead. They afterwards towed him on ſhore, opened him, and took out the two Parts of the Man, and buried them. He left a ſorrowful Widow and three ſmall Children to lament his unhappy Death.

A Very malignant putrid Fever has for ſome Time paſt much prevailed in this town; about 150 Perſons, chiefly Children, having had it in the Courſe of a few Months; to a conſiderable Proportion of whom it has proved fatal. More eſpecially of late its Malignity having very much increaſed. And in one Family in particular (Mr. Benjamin Wadſworth's) five children out of Six have died of it in the ſhort ſpace of a Week; the only one ſurviving being now dangerouſly ſick.

This Fever ſeems to differ from what has been uſually called the Scarlet Fever only in point of Malignity; the Appearances in thoſe who have it favourably being in all Reſpects the ſame.

It is remarkable that though it has made its Appearance in every Part of this Town, ſcarce a Family or Perſon in any of the neighbouring Towns have as yet been viſited with it.

POET'S CORNER.

The FALLEN ANGEL.

SOme mirthful lads, the other day,
A fancy took to act a play.—
Each choſe the part that pleas'd him beſt.
Young Phaeton too, amongſt the reſt,
Choſe one:—he long'd to repreſent
A meſſenger from heaven ſent,
As he came ſailing through the air,
His heavenly errand to declare,
(Whether on purpoſe, or by chance,
Is no material circumſtance)
O ſad diſaſter! the machine
The hero was ſupported in,
Crack'd on a ſudden from above,
And did irregularly move.
Afraid of what might be th' event
Of ſuch unlucky accident,
The angel cries, "G-d d-n you all!
"Take care, or elſe, by G-d I fall."
Juſt as he ſaid, it came to paſs;
And down he fell upon his a—
Which having ſcratch'd, byG-d he ſwore,
He'd never be an angel more.

A Defence of the Princeſs Dowager of WALES.
From the PARLIAMENTARIAN'S Letters.

AS to coupling the word Junto with the deſignation of Carlton houſe, it is not poſſible for malice itſelf to imagine a more cruel injuſtice to that unfortunate Princeſs; nor a more ignominious inſult to the Sovereign himſelf, who, for his moſt natural and exemplary affection, and dutifulneſs to one of the tendereſt of mothers, might have expected from his people, even if his filial piety had been carried to exceſs, a leſs, ſevere puniſhment than, in his own capital, to receive ſuch brutal outrages, ſuch perſonal indignities, as muſt give the juſteſt concern to every Briton who has but a human heart.

Nor is the caſe of the princeſs Dowager leſs hard, who owes the barbarous treatment which ſhe has undergone, principally to the three following cauſes, two of which do infinite honour to her heart, and the other will cover with ſhame and confuſion the original authors of her perſecution, when truth and time ſhall have diſſipated the illuſions of calumny and party rage.

Firſt, That boundleſs reſpect of hers for the memory of her deceaſed huſband, which unhappily led her to continue that favour and confidence which, in his life-time, he had ſhewn for a man, the choice of whom, moſt undoubtedly, did no great honour to his diſcernment; and than whom, it is demonſtrable, that there could not exiſt, on earth, one who leſs deſerved, eſpecially from that Princeſs, that continuance of a regard of which the motive was ſo perfectly honourable.

Secondly, Her exceſſive fondneſs for her children, which in quality of an exceſs is ſo far a fault of that amiable nature, as could never juſtly provoke the inhuman indignities of which it has been made one of the pretexts: A fault too, which has, in ſome meaſure, carried its own puniſhment with it, to the great triumph of ſuch as take an infernal delight in the tortures of any object whom they have once begun to hate, eſpecially without reaſon; whoſe agonies of grief, and diſtreſs of mind, they exultingly enjoy, and in whoſe heart they ſeem pleaſed with twiſting the daggers, which a moſt cowardly Ruffian aſſaſſination of a character will have ſtruck to it.

Thirdly, It is well known that every Sovereign of Great Britain has of late been even ſyſtematically conſidered as the mere tool, the legal property of whatſoever Miniſtries, Juntos, or parties, could get poſſeſſion of his authority for their own uſe and diſpoſal. Thence it was that many, who agreed in nothing elſe, agreed in their jealouſy of an influence, which they apprehended might interfere with their projects of tyranny over him. Thence their black ungrateful, and too ſucceſsful, ſcheme of broaching, adopting, and propagating thoſe execrable falſities, which a too credulous multitude have been made to ſwallow implicitly, while the Authors of them have been pluming themſelves in keeping up the manly ſpirit of affronting a helpleſs woman, a foreigner, a Princeſs, the mother of our King, and, above all, perfectly innocent, having never, in her life, offended them, or the nation: One, in ſhort, againſt whom they ſeem to cheriſh the more unrelenting a rancour, on the horrid principle of deteſting thoſe whom one has injured, "Odiſſe quos laeſeris."

But certainly the great and noble cauſe of liberty, the genuine ſpirit of patriotiſm, muſt much diſdain a recourſe to ſuch poiſoned arms; or to ſtoop to take the loweſt kennels of ſcandal for dirt to throw at a character which, for many reaſons, deſerved the higheſt reſpect; and eſpecially that protection of all generous and noble-minded Britons, to which the atrocious indignities that have been heaped upon her, can be only a recommendation and engagement the more.

In the mean while, none are more intereſted to encourage this vulgar error of a ſuſpicion of undue influence from the Soverign's mother, than thoſe precious Cabinet Confidents the Junto, whoſe load of juſt blame that error ſerves to lighten, by making a very innocent perſon ſhare it with them. They deſire no better. Poſſibly this has been the principal reaſon of their faintneſs in her defence. At leaſt from both their abſent patron and them, the moſt virulent abuſe of her is not what has met with the leaſt reward: Perhaps this was their manner of expreſſing their ſenſibility to what ſhe was actually ſuffering, for being imagined to ſupport and favour them: While nothing is more certain than that their meanneſſes, their blunders, their iniquities, have been all their own; and great pity it were to rob them of any part of the glory of them."

From the LONDON CHRONICLE. May 14

To Mr. JOHN WILKES.

SIR,

YOU have ſaid, "the public have a right to truth, and every impoſition on mankind ought to be detected and expoſed." I am not entirely of that opinion: I think there are certain ſeaſons when ſome particular truths ought to be with held; and my lips ſhould have been for ever cloſed on the ſubject of your real character and conduct, if you could by any motives have been perſuaded, or by any art or contrivance been compelled, to continue a voluntary or involuntary inſtrument of good to your country I have long been, with others, ſtruggling to make it your intereſt to be honeſt, and founded all my hopes not on your principle but common ſenſe. At length I deſpair of any good from you, and apprehend much miſchief: I think it therefore my duty to be no longer ſilent; and I come to an explanation without any apprehenſion of diſgrace; becauſe I know that though Wilkes and Liberty may for a while bear down every thing before them in the ſtreet, yet, as far as they are not connected by public principles, they will ſurely be ſeparated in the cloſet. But whatever may be the opinions of any perſons concerning my conduct, I ſhall not alter it; Their uninformed opinions affect me little: I know my own ſituation; I muſt ever remain a poor and a private man, and can never be a candidate for the favour or confidence of the public. The voice of the people is not the voice of God to me, tho' (in the fair meaning of the word people) I have never thought it wrong; but it is the voice within me that ſhall ever be the guide of my actions.

It is not my intention here to open any account with you on the ſcore of private character: In that reſpect the public have kindly paſſed an act of inſolvency in your favour; you have delivered up your all, and no man can fairly now make any demand. I blame your public conduct, and never had a difference with you on any other ſubject: And though it has ſuited your ſelfiſh politics & to inſinuate pretend ſome private pique between us, yet you have not ventured, even anonymouſly to ſuggeſt any particular cauſe of my diſſatiſfaction.

That I may be well underſtood, it is neceſſary to give a ſhort hiſtory of the commencement, progreſs, and concluſion of the intercourſe between us. And this I will begin to do in my next; not for my own juſtification, for I could be well contented to leave each man to this opinion concerning me; but that the people at large, to whoſe ſafety and happineſs it is important, may be better able to form their judgment how far they ought, and how far they ought not, to ſupport you; and that they may perceive your general profeſſions and proteſtations to be like thoſe of laſt Wedneſday's ſpeech, equally calculated to miſlead and impoſe, and to which every particular act as well of your oppoſition, as of his government, is a flat contradiction.

JOHN HORNE.

LONDON, May 14.

Extract of a Letter from Danſe in Scotland, MAY 2. "The following odd affair has lately happened in this town. One William Rutherford a Taylor, and juſt out of his time, married a young woman, who lived a ſervant with a Gentleman, and was thought a great beauty. The Gentleman, with whom ſhe lived, adviſed him to ſet up in buſineſs, and lent him money for that purpoſe. Accordingly he told his wife, yeſterday ſe'nnight that he ſhould, the next morning early, ſet out for Edinburgh, to buy goods at the beſt hand. The wife acquainted the Gentleman with her huſband's intended journey, and he was no ſooner gone, but her gallant was with her. Whether the huſband ſuſpected his wife's fidelity is unknown; however in about an hour he returned and found his wife in the arms of her gallant; at which he was greatly enraged, and vowed he would murder them both; but ſeeing the Gentlemen's breeches lie upon a chair, he ſeized them, and finding a good deal caſh and a gold watch, in the pockets, he marched off with his booty, and has not been heard of ſince. This affair has made ſuch a noiſe in the town, that the Gentleman and the Taylor's wife were obliged to leave the place, and retire into the remote part of the country, where they may indulge their amorous paſſion without notice."

TAken up by the ſubſcriber in Weathersfield on Thurſday morning laſt, a ſorrel Mare, about 7 years old ſhod all round, no brand, about 14 hands high, a blaze in her face, 4 white feet, both paces and trots, but moſt inclines to pace. The owner may have her again, on proving his property and paying charges, by applying to Joſeph Butler.

Jupiter eſt quodcumque vides —— Lucan.
Where e'er you turn your eyes, 'tis God you ſee.

I HAD this morning a very valuable & kind preſent ſent me, of a tranſlated work of a moſt excellent foreign writer, who makes a very conſiderable figure in the learned and Chriſtian world It is intitled, A demonſtration of the exiſtance, wiſdom, and omnipotence of God; drawn from the knowledge of nature, particularly of man, and fitted to the meaneſt capacity by the Archbiſhop of Cambray, author of Telemachus and tranſlated from the French by the ſame hand that Engliſhed that excellent piece This great author, in the writings which he has before produced has manifeſted an heart full of virtuous ſentiments, great benevolence to mankind, as well as a ſincere and fervent piety towards his Creator. His talents and parts are a very great good to the world; and it is a pleaſing thing, to behold the polite arts ſubſervient to religion, and recommending it from its natural beauty. Looking over the Letters of my correſpondents I find one which celebrates this treatiſe, and recommends it to my readers.

SIR. To the GUARDIAN.

I Think I have ſomewhere read, in the writings of one whom I take to be a friend of your's, a ſaying which ſtruck me very much; and, as I remember, it was to this purpoſe: "The exiſtence of a God is ſo far from being a thing that wants to be proved, that I think it the only thing of which we are certain" This is a ſprightly and juſt expreſſion. However, I dare ſay, you will not be diſpleaſed that I put you in mind of ſaying ſomething on the demonſtration of the Biſhop of Cambray. A man of his talents views all things in a light different from that in which ordinary men ſee them; and the devout diſpoſition of his ſoul turns all theſe talents to the improvement of the pleaſures of a good life. His ſtyle clothes philoſophy in a dreſs almoſt poetic; and his readers enjoy in full perfection the advantage while they are reading him, of being what he is. The pleaſing repreſentation of the animal powers in the beginning of his work, and his conſideration of the nature of man with the addition of reaſon in the ſubſequent diſcourſe impreſſes upon the mind a ſtrong ſatisfaction in itſelf, and gratitude towards him who beſtowed that ſuperiority over the brute world. Theſe thoughts had ſuch an effect upon the author himſelf, that he has ended his diſcourſe with a prayer. This adoration has a ſublimity in it beſitting his character, and the emotions of his heart flow from wiſdom and knowledge. I thought it would be proper for a Saturday's paper, and have tranſlated it, to make you a preſent of it I have not as the tranſlator was obliged to do, confined my ſelf to an exact verſion from the original; but have endeavoured to expreſs the ſpirit of it, by taking the liberty to render his thoughts in ſuch a way as I ſhould have uttered them if they had been my own. It has been obſerved, that the private letters of great men are the beſt pictures of their ſouls; but certainly their private devotions would be ſtill more inſtructive, and I know not why they ſhould not be as curious and entertaining.

If you inſert this prayer, I know not but I may ſend you, for another occaſion, one uſed by a very great wit of the laſt age, which has alluſions to the errors of a very wild life, and I believe you will think it written with an uncommon ſpirit. The perſon whom I mean was an excellent writer, and the publication of this prayer of his may be perhaps ſome kind of antidote againſt the infection in his other writings. But this ſupplication of the Biſhop has in it a more happy and untroubled ſpirit; it is (if that is not ſaying ſomething too fond) the worſhip of an angel concerned for thoſe who had fallen, but himſelf ſtill in the ſtate of glory and innocence. The book ends with an act of devotion to this effect.

"O my God, if the greater number of mankind do not diſcover thee in that glorious ſhow of nature which thou haſt placed before our eyes, it is not becauſe thou art far from every one of us. Thou art preſent to us more than any object which we touch with our hands; but our ſenſes, and the paſſions which they produce in us, turn our attention from thee. Thy light ſhines in the midſt of darkneſs, but the darkneſs comprehends it not. Thou, O Lord, doſt every where diſplay thyſelf. Thou ſhineſt in all thy works, but art not regarded by heedleſs and unthinking man The whole creation talks aloud of thee, and echoes with the repetitions of thy holy name. But ſuch is our inſenſibility, that we are deaf to the great and univerſal voice of nature. Thou art every where about us, and within us; but we wander from ourſelves, become ſtrangers to our own ſouls and do not apprehend thy preſence. O thou who art the eternal fountain of light and beauty, who art the ancient of days without beginning, & without end; O thou who art the life of all that truly live, thoſe can never fail to find thee, who ſeek for thee within themſelves. But, alas! the very gifts which thou beſtoweſt upon us, do ſo employ our thoughts, that they hinder us from perceiving the hand which conveys them. We live by thee, and yet we live without thinking on thee. But, O Lord, what is life, in the ignorance of thee? A dead unactive piece of matter, a flower that withers, a river that glides away a palace, that haſtens to its ruin; a picture made up of fading colours, a maſs of ſhining ore, ſtrike our imaginations, and make us ſenſible of their exiſtence. We regard them as objects capable of giving us pleaſure not conſidering that thou conveyeſt through them all the pleaſure which we imagine they give us. Such vain empty objects that are only ſhadows of being, are proportioned to our low and grovelling thoughts. That beauty which thou haſt poured out on thy creation, is as a veil which hides thee from our eyes. As thou art a being too pure and exalted to paſs through our ſenſes, thou art not regarded by men, who have debaſed their nature, and have made themſelves like the beaſts that periſh So infatuated are they, that notwithſtanding they know what is wiſdom and virtue, which have neither ſound, nor colour, nor ſmell, nor taſte, nor figure, nor any other ſenſible quality; they can doubt of thy exiſtance becauſe thou art not apprehended by the groſſer organs of ſenſe. Wretches that we are! we conſider ſhadows as realities, and truth as phantom. That which is nothing, is all to us; and that which is all appears to us nothing. What do we ſee in all nature but thee, O my God! Thou, and only thou appeareſt in every thing. When I conſider thee O Lord, I am ſwallowed up and loſt in contemplation of thee. Every thing beſides thee, even my own exiſtance, vaniſhes, and diſappears in the contemplation of thee. I am loſt to myſelf, & fall into nothing when I think on thee. The man who does not ſee thee, has beheld nothing; he who does not taſte thee, has a reliſh of nothing. His being is vain, and his life but a dream. Set up thyſelf, O Lord that we may behold thee. As wax conſumes before the fire, and as the ſmoke is driven away; ſo let thine enemies vaniſh out of thy preſence. How unhappy is that ſoul, who, without the ſenſe of thee, has no God, no hope, no comfort to ſupport him! But how happy the man who ſearches, ſighs, and thirſts after thee! But he only is fully happy on whom thou lifteſt the light of thy countenance, whoſe tears thou haſt wiped away, and who enjoys in thy loving kindneſs the completion of all his deſires. How long how long, O Lord, ſhall I wait for that day, when I ſhall poſſeſs, in thy preſence, fulneſs of joy, and pleaſure for evermore? O my God, in this pleaſing hope, my bones rejoice, and cry out, Who is like unto thee! My heart melts away, and my ſoul faints within me, when I look up to thee, who art the God of my life, and my portion to all eternity."

Dan'l Lankton

By the Earl of Halifax Packet Boat, Capt. Bolderſon, arrived at New York from Falmouth, on Sunday Morning laſt, there is the following Advices.

LONDON, June 7.

The beginning of laſt month there arrived at Madrid no fewer than ten expreſſes from Verſailles in one day.

The King was ſent for from his palace about 20 miles from Madrid, and the Grand Council continued ſitting all day.

The next morning a report was current through Madrid that his Catholic Majeſty gave orders for fifteen thouſand infantry, and four thouſand horſe to prepare themſelves for ſetting out for France with the utmoſt expedition, to prevent a revolution in that kingdom.

June 6. Yeſterday morning at half an hour paſt one o'clock her Majeſty was taken in labour notice of which was immediately ſent to her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs Dowager of Wales, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Secretaries of State, and the Ladies of the Bed chamber; and a little before ſix o'clock her Majeſty was ſafely delivered of a Prince. This happy event was announced to the Public by the ringing of the bells, hoiſting of flags and firing the Tower guns.

Her Majeſty and the young Prince were yeſterday in the afternoon as well as could be expected.

It is ſaid that a certain great Perſonage is at length come to a reſolution to diſmiſs from his ſervice all ſuch of his ſervants as he finds are grown obnoxious to his people.

It was reported yeſterday that a new treaty of commerce is now upon the tapis between the Courts of Liſbon and London.

A letter from Breſt mentions, that an Engliſhman had been taken into cuſtody there, for making a too minute inſpection into the fortifications and harbour.

May 4. The Death of General Wolfe, a picture at the exhibition of the Royal Academy, by Mr. Weſt, is ſaid to be purchaſed by Lord Groveſnor for 600 guineas a circumſtance highly honourable to the Britiſh artiſts. [Mr. Weſt is a native of Philadelphia.]

Lord Chatham lately went to the exhibition of pictures at the Royal Academy in Pall Mally on purpoſe to ſee Mr. Weſt's celebrated picture of General Wolfe's death; his Lordſhip placed himſelf before the piece for a conſiderable time, and examined it with great attention: Upon retiring he pronounced it well executed upon the whole but thought there was too much dejection not only in the dying hero's face but in the faces of the ſurrounding officers, who he ſaid, as Engliſhmen, ſhould forget all traces of private misfortunes, when they had ſo gloriouſly conquered for their country.

May 23. It is ſaid that the Right Hon. the Earl of Halifax will ſoon reſign as Secretary of State on account of his ill ſtate of health.

We hear that one merchant near the Royal Exchange will loſe upwards of 25,000l by the late failure of a houſe in Holland.

Extract of a letter from the Hague,
MAY 3.

"The kingdom of France is in an abſolute ſtate of confuſion, ſlavery and poverty. All their priſons are full, and their ſhops empty. Their coffee-houſes are full of ſmall politicians, who live upon politics all day, and go to bed at night after having eat a cruſt of bread and drank a glaſs of water. There are continual draughts from theſe coffee-houſes to fill the different priſons. It is no ſmall conſolation for an Engliſhman, that he can cry out when he is hurt; ſhould a Frenchman do it, he would pay dear for his temerity."

May 25. Private letters from Madrid mention, that certain intelligence had been received at Court of a dangerous inſurrection in a principal province of Spain in South-America.

Yeſterday morning a great houſe in the city ſtopped payment.

May 29. Yeſterday morning at ſeven o'clock the Earl of Bute arrived at his houſe South Audley-ſtreet, from aboard.

Yeſterday morning the Earl of Bute received congratulatory compliments from a great number of the Nobility, Foreign Miniſters, &c. at his houſe in South Audley-ſtreet.

May 30. On Saturday night the Earl of Bute paid a viſit to the Princeſs of Wales at Charlton-houſe.

NEW-YORK, Auguſt 1.

We hear, the lateſt Advices from France are, That the Parliament of the Province of Britany, being greatly diſſatisfied at the Meaſures of the French Court, particularly that the Duke of Aiguillon, who for many atrocious Crimes proved againſt him, had been legally condemned to loſe his Head, was not only ſcreened from Puniſhment but favoured by the King and ſuppoſed to be the ſecret Director of his Councils; and that the King perſiſted in refuſing to permit the Sentence to be executed; wherefore the Parliament had paſſed and publiſhed an Order, that all their Members, (eſpecially the Rohan Family, and the Nobility, of which the Prince Soubize, a great Favourite of the King, was the Chief) ſhould immediately leave their Employments at Court, and return home, under penalty of the Forfeiture of their Eſtates: That in order to counteract theſe Proceedings, the King had ſent a new Governor, properly inſtructed to Rennes, the Capital of the Province—That the Inhabitants refuſed to acknowledge or admit him;—that the King to enforce Obedience, had ſent an army of 30,000 Men—That the Army were refuſed Admittance into the City, and oppoſed by the Heat of their Reſentment, fired upon the Army and killed about 200 Men. notwithſtanding which, the Soldiers, convinced that the Cauſe they were ſent to ſupport was unjuſt,—declared their Readineſs to fight againſt the Enemies of their Country, but unanimouſly refuſed to fire upon their Friends and Countrymen, and immediately diſbanded. The Confirmation of this News is impatiently expected.

The following is an Extract of a Letter received laſt Week from a Gentleman in Pennſylvania, who is diſtinguiſhed for an uniform Attention to the true Liberties of his Countrymen. The Reflections he makes muſt convince every ſenſible Perſon the neceſſity of the Meaſures lately purſued by that truly great Character which now preſides over this Province.

"A Kind of internal War is carried on within the Bounds of this Province; which, if not ſpeedily check'd, will have ſerious Conſequences to us, and prove as dangerous as the Regulators of North-Carolina: I mean the Attempt of the Connecticut people, with a ſet of lawleſs Banditti from our Frontiers, to fix a Settlement at Wyoming, on the North Branch of Suſquehannah——There have been frequent Engagements between theſe People and ours, ſome Lives have been loſt, and ſeveral Laws paſſed againſt them. We expect daily to hear of another Engagement, for they are beſieging our People with a large Body.

"It is the Opinion of Folks in this Country, that if ſome Method is not fallen upon of reducing theſe Frontier Rioters to a Submiſſion to Law, that one general Chain will be form'd of them throughout the whole continent, as the Views and Conduct of them all are ſimilar."

BOSTON, Auguſt 1.

On Thurſday laſt came on at the Inferior Court held here, the Trial of the Cauſe between the Hon. James Otis, Eſq; of this Town, and the Hon. John Robinſon, Eſq; one of the Board of Commiſſioners, for aſſaulting, and, with the aſſiſtance of others, dangerouſly wounding ſaid Otis, (as mentioned ſome time ſince) for which the Jury after a fair Hearing, gave in their Verdict £2000 Sterling Damages and Coſt of Court.——Mr. Otis laid his Action at £.3000 and has appealed from the Judgment.

We learn from Quebec, that ſeveral Attempts have lately been made by ſome evil minded Perſons to ſet Fire to that City, particularly in the Night between the 6th and 7th of June laſt in the Lower Town and on the Night following in the Upper Town, which had well nigh ſucceeded: A Reward of Three Hundred Dollars is offered for the Diſcovery and Conviction of the Offenders.

It has been reported in town for a few days paſt that his Excellency Governor Tryon intends a viſit to this metropolis, for the benefit of his health. The congratulating gentry will then have another opportunity to Try on their pens.

It is ſaid, that a certain Governor is hooted at by the boys in the ſtreets of the chief city of his new Government.

We hear from Newbury Port, that laſt Sabbath Se'nnight a child of Mr Halch of that town was baptiſed by the name of Thomas Hutchinſon.

The ſpirit of naming children, &c. after great Folks, prevails ſo much in this and the neighbouring towns, that a Gentleman the other day named a favourite Spaniel puppey of his, TRYON.

NEWLONDON, July 26.

Departed this Life in the firm Hope of bleſſed immortality on Tueſday the 16th Inſtant the Rev'd Ebenezer Devotion the firſt Paſtor of the Third Church in Windham, in the 58th Year of his Age, and 36th of his Miniſtry who lived in good Harmony and Peace with the Church and Society, highly eſteemed by his Acquaintance, and his Death is greatly lamented.

NEW-HAVEN, Auguſt 2.

We have diſagreeable accounts from the country, of great damage being done to the grain, &c. by the late great rains.

STRATFIELD, July 29. Yeſterday, in time of divine ſervice, about a quarter of an hour before twelve, a moſt terrible flaſh of lightening ſtruck the new ſteeple, which was not quite finiſhed, which began on the large ball, ſplit it to pieces, it then went in directions down ſundry of the rafters and ſhivered them, and ſome of the poſts, together with the ſhingles, braces and laths down to the ground—as it approached the lower windows, it ruſhed into the houſe, and killed two men, viz. John Burr, Eſq; and Mr. David Sherman, both of them men of worth and value, one in a public, the other in a private capacity; they have each left a ſorrowful widow and ſmall children. Their remains were this day decently interred, and a ſermon preached by the Rev. Mr Hubbard, of Fairfield, from Pſal. lxiv 5. to a very large aſſembly who appeared ſuitably affected upon this melancholy occaſion.—Theſe perſons were killed as they were ſtanding in their pews cloſe by the poſt of the houſe, near the windows each ſide of the ſteeple—ſundry other perſons were much hurt, but are like to recover. The Rev Mr. Roſs, who was preaching, was partly knock'd down, and much the greater part of the congregation who were in the lower part of the houſe felt a very great ſhock—the report was like that of cannon, only ſharper.—and what ſeems remarkable, there was only that ſingle claſp of loud thunder in this or the adjacent places.

NORTH-HAVEN, July 29. Yeſterday about half an hour after one o'clock there aroſe out of the ſouthweſt a very thick and heavy cloud from which terrible flaſhes of lightening with heavy thunder iſſued with unuſual frequency; eſpecially about 40 minutes after one there were three terrible ſtreams of lightening, with heavy thunder, almoſt one upon the back of the other; the laſt, which was by far the moſt awful, was a ſtream from the northweſt to the ſoutheaſt, which paſſed the vane of the meeting-houſe, (perhaps at about 20 or 30 feet diſtance yet ſo near as to drive it round the ſpindle ſeveral times with great velocity) and pitched into a tree a few feet from the ground, at about 24 rods diſtance. Juſt by this tree ſtood a ſabbath-day houſe, the neareſt corner of which was not more than five feet from the tree. This houſe belonged to Capt. Joſeph Pierpont, who with a number of their brethren and their children were preſent. Five perſons who all ſat upon one bench in the houſe, viz. Mrs. Lydia, the wife of Capt. Pierpont, Mr Abel Brocket, and his wife, Mr. Giles Pierpont, and his wife were all ſtruck with the lightning. Mr Brocket had ſeveral ſmall holes burnt in his ſhirt, about his loins, and was conſiderably burnt himſelf, tho' leſs hurt than any of the others. Mr Pierpont was ſtruck on one ſide, the lightning ran down upon the under ſide of his thigh, and leg, ſing'd off the hair, and burnt the fleſh ſo that it appeared as red as tho' it had been ſcalded. [*] The women were all much more hurt than the men. They were all raiſed up from their ſeats by the force of the lightening, and then fell altogether upon the ſeat, except Mr. Pierpont, who was fixed to his ſeat, and could not move without help. They were in great diſtreſs for breath, and their blood ſeemed to be ſtagnated to a very great degree; and it appeared by bleeding, that there was a very conſiderable ſeperation between the ſerous & globular parts of the blood. They ſhewed ſigns of great diſtreſs at firſt, complained as ſoon as capable of manifeſting their diſtreſs, that they felt as if they were in the fire. The moſt of them are now comfortable, and it is hoped that they will all ſoon recover.——Mr Giles Pierpont had two children with him either in the arms of their parents, or in the arms of ſome of their friends on the ſame ſeat who received no ſenſible harm. The houſe was full of people, but none but thoſe mentioned, who all ſat on one ſeat, received any hurt.

Round the tree ſtruck with lightening there were three horſes and a colt, which were all killed inſtantly upon the ſpot. There were no ſigns that the lightening ever ſo much as touched any part of the ſabbath day houſe, altho' the people in it were ſo much hurt.

HARTFORD, Auguſt 6.

Laſt Friday the people here were ſpectators of a very melancholly ſcene—In the afternoon, after a very ſultry day, a thunder ſtorm ſeemed to be gathering, whereupon the wind, before ſteady and ſtrong at S. in the ſpace of about half an hour veer'd round to every point of the compaſs, whereby a moſt formidable collection of clouds, plentifully charged with electrical fire, was made over our heads, the effects of which were ſoon viſible. A large tree at Mr. Amos Hinſdale's door was ſtruck with the lightning, but little ſhatter'd; alſo the houſe of Mr. Elijah Clap, with no other damage than beating off part of the top of the chimney. But the greateſt fury of the lightning fell on the ſouth meeting houſe, the ſteeple of which it ſtruck, and its principal effects were, that after being conducted by the ſpindle thro' a large ball, and about two feet in length of the maſt, it there broke it off and ſhiver'd it ſeveral feet downwards; it then ſeems to have forſook the maſt and ſhivered to pieces three of the rafters of the ſpire, from which, on the ſouth and eaſt ſides eſpecially, it tore off great part of the boards and ſhingles; it then ſplit three poſts of the balcony; one ſmall part of it then took a pole, that ſupported a winding ſtair-caſe within the ſteeple, and ſhattered it for about 20 or 30 feet, when its force ſeems to have been ſpent. A larger part of it took a main poſt of the ſteeple and houſe, ſplit it from top to bottom, ripped off the caſing, &c. but the largeſt part ſeems (by the effect) to have taken a ſtudd, on the oppoſite ſide to the poſt, and was conducted from ſtudd to ſtudd to the ground, ſhivering them all the way in a moſt ſurprizing manner, ripping off many of the clapboards burſting out a window, and rending off one half a door caſing. Happy was it for the people here, that the exploſion did not happen on the ſabbath, in time of public worſhip, as probably many lives muſt have been loſt: May we be taught to ſing rightly of mercy as well as judgment.

This ſorrowful providence affords another convincing proof of the benefit of iron rods, as conductors of the lightning, againſt which there has been ſo much; I will not ſay reaſoning, but railing; for, tho' the ſpindle went thro' a large wooden ball, and about two feet farther into the maſt, yet both were perfectly unhurt, till we come to the end of the ſpindle, where the maſt is ſnapt off, and the fatal effects begin.

Same day the ſteeple of the Rev'd Dr. Dana's meeting-houſe in Wallingford was ſtruck by lightning, and very much ſhatter'd.

Laſt Saturday a child of Mr. Daniel Brooks of Middletown, fell from a plank into a brook and was drowned.

☞ *Whereas many Gentlemen are enquiring concerning the ſituation, circumſtances, &c of Dartmouth College, this may inform the public, That A Continuation of the Narrative of the Indian Charity-School in Lebanon in Connecticut; From the Year 1768 to the Incorporation of it with Dartmouth-College, and removal and ſettlement of it in Hanover, in the Province of New Hampſhire, 1771 is lately publiſhed, which, it is apprehended will give them all the needful information in the points they may be inquiſitive about. ſeat who received no ſenſible harm. The houſe was full of people, but none but thoſe mentioned, who all ſat on one ſeat, received any hurt. Round the tree ſtruck with lightening there were three horſes and a colt, which were al killed inſtantly upon the ſpot. There were no ſigns that the lightening ever ſo much as touched any part of the ſabbath day houſe, altho' the people in it were ſo much hurt.

HARTFORD, Auguſt 6.

Laſt Friday the people here were ſpectators of a very melancholly ſcene —In the afternoon, after a very ſultry day, a thunder ſtorm ſeemed to be gathering, whereupon the wind, before ſteady and ſtrong at S. in the ſpace of about half an hour veer'd round to every point of the compaſs, whereby a moſt formidable collection of clouds, plentifully charged with electrical fire, was made over our heads, the effects of which were ſoon viſible. A large tree at Mr. Amos Hinſdale's door was ſtruck with the lightning, but little ſhatter'd; alſo the houſe of Mr. Elijah Clap, with no other damage than beating off part of the top of the chimney. But the greateſt fury of the lightning fell on the ſouth meeting houſe, the ſteeple of which it ſtruck, and its principal effects were, that after being conducted by the ſpindle thro' a large ball, and about two feet in length of the maſt, it there broke it off and ſhiver'd it ſeveral feet downwards; it then ſeems to have forſook the maſt and ſhivered to pieces three of the rafters of the ſpire, from which, on the ſouth and eaſt ſides eſpecially, it tore off great part of the boards and ſhingles; it then ſplit three poſts of the balcony; one ſmall part of it then took a pole, that ſupported a winding ſtair-caſe within the ſteeple, and ſhattered it for about 20 or 30 feet, when its force ſeems to have been ſpent. A larger part of it took a main poſt of the ſteeple and houſe, ſplit it from top to bottom, ripped off the caſing, &c. but the largeſt part ſeems (by the effect) to have taken a ſtudd, on the oppoſite ſide to the poſt, and was conducted from ſtudd to ſtudd to the ground, ſhivering them all the way in a moſt ſurprizing manner, ripping off many of the clapboards burſting out a window, and rending off one half a door caſing. Happy was it for the people here, that the exploſion did not happen on the ſabbath, in time of public worſhip, as probably many lives muſt have been loſt: May we be taught to ſing rightly of mercy as well as judgment.

This ſorrowful providence affords another convincing proof of the benefit of iron rods, as conductors of the lightning, againſt which there has been ſo much; I will not ſay reaſoning, but railing; for, tho' the ſpindle went thro' a large wooden ball, and about two feet farther into the maſt, yet both were perfectly unhurt, till we come to the end of the ſpindle, where the maſt is ſnapt off, and the fatal effects begin.

Same day the ſteeple of the Rev'd Dr. Dana's meeting-houſe in Wallingford was ſtruck by lightning, and very much ſhatter'd.

Laſt Saturday a child of Mr. Daniel Brooks of Middletown, fell from a plank into a brook and was drowned.

POET'S CORNER.

Mr. Watſon,

The following lines were compoſed in a great ſtorm of Thunder and Lightning which happen'd after a great drought in the year 1749. If you pleaſe you may inſert them (at this time) in your Poet's Corner.

THunder and lightning from the ſky,
Diſplay the power and majeſty
Of God our king, whoſe awful voice,
Makes ſinners tremble and rejoice.
Rejoice to ſee the water fall,
Tremble to ſee the fiery ball,
Blazing and ſtreaming to the ground,
And hear the thunder's awful ſound.
If we thus tremble at the dire,
Effect of thunder and the fire,
What ſhall we do when heaven rends,
And Chriſt our glorious judge deſcends?
A greater voice than this we hear,
And firey ſtreams will then appear,
'Twill burn the earth and rend the tombs,
How we ſhall tremble when he comes!
Prepare my ſoul for ſuch a ſight,
Into Chriſt's arms now take your flight,
That he may ſave you from the dire,
Effects of this tremendous fire. T. H.

From TUESDAY, AUGUST 6, to TUESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1771.

From the Pennſylvania Gazette.
Philadelphia County, July 17, 1771.
Meſſieurs HALL and SELLERS,
GENTLEMEN,

Your inſerting in your Gazette the incloſed Extract from a Man of undoubted Character in North Carolina to his Friend here, will be giving the Public the fulleſt Account, that has yet appeared, of the unhappy Difference and Battle between Governor Tryon and a great Number of the People of that Province. I am yours, &c.

Extract of a Letter from a Perſon in Carolina to his Friend in Pennſylvania, dated May 27.

I AM ſorry I have to inform you that our Country and the Governor have come to open War. The Juſtneſs of the Cauſe on the Side of the Country during a conteſt for this year or two paſt, has gained them ſuch a Majority all over this Province, that it was in vain the Governor and officers tried to raiſe the Militia before the laſt Sitting of our Aſſembly, when a Law paſſed under the Title of a Riot Act; whereby, they ſay, the Governor is inveſted with as arbitrary a Power as the King of France has. However that may be, it is Fact, that he has collected out of the meaner Sort, an Army of 1500 or 2000 Men, by Way of enliſting for Bounty Money and high Wages, and Promiſes of equal Share of Plunder; with which Army he is paſſing through the country, deſtroying Houſes, Fields of Wheat, Corn and Orchards, and taking from the Inhabitants all Manner of Proviſions. This Uſage, never heard of in America before ſuddenly raiſed the Country very unanimouſly, who firſt ſurrounded a Party of about 4 or 500, commanded by Col. Waddel, and prevailed on him to retreat, convincing him and his Officers that there was not Occaſion for ſuch hoſtile Proceedings; and a few Days after met the Governor, hoping to prevail with him in the ſame Manner; but he ſoon fired on them, with both great and ſmall Arms, about 15 Minutes after they had his Promiſe of an Hour to conſider of his Terms. The Country, who had not the leaſt Order or Diſcipline, but as every Man had ran together, as it were to quench devouring Flames, the moſt Part without Arms or Ammunition, who fled at the firſt Fire. About 300 ſtood, and returned the Fire for three Quarters of an hour, in which Time the Governor ſtruck his Colours twice, hoiſted a white Flag, and beat a Parley, but the Country, being quite ignorant of any Signals or Terms of War kept a conſtant Firing, as long as their Ammunition laſted, and then left the Ground.

"There were ſeven killed on the Spot, and two more fell, after running ſome Diſtance; eight more are ſince dead of their Wounds, and two or three more not yet out of Danger. The Number of Slain on the Governor's Side is uncertain, as he keeps it as much as poſſible a Secret; but, by the beſt Accounts, it amounted to 27 on the Spot, with a proportionable Number of wounded. The Governor took 20 or 30 Priſoners, one of whom he hanged the next day. The Slain, on the Side of the Country, lay unburied, except two, who were ſtolen away by their Families. The Governor makes all the Advantage he can of this Affair, and it is ſuppoſed aims to have all their Lands forfeited; the Conſequence of this Affair is yet unknown. Numbers are coming in, and ſubmitting to certain Terms, &c. others are ſtanding out, and collecting in bodies, and many People are of opinion, that moſt of the Inhabitants will leave this Province, before they will live under the intolerable Oppreſſion & Slavery that naturally muſt attend a Conqueſt, made by Men of ſuch Principles. "There never was any people more abuſed by Authority than this Country has been, which would be too tedious to relate in a Letter, but in a very ſhort way. The main Subſtance of the Difference was in the Sheriffs* of moſt Counties not having ſettled their Accounts for 8 or 10 Years paſt; nor the Treaſurers having ſettled Accounts with the Public for upwards of 20 Years paſt; ſo that by Computation they were, on the whole, Eighty or One Hundred Thouſand Pounds behind. The honeſt Party in the Adminiſtration, appeared to be too weak to bring theſe over-grown Members to an Account; therefore, to ſtrengthen their Hands, great Part of the Country ſtopped Payment of any Taxes but what were agreeable to Law, and this of Conſequence could not be known, till theſe Public Accounts were ſettled. Next to this the Officers had extorted unlawful Fees, in an unreaſonable Manner, and when the Country proſecuted them, could get no Redreſs, or any Kind of fair Trial, but on the contrary, the Proſecutors were like to be ruined, by Suits commenced againſt them by Officers, for Damages, Scandal, &c. and by the Means of picked Juries, compoſed of the Officers themſelves, who were indicted, and liable to Indictments, ſo that a General Court Writ, againſt ever ſo innocent a Man, became as dangerous and dreadful as a Piſtol clapt to his Breaſt by a Robber, for nothing would ſatisfy but a Surrender of all you poſſeſſed; this cauſed Riots, Tumults, &c.

"In the Aſſembly it was propoſed to ſend a Committee of Enquiry into thoſe Counties where the Tumults happened, but was ſtrenuouſly oppoſed by the Court Party, and put aſide; but in a private Conference among the Members, Mr. Knox, and Mr. Lewis, were appointed, and they rid up to the next General Court, to be held in Rowan County, for the Diſtrict of Saliſbury, when the whole Body of Officers of that Diſtrict, conſcious of their Guilt, and convinced of the upright and good intentions of the Country, came to an amicable and firm Agreement, under Hand and Seal, to refund back all they had extorted & taken contrary to Law, which was to be decided by Arbitrations, unanimouſly choſen by either Side; both Officers and People were heartily ſincere in this Agreement; but the Governor and Officers in the five other Diſtricts of the Province, reſented it in the higheſt Degree, and immediately entered into an Aſſociation to prevent its taking place, by ruſhing up into the Settlements of the Inſurgents, as they call them, with an armed Force, and reſtoring Peace on conſtitutional principles, as the Governor termed it in a Letter to Col. Trohawk; wherein he told him he ſhould ſuffer for entering into that Agreement at the Tribunal of his Country. It is matter of Fact, that the Officers of this Diſtrict had inclined to comply, & make the Country Reſtitution above a Year before this, but were deterred by the Officers of the other five Diſtricts, no Doubt, from a Fear they muſt come to the ſame Juſtice.

"Huſbands, who was a principal Man in proſecuting every legal Method for Juſtice and Redreſs, has been accuſed as Principal in the Acts of Riots, &c. he has been made Priſoner, and ſtood Trial three Times on that Account, and cleared each Time by Proclamation. The Court Party, deſpairing of finding him guilty in the ordinary Courſe of Proceedings, & according to the Engliſh Laws, makes a particular Law for that Purpoſe, to continue one Year, by which Law, without any Precept, or his Knowledge, and unheard, finds a Bill againſt him for a Riot, Aſſault, &c. for which they came with the aforeſaid Army, and deſtroyed his Houſe, Plantation and Goods; for which I ſuppoſe, it is to be granted now that he is guilty in the Eye of that particular Law, though he is really clear, and quite innocent of the Charge. Many others, as well as he, have ſhared the ſame Fate; ſome were 40 Miles diſtant from the Place, at the Time the Crimes laid to their Charge were committed."

LONDON,

May 27. A Nobleman, who lately wrote to Lord Bute on the ſubject of his return, informed his Lordſhip, that the public prints were again preparing to attack him, and that the people of England would never ſuffer him to live among them quietly. "I know that too well, my dear friend, (replied the Earl in his ſucceeding letter,) but ſurely they can have no objection to my dying quietly among them; I deſire no other favour at their hands; though I doubt not, when the rage of party has ſubſided, that they will be convinced I could have no intereſt in being their intentional enemy."

Baron Diede, the Daniſh Miniſter at this Court, is upon the point of a temporary return to Copenhagen, charged, it is ſaid, with a buſineſs of the greateſt importance to the general repoſe of Europe, which is now likely to be diſturbed by the intended partition of a certain northern Republic. When Holland was invaded by the arms of Louis XIV at the concluſion of the laſt century the Prince of Orange who then commanded the Dutch forces, being aſked what he would do when his country was entirely ſubdued, gloriouſly anſwered, "I will die in the laſt ditch." Similar to this it is expected the conduct of Poniatowſki will be, ſince he lately declared, that though he might not live ſo happy, he never would fall a deſpicable Sovereign."

June 1. Some letters from the Hague mention, that the States General have received ſome very important diſpatches from two powerful Courts, the contents of which had thrown them into great conſternation.

Letters from the Continent ſay, that there is not the leaſt probability that an accommodation between the Ruſſians and the Turks will ſpeedily be brought about, as the Empreſs will not give up ſeveral points laid down as the baſis of a pacification, which the Porte looks upon as too humiliating and diſhonourable.

June 4. By private letters from Paris we learn, that the Court finds new, and almoſt inſurmountable difficulties, in their attempt to raiſe the new impoſts; and that the whole Kingdom are upon the point of revolting; ſo that it is generally imagined that the King will at laſt be conſtrained malgre lui to recall the old parliament.

June 5. Her Majeſty's delivery was ſo ſudden, that there was not time to provide any of the great officers of ſtate uſually preſent on ſuch occaſion. Dr. Hunter and ſome German Ladies only were preſent.

June 8. The French intend to ſecure to themſelves the poſſeſſion of Corſica by the following politic, though barbarous plan. They are continually tranſporting new ſettlers thither, and bringing away the natives; ſo that in time the greateſt part of the malcontents will be removed off the iſland, the chiefs ſhut up in the priſons of old France, and the reſt diſperſed through their colonies.

They write from the Hague, that couriers are frequently paſſing between that place and Berlin, in conſequence of an affair of importance now on the carpet between that States General and his Pruſſian Majeſty.

The account in ſome of the papers, of a large body of troops marching from Madrid, to prevent an expected inſurrection in France, is entirely without foundation.

And again he ſaith, "they are ready at all times to give full ſatisfaction to any gentlemen that think fit to inquire into the facts;" but ſtill he dont mean to "take up a controverſy with an anonymous defamer," &c. I aſk Mr. Preſident why he was not ready to give the neighbouring miniſters ſatisfaction, when they came in and humbly requeſted it of him, inſtead of peremptorily denying them any anſwer, and telling them that they might call him rogue, fool, knave, lyar, &c? 'Tis likely Mr. Preſident will call me a lyar as he has Parentes, but as theſe things are not done in a corner, and as the Preſident and corporation (thank God) are ſubject to the aſſembly, there is a time coming when we ſhall ſee whether or not Parentes was right or wrong. I have taken as much pains to inform myſelf in regard to the facts related by Parentes as Parentes did himſelf, and am ſure that he has aſſerted nothing as to ſubſtance, but what is truth, and this I am ready and determined that the aſſembly ſhall be acquainted with the next ſeſſion. We cannot ſuppoſe that ſcholars can be acquainted with ſtate policy or divinity as men that have ſpent their whole time and life in it, but ſtill there is none (I dare ſay) that are ſo ignorant that they cannot taſte, and ſmell, and know when they have victuals enough, and we all know that they give price enough. Right is right, and wrong is wrong; the devils ought to have their due, as well as all wicked men, if the boys have been to blame they ought to be puniſhed, and with ſuch a puniſhment as is adequate to the crime. But not to be killed and murdered, becauſe they will not eat victuals when they cannot get it, nor becauſe they run home to tell their parents that they are abuſed, ſtarved and oppreſſed. It is no ſmall thing to check a young man of a ſprightly genius with an expulſion from college, at the very cloſe of his ſtudies, when his expectations, as well as that of his parents run high. I aſk parents to propoſe this queſtion to themſelves, whether they are willing to ſpend four or five hundred dollars on a child for an education, and have him expelled and branded with eternal infamy to ſupport ſuch a government as obliges them to pay their money for nothing? Again, ſuch puniſhments almoſt univerſally are undoing to youth, it makes them think low and mean of themſelves, keep bad company, and fall into bad practices. However I believe the fact is this, the preſident and corporation mean to make ſuch rules and practices that the public can never come at the knowledge of their proceedings, for it is a manifeſt truth (as Parentes obſerved) that they will not ſuffer any petitions to be made, unleſs liberty firſt obtained. I would not have called it rules and practices if they govern'd by any law: that arbitrio is juſt like the Popes Bull's mandates and abſolutions &c.

Having received a copy of the judgment from one of the ſtudents, for the curioſity of the public I will inſert that part on which the judgment was predicated. "At a meeting of the Preſident and Fellows of Yale College in New-Haven, at the Library April 23. 1771 Whereas Lewis Beebe, John Brown, David Humphry, and David Cloſe, members of this College appear partly by their own confeſſion, and partly by other evidences, to have been the principal actors, adviſers and ringleaders in the late diſturbances and diſorders of college, and did in conſequence of a moſt diſorderly and criminal combination, formed by them, with ſundry other ſtudents rebelliouſly depart and run away from college, on the 13th day of March laſt, in open contempt and defiance of all the laws and authority of College; hereby deſigning and endeavouring as much as in them lay to break up the order and exerciſes of the ſame, practically aſſuming the government of it into their own hands, as if by ſuch diſorderly conduct, they could carry their point (now obſerve well) as they are perſons belonging to the ſenior claſs, 'tis rationally to be preſumed that they were inſtrumental in ſeducing thoſe of the under claſſes into ſimilar diſorderly conduct, and whereas ſuch audacious behaviour (or rather preſumtive behaviour) ſtrikes at the foundation of government ——ſo they were puniſhed on a mere preſumtion it ſeems by their own ſhewing; a fine evidence to kill a man upon! If the corporation are ſuch a reſpectable body as the preſident intimates, they ought not to be beggars to the aſſembly every year, which muſt be the caſe if the aſſembly do not make an alteration in government.——The clergy cry hereſy alway, when the aſſembly talk of government, but I pray the public to hear a word, the ſtudents recite Edwards by order of corporation, and by a vote of corporation Mr. Dickinſon has publiſhed a piece againſt Edwards, I believe they regard power more the hereſy. Moreover one of their own tutors declared at Hartford (at the laſt ſeſſion of the aſſembly) to one of the council, that if the aſſembly did not take college under their protection it was undone. If a ſcholar is bad, vitious and wicked, and will not mind his ſtudies, and becomes irreclaimable he ought to be purged, but to ſkim a claſs becauſe 'tis imagined that there are ſome more influential in endeavouring to get redreſs under an abſolute grievance is unſufferable. The preſent ſenior claſs muſt have been abuſed or elſe they have been the worſt claſs that ever entered college, for out of twenty eight which firſt entered college, there is but twelve that have been examined for a degree. I would have the preſident and tutors prepare to anſwer for their conduct as they were the cauſe of all the diſturbance and wickedneſs, and not charge Parentes with lying, for I know better and ſo do they.

MISERACORDIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Auguſt 1.

Extract of a letter from Fort Chartres.

"One Wood, a ſoldier, in the Royal Regiment of Ireland, was taken priſoner by a party of Pottawatamy Indians, after a moſt gallant reſiſtance: The poor lad was amuſing himſelf with his gun a little way from the fort; a ſavage came up to him with an intention to tomahawk him, but the ſoldier killed him with the load he had in his gun; then a number of about twenty, leaped out of the buſhes to ſurround him; he then took to his heels and loaded with ball as he ran. The Indians finding he out ran them, fired a volley after him, and wounded him; he then took to a tree, and when they ſurrounded him, he ſhot another, but was overpowered and led away in triumph, poor fellow, I ſuppoſe, for a deliberate torture: However, the ſavages acknowledged to the French, on the oppoſite ſide of the river, that they bought his life dearly."

Extract of a Letter from London, June 5 1771.

"Every thing in the political way, remains exactly in the ſame ſituation as when I wrote laſt. If Wilkes is choſen Sheriff next Midſummer Day, as I am apt to think he will, it will ſerve to prolong his political life for ſome time longer. When in office it is expected he will be guilty of ſome extravagance or other, which may tend to undo him; but whether that ſhall happen or not, he is an object highly unworthy any farther conſideration.

I ſaw Dr. Franklin To day. He juſt returned from a little excurſion into the country, and is in perfect health, I hope the time is approaching, when our Miniſtry will have both inclination and leiſure to liſten to his advice. No man hath more ſtudied, and more fully comprehends the true intereſt of both countries, and has more enlarged views of human nature, and the general intereſts of mankind, than he has; no man deſerves better of ſociety; and, of courſe, no man is fitter to be conſulted upon the great objects now in contemplation, and upon the ground of diſpute, which ſtill remains to be adjuſted between us."

NEW-YORK, Auguſt 8.

Laſt Saturday the Brig Lord Hyde, Capt. Shoemaker, arrived here after a paſſage of 32 Days from Madeira; who informs us, that Rear Admiral Rodney with four Ships under his Command arrived at Madeira the 22d of June; and on the 27th ſailed from thence for his Station at Jamaica.

BOSTON, Auguſt 8.

Tueſday laſt, by Farenheits Thermometer, was the hotteſt day we have had for twenty-two years paſt, except one, the Mercury at noon roſe to 91 degrees; the day before it was at 90.

By the late veſſels from Cape Nichola Mole, we learn that on the 9th of July they had at Port au Prince, on Hiſpaniola, another ſevere ſhock of an Earthquake, which deſtroyed the few remaining old houſes, together with ſuch new ones as had been lately erected.—No Lives were loſt at this time, as a ſmall ſhock preceded the large one, the Inhabitants removed from their Houſes at firſt to ſome diſtance.

SALEM, Auguſt 8.

The Beginning of laſt Week a Fiſhing Schooner arrived at Marblehead, having on board 4 Men and 2 lads, who gave an account, that about a Week or Fortnight before they got in, one Saturday Evening, after the Crew had made a Supper of Pork and boiled Dumplins, their Skipper, Mr. ——, and one Ruſſel, died very ſuddenly, the former immediately after Supper, & the latter the next Morning. Although the Men and Lads agreed in the Circumſtances relative to theſe Deaths, yet the Magiſtracy tho't proper to make a legal, particular Enquiry into the affair, which was done laſt Saturday, when it appeared, that Ruſſell, after the Men had finiſhed their Supper, challenged the Skipper, or any other, to drink Bumpers of Rum with him; which being accepted, a Pint Mug was filled, and Ruſſell drank it off, and the Skipper then drank the ſame Quantity: Ruſſel repeated the fatal Draught which compleated a Quart; but before the Skipper had Time to drink his ſecond Draught, he fell, and immediately expired. The Champion dropt very ſoon after, continued in a lethargic State till the next Morning and then died. The 4 Men and 2 Lads agreed to conceal the unhappy Cauſe of theſe Deaths; which they did till examined by Authority.

NEW-LONDON, Auguſt 2.

Laſt Monday arrived here Capt. William Packwood, in 16 Days, from Trinity, in Martinico, at which place it was very ſickly with the Meaſels and Yellow Fever; he loſt Three of his People with the Fever.

Five thouſand troops had arrived there from the Firſt of April to the Twelfth of June.

To the PUBLIC.

AS the Small Pox of late has been introduced in many of the towns in this colony, in a manner unaccountable to the civil authority, and moſt of the inhabitants, and is now become conſiderably prevalent and alarming in the town of Middletown, and great ſuſpicions have ariſen, that ſome evil diſpoſed perſons, with a view to their own private emolument, would willingly propagate that moſt diſmal diſeaſe throughout the continent, to prevent which it is moſt earneſtly recommended to the guardians of the people and every friend of mankind that they do unite in extinguiſhing and ſuppreſſing ſo dangerous an evil, which if once to take place, at this ſeaſon, muſt be of the moſt fatal conſequences to the community.

THIS is to give notice to all perſons creditors to Amaſa Jones, of Colcheſter in the county of Hartford, inſolvent debtor, that purſuant to an act of the General Aſſembly held at Hartford on the ſecond Thurſday of May A.D. 1771, there is to be a meeting of ſaid Jones's creditors, at Capt. Dudly Wrights innholder in ſaid Colcheſter, on the firſt Thurſday of October next, then and there to exhibit their debts, and to agree on the beſt method for recovering, diſpoſing of, and diſtributing ſaid Jones's eſtate, for and among ſaid creditors.

Colcheſter, June 10 1771.

Henry Champion, } Truſtees to

Stolen from the Subſcriber of Pittsfield, on Thurſday Night laſt, a black Stone Horſe, about 14 hands high, five years old, branded with the letter X on his near ſhoulder, a little white on his off hind foot near his hoof, natural trotter; had on when left in the paſture, a pair of iron fetters, and carries his head ſomething low. The ſuppoſed thief is named William Wright, is about 20 years of age, fair complexion, is an old countryman, has taught a ſchool ſome time in Pittsfield. Had on, and took with him, a blue double breaſted coat, with yellow metal buttons, white waiſtcoat, breeches and ſtocking. Whoever ſhall take up ſaid thief, and ſecure him ſo that he may be brought to juſtice, and the horſe recovered, ſhall be handſomely rewarded, and all neceſſary charges paid by

URIAH JUDD.

Pittsfield Auguſt 8 1771.

NICHOLAS Brown near the North Meeting-Houſe in Hartford, is now erecting and in three weeks from the date hereof, will have compleated a neat and convenient Stage Coach, which he propoſes for the accommodation of travellers from this place to New-Haven, and from thence back again, or otherways as occaſion ſhall ſerve.—This method of travelling being attended with leſs expence, and performed with as great diſpatch as any other way, and ſaid Brown being determined by his aſſiduity in the buſineſs, and reaſonableneſs of his demands to give ſatisfaction, he hopes for the cuſtom and encouragement of the public, which will be gratefully acknowledged by him.

N.B. Said Brown has a Number of Carriages of different Kinds which he will diſpoſe of for Caſh or Produce.

POET'S CORNER.

A FABLE.

In imitation of Sternhold and Hopkins.

A POOR Man once a Judge beſought
  To judge aright his Cauſe;
And with a Pot of Oil ſalutes
  This Judger of the laws.
My Friend, quoth he, thy Cauſe is good
  He glad away did Trudge;
Anon his wealthy Foe did come
  Before this partial Judge.
A Hog well fed this Churl preſents,
  And craves a ſtrain of Law.
The Hog receiv'd the poor Man's right
  Was judg'd not worth a Straw.
O partial Judge! the poor man cry'd
  Thy Doom hath me undone;
When Oil I gave my Cauſe was good,
  But now to ruin run.
Friend, quoth the Judge, I thee forget;
  Behold thy Cauſe of Oil;
A Hog came ſince into my Houſe,
  And eat up all thy Oil.

LONDON. May 18.

The Terra de la Core, a Spaniſh regiſter ſhip from the Manilles, is loſt on the coaſt of Chili, in America, all the crew and cargo, valued at 250 000 dollars, are loſt.

Wedneſday Afternoon, May 30

The public may depend on the authenticity of the following important intilligence. The terms of the Treaty of Peace, on the eve of being concluded, between Ruſſia and the Porte, under the mediation of the Courts of Berlin and Vienna, are theſe:

Belgrade and all the forts on the Danube, to its mouth, to be ceded to Auſtria, as a barrier againſt the Turks. Bender ceded to the ſame power, as a barrier againſt the Ruſſians.

The intermediate countries between the Neiſter and the Danube, to remain neutral, under their Princes and Waywodes.

The Danube to bound the Turkiſh dominions in Europe.

All the coaſt of the Black Sea, with its ports and harbours, comprehending thoſe of the Crimea,—ceded to Ruſſia.

The Crim-Tartars to become nominally independent. The Ruſſians not to have the free navigation of the Boſphorus and Helleſpont; and to evacuate the Archipelago and its iſles.

The Throne of Poland to be declared vacant; and a free election permitted, by the withdrawing of all foreign troops, which might over awe the Diet.

The candidates for the Poliſh Throne to be the Elector of Saxony, the preſent King, and an Arch duke.

Should the Election not fall on the preſent King, (which is generally believed it will not) he is to retain the title of King, to which will be annexed the Dutchy of Posin.

The King of Pruſſia to cede his part of Sileſia to Auſtria, and to receive Poliſh Pruſſia and Dantzick in lieu of it, guarantied by Auſtria.

The only obſtacle which retards the completion of the above Treaty is the Neutrality of Countries between the Nieſter and Danube, which the Houſe of Auſtria wiſh to erect into a Sovereignty for a branch of their family.

The French and Spaniſh Courts, in the mean time, uſe all their influence at Vienna and Conſtantinople, to break a treaty, in which the King of Pruſſia is the Umpire between the contending parties.

France, whoſe Finances will be in a good way, after an intended public bankruptcy, inſinuates that a ceſſion extorted from the Porte can never be ſecure. She therefore propoſes to the Auſtrians to take a part in the war againſt Ruſſia, and, upon that condition, to procure a voluntary ceſſion of all the Turkiſh dominions to the eaſt of the Danube, without any condition of neutrality.—Spain, to induce the Court of Vienna to this ſtep, offers a large ſubſidy in money; whilſt the French propoſe to enter Germany with an army.

The King of Pruſſia has not confined all his views to this treaty. That active genius, by a mixture of policy and force, is taking ſteps to form the United Provinces into a limited Monarchy, for the family of Orange. The intrigues, on this important ſubject, have long ſince begun; and it is ſuppoſed, that the conſpiracy for the diſſolution of the Republic is already far advanced.

June 7. At a Court of Common Council held yeſterday, a report was read from the Committee appointed to conſider the Petition of the Livery concerning the company of Goldſmith's, Weavers, and Grocers refuſing to obey the Lord Mayor's precept; as alſo a caſe, and the opinion of Counſel concerning the ſame. A motion was made to lay theſe opinions before the Common Hall on midſummer day next, which was carried in the affirmative. Theſe opinions are, that the Members of theſe ſeveral Companies, who made that refuſal, were liable to be disfranchiſed for the ſame, by an action brought by the Common Serjeant againſt them in the Mayor's Court.

A report was read from the Committee appointed to conſider and aſſiſt the Lord Mayor and Mr. Alderman Oliver, with the opinion of Counſel, whether their impriſonment by the Houſe of Commons could be tried by a legal courſe of law. The Counſel's opinions are that it could not: however, a motion was made, that this alſo be laid before the Common Hall on midſummer day next. The Counſel conſulted on this occaſion were Meſſrs. Glynn, Dunning, Mansfield, and the Common Serjeant.

It is ſaid the Rev. Mr. Horne will ſoon have the tutorſhip of a young Nobleman during his travel abroad.

All the Greeks in the neighbourhood of Argentum, in the night of the 4th ult. revolted to the Ruſſian fleet lying near the Dardanelles.

Yeſterday morning a great houſe in the city ſtopped payment.

A gentleman who arrived in town on Thurſday from France, ſays that at Calais it is very difficult to get a joint of meat ſince the exportation of live cattle from England has been ſtopped; and that the poorer ſort of people there are in the greateſt diſtreſs. This gentleman adds, that trade is totally at ſtand; and that at Paris, he bought for four guineas, a ſword, for which he muſt have paid ten when trade was in a flouriſhing condition; ſo greatly are the French in want for money.

Yet a few years, or days perhaps,
Or moments paſs in ſilent lapſe,
And time to me ſhall be no more;
No more the ſun theſe eyes ſhall view,
Earth o'er theſe limbs her duſt ſhall ſtrew,
And life's fantaſtic dream be o'er.
KING of PRUSSIA.

A Young lady, who I have the pleaſure of being intimately acquainted with, has been ſo obliging as to favour me with the following copy of a letter from another young lady with whom ſhe is united in the ſtricteſt bands of friendſhip.

"You know, Mira, I have often preſſed Siderio, to give me a view of the ſecret room you and I have obſerved him retire to ſo conſtantly, evening and morning during our reſidence at Clindon houſe. I am now returned again to the delightful ſpot, on a viſit, of a month, to Siderio's ſiſter, and ever ſince my arrival, I have been plaguing him with the old requeſt; he always reſiſted my importunity, and put me off with ſome trifling excuſe, till laſt night, he had been talking to me on ſeveral grave ſubjects; I, in my uſual manner, rallied him on a gravity ſo unbecoming his years and rank in life; but he, with the perſuaſive eloquence he is ſo much maſter of, attempted to convince me that a ſerious air is much more becoming, than the thoughtleſs flippant one of a modern fine gentleman.

"After talking ſome time, he brought me to a ſubject he knows I think very little of——DEATH He talked upon the ſubject with all the gravity of a philoſopher, and then taking my hand between his he preſſed it with that graceful freedom you know is ſo natural to him, and, looking attentively at me ſaid, "The lovely Aſphelia knows very well ſhe one day muſt die, yet how little ſhe thinks of that period, which will put an end to all thoſe perſonal charms ſhe now poſſeſſes; the time will come when thoſe bright eyes which now ſparkle with ſo engaging a radience that they captivate every beholder, will looſe their ſplendor in the gloomy regions of the dead; that lovely face and engaging perſon, which now can ſcarcely be matched for beauty, will one day be a prey to death; corruption ſhall deſtroy their charms, and moulder them into duſt: Why then, ſhou'd Aſphelia give all her attention to this corruptible part, and neglect ſo much that incorruptible part, her SOUL, which is doomed to live for ever?" I could make no anſwer to ſo home a queſtion. Obſerving my ſilence he continued; "The generality of the youth of the preſent age think more of enjoying the preſent moment, than they do of preparing themſelves for that eternity which is to come; but I (ſince the death of my brother who was carried off ſo ſuddenly) have reſolved, that death ſhall not come upon me unexpected, for I make that awful period and futurity the principal ſubjects of my thoughts. I am ſatisfied I ſhould not now look upon this arrival as premature; on the contrary, I ſhould welcome the kind meſſenger who comes to ſet me free from this earthly priſon, and give me liberty in the realms of happineſs. That the gaiety which ſurrounds me may not tempt me to forget that I am mortal, I have had recourſe to a precaution, that, in ſpite of the bewitching allurements of the world, keeps me conſtantly in mind of death. If you will give me leave to attend you into the private room you have ſo often wiſhed to ſee I will explain myſelf." I offered my hand, and he conducted me, well pleaſed to ſee this ſecret place. The firſt door opened not, as I expected, into a room, but into a long gallery, at the end of which was another door; but before Siderio opened it he deſired I would not be ſurpriſed if I ſaw a very extraordinary ſight; I anſwered, I could depend on his honour, and had no fear. He then opened the door; but what was my aſtoniſhment at the ſight I beheld! A very large dark room enlightned only by the feeble glimmer of ſeveral ſmall lamps, that ſpread horror over the contents of this diſmal place; the room was lined with black, and ſurrounded with coffins and enſigns of death. I ſtarted and was going to run back, but recollecting myſelf I ventured in with him; he ſhut the door and then ſaid, "Now, Aſphelia, your curioſity is gratified; you ſee here the ſecret room you have ſo often wiſhed to ſee; here I reſort morning and evening to think on death, and offer up my devotions to the great Creator; the ſolemnity of the place keeps out all thought of the world, and my imagination wings its way through boundleſs futurity, to thoſe ſcenes of permanent delight, which I make no doubt my ſoul will one day enjoy: every object you ſee is calculated to compoſe the mind into thoughtfulneſs; theſe coffins contain the remains of my anceſtors for many ages back: I had them removed privately from the family vault to aſſiſt me in my meditations. That one covered with the black velvet pall contains the body of my beloved brother; his ſudden death reminds me how uncertain life is, and teaches me to live ſo as to be always ready to reſign it. the ſight of his coffin reads a more affecting lecture on the brevity of human life, then the moſt eloquent divine could; it ſpeaks to the heart; there is no reſiſting ſuch evidence. The paintings you ſee are all upon ſubjects ſuitable to the place; there are done by an eminent hand, representing the day of Judgment, nothing can more effectually remind me of the account I am to render of all my actions on that great day of dread, deciſion, and deſpair! That I may be prepared for the ſolemn reckoning I make it a rule every night, to revolve in my mind the actions of the preceeding day, and note them down in that ſmall book lying on my brother's coffin. Oh, Aſphelia, how deplorable is the condition of thoſe foolish mortals, who never think of death till he arrives! it is then too late to repent; the grizly tyrant will not ſtay any longer, but gives the fatal ſtroke, and ſends them, unprepared, to give an account of their actions before the great and juſt Judge. What account can they give? none at all: They have lived the life of the ungodly, and they muſt receive their doom according."

"I was ſo much affected with the ſolemn ſcene I could not ſpeak; my conſcience began to reproach me for the heedleſs life I have lived; it is true, I have never committed great crimes, but the levities I have been guilty of immediately occured to me. I remained ſilent looking fixedly on one of the coffins: he proceeded, "Oh, how ſhocking would it be if the King of Terrors was now to throw his unerring javeline at the gay, the lively Aſphelia! her charms would not ſave her; death is no reſpecter of perſons; I fear ſhe is but ill prepared for the ſummons that will call her to the ſhades: that final ſcene has as yet employed but a ſmall portion of her reflections: I have obſerved, with infinite regret, how thoughtleſly ſhe advances to that laſt period, and with what heedleſs gaiety ſhe paſſes away the flying moments that ought to be better employed; I have often tried to reaſon her out of this fancied ſecurity, but in vain; ſhe turned all I ſaid into raillery, which induced me to give her a ſight of thoſe awful remembrancers. I pray heaven they may effect what I have ſo often attempted without ſucceſs! Siderio then took my hand, and led me to a coffin at the other end of the room; the lid was off, and it empty. 'There, Aſphelia, (ſaid he) is my coffin; in a very few years at furtheſt, perhaps in a very few days, that ſmall ſpot will contain your friend Siderio.' I ſtarted. 'Why ſtarts Aſphelia? There is nothing frightful in this ſight; I enjoy the moſt pleaſing reflections when I look at it: It is the door through which I am to enter into eternity; here my body will ſleep in peace, till the trumpet at the laſt day proclaims the coming of my bleſſed Redeemer; then ſhall I ariſe and appear at the dread tribunal without any fear or apprehenſion; my actions will be approved, and I ſhall be bleſſed to all eternity.'

"You can hardly conceive, my dear Mira, the condition I was in during this ſcene. At my firſt entrance conſcience upbraided me for my paſt conduct, and the words of the eloquent Siderio had a double force in ſo ſolemn a place; his laſt words affected me very much; to ſee him look with ſo much compoſure on his own coffin, convinced me of the greatneſs of thoſe principles he would fain inſpire me with. He continued looking at the coffin with a fixed attention. I, unable to view it longer, turned, to a monument I obſerved againſt the wall—An angel deſcended from the clouds, holding forward, on his right hand, a roll on which was wrote the Adjuration out of Young's Night Thoughts. I read, and felt the whole force of the powerful words.

"While I was thinking of the ſolemn warning they gave, Siderio came up to me and taking my hand, led me to another monument at the upper end of the room, it was of white marble, and executed in a moſt maſterly manner; the ſubject a beautiful young woman riſing out of her coffin at the ſound of the trump, on the laſt day; around her are graves giving up their dead in baſſo relievo; the young woman's countenance expreſſes her joy, and reliance on the merits of her redeemer; her eyes fixed upon Heaven. After we had viewed it ſome time, Siderio ſaid, 'That, Aſphelia, is a monument of the memory of my eldeſt ſiſter; I loved her as I love myſelf; ſhe was all that is amiable: her perſon was lovely beyond deſcription, but her mind infinitely eclipſed thoſe leſſer beauties; ſhe is now a bright inhabitant of the regions of light.' How amiable this deſcription, Mira! O, how trifling a life I have lived: Till now I never felt what it was to live; I only exiſted before: Thoſe ſolemn forewarners have awakened me to reflections of a nature vaſtly different from thoſe which formerly occupied my thoughts.

"Before the blooming young philoſopher led me out of the ſolemn repoſitory, he gave me advice, cloathed in the tendereſt expreſſions for regulation of my future conduct, and implored me, in the moſt ardent manner, to live ſuch a life as make my election ſure, and ended by ſaying act thus, adorable Aſphelia! and you will, with pleaſure, meet the end of all things; Death, when he comes, will wear the form of an Angel, inſtead of a tyrant; he will give you liberty, in the manſions of bliſs, there to injoy, during the round of vaſt boundleſs eternity, happineſs beyound the power of mortals to form any idea of.

Weathersfield, 5th Aug 1771.

Mr. WATSON,

Pleaſe to give the following a place in your next public paper, and you'll oblige one of your conſtant readers.

IN the Hartford paper No. 345. I obſerve a piece ſaid to be an extract of a letter from a gentleman in Pennſylvania, who is diſtinguiſhed for an uniform attention to the true liberties of his country.—By this diſcription, it ſeems, as if the immortal farmer was meant, to be pointed out, as the author.—If the ſentiments of the extract are the farmers ſentiments, his mind muſt be clouded and ſhackled by ſelf intereſt, and the overgrown affluence of the Lord proprietor;—But I affirm in the poſitive degree, he cannot be the author—his principles, even if varied thro' all the moods and tenſes; and through all the declenſions of nowns, pronouns, and participles, will remain like a poniard perforating the heart and bowels of ſuch a monſtrous production.—The deſign of the extract was to inflame the minds of mankind againſt the people of Connecticut, who are ſettling at Wyoming, on the north branch of Suſquehannah; and thereby to bring on a deciſion, of the title of thoſe lands by the point of the ſword. But, in order to collect an armed force, ſufficient to carry his ſcarlet principles into execution, who but the heroic T.y.n muſt head the battallions. Accordingly we find in the extract, an oblique (for it is a ſquint eyed piece) juſtification of the meaſures of this matchleſs warrior with the Regulators of N. Carolina, but the more effectually to preſs him into his ſervice, a forged claim of regulators, of which, the Connecticut people form one link, is ſtretched from one end of the continent to the other; a ſure way to create apprehenſions in the mind of this valient hero.——The news of his marching at the head of his myrmidons, in aid of the Ogden party, to ſubdue the Connecticut rebels, is not yet come to hand but may probably be in the next public paper.——Now, is this the plan of the farmer or of any body, who deſerves to be diſtinguiſhed for an uniform, or indeed, for any attention at all, to the true liberties of his country?—Is not the title of the Suſquehannah lands, in diſpute?—And does not every man of common diſcernment, who has inquired into the affair know, that the only legal, fair and impartial method of ending the controverſy, is, by a court of law? That the people of Connecticut, at Wyoming are a peaceable people, and anxious to have the matter iſſued by a legal trial, and before proper judges? That the people of Pennſylvania are not proper judges of the title; that the meaſures to evade a legal trial, made uſe of by the oppoſite party, are violent meaſures, and ſuch as ought not to be tolerated, or even winked at, in a chriſtian land? And that, for any province, to enact laws to encourage and protect ſuch villany: is, in effect, to eſtabliſh robbery and murder by law? Is it not manifeſt, that the late riot act paſſed in Pennſylvania, ſo far as it is calculated to opperate at Wyoming, and diſturb the ſettlements of the Connecticut people there, is unconſtitutional, replete with miſchief, and an implicit declaration of war againſt the colony of Connecticut? Will not the charter of Connecticut, which is prior to Penn's and the Indian title, which the Suſquehannah company have purchaſed for a valuable conſideration, eternally juſtify them in the view of the impartial world, in taking poſſeſſion, and improving part of thoſe lands till the oppoſite claimants will condeſcend to have the matter legally determined——but to proceed.—Are not the unparalled inſults, heaped upon the Connecticut people, ſo many arguments of the invalidity of Penn's claim; of his conſciouſneſs of the weakneſs of his title; and that it will not bear an examination before a court of records under the inſpection of impartial judges? Is not the governor, who holds his commiſſion under, and during the pleaſure of the proprietaries, who claim the fee of the land in diſpute, by every principle of law and juſtice, excluded from judging in a cauſe in which the title of his maſters land is the queſtion in debate? Is not the riot act, if extended to Suſquehannah, an invention to eſtabliſh the proprietors claim, and, rite or wrong, to veſt the title of thoſe lands in him, and can a law be founded on reaſon, under the protection of which, a gang of villains may plunder and murder innocent people with impunity?——The truth is, that "folks in this part of the country are of opinion," that the thirſt of the Lord propietor for extent of territory is unquenchable; and that if the riot act can conſtitutionally have the binding force of a law at Wyoming, there is a bolt inlaid in the bowels of that conſtitution, which will, forever prove an irreſiſtable temptation, for the owner of the province to encroach on his neighbours. The Suſquehannah, with all its cooling ſtreams, will not abate the inflammation!——His next ſtride, perhaps, will carry him to the banks of Connecticut river;—and then all weſtward will be deemed rioters, outlawed, and laid open to the mercileſs ravages of robbers and cut throats. And why may we not reaſonably conclude, if ſuch meaſures are conſtitutional, that this gormandizing principle, after ſwallowing up the continent of America, will croſs the atlantic, graſp the iſland of Great Britain, and travail on through Europe, Aſia, and Africa, till the government of Pennſylvania is bounded by the two poles. Are theſe the ſweet and precious fruits of proprietary government! Indeed, if theſe hints could find a paſſage to the moon, it is a queſtion, whether the inhabitants of that lunar region, after effectual meaſures for the ſecurity of their title, would not ſend circular letters to all the planetary worlds, to give notice of their approaching danger, from the operation of the late riot act under the direction of G——l T.y.n, in vindication of the boundleſs extent of the Lord proprietors claim. For, it is a clear point, if ſuch an act can extend to Wyoming, it may with equal propriety here; any where in the King's dominions; and thro' all the planetary orbs. If Mr. Penn can extend his claim at pleaſure, and in conſequence thereof make riot acts, and puniſh thoſe with death, who venture to diſpute the ſtrength of his title, (for this is the whole of the Connecticut people's crime; let them call it a riot, rebellion, or by what name they pleaſe) if he is veſted with ſuch an abſolute, an unlimited power, the parliament of Great Britain, or the inhabitants of any other world, as far as I know, might be guilty of high treaſon in diſputing the equity of his claim to the univerſe.——If ſuch a formed act, with all its forks and horns, be a proper weapon to diſpute the title of Suſquehannah; I could wiſh that the colony of Connecticut would puſh againſt them, with an engine of the ſame complexion. I claim no property in the Suſquehannah lands, except what is comprehended in the general intereſt of the colony of Connecticut; however, principles and laws, which tend to fill the earth with violence, and the blood of innocents; and to diſturb the order and harmony of more worlds than one, ought to be held in the higheſt abomination, and by every reaſonable being, treated with the contempt they deſerve.

One remark further, and I have done.—As General T.y.n, by the author of the extract, is pitched on to enforce his meaſures, and vindicate the extent of the proprietors claim, he will doubtleſs be entitled to a high ſeat of dignity in his lordſhip's kingdom; and if the ſolar ſyſtem, be eventually found within his juriſdiction, the ſun, of courſe, muſt be the ſeat of government;——The thoughts of the general might therefore be profitably exerciſed in thinking before hand, how ſuch a climate would ſuit his conſtitution & whether he has reaſon to expect a meet recompence, in that element, for all his labour and toil againſt the regulators.

Madrid. May 2. Advices from Cadiz confirm, that the Engliſh have been diſlodged from St. David's Iſle by the Spaniards, which makes us apprehend new troubles between the two nations.

L O N D O N, May 6.

THE affair which happened on Tueſday laſt, in the Green Park between an Engliſh Nobleman and an Italian Count was occaſioned, as we have been informed, by the event related in the following ſtory. Lord L—— had frequently obſerved inſtances of levity in his Lady's behaviour when in company with the Count, and thought proper to give her Ladyſhip ſome gentle reproofs on the occaſion; intimating, that, however unqueſtionable her virtue might be, her reputation was at ſtake. This had no other effect but to alarm her pride; her conduct remained the ſame. His Lordſhip had ſome time after this, been detained in town by buſineſs, which would not permit him to return with his Lady to their country Seat, in the neighbourhood of which the Count had taken up his reſidence. It happened laſt week, that a window in a lower apartment of his Lordſhip's Country Houſe had been found open in the morning. This circumſtance occaſioned mutual upbraiding between the ſervants; when each obſtinately denying the charge of neglect, one of them, an old ſervant, was bent on making a further diſcovery. Accordingly, he took the reſolution of ſitting up the next night to watch in this apartment. About midnight, to his aſtoniſhment, he ſaw his Lady enter the Room, and (on a ſignal given by the Count) admit him through the window, and conduct him up ſtairs, where he remained till about four o'clock in the morning, and then departed by the ſame avenue at which he entered. In the morning the ſervant came to town, and acquainted his Lord with the important diſcovery, who immediately haſted to the coffee houſe frequented by the Count, and charged him with the injury he had done to his honor, inſiſting on ſatisfaction at the point of his ſword. The Count neither denied the charge, nor declined the ſatisfaction required. They repaired to the park without ſeconds, and ſoon after they had engaged, his Lordſhip dropped his ſword, his Antagoniſt ſuppoſed him wounded, and deſired to know if he required further ſatisfaction. His Lordſhip replied, that he did not deſire to live, but he would not die cowardly. On reſuming the conflict the Count received a wound in the ſword arm and two other ſlight wounds, and then dropped his ſword. Lord L. attended him to the Surgeon where his wounds were dreſſed. His Lordſhip, we hear will proſecute for damages, and ſue out a divorce.

The following particulars reſpecting the cauſe of a late duel, we are aſſured may be depended upon:—The noble Lord has for ſome time been diſſatisfied with his Lady's behaviour, but could not fix on any thing particular to accuſe her of, till the following accident, which called forth his reſentment. He aſked his Lady to accompany him in a little excurſion, but ſhe excuſed herſelf under pretence of an indiſpoſition; He left her therefore, as he thought, confined by it to her chamber; Accident more than deſign brought him back, when, to his great aſtoniſhment, he heard his Lady was gone to the Opera; He followed, and found her in cloſe converſation with the wounded Nobleman. This circumſtance, with ſome dark hints from the ſervant, occaſioned the late rencounter, when the Count accuſed the Lady of being the ſeducer. The Lady has retired from her huſband to lodgings, and aſſerts her innocence. Her father has declared, if ſhe is innocent, he will ſee that juſtice be done her; but if the contrary ſhould appear he will aſſiſt the injured huſband in making her an example.

THis is to give notice to all perſons creditors to Amaſa Jones, of Colcheſter in the county of Hartford, inſolvent debtor, that purſuant to an act of the General Aſſembly, held at Hartford on the ſecond Thurſday of May A D. 1771, there is to be a meeting of ſaid Jones's creditors, at Capt. From the Engliſh Prints brought by the Tamar, arrived at Boſton on Saturday laſt we have the following Advices to the 24th of June, viz.

L O N D O N, June 8

THE laſt letters from Gibralter intimate, that a camp was form'd in the neighbourhood of Lorche, and that one Maldivi, a French engineer in the Spaniſh ſervice had declared that Gibraltar was no impenetrable.

We hear that Commodore Byron has carried out with him freſh inſtructions to keep the French within their boundaries, for carrying on the Cod Fiſhery at Newfoundland, as every ſeaſon ſince the concluſion of the late war, they have given great trouble to the Governors and Captains of the Men of war, ſtationed there.

We have been favoured with the following authentic intelligence from Paris:—Paris now repreſents a ſcene of the utmoſt diſſolution; the baſtile being crammed full of unfortunate people, and the exceſſive heat of the weather, has cauſed the goal diſtemper to rage to ſuch a ſhocking degree, that 50 or 60 priſoners die in a day. This diſtemper is of ſo contagious a nature that it has communicated itſelf into different parts of the city, which cauſes the poorer ſort of people to die like ſheep. The King is deaf to all this diſtreſs which he has occaſioned, indulging himſelf with the company of Madam Barre, going a hunting. But it is the opinion of every thinking man there that a ſpeedy revolution cannot fail to take place, as it is daily expected to hear of the King's aſſaſſination; hardly any of the nobility now go to Court, and none of the Princes of the Blood.

The laſt advices from Paris ſay, that the French King is afraid to enter that city. He ſpends his time entirely between Verſailles and Marli, and permits his Chancellor to perform all public buſineſs. Not a night paſſes but treaſonable papers are found poſted up in the public ſquares. One of them concluded with theſe words—'Oh! for another Ravillac!'

The ſalary of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland it is ſaid, to be increaſed from 16 000l. to 20,000l. per annum.

On Saturday died at Bath, of an Apoplectic Fit, the Right Hon. James Stanly Smith, Lord Stanley commonly called Lord Strange, eldeſt Son of the Earl of Derby.

Yeſterday died at Buſhey Park, George Montagu Duke, Earl of Halifax, Viſcount Sunbury, Secretary of State for the North Department, Ranger and Warden of Salſey, and Buſhey Park, Lord Lieutenant and Cuſtos Rotulorum of Northamptonſhire a Governor of the Charter Houſe, and ranked a Lieutenant General of the Army.

In conſequence of the above event ſeveral important changes will immediately take place. Lord Suffolk will certainly ſucceed to the Buſineſs of the Northern Department, as the Duke of Grafton will the Privy Seal—Lord Weymouth declines every Offer,—The Law Changes are not ſettled.

June 10. His Majeſty was very near being killed at the foot of Weſtminſter bridge on his return from the review on Thurſday by one of his footmen, who rode foremoſt, ſtriking a horſe in a coach that ſtood in the way on the head; which made the beaſt ſtart back with the carriage, by which means it broke through the pannels of his Majeſty's chaiſe, & very much frightned him, though he eſcaped unhurt.

James Irwin, Eſq; is appointed Naval Officer at Jamaica.

John Pownal, Eſq; is appointed Provoſt Marſhal General of the Leeward Iſlands.

On Sunday night, at twelve, died, at his houſe in Tenderden ſtreet, Hanover ſquare, the Hon. Dr. Richard Trevor, Biſhop of Durham, Cuſtos Rotulorum of the principality of Durham, and brother to Lord Trevor. His Lordſhip was conſecrated Biſhop of St. David's in 1744, and tranſlated to the ſee of Durham in 1752.

It is reported, that the Spaniards have taken another iſland in the South Seas.

June 11. The French are continually tranſporting new ſettlers to Corſica, and bringing away the natives.

The French are buſy in erecting additional Fortifications at Honfleur, and Havre de Grave.

We are aſſured by a Gentleman from Paris, that the Court are ſo apprehenſive of a Riot, that an edict has been publiſhed, in which the People are forbidden, under pain of ſevere puniſhment, to be ſeen talking to the number of half a dozen, at a time in the ſtreet.

Two diſguiſed Jeſuits were lately apprehended at Madrid, in whoſe garments were found quilted Diamonds to immenſe value.

The loſs by the late inundation at Riga, amounts to above 2,000 000 Rubles, beſides above 300 perſons drowned.

Lord Suffolk is talked of for Secretary of State in Lord Halifax's room; and Lord Shelburne, or Lord Weymouth, Privy Seal, in the room of the Earl of Suffolk.

Some confidently aſſert, that as ſoon as the ſum of 40 000l (of which the Chevalier D'Eon, is to have a fourth) is underwritten, the myſterious matter of his abſence is to be diſcloſed.

Lord North is yet firm in his Place, and boaſted a Week ago, that the Riots occaſioned by conſulting the Lord Mayor had fixed him more firmly than ever.

P H I L A D E L P H I A, Auguſt 8.

The report of a party of men being cut off, who were diſpatched from Northampton county with proviſions for our people at Wioming, who are beſieged by the Connecticut party, appears by the following extract of a letter (which came to town the 6th inſtant, by expreſs) from the perſon who commanded the convoy, to be without foundation.

Wioming, Auguſt 1, 1771.

"Laſt Tueſday about break of day, I arrived at this place with 31 men, and the proviſions; and was attacked by the Connecticut party who had information of our coming by a letter falling into their hands with which an Indian was ſent by Capt. Ogden. We were ſurrounded by their fire, and loſt two horſe loads of our flour, and got in with the remainder and 22 men 2 of whom are wounded. Nine of our men are miſſing; whether they retreated, or are killed, I cannot as yet give information. They have kept an almoſt continual fire on the Block houſe ever ſince, from four intrenchments; but we are determined to hold out to the laſt extremity. I am, Sir, your humble ſervant,

JOHN DICK."

We hear with certainty, that the nine men who were miſſing, retreated, and are returned to the Inhabitants.

NEW-YORK, Auguſt 15.

We hear from Albany, that Sir William Johnſon is now holding a Congreſs at his Seat at Johnſon-Hall, with the Chiefs of the Six Nations, in Conſequence of ſome important intelligence he has received from the Southward.

It appears by the Virginia Papers, that in the late dreadful Freſhes, about 3 Million 400 Thouſand Pounds of Tobacco, were deſtroyed in the public Warehouſes on James, and Rappahannock Rivers, and that to relieve the Sufferers the Aſſembly have paſſed an act whereby they are entitled to receive from 16/8 to 20/. per Hundred for the ſaid Tobacco, according to its Quality. To raiſe this Money the following Taxes are laid, viz.

Upon every 4 wheel'd Carriage except Waggons, 20/. every 2 wheel'd Chaiſe or Chair 10/. every Ordinary Licence 20/. on every original Writ, or Subpœna in Chancery in the General Court 2/6. every Summons or Petition, for lapſed Land, and every Caveat entered in the Secretary's Office, alſo for every ſuch Writ or Subpœna in an inferior Court 1/3, on every Hogſhead of Tobacco paſſed & delivered to be ſhipped after the 25th of October next 3/, and becauſe the ſaid Taxes cannot be immediately collected, the Treaſurer is empowered to iſſue Treaſury Notes to the Amount of £. 30,000 redeemable the 10th of December, 1775.

They have alſo paſſed an Act to erect an elegant Marble Statute of his late Excellency the Right Hon. Norborne Baron de Botetourt, with proper Inſcriptions, expreſſing the Houſe's grateful Senſe of his Lordſhip's prudent and wiſe Adminiſtration, and their great Solicitude to perpetuate the Remembrance of thoſe many public and ſocial Virtues which adorned his Character; and a Committee is appointed to ſend for it to G. Britain.

For paying the public Printer £ 450 per Annum, and ſeveral other Acts.

B O S T O N, Auguſt 15.

BY a gentleman lately arrived from London we learn, that Mr Wilkes, in all probability, will be choſen Sheriff for the city of London at the enſuing election. Mr. Luttrell's ſeat in the houſe of commons being vacated, a precept muſt of courſe be directed to the ſheriff to return a perſon in his ſtead, but as Mr. Wilkes is their legal and conſtitutional member, it is determined no other ſhall be choſen, but that Mr. Wilkes ſhall take his ſeat, and when the return is called for, aſſign the reaſons why no new choice has been made; if he is rejected again, or impriſonment takes place, the grand criſis may come on, and it is poſſible that the people may take the government into their own hands, and puniſh their ſervants, for betraying the important truſt committed to them by THE PEOPLE.

HARTFORD, Auguſt 20.

By Accounts from North Carolina we are informed, that Capt. Benjamin Merrill, who was lately executed for high treaſon, in oppoſing the career of Governor Tryon, died, in the moſt heroic manner, his children being around him and animating him at the place of execution.——He declared that he died in peace with his Maker, and in the cauſe of his oppreſſed countrymen, and that he would not exchange conditions with even the governor himſelf.

Five thouſand regular troops have arrived at Martinico, between the firſt of April & the 12th of June laſt many of which have died.

An act paſſed the laſt ſeſſion of parliament for granting a bounty upon the importation of white oak ſtaves and heading, from any of the Britiſh colonies and plantations in America, after the firſt of January 1772.

WHEREAS we the ſubſcribers are appointed by the hon. court of probate for the diſtrict of Simſbury, commiſſioners to examine the claims and demands of the creditors on the eſtate of Jonathan Higley, late of ſaid Simſbury deceaſed, which is repreſented inſolvent. WE do therefore hereby give notice unto all the creditors that have any demands on ſaid eſtate, that we ſhall attend on ſaid buſineſs, on the firſt mondays of October, November and December next, at 9 o'clock in the morning, at the dwelling-houſe of Decon Aſahel Holcomb innholder in ſaid Simſbury, in order to examine the claims, and as there is but ſix month's allowed for the ſettlement of ſaid eſtate, and no accounts will be allowed after ſaid time. Dated at Simſbury, Auguſt 7, 1771.

Aſahel Holcomb.
Joſeph Forward } Commiſſioners.

ALL perſons indebted to the inſolvent eſtate of Jonathan Higley late of Simſbury deceaſed, are hereby deſired to make ſpeedy ſettlement to me the ſubſcriber, or they may expect trouble.

Jonathan Higley, Adminiſtrator.

Simſbury, Auguſt 7, 1771.

NIcholas Brown near the North Meeting-Houſe in Hartford, is now erecting and in three weeks from the date hereof, will have compleated a neat and convenient Stage Coach, which he propoſes for the accommodation of travellers from this place to New-Haven, and from thence back again, or otherways as occaſion ſhall ſerve.—This method of travelling being attended with leſs expence, and performed with as great diſpatch as any other way, and ſaid Brown being determined by his aſſiduity in the buſineſs, and reaſonableneſs of his demands to give ſatisfaction, he hopes for the cuſtom and encouragement of the public, which will be gratefully acknowledged by him.

N.B. Said Brown has a Number of Carriages of different Kinds which he will diſpoſe of for Caſh or Produce.

THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic

From TUESDAY, AUGUST 20, to TUESDAY, AUGUST 27, 1771.

The fatal Effects of Criminal Connections.

[illegible] PRINTER.

WILL a ſtory of domeſtic diſtreſs be acceptable to your readers? For I, ſir, have no purpoſe of my own to anſwer by the inſertion of it; the tears, the ſympathy of humanity cannot heal; however, in ſome inſtances, they may ſoothe the wounded boſom.

The Antitheſis, of which the ancients were ſo fond, the light and ſhade of life were never more ſtrikingly diſplayed than in my misfortunes; but I will not take up your paper with reflections, moral ſuggeſtions ſhall not impede my wretched narrative. Reflection and morality muſt be familiar to the mind of experience, and youth and proſperity will refuſe them acceſs, leſt they ſhould waken the feelings of melancholy, or give birth to ſenſations of regret.

My father and mother were a proverb of conjugal felicity; the felicity of reaſon, refinement, and friendſhip. Eaſy in their circumſtances, and unaſpiring in their views, ſought no other improvement of their fortune, than purchaſing the bleſſings of their ſpecies, by employing all they could ſpare from their own immediate uſe, to aſſiſt, relieve and ſupport the children of diſappointment, the children of adverſity.

A brother and myſelf were the whole of their family; a brother, whoſe perſon was beyond deſcription lovely, and whoſe heart appeared fraught with [illegible]. My mother's affection was irreſtrainably lively; her ſon, her boy, was her joy and pride; not that her girl was in the ſmalleſt degree neglected, but the filial attention, the univerſal merit of her ſon was ſuch as at his early age and for his [illegible] rendered him the more public an object of [illegible].

[illegible] brother, that he might be uniformly unexceptionable, in his one and twentieth year, became tenderly attached to the moſt accompliſhed young woman in the country. My brother was not to be reſiſted, all modeſt encouragement was his, and though delicacy forbad the verbal acknowledgement, the affection, the attachment was reciprocal. My father having ſettled the preliminaries with the father of the ſweet girl, the day of their union was appointed, and ſmiling peace with all her blooming retinue, appeared to have fixed their everlaſting abode in our family.

Alas! how deceitful are human appearances! the deſigns of the deity, how far beyond the penetration of his creatures! Juſt GOD! for what wiſe end were thy ſeeming favourites devoted to endleſs miſery and never ceaſing diſgrace? Had they forgot either themſelves or thee, that the ſeverity of chaſtiſement ſhould be neceſſary? But pity the preſumption——oh, pity and pardon the daring duſt that would arraign, that would expoſtulate with the father of the univerſe.

At this period of general ſatisfaction, a ſudden dejection overſpread my brother's fine features; the glow of pleaſure was loſt, the expreſſion, the ſweetneſs of his countenance was no more; terrified at what we were unable to comprehend we beſought him not to refuſe us a ſhare in his viſible uneaſineſs, he ſighed; he eluded our enquires.

On the morning of the wedding day, Sir, juſt as we were preparing for church, the door was beſet with meſſengers of juſtice—the youth every body ſo fondly loved, was charged with forgery, and declared their priſoner, with all the unfeeling inſolence of ignorant inhumanity. Down at their feet ſunk, the moſt wretched and moſt affectionate of mothers. Mercy, mercy, cried ſhe, in accents of deſpair and horror! Oh have mercy on my [illegible] child,—Can you tear him from me? Will you caſt him in a dungeon, the [illegible] of my tendereſt attention? Have I watched over him only for this? Was it for this purpoſe theſe arms bore him about, and theſe eyes with rapture beheld the endearments of infancy?——But he ſhall not [illegible] ſhall be his redemption.

Unmindful of himſelf, the tear was wholly filial—he endeavoured to raiſe her——behold the return, ſaid he, of all your kindneſs; your child has lodged daggers in your boſom—ſpurn, therefore, ſpurn the ingrate; this life is forfeited to the laws of his country, and let his guilt obliterate every trace of affection.

My mother ſtood motionleſs; the amiable ſiſter of my heart was conveyed in a ſwoon to another apartment; my father and brother were in the moſt affecting ſituation, and I too keenly miſerable for deſcription. At length my father exclaimed, it is I who have by unhappy inadvertence, deſtroyed our ſon. Unacquainted with his proceedings, unconſcious of every demand upon the bank denying his draught, I have given up to juſtice, my poor miſtaken child had you but truſted your ſecret in your father's breaſt, all had now been well.

This ſtroke was too much for the mother to ſuſtain; ſhe fell ſenſeleſs on the floor, and the officers impatient to execute their dire commiſſion, pronounced this the beſt opportunity of bearing him to priſon.

Oppoſition would have been vain; the mark of infamy was ſet upon him; I ſaw him fettered, I ſaw him conveyed from a habitation where he had ever been a welcome gueſt, but where he never more was to return.

The undone youth confeſſed, that he had for ſome time (notwithſtanding our good opinion of him been betrayed into an unwarrantable intimacy with a married woman in the neighbourhood, who threatened, on his reſolving to abandon her, to publiſh their mutual guilt, unleſs he would furniſh her with five hundred pounds, to enable her to ſeek a ſettlement in another country ſuggeſting the method he had purſued, for obtaining the money, as not only practicable not only ſafe, but wholly void of crime, as his father's property was indirectly his own. Trembling for the conſequences of ſo daring a diſcovery, both with reſpect to his family, and the one he was on the point of entering into, and with but little knowledge of the world, he choſe the former, as the leſſer evil; ſo incapable are we of chuſing, when vice has once got poſſeſſion in the heart.

When my mother revived, the anguiſh of affliction returned on her with double force. Let us at leaſt, ſaid ſhe, forſake him, only when our ſervices can avail him no longer. I will be his companion in his priſon, the maternal taſk ſhall not be interrupted on this ſide the grave. I will ſtill ſmooth his pillow, ſtill perform the offices of my character, and indulged in this requeſt, what cannot be averted by me, ſhall be ſuſtained with fortitude.

My father, mother, my intended ſiſter, and myſelf—— what a journey! We entered the horrid manſion in ſilence——the ſad criminal approached us with downcaſt eyes. My intended ſiſter alone was compoſed at the interview—a kind of a romantic philoſophy ſeemed to have ſeized her ſoul, and ſhe talked of his dying with an inſenſibility that made me ſhudder.

The proſecution was carried on with the utmoſt virulence, not from perſonal enmity, but for public utility; a fraud on the Bank of England was ſtabbing the very vitals of our commerce, and ſhut up all proſpects, and all poſſibility of mercy.

But notwithſtanding our hopeleſs ſtate, my mother would leave nothing untried; ſupported by her [illegible], and her actual daughter ſhe caſt herſelf at the feet of majeſty, her petition in her hand; nor was ſhe ſatisfied with the gracious acceptation of that petition; the language of grief, the language of maternal diſtreſs burſt forth. "It is the mother, ſacred Sir," cried "ſhe, that thus proſtrates herſelf to ſave the beſt "of ſons from final deſtruction. He never erred "till now. Never was diſpoſition more gentle, "principles more juſt, or manners more engaging. He is the ſupport of my life, the delight of my eyes. O! royal Sir, the feelings "of nature are alike in all conditions; and "whilſt you experience the cares, the ſolicitudes the pleaſures of the parental character, "you cannot but be alive to the poignancy of "my deſpair."

The humanity of the ſovereign was melted——but public juſtice was neceſſary for public good. Nothing could be done for us; the day of execution drew near, and my mother's miſeries were multiplied upon her head; but the evening before the fatal period, ſhe was attacked by a fever, and happy delirium; for whatever ſhe might ſuffer from her diſtemper, was light in compariſon to what the retention of her reaſon would have expoſed her.

The parting between the ſweet girl and her wretched lover was affecting beyond deſcription; when ſhe broke from him, ſhe earneſtly [illegible] my hand, and bid me farewell alſo, with the air and the accent of the wildeſt deſcription. Her manner was ſo extraordinary, that I ſuſpected her intentions were deſperate and on confeſſing my ſuſpicions, and intreating her to live for my ſake ſhe gave me up a phial with which ſhe had provided herſelf for a purpoſe ſufficiently obvious. The fatal poiſon, however, had been taken; the agonies of death ſoon ſeized her, and ſhe expired in my brother's preſence juſt as the officers were leading him out to execution.

My mother is yet living, but ſunk into a deſpondency never to be cured; my father continually upbraids himſelf, as the murderer of his ſon, and both call upon me for conſolation, while my own boſom is conſtantly harrowed up by a recollection of our common calamity. It is for you, ſir, to comment on theſe viciſſitudes incident to humanity, yet the foregoing ſtory cannot poſſibly want a comment. It points out plainly the danger of being connected with the profligate of our ſex, and ſhews the inconſiſtency of youth, the additional neceſſity of rectitude, ſince the affliction ariſing from their miſconduct is not confined to the criminals themſelves but reaches in a lamentable degree to the parents, whom they deeply venerate, and the relations they tenderly love.

I am, Sir, Your conſtant reader.

LONDON.

The following is the laſt Stanzas of the Order for his Majeſty's Birth Day as it was performed before his Majeſty on the 4th of June laſt.

Lovelieſt of months! bright June, again
Thy ſeaſon ſmiles. With thee return
The frolic band of pleaſure's train,
With thee Britannia's feſtal morn,
When the glad land her homage pays
To George, her monarch and her friend.
"May cheerful health, may length of days,
"And ſmiling peace his ſteps attend!
"May every good"—Ceaſe, ceaſe the ſtrain;
The prayer were impotent and vain;
What greater good can man poſſeſs
Than he, to whom all bounteous Heaven,
With unremitting hand, has given
The power and will to bleſs?

St JOHN's, in ANTIGUA, July 27.

"On Sunday eve. June 22, 1771. Charles Finnie, maſter of the ſnow Eſther, Robert Dann, half owner, and Richard Bolton, ſurgeon, were on the quarter deck the people at the ſame time diverting themſelves at play ſeemingly: at half paſt 8 in the evening, Capt. Dann and Bolton, retired to the cabin. Immediately after they left the deck, the Doctor cried out, 'Lord have mercy on us! the people have ſeized Capt. Finnie,' and directly after, we (Dann and Bolton) ſaw him going aſtern, calling out, Capt. Dann! Immediately after this they called out to Capt. Dann to come up on deck, ſwearing 'Damn him, he ſhall go overboard after Finnie.' Capt Dann then begged them to ſave his life, as he had done no injury to any of them. George Waſhington then came down, with ſeveral others, broke open the arm cheſt, which lay in the Steerage, and loaded the arms, none of them being loaded before; Dann and Bolton had no time to get arms themſelves; the cry ſtill continued very ſtrong, particularly by John Cooper, who was chief mate, for Capt Dann to come on deck, where Thomas Jenkins ſtood ready with an axe to cut him down. Dann not coming upon deck, Thomas Terney went down, with a cocked piſtol to ſhoot him; but a negro wench who was on board, hung on him in ſuch a manner, and begged on her knees that he would ſhoot her and ſpare her maſter's life, that the villain relented and went on deck again.

In this ſituation we paſſed the night; in the morning the revolters held another conſultation when it was determined to kill Capt. Dann, but falling out among themſelves, his fate was reſpited. They at laſt reſolved to land Capt. Dann and Doctor Bolton on ſome unfrequented iſland where they might periſh. But the Almighty was pleaſed to interfere in our Deliverance in manner following.

On Wedneſday, July 10th, 1771 at half paſt eleven at night, Capt. Dann and the Doctor being aſleep in the cabbin, they were alarmed and greatly terrified by a prodigious noiſe and ſcoffing on deck, yet not daring to ſtir in their diſtreſſed ſituation, nor go up to ſee what was the matter. They retired under the cabbin deck, where they ſoon after heard Thomas Jenkins call on Capt Dann, and the Doctor to come up and take poſſeſſion of the veſſel again.

As they knew Jenkins to be as great a villain as any of them, though he and ſome others had ſeparated on the firſt quarrel after the murder of Capt. Finnie, they thought he was decoying them up to kill them, they therefore did not go up. Two of the wounded were at the ſame time calling on the Doctor to come up and dreſs their wounds, or they ſhould bleed to death. The Doctor at laſt ventured up and was followed by Capt. Dann, on the Doctor's aſſuring him he was ſafe. On their coming on deck they found Franciſco Maſſo, a Spaniard, who could not ſpeak a word of Engliſh, in poſſeſſion of the deck, and with no other weapon than an axe, had cut and wounded in a terrible manner Geo. Waſhington, alias Fiſher, who acted as Captain; Thomas Packer who acted as mate; James Watſon, who was Boatſwain, and John Lamb, who acted as gunner. The three laſt are ſince dead of their wounds. Bartholemew Lane he threw overboard; John Cooper, who was ſhipped as chief mate, and John Burrell, ſeaman, made no reſiſtance againſt the Spaniard, but hid themſelves below.

Thus was Captain Dann put in poſſeſſion of his veſſel again, in a moſt miraculous manner, and what moſt remarkably ſhews the immediate interpoſition of Providence in this diſcomfiture, is that the brave Spaniard received only one blow on the head with a hand ſpike which made a contuſion of about four inches long notwithſtanding the pirates were in poſſeſſion of the arm cheſt, and ſleeping all around it on deck. Jenkins and Terney, who were left out of irons, to aſſiſt in navigating the veſſel, intended to cut us off privately, a day or two before we made the land, but were timely ſecured in irons. The priſoners have ſince given information, that Waſhington & Terney had ground their knives, with intention of murdering Capt. Dann and Dr. Bolton, and that at another time the axes were brought up, and put under the boat for the ſame purpoſe; that at other times it was reſolved to ſeize and throw them overboard as they were making their obſervation. What prevented theſe helliſh deſigns, is not yet come to light.

William Neiſon was at the helm, when Finnie was thrown overboard, and does not appear to have been concerned in that action; but was privy to every other matter concerted by them after the murder of Finnie, and deeply engaged in the conſpiracy.

Their intention was to have landed Captain Dann and the Doctor on ſome deſolate iſland about the Cape de Verds; then to have proceeded to the Brazils to ſell the veſſel and cargo: But on the 8th inſt. being fearful of falling ſhort of proviſions, they altered their deſign, and bore away for the Bay of Honduras. It appears alſo, by the confeſſion of Thomas Jenkins, that James Anderſon ſecond mate, and John Barlow, carpenter, were both acquainted with the intentions of the pirates ſome time before their horrid ſcheme was put in execution, but never gave the leſt hint thereof to Capt. Dann or Dr. Bolton, though it does not appear they had any hand in throwing Charles Finnie overboard.

Capt. Dann, of the Snow Eſther, returns Lt. Col. Reynolds of the 68th regt his moſt grateful thanks, for his politeneſs and extraordinary expedition in ſending off a party of ſoldiers to eſcort on ſhore the band of [illegible] pirates, from whoſe bloody machinations [illegible] has pleaſed the Almighty ſo very miraculouſly to deliver him, and his ſurgeon Mr. Bolton.

On Tueſday night laſt, five of the pirates were brought aſhore under a ſtrong guard and lodg'd in the goal: And on Wedneſday morning were brought to the court houſe and underwent an examination before three of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace; when the evidence appearing clearly againſt them, they were remanded back to priſon, to take their trials before a Court of Admiralty, as ſoon as a commiſſion for that purpoſe can be obtained from his Honour the Lieutenant General.

NEW-YORK August 22.

A Mandamus was received by the laſt Packet, appointing William Axtell, Eſq; one of his Majeſty's Council for this Province, in the Room of the Hon. Joſeph Reade, Eſq; deceaſed; who was accordingly ſworn in on Wedneſday the 7th Inſt.

On the 17th Inſtant, his Excellency the Governor iſſued a Proclamation, notifying to all Perſons who under Titles derived from the Government of France, while in Poſſeſſion of Canada, claim Property in Lands ſituate on Lake Champlain, within the Limits of the Province of New-York but have not made known to this Government the Nature and Extent of their Claims under ſuch Titles as aforeſaid, to any Lands upon Lake Champlain N. of Crown-Point, and South of the 45th Degree of N. Latitude—To tranſmit to the Secretary's Office of the Province of New York within three Months from the Date hereof, authentic Exemplifications of the original Grants, together with ſatisfactory Evidence of the Lands therein mentioned, and of the Validity of the Title of the Claimants thereof at the Time of the Surrender of Canada to the Crown of G. Britain.

PHILADELPHIA, Auguſt 8.

The following droll affair happened ſome time ſince.——Some young men having tied an old broken chair to the tail of a large dog, turned him out in the ſtreet; away he run with great ſwiftneſs, and in his way the chair catched hold of the gown of a very genteel dreſſed woman, & threw her down with great force; the dog being very ſtrong, and the chair holding in her gown, he drawed her a little way along the pavement, and bruiſed her in ſeveral places. But this was not the worſt of the ſcene; the lady having her hair dreſſed in the modern perpendicular taſte, the violence of the fall ſhook this temporary monument to the very foundation, and great was the fall! The materials with which it was erected were as follows: A piece of black knit breeches ſtuffed with black wool, and made proportionable to the manner in which the hair was dreſſed; and on the outſide was hair very ingeniouſly worked into the breeches; upon this ſurpriſing piece of workmanſhip was frizzed the Lady's own hair, in order to raiſe the edifice. She being diſentangled, got up, and complained of being hurt a little, but took no notice of her piece of ornament for the head, which ſome boys had got hold of, kicking about the ſtreet as a foot-ball.

NEWBERN, N. Carolina, July 19.

By a perſon arrived in town, who has been through the Settlements of the Regulators, we have advice, that upwards of 6000 of thoſe people have taken the oaths of allegiance to his Majeſty, and happily returned to their farms and plantations: They ſay they are now perfectly contented, & expreſs much ſatisfaction at the event of the battle which has opened their eyes, and fully convinced them of the wrong meaſures they were purſuing.

By ſeveral intercepted letters from the Regulating Chiefs, it has very plainly appeared, that they intended to ſeize the government, tho' it was a profound ſecret among themſelves, and not ſuffered to tranſpire among the common people, who were to have been led on by degrees, with the pretence of redreſſing grievances, 'till their ſucceſſes againſt the provincial forces, which they made no doubt of, ſhould have infatuated their minds & ripened them for the execution of the grand plot.

Mr. WATSON,

In your Paper of Auguſt 13, 1771, I find the following Paſſage in a Letter from Carolina, &c.

"NEXT to this the Officers had extorted unlawful Fees in an unreaſonable Manner, and when the Country proſecuted them, cou'd get no Redreſs, or any kind of fair Trial, but on the contrary, the Proſecutors were like to be ruined by Suits commenced againſt them by Officers for Damages, Scandal, &c. & by the Means of picked Juries, compoſed of the Officers themſelves, who were indicted and liable to Indictments: ſo that a General Court Writ, againſt ever ſo Innocent a Man, became as dangerous, and dreadful as a Piſtol clap'd to his Breaſt by a Robber."—Now, Sir, if this Account is true, the People were really under the moſt deplorable Circumſtances. But I ſhould be glad to know from ſome abler Pen, if their Condition was abſolutely remedileſs, and whether they deſerved to be ſhot by their Governor, becauſe they had been oppreſs'd by their Sheriffs, &c? And whether it is abſolutely impoſſible that their wicked Rulers ſhould be call'd to Account before ſome proper humane Tribunal according to the Engliſh Conſtitution?

The Hiſtory of Rome informs us that Tarquinius Superbus, after he had added to his other Vices, the raviſhing the chaſte Lucretia, was deprived of his Kingdom and driven from Rome.

That Julius Cæſar, the Conquerer of the World, for endeavouring to enſlave his Country, was kill'd in the Senate Houſe, by his beſt Friends, becauſe they were ſtill more friendly to their Country, than to the Perſon of a Tyrant.

And the Engliſh Hiſtory informs T[illegible] I. for murdering a great N[illegible] his Subjects, &c. had his ow[illegible] cut off before his own Banquetting-Houſe.

Archbiſhop Laud had his Head cut off to appeaſe the well founded Reſentments of a moſt monſtrouſly abuſed People.

Judge Thorne was hanged.

Lord Chancellor Bacon, was condemned of Bribery and Corruption, was deprived of his Office as Lord Chancellor, his Seat in the Houſe of Lords, and his Eſtate, and confined to the Tower.

As the Earl of Northampton (in the Reign of James I.) was Warden of the Cinque Ports, the Jeſuits and Romiſh Prieſts, could ſafely land there without being examin'd at their Arrival. By this Means their Number ſo increaſed in a very ſhort ſpace, that the People loudly murmured at it, and caſt the Blame on the Earl of Northampton.

Wherefore to Silence thoſe that talked too freely, he took out a Writ of Scandalum Magnatum againſt ſome of them. He believed it was not impoſſible to convict him of a Thing founded only upon Common Report, and that ſuch Evidence not being valid in Law, he ſhou'd ſilence his Enemies by the Puniſhment of ſome the moſt forward to ſpeak againſt him. But the Archbiſhop of Canterbury broke his Meaſures, by producing a Letter under the Earl's own Hand to Cardinal Bellarmine, wherein he ſaid, "That however the Situation of the Affairs of England, and the Inſtances of the King, compell'd him to be a Proteſtant in ſhew; nevertheleſs his Heart ſtood firm with the Catholics, and he wou'd be ever ready to countenance them to the utmoſt of his Power." Upon this Letter the Parties accuſed were diſcharged; Nay the King ſo reprimanded the Earl, that he returned to his Country Houſe, where he died ſoon after.——Vide Rapin. Vol. 2, Fol. 226.

After being put in Mind of theſe Inſtances, hope ſome of your Readers that are Maſters of the Subject, will Point out a proper Remedy for our diſtreſſed Friends in Carolina, and tho' they can't raiſe the dead, yet perhaps, they may ſave the living; and thereby contribute to the Glory of God, by promoting the Good of Men, and oblige your old Friend,

KINGSTON, (Jamaica) June 10.

The 18th of March laſt, was tried and convicted at a court of oyer and terminer, held here, Capt in Zachariah Day, for the murder of Samuel Long, his boatſwain, on the high ſeas, near the iſland of Cuba; and on the day following, in the ſame court, was convicted, Thomas Bell, late chief mate of a Sloop belonging to Montego-Bay, for piratically robbing and plundering a Spaniſh ſchooner, near Cuba, of 44,600 Dollars. They were convicted upon the teſtimony of ſome of their veſſels's crew, whom they had turned adrift at ſea (to the number of 12, in the Spaniſh ſchooner, after they had robbed her) without water or proviſion, but who fortunately arrived here a few days afterwards. Day was executed the 25th of March, and Bell the firſt of April.

SAVANNAH, (Georgia) July 3.

We have an account from the Cherokee country, that the Weſtern Indians have killed four Cherokees, and a man named Joſhua Downes.

The Cherokees are endeavouring to get the Creeks to agree to the giving up the land they propoſe as a compenſation to the traders for their debts, which they (the Creeks) claim by conqueſt, but it is thought the Creeks will never be brought to renounce their claim. Could it be a conſiderable addition of a body of good land to this province, as well as advantageous to individuals concerned in the Cherokee trade who have large debts there; However the Cherokees are reſolved to give it up and to ſupport their right; upwards of 40 of them, among whom are the greateſt men of that nation, are now running the lines of the lands to be given up, and they threaten the Creeks, if they ſhould interfere, to bring upon them ſeveral Indian nations with whom they are in alliance.

PHILADELPHIA, Auguſt 15.

From St. Chriſtophers we learn, that on the 16th of July the following men of war arrived there in their way to Jamaica, viz. Princeſs Amelia, Admiral Rodney, Capt. Fotheringham of 16 guns, with the above ſhips, were not then arrived.

POET'S CORNER.

On HOPE.

HOPE, ſovereign balm, for each dejected ſoul,
This only can all human cares controul:
Great ſource of action—Kings & ſlaves reſerve;
Without it, ſlaves rebel, and monarchs ſtarve.
Take this away, and nature feels her doom,
Hell heaves to view, and brings its horrors home.
When princes, riot in the lap of eaſe,
Give law to nations and command the ſeas;
Add HOPE, or ſcepter'd heads, in frantic air,
Curſe fortune's ſmiles, and tumble on deſpair.
The labourer, toils beneath a ſcorching ſun,
In HOPE of food, and reſt, when day is gone.
The ſons of pleaſure (curſe the wretch who firſt Adduc'd that term, to grace the ſcenes of luſt)
In wild ignoble revels, waſte their days,
In HOPE of pleaſure in the dreary maze.
The ſons of fame (bluſh all of human race!)
Purſue the giddy, ignis fatuus chaſe,
In HOPE of honour, and a glorious name;
Yet graſp diſquiet, grief, eternal ſhame.
The miſer (ſordid wretch!) e'en he appears,
To live on HOPE, amidſt his load of fears.
And I the author HOPE—alas! for what?
'Tis only this, that I may be forgot.

PHILO-SAPPHO.

Mr. PRINTER,

After I have ſtated my caſe to you truly, I may then hope thro' your means, for a redreſs of my grievance; the which if I obtain, will oblige ſeveral of your young friends, as well as myſelf.

I Am a lad, of about fourteen years of age who by a natural good genius, aſſiſted by the labours of a ſkilful maſter, have attained a conſiderable degree of knowledge in the art of Muſic. After I had experienced ſome of the pleaſures and benefits which neceſſarily flows from ſuch an uſeful knowledge, I was ſolicitous to impart the ſame to as many of my play mates as could be perſuaded to liſten to my advice. I have ſucceeded ſo well, as that I have learn't a little number, to know almoſt as much of the rules as I do—we are now able to perform in concert, to the admiration of thoſe who are the beſt judges. And by means of this improving art, we have been ſo fortunate as to gain the friendſhip and eſteem of ſome perſons of worth and merit, who have condeſcended to own it as a favour to be admitted into our little ſociety, when we have met together for the improvement of ſinging. This we mention not out of oſtentation, but with thanks and gratitude to gentlemen who have honoured us with their good company and approbation. There are a multitude of advantages I could mention as flowing from this pleaſant art, as it diſpoſes us to peace and agreement among ourſelves, to induſtry that we might gain time to improve in ſaid art, to a dutiful obedience to our parents, that we might gain their good will and concurrence in the thing. We naturally learn good manners, as our ſkill often introduces us into the company of gentlemen of polite education. The laſt, and greateſt advantage I ſhall mention at this time, as flowing from the knowledge of this art; is the aſſiſtance it affords to an upright heart (in ſounding forth the praiſes of the great creator of all things) in a moſt harmonious and decent manner, which never fails to delight the ears of thoſe who poſſeſs a good heart, and have a reliſh for muſic. After we had experienced ſomething of the advantages above named, we by the advice of ſome friends, endeavoured to ſit together in one ſeat on ſundays, that we might be the better accommodated to aſſiſt and encourage each other in performing the counter part, as that part is well adapted to young voices; and we hoped we ſhould be countenanced by almoſt all. But alas! there are but few, comparitively that openly incourage us. Some only deride us, and others are ſo ſilent or paſſive, as that we are greatly at a loſs whether we pleaſe or diſpleaſe the greater part. ſince the oppoſition we meet with from the envious and illnatured, cannot have paſs'd unobſerv'd, and yet no means have been uſed to prevent the growing miſchief.

"Juſt education forms the man."
GAY.

IF in the preſent ſituation of the world, the inhabitants of London, Paris and other polite cities in Europe, are in the ſcale of intelligence as much ſuperior to the Hottentots in Caffraria, as thoſe Hottentots are ſuperior to the brute creation.—If this difference ariſes ſolely from the advantages of education, can any argument be worth uſing in favour of learning, after holding up the contraſt to public view—that the difference ariſes ſolely from education may poſſibly be diſputed by ſome, who are fond of being thought ſo far the favourites of heaven as to have inherited by birth a double portion of its favours; not deſirous of diſputing the matter with theſe, who plume themſelves on their native ſtrength of genius; will only remind them of that equitable doctrine, which ſays to whom much is given, of him alſo is much required; and ſay from my own obſervation on mankind, in different climates, and under very different regulations, as to their firſt education, and ſubſequent conduct; forms of government civil and religious, I have ever found common ſenſe, like the other moſt important bleſſings of heaven (which are too often unnoticed becauſe frequent) to be equally diſtributed, among the ſons of men, in every corner of the globe. Not that this equality is abſolute and univerſal, between all the individuals, which compoſe the great whole of kingdoms & continents but that it is generally ſo.—The great importance of well educating youth, is a ſubject too copious, to be minutely diſcuſs'd in a paper like this, and I truſt too obvious to need it. One good conſequence of liberal education, and a public encouragement of letters, is, that nothing ſo effectually ſecures the liberties of mankind, both civil, and religious.—As full proof of this, view the completely deſpotic governments in Aſia,—There, as alſo in Turkey, it is a prime maxim of the tyrants, to baniſh the liberal arts, and ſciences from their dominions, and to take off every genious, that attempts to purſue them, as being a moſt dangerous ſubject.

A policy like this, is abſolutely neceſſary, in ſuch tyrannical ſyſtems of government; for the maxim "that men once ignorant are ſlaves," may be revers'd, and be equally true, "that "men once learned will be free;" and have the experience of all ages to confirm it.—That a people well acquainted with the rights of men, and indulged in freedom of enquiry and ſentiment, ſhould ever ſubmit to abſolute ſlavery, is a contradiction in the nature of things.—The examples of the preſent day are very ſtriking—France has long been conſidered as an abſolute monarchy, yet the ſubjects have enjoyed as much greater liberty, than thoſe in Spain and Portugal, as Britons have ſuperior to them;—For a century paſt France has encouraged letters, and their academies have produced men, of the firſt character in the learned world; I ſay for a century paſt they have encouraged they have always in ſome degree tolerated letters; and the conſequence has been happy, in keeping out of their kingdom, that court of hell—the inquiſition—Nor has his holineſs himſelf, ever had an abſolute power in France, never even ſo great a power, as he once had in England.—The noble ſtruggles and ſpirited efforts which are now making in France for liberty, and which will undoubtedly prove ſucceſsful in the end; are, under heaven, entirely to be attributed to their encouragement of learning.—It has become a common topic among our retailers of politics for the day, that the Britiſh nation, is now ripe for abject ſlavery, and the conſequence are not far from [illegible]. Theſe political Doctors, [illegible] unlike the quacks in Medicine, who [illegible] a good conſtitution againſt a diſeaſe, are often fatally aided by their own poiſon, [illegible] ſymptoms of inſtant death—that corruption is too fatally prevalent, and luxury carried to a great height in the nation, none will deny, yet at the ſame time I challenge one ſingle inſtance, in the hiſtory of the world, of a nation ſubmitting to ſlavery, when the arts and ſciences were in ſo flouriſhing a ſtate, as in Great Britain, at this day; when the freedom of ſpeech or debate of the preſs, were tolerated in ſo high a degree as even to border (at leaſt) on licentiouſneſs.

That we have a venal miniſtry, who would gladly enſlave the nation for their own private advantage is a melancholy truth and their attack on the freedom of the preſs, is a full proof from what quarter they expect and fear the greateſt oppoſition, and confirms what I wiſh to convince my countrymen of, that the arts and ſciences, or in other words a good education is the greateſt ſecurity a people can have againſt tyranny & ſlavery.—The encouragement given to ſchools, both public and private by the founders of this colony, in their firſt ſettlement, and at a time when they could but ill afford to ſupport any expence [illegible] does honour to their legiſlature, and has anſwered in a great degree their generous deſigns in diffuſing the immediately uſeful branches of learning, thro' all ranks ſo that we may without boaſting challenge the world to produce an equal proportion of inhabitants in any colony, or province where there will be found ſo few totally ignorant or a greater number liberally educated.

I have conſidered the benefits of a good education only in reſpect to the liberties of mankind, and they if no other reſulted from learning, are of the laſt importance and may deſervedly claim the firſt attention of the ſtate.

There is no inſtitution but is ſubject to be, and often is abuſed, nor are any of the ſyſtems, ſchemes, or plans of men, ſo perfect at firſt, if ever, but that very great alterations, and improvements to advantage may be made in them.—The plan on which our private ſchools were firſt regulated in the colony, was as I have hinted, well adapted to anſwer the generous deſign, of general, uſeful inſtruction, but unhappily we have not improved on it, in proportion as the country has increaſed, nor been generous towards their ſupport, in any degree, equal to our ability.—The abſurd, the miſerly notion of preferring cheap ſchools, has ſomehow ſtrangely, and fatally prevailed;—a little pittance of public money, as it is call'd, in the very nature of things deſign'd, generally deſign'd to aſſiſt thoſe in the education of their children, whoſe circumſtances in life were neceſſitous; has been by the opulent improv'd as a fund, principally deſign'd for them, and to which they have the firſt right; and has been held up to view as a ſum, equal to the ſupport of ſchools in the colony; at leaſt it has been the ſtudy of many, in various parts of the colony, to reduce the expence of a maſter, or inſtructor, and the contingent charges of our ſchools, to that ſcanty allowance, and they have been, and are ſtill, too unhappily ſucceſsful.—The ſole criterion with them to determine the ability of the candidate for a ſchool, is his price.—The conſequence of this conduct is, juſt what it might have been expected—our ſchools languiſh & decline, and are by no means on ſo reſpectable a footing as they were thirty years ago. Gentlemen of [illegible], will not undertake the taſk of them, if any other [illegible] offers; [illegible] at this time ſchools in the colony of repute for inſtruction; and to which perſons, ſenſible of the great advantages of learning, would of choice, ſend their children, except thoſe [illegible] ſupported principally by private [illegible] in a great meaſure [illegible] that the public monies [illegible].—The light in which they are now regarded and the manner in which they are applied, are really productive of the above ill conſequences.

To remedy which, as the number of our poor do and muſt continue to increaſe, would it not be proper to [illegible] all thoſe monies appropriated ſolely and abſolutely for their children, and leave the wealthy to bear the expence of their own families, on their own eſtates? [illegible] the colony will ſoon find proper ſubjects enough, to take up even a much larger ſum.—Our private ſchools are of proportionably greater conſequence, than the public ones, or colleges, as a much greater number will be benefited by the former, which are, or ought to be calculated to ſerve all, without exception [illegible] which nothing is taught but what is abſolutely neceſſary.—In our colleges, but a few are educated, and the mode of education unhappily but ill adapted to the uſeful and the neceſſary [illegible]—when we add to this, the little judgment exerciſed in conſulting the genius of the youth ſent there—It will not be ſurprizing if the colleges are found leſs beneficial, than we could wiſh, and though many of the youth educated there, rather unfitted than fitted for buſineſs. The author of the Complainant, No. 2, exclaims [illegible] of the ill conſequences of not conſulting the genius of youth, in their education, in the characters of Thomas and William [illegible] two brothers, the elder of which contrary to his inclination and genius, was forc'd into college, thence into the pulpit, where after leading a few years worſe than uſeleſs life, he was diſmiſs'd from his pariſh, ſilenc'd, reduc'd to poverty, and finally obliged to butcher, and ſerve as oſtler at an inn for a living.—While the younger was ruined, by being fix'd in a courſe of life equally contrary to his natural genius and inclination. A friend of mine, has lately favoured me with a letter, which Tom who thought himſelf bore hard on, wrote to the Complainant, together with his own hiſtory, which as it was not ſent ſeaſonably for that paper, he has deſired me to publiſh in the Obſervator. I ſhall in ſome future paper, comply with his requeſt, ſince pointing out the ill effects of any thing, naturally tends to excite our attempts, and direct our efforts for removing its cauſe.

A Diſſertation upon Solitude.

HAPPY is he who, eſtranged from the tumultuous buſtle of the world, enjoys the ſweets of a delightful ſolitude, and whoſe principal converſation conſiſts of an agreeable intercourſe with himſelf. The teſtimonies of a good conſcience make him view with contempt the follies and vanities of the world. His ſole ambition is centered in mental tranquility; he neither fears the inconſtancy of fortune, nor the caprices of fate, he contemns riches and deſpiſes the tranſitory grandeurs of the earth. Satisfied with the preſent, he is perfectly eaſy about the future. Contented with himſelf, he is never a burthen to his companions. He never finds himſelf under the diſagreeable neceſſity of ſpeaking againſt his ſentiments, or feeling the effects of ſtubborn contradiction. Diſtant from the court, he has nothing to dread from the ill humours of a Prince; nor need he take any mortifying trouble to inſinuate himſelf into his good graces. He is not compelled to exerciſe the mean complaiſance extracted by the great; and he is ſo happily ſituated that it is impoſſible for him to injure any one. He ſtudies the paſt, obſerves the preſent, and limits his cares to himſelf, without troubling himſelf with the buſineſs of others. Equally inacceſſible to pride and ambition, avarice appears to him madneſs and luxury a brilliant folly, envy a meanneſs, and lazineſs a crime. Employed in praiſing his Creator, his tongue is never exerciſed about trifles. Having no cauſe to be melancholy or out of temper, he ſees nothing that can diſpleaſe him. Engaged in the converſe of the wiſe and learned men of antiquity he finds himſelf happily delivered from the importunities of the ſilly contemporaries. Sober and frugal in his repaſts, he does not expoſe his health to the dangers of luxury. He can compaſs all his wants, becauſe he requires nothing but what is in his power. He goes to reſt with tranquility, and riſes with joy Time is a bleſſing to him, and his life is a tiſſue of intermingled ſilk and gold. His correſpondence is with Heaven, whither his thoughts inceſſantly carry him. He has no deſire for the things of this world becauſe he is acquainted with their tranſitory duration. He ſighs only for celeſtial objects, to which all his views are confined. In a word he waits for death, without either deſiring, or fearing it.

A Deſcription of a TORY.

EVERY fool is not a Tory, but every Tory is a fool. The man who maintains the "divine right of kings to govern wrong" is a fool, and alſo a genuine Tory. Becauſe all legitimate ſuperiority, and all juſt power is derived from God, to conclude, that all the tyrannical power that has been exerciſed by wicked kings, ſuch as William the Norman, Henry the Eighth, Charles the Firſt and Second, James the Second, is likewiſe derived from God, and that ſuch kings are God's vicegerents, are the real principles of a Tory, and are not only fooliſh but blaſphemous. One may ſay with the ſtricteſt preciſion, that ſuch kings are the Devil's vicegerents; for they do the Devil's work, and advance his kingdom. But the Tory is ſuch an egregious fool as to contend, that theſe agents of the Devil are the repreſentatives of the all juſt God; and, in neceſſary conſequence, that paſſive obedience to them is the indiſpenſable duty of their ſubjects. Such were the principles, that in Charles the Firſt's reign, provoked the honeſt and ſenſible part of the nation to take up arms and repel force by force; And what was the conſequence? This idol of theſe fools the Tories, his God's vicegerent, was permitted by providence to be brought to the block; his eldeſt ſon, after a long miſerable exile, & a vicious, profligate reign, to be poiſoned; his younger ſon and all his race, to be expelled, and, by the moſt ſolemn laws, for ever excluded from reigning over the Britiſh dominions. Wonderful it is, after the reigns of William the Third, Anne, George the Firſt and Second, and in the 11th year of the reign of George the Third, to ſee the ſame fooliſh, abſurd, blaſphemous principles revived and aſſerted; but you have the ſolution above, "Though every fool is not a Tory, yet every Tory is a fool."

BOSTON, Auguſt 29.

By Capt. Collier, and Capt. Robert Jervis, from London, we have the following Advices from the public Prints.

From the LONDON GAZETTE.

St. James's, June 12.

THIS day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in common council aſſembled, waited upon his Majeſty; and being introduced to his Majeſty by the Right Hon. the Earl of Hertford, Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's houſhold, Sir James Hodges, Knt. Town Clerk made their compliments in the following addreſs.

To the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The humble addreſs of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council aſſembled.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London, in Common Council aſſembled, embrace this joyful occaſion of approaching your Majeſty with our ſincere congratulations on the ſafe delivery of the Queen, and the auſpicious birth of another Prince.

"Your Majeſty's ever loyal and faithful Citizens of London, exceeded by none of your ſubjects in honeſt and anxious zeal for your Majeſty's happineſs, and the glory and proſperity of your reign, rejoice in all events which augment your Majeſty's domeſtic felicity; firmly truſting that every increaſe of the auguſt houſe of Brunſwick will prove an additional ſecurity to our religion and the great charter of liberty, which in conſequence of the glorious and neceſſary revolution that illuſtrious houſe was choſen to defend.

Signed by Order of Court,

James Hodges."

To which addreſs his Majeſty was pleaſed to return the following moſt gracious anſwer.

"I thank you for this dutiful addreſs & for your congratulations on the ſafe delivery of the Queen, and the birth of another Prince.

"It gives me great ſatisfaction to find that you conſider the increaſe of my family as an additional ſecurity to our religion, and to that liberty which I look upon with pleaſure as the baſis of my government, and which I ſhall always think my honour and intereſt concerned to defend."

They were all graciouſly received, and had the honour to kiſs his Majeſty's hand.

June 21. Yeſterday her Majeſty ſat up a ſhort time, for the firſt time ſince her lying in. The young Prince, it is ſaid, is ſo troubled with convulſions that his life is deſpaired of.

LONDON, June 21. 1772.

A Very powerful aſſociation is forming in the capital provinces of France, to refuſe the Payment of all Taxes.

The Earl of Halifax dying without iſſue male, his title becomes extinct.

Mr. Whatley is appointed Under-Secretary by the Earl of Suffolk. He is alſo appointed Surveyor of the King's Bench private roads in the room of Hatton Finch, Eſq; a place worth 1000l. per annum.

It is certain, that the Biſhop of Litchfield goes to Durham, and Dr. Brownlow North ſcarce 30 years of age, Dean of Canterbury, to Litchfield.

Notwithſtanding the Duke of Grafton is appointed Lord Privy Seal, he is not admitted to the Cabinet. Lord North has ſo far prevailed, though he could not keep the Duke out of office, yet to keep him out of Council; ſo that his holding the high Office of Lord Privy Seal, may be conſidered as a penſion; a great nominal Employment, without any Duty.

Lord Suffolk has been ſo dangerouſly ill of a Fever that his Life has been deſpaired of.

It may be depended on, that a ſingle elderly gentleman of conſiderable fortune, near Frome, in Somerſetſhire, has bequeathed an Eſtate to Mr. Wilkes of 1200l. per annum after his deceaſe; and it is ſaid, that he has already preſented the Patriot with a genteel Preſent as a Reward for his Services.

We hear Lord North is appointed Ranger of Buſhy Park in the room of the late Lord Hallifax. The ſalary is 600l. per annum.

Whatever may be ſaid to the contrary, a little time will ſhew that the Duke of Grafton is not a mere nominal Miniſter as reported: He has the entire confidence of the K——, and it is thought will, in the end, bring about a change at preſent but little thought of, to the aſtoniſhment of thoſe who now labour to oppoſe his intentions."

A Bon Mot, which lately fell from the Prince of Wales, is much talked of at Court: Being lately at play with his brothers, and ſome other little ones of diſtinction, it was ſuggeſted by one of the young Gentlemen to make a temporary priſon of a large cloſet in the room, and to confine ſuch offenders there as violated the eſtabliſhed laws of any amuſement with which they choſe to divert themſelves.——The Prince, however, inſtantly diſapproved the propoſition, ſaying, that "Liberty in this country was too ſerious a thing ever to be made a jeſt of."

The London Papers are filled with Diſputes relative to Wilkes and Horne, and Addreſſes to the Liverymen for the Office of Sheriff. Samuel Plumbe, Eſq; and John Kirkman, Eſq; addreſs that they are the two ſenior Aldermen in Rotation.——Richard Kirkman Eſq; puts up with John Kirkman, Eſq;——John Wilkes, Eſq; and Frederick Bull, Eſq; are in Nomination together.——The Choice was to be on the 24th of June.

LONDON, June 8.

One of the Footpads, who robbed the Reverend Mr. Horne, turned about to that Patriot, as he was going off, and clinking the Guineas in the Hollow of his Hand, ſaid, "This is the firſt public Money that I ever handled."

BASSATERRE, (St. Chriſtopher's) July 27.

Extract of a letter from St. Euſtatius, July 20.

This is to inform you that we have juſt received advice, that Mr. Bloyden's ſloop is taken by the Spaniard's with a full load of turtle, and that the turtlers to the number of 32 men, were carried to St. Domingo as ſlaves. Mr. Thomas Low's ſchooner was at the ſame place, and was obliged to cut, and run, fearing they ſhould ſhare the ſame fate.

PHILADELPHIA, Auguſt 22.

Extract of a letter from Peterſburg, Auguſt 6.

"Laſt night a Runner arrived here from fort Chartres; he came from thence the 20th of June, with a party, in three battoes, two officers, and a recruiting party of ſoldiers, which he left yeſterday morning at the Miegoe Town, about 40 miles down the river. By him we learn that the Kickapoes and Oaiottanons have ſtruck the Engliſh, and have killed a man that lived on a place down there, belonging to Mr. Morgan; alſo another white man, and a negro; that they purſued this party, and intended to way lay them at ſome creek, but by their diligence they paſſed the creek two days before the Indians arrived."

NEWPORT, (Rh. Iſland) Aug. 19.

Laſt Tueſday a ſhip, built on a new conſtruction, for carrying home to England a large quantity of timber, was launched at Warren in this colony.—She was partly loaded before launching, with timber fram'd in ſo as to be almoſt ſolid, and is to be filled up in the ſame manner; by which means, though ſhe will meaſure but about 160 tons, carpenter's tonnage, 'tis ſaid ſhe will carry upwards of 1200 tons of timber. This veſſel is built on the plan contrived by Mr. Levi, who has a patent for building this ſort of veſſels, which are called Rafts

BOSTON, Auguſt 26

We learn from Newbern in North-Carolina, that a News Paper of the 27th of June laſt, called The Maſſachuſetts Spy, No. 17, had been received there, in which was inſerted a piece ſigned LEONIDAS, containing ſundry particulars relative to the Meaſures purſued by that Government againſt the Regulators, and highly reflecting upon the conduct and character of Governor Tryon, and the diſadvantages they laboured under for want of a free Preſs; the Inhabitants of that Town, in order to do themſelves and their late Governor Juſtice, thought themſelves compelled in point of honour to call a public meeting, which was accordingly done on Monday the 29th of July, in order to collect their ſentiments reſpecting the Contents of ſaid Paper; and the Hon. Samuel Cornell, Eſq; being appointed Chairman, they came to ſeveral Reſolutions in vindication of the character of Governor Tryon, for his integrity and propriety of Conduct in public life; and that the Preſſes there were ever conſidered by them as entirely free, and as being open to all parties, but influenced by none; that therefore the ſuggeſtions contained in the ſaid Maſſachuſetts-Spy were conſidered by them as an high inſult and indignity offered to that ſpirit of conſtitutional freedom and independence which the Inhabitants of North Carolina have ever diſcovered:—They then concluded with the two following Reſolves.

That the Paragraphs in the ſaid Maſſachuſetts-Spy, which have reference to the Meaſures of Government taken by Governor Tryon againſt the Regulators, are replete with the baſeſt Miſrepreſentations, the moſt palpable Falſities, and and abuſive Epithets, and ſcandalous Invectives, and that therefore it is a ſhameful perverſion of the Liberty of the Preſs, & that the Authors and Publiſhers thereof deſerve to be publickly ſtigmatized, and loaded with the heavieſt contempt and reproach. And,

That the chairman be directed to requeſt the Sheriff of the County to give orders that the paper called the Maſſachuſetts Spy, No. 17, be publickly burnt under the Gallows by the hands of the common Hangman, as an open Teſtimony of the utter Abhorrence and Deteſtation in which that infamous Production, and its ſtill more infamous Authors, are held by the People of this Government.

BOSTON, Auguſt 29.

His Excellency the GOVERNOR's Commiſſion of Vice-Admiral, came in one of the laſt Veſſels from England.

It was reported that a few days ſince, that the MURDERER Richardſon's pardon came with Capt. Jarvis: But ſome people think that it arrived ſome months ago, & could not be applied, becauſe he was not condemned, and that ſome other means will be found out, whereby he may eſcape Juſtice, and the laws of God, nature, and the land be eluded.

We have authority to aſſure the public that the celebrated Juſtice M---y, & the infamous MacM----rs, both of whom are now in England, have been introduced by the Nettleham Baronet to Lord North, as men who have ſuffered for their ſteadineſs in the ſupport of government, & therefore worthy of his Lordſhip's notice in the pecuniary way who has promiſed the Juſtice a reward of 1000l. and Mac 300l. Judas had but thirty pieces of ſilver, How much more encouragement have men now to be traitors than ſeventeen hundred years ago!

NEW-YORK, Auguſt 29

Laſt Friday departed this Life after a lingering Sickneſs, at Brooklyn, on Long Iſland, in an advanced Age, Capt. Francis Koffler;—he was eſteemed an honeſt and upright Man, and is greatly lamented.—The laſt War he had the Command of ſeveral Privateers out of this Port, and acquired great honour by the Bravery and Reſolution with which he acted in the ſeveral Engagements he was in.

A ſtranger, lately arrived here, who calls himſelf Dr. Anthony Yeldall, and ſells Medicines from a Stage; who by his Harangues, the odd Tricks of his Merry Andrew, and the ſurpriſing Feats of Activity of his little Boy, highly diverts the People, has for ſeveral Weeks paſt exhibited at Brooklyn, on Long Iſland; to which Place, it is ſaid, ſeveral thouſand of People, moſtly from this City, have flock'd to ſee and hear him every Day of his Exhibition. On Monday laſt a great Multitude, as uſual, having attended him; on their Return to croſs the Ferry, the Boats being inſufficient to carry them all, were prodigiouſly crowded; every one got in as ſoon as he could, and when the Boat was full, they put off without waiting for the Ferry men. One of the Boats that put off about Sunſet, having on board 110 Perſons, Men Women and Children. Before they could well fix themſelves for rowing, the Rapidity of the Tide drove the Boat upon and over a Rock, by which the Rudder was beat off, and the Bottom ſhatter'd, thro' which the Water ruſhed in Sluices. Before they could think of any Meaſures for their Preſervation, the Boat was driven upon and over another Rock, which increaſed the Leaks, together with the Confuſion and Diſmay of the People on board, where the Water rapidly increaſed every Moment. The Tears and Cries of the Women and Children, the Looks of Aſtoniſhment and Terror of the whole Company, at the Proſpect of immediate Death, from which no Means of Deliverance appear'd, produced a Scene of Diſtreſs, that Words cannot deſcribe. The Men were thrown into a ſtupefaction, that hindered them from attempting any Thing for their Preſervation; and their confuſed Noiſe and Geſtures, were by the People on ſhore ſuppoſed to be the Effects of Mirth and Jollity. At laſt ſome of the Boys on board began to lade out the Water with their Hats, which being obſerved by the People on ſhore, and in Boats at a Diſtance, convinced them that theſe diſtreſſed People were in need of aſſiſtance, which was given with all poſſible Expedition by ſeveral Boats which arrived juſt in Time to ſave the People in the leaky Boat, which was upon the Point of ſinking, the Water being above the Knees of the Men, and up to the Middle of ſome of the Children, and the Edge of the Boat not above a Hand's Breath above Water.

To ſuch a Number of People in perfect Health and high Spirits, this ſtriking Proſpect of immediate Death, and providential Deliverance from it——whereby many families have been ſaved from Mourning, Lamentation and Woe, ſhould not fail of making a ſtrong and laſting Impreſſion, and having a good Effect not only upon the Perſons who were the immediate Actors in the Scene, and their near Relatives, but upon all who were Witneſſes of it.

From Virginia we have Advice, that the very heavy Rains that fell, the latter End of laſt Month, have drowned half the Tobacco on the low Grounds of Rappahannock and Patowmack, on both Sides the Rivers which, it is ſaid, will make the growing Crop the ſhorteſt that has been ſince 1757.

A LIST of RELICKS to be ſeen in the Church of Dobberan, a village of the Duchy of Mecklenburg, ſituate two Miles from the Baltic. From NUGENT's Travels through Germany.

IN the Church of Dobberan are ſtill preſerved many of thoſe Relics ſo much ſought after in Popiſh Times. They are ſhewn now as a Curioſity, and a Mark of the Ignorance and Superſtition of former ages. The Liſt of them is as follows

1. A ſmall Quantity of Flax, which the Virgin Mary had for ſpinning.
2. A Bundle of Hay, which the Three Wiſe Men of the Eaſt had for their Cattle, and left behind them at Bethlehem.
3. A Book of Ignatius Loyola, the Founder of the Jeſuits.
4. A Piece of poor Lazarus's Garment.
5. A Bone of St. Chriſtopher, and the firſt Joint of his Thumb.
6. The Shoulder Blade of the ſaid St. Chriſtopher.
7. A Piece of Linen Cloth, which the Virgin Mary wove with her own hands.
8. A Piece of the Head belonging to the Fiſh mentioned in Tobit.
9. The Napkin, which the Bridegroom made uſe of, at the Marriage in Cana of Galilee.
10. Some Bones of Mrs. Adams, Grandmother of an Abbot of Dobberan.
11. A Piece of Joſeph's Mantle, which he left in the Hands of Potiphar's Wife, when ſhe tempted him to lie with her.
12. A Hair of St. Jerome's Muſtachoes.
13. Part of Judas's Bowels, which guſhed out as he burſt aſunder.
14. The Sciſſars, with which Delilah cut off Sampſon's Hair.
15. A Piece of the Apron which the Butcher wore, when he killed the Calf, upon the Return of the Prodigal Son.
16. A Fragment of Chriſt's Winding-Sheet.
17. One of the five ſmooth Stones which David put into his Bag when he went to encounter the Giant Goliah.
18. A Branch of the Tree on which Abſalom hung by the Hair.
19. The Stone, with which Zipporah circumciſed her Child on the Road.
20. A Night-Cap of the Virgin Mary, with ſome of the Bones of the holy Innocents ſlaughtered by Herod.
21. A Night-Cap of the Infant Jeſus.
22. The Head of St. Thomas the Apoſtle.
23. The Head of St. Paul.
24. The Head of St. Peter.
25. A Piece St Peters Fiſhing-Net.

This is the whole Collection, which they preſerve with as much Care as if it contained a moſt valuable Treaſure. The Profeſſor told Mr. Nugent, that one of the principal Relics had been ſtolen in the laſt Century; and it was no leſs than a Quill of the Angel Gabriel's Wing.

NEW LONDON, Auguſt 23.

We hear from Wyoming that one John Dick, an Iriſh Fellow, with a Party of about 30 Ruffians, the off ſcouring of two or three Governments, in the Night Time of the 30th of July laſt, ſurpriſed the Connecticut People at Wyoming, by firing on the Centry, one Richard Cook, whom they [illegible]; but the Connecticut People rallying, ſoon diſperſed theſe Villains.——This is the ſame John Dick that has been a pretended Conſtable, this two or three Years, to worry the Connecticut People, with his Colleague another Conſtable, one James Logan, a Muſtee or Moleſto Fellow. Thoſe two have been Principally employed under the famous (or rather infamous) Capt. Ogden, as Civil Officers, perhaps two of the moſt daring, infamous Raſcals that the two Nations of Iriſh & Negro can afford; and is the ſame John Dick and James Logan, that ſome Time paſt, and ſince they were in the Commiſſion of Conſtable, broke into the Houſe of one Brink, of Lower Smithfield, on Delaware River, and after they had raviſhed his Daughter, they ſnapped a Piſtol at his Wife by which ſurprize ſhe miſcarried.—Brink preſſed hard to have Juſtice againſt them and had them bound-over;—but they were ſo uſeful in murdering and robbing of the Connecticut People at Wyoming they were releaſed, and Juſtice could not be had againſt them.—And theſe are likewiſe the ſame Villains that laſt Winter perpetrated the Cruelty on the Wife of one [illegible]——A great Evidence of the badneſs of a Cauſe, when the vileſt of Men & Monſters are made Uſe of to ſupport it: When at the ſame Time the Connecticut People are ready and deſirous to have it ſettled in a legal Way, without Difficulty or Bloodſhed.

To the PUBLIC.

WE have in the public prints an account of a battle fought between the Militia of North Carolina, commanded by William Tryon, Eſq; on one part, and a party of Men who ſtile themſelves Regulators. The accounts we have of this very unhappy diſturbance, or as the Government of that province calls it, of this rebellion, are not ſufficiently particular to enable us at this diſtance to form a juſt opinion of it. We muſt ſuppoſe the Governor judged it expedient to act the Part he has taken on the one hand, even to his firing upon these people, before the expiration of the time he had allotted them for repentance; nor can we imagine that any [illegible] companies of individuals, varying from each other in principles, civil and religious, as well as ſtations, could enter into ſo dangerous an oppoſition to government, unleſs they found themſelves aggrieved, and had reaſon to deſpair of relief from any other quarter. That Subjects have a right to complain of public oppreſſion, and inſiſt on having grievances redreſſed, is in this day well underſtood. The deſign of government is acknowledged to be the good of the people. Its ſtrength and happineſs depends more on the [illegible] of the adminiſtration than on any particular form; Nay, we have many inſtances in which bad rulers have availed themſelves of ſuch eſtabliſhments as ſeemed to inſure happineſs to the people and ſtability, to perpetrate impoſitions and cruelties which would not have been borne but for a confidence in the laws, and an attachment to the form. As to the affair in Carolina, it is underſtood but by few. As humanity intereſts every tender heart in the diſtreſs of fellow creatures; and a field of battle covered over with the garments of fellow citizens rolled in blood is an unuſual ſcene to us, the following extracts from ſome of the public papers may not be unacceptable; they may at leaſt ſerve to give us ſome idea of what thoſe unhappy people felt.

The diſturbances appear to have originated in the county of Granville; to have extended ſome time after to Halifax, &c. and at laſt to Orange. In Granville they ſay, "It is not our form of government or body of laws we quarrel with, but the [illegible] practices of the officers of our County Courts, and the abuſes we ſuffer by thoſe who are impowered to manage our public affairs—and the notorious and intolerable abuſes that have crept into the practice of the law, &c." And with regard to their meaſures they proceed thus. "Let us be careful to keep ſober, do nothing raſhly, but act with deliberation; Let us do nothing againſt the known laws of the land, that we appear not in a faction, endeavouring to ſubvert the laws and over turn the ſyſtem of government; but [illegible] care to appear what [illegible] by birth, endeavouring to [illegible] our [illegible] rights, by reducing the [illegible] practices of the Officers of our Courts down to the Standard of Law." Then they [illegible]

[illegible] read at one of their public Courts of the county [illegible] for quitting of office & carrying no unjuſt appreciations, &c. "As there are many [illegible] of this nature complained of in this county of Orange in private amongſt the inhabitants, [illegible] in order to remove the jealouſies out of our minds. Honeſt rulers in power will be glad to ſee us examine this matter freely." Their propoſed procedure for enquiry is, "Let each neighbourhood throughout the county meet together and appoint one or more men to meet together at a ſuitable place where there is no ſtrong liquor at which meeting let it be judiciouſly enquired into whether the freemen of this county labour under any abuſes of power or not, and let the ſame be notified in writing." In conſequence of this notification, at a [illegible] meeting of deputies from ſeveral neighbourhoods, they iſſued the following. "At a general meeting, &c. Auguſt 20 1766, to examine if the freemen of this county labour under any abuſes of power, and to examine into the public tax by what laws, and for what uſe they are laid; and in order to remove jealouſies out of our minds; the Repreſentatives, Veſtry men, and other Officers, are requeſted to give the members of ſaid meeting what information they can. So far as they value the good will of every freeholder, and the execution of public office pleaſant and delightful." They met again for this purpoſe, but were not favoured with the company of any one officer. On this they drew up a paper, propoſing a yearly conference of the freeholders from the different parts of that extenſive county, to conſider the matters aforeſaid, and agree in the choice of Repreſentatives. In this paper we find the following paragraph referring to the Officers, Lawyers, &c. "If they hereafter are inclined to anſwer our requeſt (of a general conference and enquiry) we will attend them at ſome other time and place on their giving us proper notice."—April 4, 1768, they ſay, "We will attend our meeting of conference as often as is neceſſary and convenient, to conſult our Repreſentatives on the amendment of ſuch laws as ſhall be found grievous, [illegible] than we have heretofore for Burgeſſes and Veſtrymen; and to petition the Houſe of Aſſembly, Governor and Council, King and Parliament, for the redreſs of grievances; and to inform one another, learn, know and enjoy all the privileges, &c. that were ſettled on us by our worthy anceſtors, the founders of our preſent conſtitution, to preſerve it on its ancient foundation."

[illegible] However pleaſing their hopes might be from the [illegible] they [illegible] of the ſhort continuance, the Governor iſſued a proclamation, [illegible] two perſons were apprehended. However [illegible] and although upwards of 700 armed men were aſſembled at the time from a circuit of 50 miles to prevent theſe two from being carried to Newbern (200 miles) one of whom had not been concerned in the regulation; yet [illegible] the Secretary's [illegible] to the proclamation, a verbal meſſage from the Governor, "That if they would petition the Governor he would protect & redreſs them againſt any unlawful extortions and oppreſſions of any officer in the county; provided they would diſperſe and go home." No ſooner was the joyful meſſage received, than with one voice they all cried out, "Agreed! That is all we want; liberty to make our grievances known." They accordingly returned home [illegible] the agreement with the Governor, and called a general meeting to be on the 21ſt May; at which meeting they came to the following concluſions.

"It was unanimouſly agreed to continue the petition, agreed on [illegible] to the Governor, Council and Aſſembly, for redreſſing every grievant, cruel, iniquitous & oppreſſive practice of our Officers; which, we generally conceive, we have laboured under, for theſe many years, contrary to law.

"And in purſuance of a verbal meſſage from the Governor ſent [illegible] by his Secretary, delivered to us the 3d of this inſtant, we agree to renew our ſaid petition. And as ſundry forms have been read here this day, and ſigned by ſundry neighbourhoods, we appoint, W M, W C, H C, J L, J M, J H, R H and G H, to form one out of the whole, referring to the ſeveral complaints for information of grievances. And being conſcious of our loyalty to King George the Third, on the [illegible], and our firm attachment to the preſent eſtabliſhment and form of government; which we ſincerely believe, all our grievances are quite oppoſite and contrary to, by downright roguiſh practices of men who have crept into poſts of office, and have practiſed upon our ignorance and [illegible].

"We, therefore, order the above Committee to implore the Governor's pardon and forgiveneſs, in the moſt ſubmiſſive manner, for any error that we may have committed, that is, of may be conſtrued to derogate from the honour of his Majeſty's crown and dignity, or tending to obſtruct the peace and good order of government.

* Thus they ſay of themſelves. "The Governor repreſented us a faction of Quakers, and Baptiſts, who aimed to overſet the Church of England, &c. This put us upon viewing ourſelves, and we found our body to conſiſt promiſcuouſly of all ſects, and the men we put moſt confidence in were of the Church of England communion." This is the more extraordinary, that the men they put moſt confidence in, or the principals of the Regulators ſhould be members of the Church of England, as a very great majority of the people are Diſſenters; and as the eſtabliſhment of Epiſcopacy is ſaid to have been one of their cauſes of complaint. [illegible] that the [illegible] of the Church of England in that province are determinately oppoſed to the eſtabliſhment of a ſpiritual as well as civil tyranny in the colonies.

"And for the Governor's better information, we order the Committee to prepare copies of all our proceedings, which was agreed on by our body, even from the firſt beginning, to go with our ſaid petition, and a ſuitable number of the ſaid Committee to wait on the Governor with them, as ſoon as poſſible.*

"And as we have received a letter from Anſon County, informing us of an aſſociation there on the ſame account and requeſting information of our manner of proceeding, we order a copy of this to be ſent to them immediately, to prevent ſpeedily their running into any errors. We believe their ſcruples to be well grounded and their intentions honeſt."

To this the Governor replied, that "their ſteps, carried but a little farther, would have been called and muſt have been treated as High Treaſon." He commended to them Col Fanning and his Officers conduct as diſcreet; and taxed them—"as actuated by cowardice and as having, from a ſenſe of that public juſtice due to their crimes, abſconded themſelves from public view;" and made it a term "of any further clemency" on his part, "that they deſiſt from any future meetings, and that all titles of Regulators or Aſſociators ceaſe from among them." Notwithſtanding the Governor ordered them to deſiſt from future meetings, yet as the Sheriff was up to collect the taxes, and they had referred this very matter of the taxes and ſettlement of the public accounts to the Legiſlator, and were hoping for relief, they ventured again to hold another meeting to conſider of an anſwer to the Governor's letter. This they forwarded to him by two of their number, who found him raiſing the Militia with 9 days proviſions, and 9 charges.——However, on the 17th of Auguſt, they ventured to meet again, in conſequence of an appointment from his Excellency, that on that day the Sheriffs ſhould attend with their accounts, and render public ſatiſfaction: Inſtead of which they were once again ſurpriſed with another letter from him, "requiring peremptorily at leaſt 12 of their principals, and thoſe of the firſt property" to wait on him, and give bond, £1000 each, that no reſcue ſhould be made of the two perſons under recognizance, to appear at next Court. This they declined and for theſe reaſons, that the report of the Governor's intention to cut off the people had taken ſuch entire poſſeſſion of the minds of the generality, that the few more deliberate and ſenſible had been obliged to exert all their influence, in any meaſure to moderate their paſſions and keep them to a rational and legal mode of proſecuting a redreſs of public grievances. That theſe of courſe might be deemed principals; and that ſhould ſuch a number of principal conſiderate men give into ſaid meaſure, it would tend to leſſen their weight with the enraged multitude, and throw all into confuſion. The Governor having told theſe people in the ſame meſſage, that he thought it his duty to provide for the ſafety of government and having put himſelf at the head of a military force, &c. On the day of the Court, about 3700 Regulators appeared within a mile of the town, armed and unarmed, determined not to act unleſs a maſſacre, as they termed it, ſhould be attempted; and if their terms were not accepted by the Governor and Council, to return home, and leave the Governor to fight the air. From this place they propoſed to the Governor, that if he would let them come peaceably into town to complain of their Officers and pardon all paſt breaches of the peace, except the two under bail, they would pay their levies, &c. But he inſiſted they ſhould all deliver up their guns; on which they returned home, except a few who were arreſted by the civil Officers and preſented to the Grand Jury for riots, who returned the bill Ignoramus.——However, at this Court there were four preſentments againſt Herman Huſbands, (one of the two under recognizance) Three of the bills were thrown out by the Grand Jury; the other being a preſentment for a riot was returned a true bill; but by the Petit Jury he was acquitted; this indictment was at the inſtance of Col. Fanning, who, during Huſband's impriſonment and before he was admitted to bail, exacted the following promiſes, viz "You promiſe never to give your opinion of the laws, nor frequent aſſembling yourſelf amongſt the people, nor ſhew any jealouſies of the Officers taking extortionary fees; And if you hear any others ſpeaking diſreſpectfully, or hinting any jealouſies, of that nature, of Officers, that you will reprove and caution them, and that you will tell the people you are ſatiſfied, all the taxes are agreeable to law") nor, however, without having ſuffered ſeverely; being confined in a ſmall goal with a new erected gallows over his head, which he was told was erected for him; inſulted in the ſtreets, dragged into a public houſe, ſet upon a table, ſurrounded by the ſoldiers, and bayonets thruſt at his breaſt; his neighbours and evidences frightened, &c. ordered out of town; and none of his fellow complainants ſuffered to come in. One Lawyer indeed he could procure, to whom he gave all the money he had, and bonds and notes for £150 more, to appear for him in the action of a riot. But being threatened with a more capital proſecution he applied again to the Lawyers, and gave them what notes and bonds they pleaſed to write a retaining fee. At the next Superior Court they demand payment of theſe obligations, and have ſince put them in ſuit. Not ſuch was the caſe of Col Edmund Fanning, the Governor's diſcreet Officer, who was brought on his trial upon ſeven different indictments for extortion: To one he pleads guilty, and was found guilty by the Juries in the other ſix, and for each fined by the Court One Penny.* Notwithſtanding this diſcouragement they carried on their proſecutions at the next Superior Court in 1769, but were leſs ſucceſsful; though upon the matter of taxes being laid before the Aſſembly it was reſolved that 2s. per taxable of the public tax was wrong, as it had been levied by the Officers. At the next Court, however, no troops being raiſed by government, and all the Officers continuing to take the ſame extortionary fees as before except Fanning, the people flocked in to make information; and notwithſtanding the difficulty of attending Courts 60 miles from home, and the threats of the Officers to ſue for malicious proſecution, &c and though the Attorney did not attend the two or three firſt days ſo that many were diſcouraged, and went home, yet ſome trials were brought on and the Officers convicted in every cauſe but one, in which he immediately ſued the complainant.

Being thus harraſſed and diſcouraged even by their ſucceſs at law, their only hopes were from the Aſſembly, but the houſe was diſſolved before they could complete much buſineſs of conſequence; and things were left in confuſion and diſorder. Had the Governor given his aſſent to a bill, the houſe had prepared for a ſingle Juſtice of the peace to try £5 cauſes, and for laying greater penalties on lawyers &c. for extortion; (inſtead of leaving it in the breaſt of a court to fine only one penny for reiterated extortions) and for explaining the fee bill, &c it might have ſet aſide the plea thoſe unhappy people now avail themſelves of.

From the foregoing, which is the ſubſtance of their publications, ſome idea may be formed of the ſituation, temper, and intentions of thoſe people. They muſt appear to have been an illiterate injured multitude ſtruggling againſt all the weight, influence, and artifices of, their oppreſſors; without any one advantage, except what they derive from the juſtneſs of their cauſe. Their ſituation, at a diſtance from the ſeat of government and juſtice; the juriſdiction of the County Courts being, beyond any precedent, very limited; appeals to the Superior Courts for ſmall crimes encouraged; law proceedings inſupportable, becauſe of undue practices, and heavy extortions; Juries choſen by the Court; a Grand Jury compoſed of five old Sheriffs, all the reſt except three being, as they ſay, limbs of of the law, againſt whom their complaints lay; a Governor who had denied them any hopes of future clemency; and their laſt reſource, the Aſſembly, haſtily diſſolved; £30,000 raiſed by taxes more than propoſed by law, while £60 000 was ſtill current among them, and yet to be ſunk: I ſay ſuch a ſituation is truly melancholy, and muſt juſtify every legal and rational mode of proſecuting an enquiry and redreſs. Whether they were happy in the expedient they uſed; whether they could have been expected to do better; whether they were not objects of tender compaſſion, rather than of unrelenting vengeance, muſt be determined by every man for himſelf. Blood has now been ſhed on both ſides. Government ever has it in its power to give plauſible pretences, and cloath impoſitions and cruelties under the mantle of law and clemency: Reaſon and law are inclined to ſupport the ſtrongeſt party. Theſe people may alſo be unfair in their repreſentation, and unreaſonable in their complaints; but it muſt be remembered they knew they were contending againſt the halter, forfeitures, and every thing that man can dread. What is here offered muſt be ſubmitted. It was thought hard that the government accounts only ſhould be in the view of an impartial public, which has been the caſe; to hear what have been the complaints and the cauſe of this unhappy people. If there are any untruths or miſrepreſentations the leaſt misfortune ariſing from it is to us; they have deceived themſelves to their own ruin. However, the many other cauſes which cannot be decided by venal and corrupt adminiſtration of law, or the fulſome adulation of Court Sycophants on one hand, nor by inſurrection and oppoſition on the other, this muſt be referred for a final deciſion to a ſuperior tribunal;—to the ſelf-condemning conſciences of the guilty, and to an avenging God.

Among the papers ſhewn to the Governor was the following reſolution, viz. "If the Governor is yet againſt us, and we can get no redreſs no way, we will, rather than riſe in riots; agree not to go to law at all, but leave our differences to arbitration. At this paper the Governor flew in a paſſion, and ordered the bearer to burn it."

Col. Fanning in particular acquitted himſelf, by pleading ignorance of the fees eſtabliſhed by law, which the judge gave in charge to the jury, as a ground on which they might acquit.

ST. JOHN'S [Antigua] July 6.

Extract of a private letter from Barbados, dated June 21.

I AM ſorry to acquaint you that there arrived from Tobago, yeſterday, an acount of a new inſurrection at the eſtate of Mr Fooke a gentleman of Barbados; the Negroes have deſtroyed a manager and his ſervant; the eſtate is called Petry wood and ſituated in Bloody bay. A party of ſoldiers, and volunteers went againſt the Negroes who fled towards the mountains where they made a ſtand, and gave one fire, by which they wounded a volunteer and Mr. Alexander Cambell, very dangerouſly; they were fired upon in return by the ſoldiers, &c which occaſioned their throwing themſelves precipitately down a ſteep hill; it is imagined the white party wounded many of the Negroes very deſperately, as they were extremely near when they received their fire; they left behind them a good deal of ammunition which they had taken from the eſtate. It is ſuppoſed the ring leader of the former inſurrection is at the head of this, as he is not yet taken.

BOSTON, Sept 5.

It has been reported in town, that Governor Tryon intends ſhortly to go to England.

We are aſſured that Mr. Herman Huſbands, one of the cheif of the Regulators, ſo called, was not in North Carolina, at the time of the battle at Alamance. It is ſaid he is now in the back parts of Pennſylvania government.

We are told that Huſbands ſold his eſtate in Carolina before he was out lawed, ſo that it is poſſible the cheif commander of the Alamance expedition may get into trouble for making devaſtations there.

The following droll affair happened in this town laſt week. A Porter was conveying a large cheſt in a wheel barrow through a ſtreet at the ſouth part of the town, when ſeveral boys diſcovered the finger of a human perſon through the key hole. They immediately aſked the porter what he had got in his cheſt. But he refuſed ſatiſfying them, bidding them be gone. However the boys ſtill continued importuning him, and hallooing there was a woman in the cheſt, &c. whereupon the porter attempting to drive them away, when one unlucky rogue with a penknife cut a cord which was looſely tied about the cheſt, and lifted up the lid, where behold a young woman of the town, "lay as ſecure as a thief in a mill!"

Saturday laſt a Man who had been employed to drive a Cart in this Town was committed to Goal being charged with the unnatural Crime of Beſtiality.——'Tis ſaid he came to this Place but a few Weeks ago, from ſome Part of New-Hampſhire Government, where he has a Wife, &c.

The Owner of the Beaſt had her immediately put to Death.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 5.

Capt. Fairly, in the Sloop Nancy, from Jamaica, the 22d of July, off the Grand Commanders, ſpoke with the Elliot, Capt. Baker, from this Port for Penſacola, 4 Weeks out, all well; the 7th ult, with a Spaniſh Tranſport, from the Havanna for Cadiz, who had run aſhore on the Martiers, but had got off again with the Aſſiſtance of Capt Fairly.—She was Part of a Fleet of 10 Sail under Convoy of 2 Men of War, two more of which Fleet were aſhore likewiſe near the ſame Place, as alſo Capt. Dudley, from Jamaica for Liverpool, but the latter got off.

NEW-HAVEN, September, 6.

Laſt Monday night we had very hard Thunder, and ſharp Lightning, with abundance of Rain; the Storm continued ſevere for five or ſix hours, and the Lightning ſtruck in ſeveral Places near the Town.——The next Day, in the Forenoon, we had another ſevere Storm of Thunder and Lightning, which ſtruck the Maſts of two Sloops and a Brig, lying in the Harbour; the Maſts of Sloops have received not much Damage, but that of the Brig is ſo much ſhiver'd that it muſt be taken out.—The People on board had left the Decks of the Veſſels, on Account of the Rain; ſo that none of them received any Hurt.

HARTFORD, September 10.

Laſt Tueſday evening departed this life, after a ſhort confinement by a Paralytick diſorder, JOHN LEDYARD, Eſq; of this town, in the 71ſt year of his age.

He was born in England of reputable parents, his natural parts were uncommonly bright and ſtrong, which his parents took early care to cultivate, by a good grammar-ſchool education under a very able maſter, afterwards, he ſpent ſeveral years with a merchant in the city of Briſtol. About the age of 19 he came over to America, and fixed at Groton in this colony, where, in character of a ſchool-maſter, he obtained ſuch reputation, as to be advanced to ſome of the moſt important truſt's which were in the power of the town to beſtow; for a very conſiderable number of years he repreſented them in the general aſſembly, (as he alſo did the town of Hartford after his removal thither) where his ſuperior abilities were very ſoon noticed; he was very early in life put into commiſſion for the peace, which office he ſuſtained for more than forty years, in which he behaved with ſuch ſkill and diſcretion, that he was able to ſay, but little before his death, that no judgment of his had ever been reverſed by any higher court; from time to time he was appointed to offices of importance in the colony, and to tranſact buſineſs of conſequence to the public, in which he acquitted himſelf much to his own honor and the benefit of the community.—But the brighteſt part of his character was his ſincere and undiſſembled piety. The firſt principles of religion were inſtilled into his tender mind, by his pious grandmother, while he was yet upon her knee, and not long after his arrival in New-England, he experienced, as he then and ever after tho't, a ſaving converſion from ſin to GOD, and his after converſation through life, gave the beſt evidence that he was not miſtaken. He appeared, to thoſe intimately acquainted with him, to maintain a life of near and intimate communion with GOD, and his practice to be a careful imitation of the example of CHRIST; he was a great oppoſer of vice and promoter of vertue both in his public and private character. He was a good commonwealth's-man, a kind huſband, a tender father, a good maſter, a faithful friend and a lover of all good men.—For ſome time before his death he ſeemed to have a ſtrange preſage upon his mind, that he ſhould not long ſurvive; but always ſpoke of his departure with that compoſure, reſignation and confidence in divine mercy, as nothing but religion can inſpire. At length he was ſuddenly deprived of ſpeech, and for ought appears, nearly of reaſon, and after a day or two fell aſleep as we truſt in JESUS. He left a ſorrowful widow, and a numerous family of children, to mourn his departure, but if companions in grief are any alleviation of it, they may be aſſured that they will not mourn alone.

POET'S CORNER.

Truth and Error.

HOW bold and open, is eternal Truth!
Blooming and fair, in everlaſting Youth.
How free and eaſy her majeſtic Gait!
Like ſome bright Goddeſs clad in heavenly State,
Divinely calm ſhe ſpreads her Charms abroad,
Free from the Stains of Artifice and Fraud,
Nobly ſhe walks amid the Blaze of Day,
Nor fears the Critic's Eye, nor keen Survey,
But bids the deep read Sage ply all his Art,
Canvaſs her Nature, and look thro' her heart.
Not thus, low ſkulking Error: She invades
The piercing Eye, & lurks beneath the Shades:
She deals in Sophiſtry, Deceit and Lies;
Loves the Dark Corner, and obſcure Diſguiſe:
She ſtarts from Truth, & ſkulking at her Rays,
Seeks the blind Covert of ſome winding Maze;
Which bare bold Front ſhe trembles to aſſail,
But baſely hides beneath a fine ſpun Vail,
Pinch her, Proteus-like, ſhe wreathes & ſqueaks,
Changes her Shape, and wears a thouſand Forms,
If you detect her, ſmitten by your Eyes,
As by a Baſiliſk, ſhe droops and dies.

Dartmouth College, N. Hampſhire, Aug. 1771.

Mr. Watſon,

To contribute my mite, towards the relief of our diſtreſs'd friends in Carolina, whilſt ſome abler pen ſhall point out a compleat remedy, according to the propoſal of Amator Bonorum, in your paper of Auguſt 27, I have ſent you the following quotations. By your inſerting of which in your next, will oblige many of your readers, and among the reſt, your old friend,

AMATOR VERITATIS.

CONNECTICUT, Auguſt 29, 1771.

"SPEAK every man truth with his neighbour." St. Paul.

"As for the truth it endureth and is always ſtrong, it liveth and conquereth forever more. With her there is no accepting of perſons, or rewards, but ſhe doeth the things that are juſt, and refraineth from all unjuſt and wicked things, and all men do well like of her works, neither in her judgment is any unrighteouſneſs, and ſhe is the ſtrength, kingdom, power and majeſty of all ages. Bleſſed be the God of Truth." Zorobabel.

"And with that he held his peace: and all the people ſhouted and ſaid, great is truth, and mighty above all things." Eſdras.

"The truth ſhall make you free." Jeſus Chriſt.

"And ſo if the defendant be able to juſtify and prove the words to be true, no action will lie, even tho' ſpecial damage hath enſued; for then it is no ſlander or falſe tale." Blackſtone Vol. III. P. 125.

After all theſe authorities which exactly correſpond with, and confirm our own natural notions of treating every thing as being what it is; will any mortal be ſo hardy as to pretend that the ſheriffs, &c. had any juſt right to recover of the abuſed people for complaining of their oppreſſive conduct? "There can be no ſuch thing as public liberty without freedom of ſpeech."

This ſacred privilege is ſo eſſential to free governments, that the ſecurity of property, and freedom of ſpeech, always go together: and in thoſe wretched countries, where a man can't call his tongue his own, he can ſcarce call any thing elſe his own. The adminiſtration of government is nothing elſe but the attendance of the truſtees of the people, upon the intereſt of the affairs of the people, and as it is the part and buſineſs of the people, for whoſe ſake alone all public matters are, or ought to be tranſacted, "to ſee whether they be well or ill tranſacted;" ſo it is the intereſt, and ought to be the ambition, of all honeſt magiſtrates to have their deeds openly examin'd and publickly ſcanned.

Guilt only dreads liberty of ſpeech or has any thing to fear from it, ſays "the Britiſh Cato." Upon this ſame principle, the parties accuſed by the Earl of Northampton (in the reign of James I) were diſcharged. As alſo the ſeven biſhops, who for petitioning James II, were accuſed of a libel, and ſent to the tower, were diſcharged, when the jury to their immortal honour found it a true bill.

The ſame principle likewiſe has prevailed in America, upon which John Peter Zenger printer in New York was diſcharg'd, from the accuſation of the court party, by an honeſt jury.

And how will any mortal dare to ſay, that our poor oppreſs'd fellow ſubjects at Carolina, could be guilty of ſpeaking the truth? Can there be any guilt in conforming to reaſon, revelation, and the laws of their country? And if they were under colour of law and countenance of their authority, treated as guilty when they were really innocent; will not this at leaſt excuſe their taking arms, in defence of their country and the Britiſh conſtitution? The famous Mr. Lock ſays, "where violence is uſed or injury done, tho' by hands appointed to adminiſter juſtice, it is ſtill violence and injury, howbeit colour'd with the name, pretences or forms of law, the end whereof being to protect and redreſs the innocent, by an unbiaſſed application of it, to all who are under it; wherever that is not bona fide done, war is made upon the ſufferers, who having no appeal on earth to right them, they are left to the only remedy in ſuch caſes, an appeal to heaven." Lock on Gov. P. 156. When we ſee this to be the opinion of a man of Mr. Locke's great underſtanding, and long experience, can we eaſily imagine, that a kind and tender father would fire upon his own miſtaken children, before the time was expired, which he had given them himſelf, to conſult about returning to their duty; and while they were only petitioning in the moſt humble manner for a redreſs of their long ſuffered grievances? Is this imitating the father of the prodigal ſon, or the God of all grace and truth, who is good to all, and whoſe tender mercies are over all his works?

TO be ſold a good Farm of about two hundred acres, with a good Houſe and Barn, and an Orchard of about 300 apple trees, with other fruit trees plenty. The beſt part of ſaid Farm is under improvement, the whole within fence, good mowing, paſture and plowing land enough. Said Farm may be had very cheap, one half of the money will be expected down, and ſecurity will be taken for the remainder. Said farm is ſituated handſomely on the great road that goes from Sharon to Rhynebeck, and is about two miles north of the city meeting houſe. THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Containing the freſheſt and moſt important Advices, both Foreign and Domeſtic

From TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, to TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1771.

By Capt. Dollon, arrived at New York, in 7 Weeks from Falmouth, there is the following Advices, viz.

LONDON, June 18.

AN evening paper of laſt night ſays, notwithſtanding the Duke of Grafton is appointed Lord Privy Seal, he is not admitted to the cabinet. Lord North has ſo far prevailed, though he could not keep the Duke out of office, yet to keep him out of council. So that his holding the high office of Lord Privy Seal, may be conſidered as a penſion; a great nominal employment, without any duty.

It is pretty certain that the preſent Lord Mayor will be re elected for the year enſuing; and if Mr. Wilkes ſhould be choſen Sheriff this year, which is moſt probable, the year 1773 may ſee Alderman Wilkes Lord Mayor.

It is whiſpered that a great Perſonage is deſirous that all party feuds may be ended, and that a certain popular Gentleman will abſolutely accept of a penſion.

June 22. It is ſaid, the King of Portugal is in a very declining ſtate of health.

It is not true, as lately reported, that commercial affairs in that kingdom are taking a turn in our favour, no ſuch intelligence having really arrived, our factory and trade there ſtill continuing to decline.

We hear that a Royal Proclamation will ſoon be iſſued out, for putting the laws in force againſt all Foreſtallers, Monopolizers, and Regraters in order to reduce the exorbitant price of proviſions.

A funny Correſpondent obſerves, that the Scottiſh leaders of the Charlton houſe junto have provided Mr Oliver a worthy colleague in his ſtruggles for City Sheriff as none can be more worthy the Scottiſh Miniſter, or an Oliver, than a Kirk-Man.

Private letters from Liſbon mention that the late pretended miſunderſtanding between the Courts of France and Portugal, is nothing but a State joggle.

It was on Wedneſday night ſaid at a caffee houſe near the Royal Exchange, that three indigent Liverymen had actually been offered twenty guineas each for their ſingle votes, which they nobly refuſed.

June 25. Early on Saturday morning his Serene Highneſs Prince Charles Lewis Frederick of Mecklenburgh Strelitz, ſecond brother to her Majeſty, arrived in town from Germany, and in the afternoon he waited on their Majeſties at the Queen's Palace.

An Account of the Proceedings Yeſterday at Guildhall.

Yeſterday about one o'clock the Lord Mayor, attended by aldermen Townſend Oliver Plumbe, Wilkes, Stephenſon, Sawbridge, the Sheriffs, Recorder, Town clerk, and Common Serjeant, opened the Court of Common hall. When the Recorder came forward on the Huſtings to explain the buſineſs of the day, he could not be heard for hiſſing. At length the noiſe ſubſided, and he proceeded without interruption, till he came to talk of the diſtraction of the Livery, and to declare that he had for theſe nine years ſerved the City, acting according to the dictates of honour and conſcience, &c. when there aroſe an univerſal hooting and hiſſing, which did not ceaſe till the Lord Mayor interpoſed, and convinced the Hall that the buſineſs could not go on without the formality of an addreſs from the Recorder. He then made a few obſervations; after which the ſeveral Aldermen who had not ſerved the office of Sheriffs were put up for that office, as were alſo near twenty Commoners, and on the holding up of hands there appeared a very great majority for Mr. Alderman Wilkes and Mr. Bull, but a poll being demanded for Mr. Alderman Kirkman and Mr. Alderman Oliver, by Mr. Deputy Judd, and George Bellas, Eſq; as alſo for Mr Alderman Kirkman with Mr Alderman Plume, by Mr. Deputy Hopkins and Mr. Rivington; the ſame was alſo demanded for Mr. Alderman Wilkes and Mr. Bull. The poll began exactly at half paſt four, which continued open till ſix, when the numbers ſtood as follows:——For Mr. Alderman Wilkes 296, Mr. Bull 276 Mr Alderman Kirkman 45, Mr. Alderman Plumbe 24 and Mr. Alderman Oliver 28. The poll was then adjourned till this morning.

After the uſual buſineſs of the day was over, the Caſe and report of the Common Council, concerning the Companies refuſing to iſſue ſummonſes to convene their Livery, in conſequence of a precept from the late Lord Mayor deceaſed, were read, when it was unanimouſly carried, "That Mr. Common Serjeant do forthwith file proper informations of disfranchiſement in the Mayor's Court, againſt the Maſter or Prime Warden, and the reſt of the Wardens of the Company of Goldſmiths; the Maſter or Bailiff and Wardens of the Company of Weavers; and the Maſter, or Prime Warden, and the reſt of the Wardens of the Company of Grocers London, or ſuch of them as refuſed or neglected to ſummon the Liverymen of their ſeveral and reſpective Companies, to appear at a Common hall, in obedience to a precept or precepts iſſued for that purpoſe by our late moſt reſpectable Chief Magiſtrate. Mr. Alderman Beckford, in his ſecond Mayoralty for this city; and that every officer in this city, in his ſeveral and reſpective department, be aſſiſting therein."

Then the report from the Committee to aſſiſt the Lord Mayor and Meſſrs Aldermen Wilkes and Oliver, in their defence, was read.

A motion was made that an humble Addreſs, Remonſtrance, and petition be preſented to his Majeſty; which Addreſs, Remonſtrance and Petition being read, was agreed to nem. con.

A motion was then made, and univerſally agreed to, that the Livery of London do deſire the Common Council to preſent a ſilver cup to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, of the value of 200l with the city arms engraved thereon, and to Mr. Wilkes and Oliver one each, of the value of 100l. as a mark of their gratitude for their upright conduct in the affair of the Printers, and for ſupporting the city charters.

Mr Wilkes had acknowledged that he ſolicited to be ſent Ambaſſador to Conſtantinople but ſays that he ſoon dropped the idea. But he has not told us that in revenge for this repulſe he wrote his famous letter to the Duke of Grafton, who has been the occaſion of his ill ſucceſs.

According to letters from Venice, advice is received there that an inſurrection had lately happened at Conſtantinople, which continued for three days before it was ſuppreſſed.

When the motion was made yeſterday morning at Guildhall for a freſh Remonſtrance, the Lord Mayor ſtept forward, & informed the Livery, he would adviſe that the Addreſs be ſtiled, "The Addreſs, Remonſtrance, and Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Livery of London in Common Hall aſſembled;" for if his Majeſty did not pay any attention to this Addreſs, it then would be time enough for the Common Council to take the matter up, and preſent another, his Lordſhip declaring, that, for his part, he never ſhould either be afraid or aſhamed to go to the King at the head of the Livery, or with the Common Council, until the grievances they laboured under were properly redreſſed.——After a ſhort pauſe, the Addreſs was drawn up and read to the Livery, its contents were ſpirited and proper beginning with a moſt pathetic recital of the injury ſuſtained by the people in the affair of the Middleſex Election; relating next the arbitrary and deſpotic conduct of the H—— C—— during the late ſeſſion, reſpecting the illegal impriſonment of the Lord Mayor and Alderman Oliver, for having kept their oaths as Magiſtrates for the city, and particularly enlarging upon the amazing ſtroke of tyranny, exerciſed in their aſſuming a power unknown to the courts of law; alſo the arbitrary Act of the Durham yard Embankment; and finally deſiring his Majeſty to diſſolve the Parliament, and put forever from his preſence thoſe Miniſters, who by their wicked and deſigning arts, had perſuaded him to iſſue his proclamation for apprehending the Printers, contrary to the known laws of the land. The Addreſs met with the unanimous approbation of all preſent.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, June 12.

"We are informed that the charge des affaires for the Court of Madrid at this republick, had a private conference a few days ago with Mr Fagel, Regiſter of the States General, in which the former communicated the latter, by order of the King his Maſter, that his catholick Majeſty, for certain ſolid reaſons which he reſerved to himſelf, has reſolved that for the future he will no longer permit any frigate of war of whatever nation, to enter and water in the Ports of the Spaniſh monarchy, as they have been heretofore accuſtomed to do; and at the ſame time required Mr. Fagel to inform their High Mightineſſes of this reſolution, that they may inſtruct the commanders of their frigates deſtined for the Mediterranean ſea accordingly. This unexpected meaſure has occaſioned a great conſternation here."

It is remarkable, that the number of votes on Monday for Mr. Wilkes for Sheriff was exactly 296, the ſame as that with which Col. Luttrell was ſeated in the houſe of Commons laſt Middleſex Election; and that Mr Kirkman, who is one of Mr. Wilkes's antagoniſts, polled juſt 45.

Yeſterday the Lord Mayor, gave his vote for Mr. Alderman Wilkes & Mr Bull.

They write from Paris, that on the night of the 18th inſtant, two perſons of diſtinction were ſecretly arreſted by the King's orders, and carried under a ſtrong guard to the Baſtile.

Yeſterday Mr. Bellas was ſhoved down the ſtairs, leading from the Huſtings, and otherwiſe roughly treated by the populace.

A writer againſt Mr. Wilkes ſays, "It will be much to be wondered at, if any man of wealth and independence ever again takes part in defence of the rights of the Citizens of London; the treatment of Meſſ. Oliver, Townſend, & Bellas laſt Monday by Mr. Wilkes's friends was equally infamous and unreaſonable. Theſe vociferous bellowers for Wilkes and Liberty have the impudence to pretend that they are contending for freedom, and yet would they deny their ſuperiors in the conteſt, all free-will and free agency."

A Writer in favour of Mr. Wilkes ſays, Call to mind the ſervices he has done us; conſider that your houſes are ſacred, your papers ſafe from general warrants, which but for Wilkes, had now perhaps been let looſe among you; with penetration to diſcover, and courage to reſiſt the wicked ſchemes of an infamous adminiſtration, ſhould Mr. Wilkes be unemployed?"

July 4. A Great Perſonage has declared he will on no account admit the popular Patriot into his preſence, but that when he comes to St. James's in his magiſterial capacity upon any popular occaſions, he muſt expect to be received only by the Lord in waiting.

On Monday night the populace aſſembled before the houſes of Meſſrs Plumbe and Kirkman and obliged them to be illuminated.

On Monday night an effigy of Mr Horne in a canonical habit, with a pen in one hand, and in the other a ſalt box, intended to repreſent the Treaſury box of the Bill of Rights, after being carried through the principal ſtreets in the city, was conſumed in a bonfire, which the populace made for that purpoſe before the Manſion houſe. The like was done in Saliſbury court, Fleet ſtreet.

On the trial of Edward Twine Carpenter on Monday for an aſſault on Mr. John Wheble, and unlawfully impriſoning him, Mr. Serjeant Glynn, with great energy and force of argument, evinced the violation of the law in apprehending the perſon of the proſecutor under the pretext of the King's Proclamation, which, it is allowed, would render the liberty of the ſubject entirely precarious. On the other ſide, the authority of Royal Proclamations in general, and that in litigation in particular, was argued in an hiſtorical manner, and ſupported by caſes cited by Mr. Morgan, Counſel for the Defendant. But Mr. Carpenter was convicted on proof of his own letter to Mr. Wheble, acknowledging the fact. For want of producing an atteſted copy on ſtamps of the Royal Proclamation (Mr. Recorder not permitting the ſame to be read from the Gazette, though admitted by the proſecutor's Counſel) the whole diſcuſſion of the matter intended to be brought in iſſue, the juſtification or extenuation of the fact under the ſanction of the proclamation, was left entirely undecided.

Laſt Tueſday evening the Committee for Meſſrs. Plumbe and Kirkman's Election met at the Queen's Arms, to conſider the expediency of demanding a Scrutiny; after being debated for ſome time, it was carried in favour of a Scrutiny. Mr. Alderman Roſſeter, Mr. Deputy Leckey, and Mr. Wimbolt, ſpoke againſt the meaſure, as it would rather tend to irritate and inflame, than conciliate the preſent breach unhappily ſubſiſting amongſt us.

We hear that the late poll for Sheriffs has coſt Frederick Bull, Eſq. not leſs than 718 l. 16 s. and that the Sheriffalty of himſelf and Wilkes will amount to 300 l. more.

Yeſterday the two Sheriffs, accompanied by one of the Under Sheriffs, went at half an hour paſt ten to Guildhall, and caſt up the poll books for the new election of Sheriffs, which they finiſhed about a quarter after three, when Mr. Common Serjeant, in the room of the Recorder, was at the Seſſions Houſe, declared the numbers to be as follow, viz. For Alderman Wilkes 2516; Mr. Bull 2194; Alderman Kirkman 1949; Plumbe 1875; Oliver 119: Whereupon the two firſt were declared duly elected; which was received by the very numerous concourſe of people in the hall, with long and loud acclamations, and the Sheriffs elect addreſſed the Livery as follows:

Mr. Alderman WILKES's SPEECH.

Gentlemen, and Fellow Citizens.

"I Thank you for the honour you have done me, and congratulate you on the compleat triumph of this day over the corrupt arts of a profligate Adminiſtration, the moſt barefaced Bribery and daring Menaces, the many ſhameful practices of the wretched Tools of arbitrary Power among us, the inſolent mandates of Placemen, & the Treachery of the pretended Friends of Liberty and their Country. Your firmneſs and zeal have cruſhed the united forces of all thoſe, who meant to enſlave this great City. I have not the leaſt doubt that the ſame happy union among ourſelves will always remain a firm barrier againſt every future attack, from the concealed and inſidious Friends, or the open Enemy.

"Permit me to aſſure you of the cloſeſt attention to every part of my duty, and the faithful diſcharge of my office. One particular only I moſt entirely leave to my worthy Collegue, as I am incapable of acting. Petitions from this City to the Houſe of Commons I cannot preſent at the Bar of that Houſe, becauſe I am actually a part of the Repreſentative Body of this kingdom, being one of the legal Members for this County. The independent and ſpirited Freeholders of Middleſex have given me as clear a right to a ſeat in Parliament, as the Electors of any other Knight of a Shire of England can give to any Gentleman. By the moſt atrocious injuſtice of a Majority, placed and penſioned by the venal influence of the Miniſter, I am deprived of the enjoyment of that right, in direct violation of the cleareſt privileges of a free people. My legal claim however is clear, and ſhall on all occaſions be ſupported with ſpirit.

"The Sheriffs, Gentlemen, merit all our thanks for their attentive, upright, and impartial behaviour during the courſe of a tedious poll. To a thorough knowledge of buſineſs they joined the utmoſt fairneſs & candor. In the whole of their proceedings they have ſecured the approbation of the public. Their conduct cannot at any time be excelled, but I hope it will be equalled, at leaſt by thoſe who through your favour, are to be their immediate ſucceſſors."

The Speech of FREDERICK BULL, Eſq;

"Gentlemen of the Livery and Fellow Citizens,

"Permit me to acknowledge to you the ſenſe I have of the honour you have now called me to, and I cannot but think myſelf the more obliged, as it was unſolicited by me.

"I ſhould not in theſe alarming times have waited to be aſked to accept, could I have thought myſelf equal to this important Office. However, Gentlemen, as you have been pleaſed to fix on me, give me leave to aſſure you, I will do every thing in my power to preſerve the peace, and to promote the welfare, the honour, and independence of the City of London."

The Sheriffs were particularly careful in caſting up the Poll, on account of its having been reported, that a Scrutiny would be demanded, but no motion was made for that purpoſe.

It is ſaid that a motion will be made, in the firſt Common Council, for allowing Mr. Wilkes 1500 l. out of the Chamber of the City, towards defraying the expence of his preſent office.

Great betts are ſtill depending whether Mr. Wilkes will be admitted by the higher powers to ſerve the Office of Sheriff or not. But many are of opinion, that no objection will be made to him, merely to avoid the tumult and diſorder which ſuch refuſal would occaſion.

According to letters from Vienna, the Court of Peterſburgh is actually meditating an expedition to the frontiers of China, and the Mogul's country, which will be carried into execution after peace is made with the Grand Seignior.

They write from Breſt, that while the French are apparently diſarming fleets at Breſt, Rochfort, and Toulon, the Intendants of the Marine at theſe Ports are indefatigable in augmenting the naval ſtores, collecting magazines of ſhip timber, and compleating the ſeveral men of war on the ſtocks.

Extract of a Letter from Venice, May 30.

"According to advice received here from Conſtantinople, the Grand Vizier hath received orders to remain peaceable in his camp, and not to engage in any hoſtile meaſures till further inſtructions ſhall be ſent to him."

St. James's, July 2. Laſt night the ceremony of chriſtening the young Prince was performed in the Great Council Chamber, by his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. His Royal Highneſs was named Erneſt Auguſtus.

Naples, May 14. On Thurſday laſt Mount Veſuvius began to ſend out columns of black ſmoak with loud exploſions; ſoon after a Lava burſt forth near the ſame ſpot where the great eruption was in the year 1767. Their Sicilian Majeſties are preparing to leave Portici at a moment's warning. But as the Lava has taken its courſe towards Reſina, (the ſpot under which the ancient City of Herculaneum is buried) and does not menace Portici, it is thought the Court will not remove. The Lava is about five miles in length, has deſtroyed ſome vineyards, and is ſtopped within a mile of Reſina. Mr. Hamilton, his Britannick Majeſty's Miniſter at this court, had the honour of conducting their Sicilian Majeſties to Lava which happened to be remarkably curious at the moment of their arrival, having juſt taken its courſe into a deep trench, forming a moſt aſtoniſhing caſcade of fire, the fall of which was perpendicular, and not leſs than 60 feet.

June 29. They write from New York, that the currency of Spaniſh gold and ſilver has lately been diſcovered to be greatly adulterated by ſome Jews, who had fled the province and were ſuppoſed to have gone to the Havanna.

The Annapolis Royal, Viett, took fire at ſea: The crew were ſaved by a veſſel belonging to Briſtol; but the ſhip and cargo are entirely loſt.

Extract of a letter from Stockholm, June 7.

"The King hath cauſed to be publiſhed throughout his States, that from this time to the 1ſt of November, all his faithful ſubjects, without any diſtinction, may have free acceſs to the foot of the Throne every Monday, Tueſday, and Wedneſday, from four to five o'clock in the evening; and that he will receive their complaints, and anſwer their petitions."

One day in the laſt term the names of public defaulters were called over before the Barons of the Exchequer, amongſt which was Lord H. when on an affidavit being read that his Lordſhip was proceeding to ſettle his accounts with all poſſible expedition, the Barons were pleaſed to grant two months longer time to finiſh them.

A perſon at New Shoreham who was intruſted lately by a Candidate with 3000 l. in order to bribe the voters, has lately decamped à la ſourdine.

The ſtatue of William Beckford, Eſq; late Lord Mayor of this City, is finiſhed, but will not be ſet up in Guildhall till the week before Michaelmas day.

Letters from Liſbon ſay that a report prevails there that the French King had threatened to recall his Miniſter and Conſuls from every place in Portugal, on account of ſome commercial infringements, which his ſubjects had lately ſuffered in that kingdom.

Several ſhips of the Ruſſian fleet have left the Mediterranean, to return towards the North. By the above circumſtance, it is ſuppoſed that the treaty of pacification between the Turks and Ruſſians is in great forwardneſs, if not concluded.

A liſt of new arrangements, ſaid ſoon to be adopted in the Miniſtry, is handed about; but, we are informed, that there is no probability of their taking place.

A letter from Paris, dated June 24, mentions, that "a paper hath been poſted upon the pedeſtal of the ſtatue of Louis XV. with this inſcription— Ludovico ultimo."

July 2. It is ſaid that one reaſon why Mr. Wilkes ſtands a candidate for the office of Sheriff is, the opportunity that office will give him of being admitted into his Majeſty's preſence, and of laying his caſe before him in perſon.

Extract of a letter from the Hague, June 25.

"Letters received here from Peterſburgh adviſe, that on the 3d inſtant a dreadful fire broke out in that city, which it is believed was effected by ſome Incendiaries; 50 ſtone houſes and 500 wooden houſes were conſumed, with the magazines of hemp, pitch, and tar, in which happily there was not a great quantity. This unfortunate accident has ruined many private perſons; and the damage it has occaſioned, amounts to upwards of a million of rubles."

A letter from the Hague, dated June 28, ſays, "It is whiſpered here, that the King of Portugal hath lately run a new riſk for his life, by a poiſoned letter which had been preſented to his moſt Faithful Majeſty; but that happily it had not the effect which the Traitors who ſent it expected."

Yeſterday came on, at the adjournment of the Seſſions at Guildhall, the trial of Edward Twine Carpenter, for an aſſault, in ſeizing the perſon of J. Wheble, according to the Royal Proclamation for that purpoſe, when he was found guilty, fined one ſhilling, and ordered to be impriſoned for two months in Wood ſtreet Compter.

We hear that the Lord Chancellor has within theſe few days had private conferences with a great Perſonage, on the ſubject of a popular Alderman being elected Sheriff.

Run-away from me the ſubſcriber of Litchfield, the night before the 26th of inſtant Auguſt, an apprentice boy named Joel Johns, a ſlim boy about 5 feet 9 or 10 inches high, about 18 years of age, dark complection, a thick upper lip, a large ſcar on his right great toe, had on when he went away, a white tow ſhirt, a black jacket, a pair of courſe trowſers, a felt hat. Whoever ſecures ſaid boy, ſo that his maſter may have him again, ſhall receive Five Dollars reward, by me. JOHN DAVIES, jun.

By ſeveral Veſſels lately arrived at Boſton from London, we have advice to the 27th of July.

LONDON, July 22.

The Knights who will be inſtalled in perſon at the enſuing Inſtallation, are, the Prince of Wales, the Biſhop of Oſnaburgh, the Duke of Cumberland, the Dukes of Marlborough and Grafton the Earl of Albermarle, and Earl Gower.

Wedneſday ſeveral papers were ſcattered thro' the neighbourhood of St. James's, bearing only theſe words: To your tents, O Iſrael! Bind your Nobles in chains, and your Princes in fetters of iron. They were diſperſed by a man who appeared diſordered in his ſenſes, and ſeemed no leſs a religious than a political enthuſiaſt.

Mr. Alderman Townſend ſat yeſterday as Juſtice for Mr. Alderman Wilkes, at Guildhall. A good Sign. And it is ſaid that all the differences between the contending Patriots are amicably ſettled.

Tueſday morning a fine turtle, weighing upwards of 200 lb. was ſent to Mr. Wilkes as a preſent from the Captain of a Weſt Indiaman lately arrived.

July 23. We hear from the Levant, that the Ruſſian fleet has above one half of the hands on board from different countries, moſt of whom, except the Iriſh and Scots (of whom there is a conſiderable number) diſcover an averſion to act [but] upon the defenſive, ſo that it is thought the Dardanelles will not be attacked this ſeaſon.

Since the Arrival of the Earl of B—e Bets are greatly in Favour of the preſent Miniſtry, as Harmony and conciliating Meaſures are ſtrongly recommended to them.

A ſhip is lately arrived from Miſſiſippi with a cargo of furs, amounting to near 90,000 l. She is the firſt Engliſh veſſel which ever came from that part of the world, and makes ſo very favourable a report of the country, that ſeveral Boards of trade have been held, in which the propriety of eſtabliſhing a government there, has, we hear, been abſolutely determined upon by the Commiſſioners.

William King, William Prince, James Duke, Thomas Earl.

William Church, Charles Churchman, Richard Chappel.

John Parſons, William Deeon, John Prieſt.

Henry Eaſt, Edward Weſt, Thomas South.

John Farmer, James Fiſher, Benjamin Threſher.

Henry Day, Joſhua Night.

Francis Deadman, Stephen Pitt, William Grave.

We hear from Cornhill, in Northumberland, of a very melancholy death lately in that neighbourhood. Colonel Max—ll being indiſpoſed, was waited upon by ſome friends who, upon entering his houſe, were alarmed by the ſervants informing them they had juſt heard a report like that of a piſtol from his chamber; whereupon one of the gentlemen, a clergyman, immediately ſtepping to his room found him weltering in his blood with a ſword in his hand, and a blunderbuſs lying on the floor, with which he had ſhot himſelf.

Among the tranſports conveyed on Wedneſday morning from Newgate on board the ſhip deſtined to carry them to America, were the two Kennedies.

A remarkable circumſtance happened at the fire which broke out on Saturday in Great St Andrew's ſtreet Seven dials. A woman, who was a lodger, had lately been brought to bed of three children, all of whom ſhe let down in her apron, and then jumped into a blanket held by ten men, and both mother and children eſcaped unhurt.

The Diſpute between Horn and Wilkes ſeems to have ſubſided, the Papers hint that while Horne was writing his 13th Letter to Mr Wilkes, he received a Blow from Junius that brought on a Mortification, which ſo rapidly attacked his noble parts, that he politically expired in great agonies of mind on Monday July 8.

To Meſſrs. WILKES and HORNE.

SAYS John Wilkes to John Horne, "You're a curſed Dog;"
Says John Horne to John Wilkes, "You're a very great Rogue;"
—We all are convinced, by the Letters you write,
That you both have ſpoke Truth, that you're both in the Right.

July 23. The Parliament is further prorogued till the Firſt of October next.

Two married Ladies, who have lately made ſome Noiſe in the World, have taken Lodgings at Windſor at the Price of 50 Guineas for three Days.

A Cornchandler, not many Miles from the Royal Exchange, paid no leſs than Fifty Guineas for four Tickets to admit himſelf his Wife, and two Daughters in the Hall at Windſor.

NEW-HAVEN, September 13.

Laſt Wedneſday the public Commencement was held in this Town, attended by a very large and polite Aſſembly of People —The Solemnities of the Day were introduced with Prayer, by the Reverend Preſident—then followed an elegant Salutatory Oration in Latin pronounced by Mr. Hart; and after it, firſt a ſyllogiſtic, and then a Forenſic Diſputation—to this ſucceeded an entertaining Dialogue, by Meſſ. Gould and Woodbridge—a beautiful and well compoſed Oration in Engliſh, on the Advantages of Oeconomy and Induſtry, by Mr. Muirſon; and an Anthem agreeably concluded the Forenoon Excerciſes.

Mr. L'Baron began the Afternoon Exerciſes with a ſenſible Oration upon the Action of the Pulpit, pronounced with Dignity and Spirit—To this ſucceeded Syllogiſtic Diſputation, by the Gentlemen Candidates for the Maſters Degree.—Then the Rev. Preſident proceeded to admit the following Gentlemen to their reſpective Degrees, viz.

BATCHELORS OF ARTS.

MASTERS OF ARTS.

Alſo the Reverend Meſſieurs William Mills, and John Cloſe, who had been graduated at NASSAU HALL, in the New Jerſey, were admitted ad Eundem. Upon which Mr. Parſons gratified the Audience with an elegant claſſical valedictory Oration in Latin.—The Graduates and young Gentlemen of the College exemplified their Skill in Muſic, by ſinging an Anthem, to the Acceptance of all preſent; and a pertinent Prayer, by the Rev. Preſident, concluded the whole.

HARTFORD, September 17.

On the 28th of Auguſt, was held the firſt Commencement at Dartmouth College, in the Province of New Hampſhire, which was attended by Governor Wentworth, with many of the Council, and a reſpectable Body of the Clergy, and a Concourſe of other Perſons beyond all Expectation. The following Gentlemen, Meſſrs. John Wheelock and Samuel Gray, independent Students and Meſſrs. Levi Friſbe and Sylvanus Ripley, educated for Miſſionaries among the remote Indians, Candidates for the firſt Degree, performed the Exerciſes of the Day under the Conduct of the Rev. Preſident Wheelock, to the entire approbation of the Honorable Truſtees preſent and obtained the admiration and applauſe of a crowded Audience.—The Exerciſes conſiſted of an elegant Engliſh Oration upon the Virtues, ſucceeded by an Anthem; a Philoſophic Oration in Latin; a Sylogiſtic Diſputation, and Valedictory Oration in Latin, followed by an Anthem, compoſed and ſet to Muſic by the young Gentlemen Candidates for a Degree.—The next Day was ordained Mr. David Avery, educated at that Seminary, in order to his immediate Departure, as Miſſionary among the Indians.

On Wedneſday the 4th inſtant, was celebrated the anniverſary Commencement in Providence.

The following young Gentlemen were admitted to the Degree of A. B.

Thomas Arnold,	Benjamin Farnham,
Micah Brown,	Thomas Uſtick,
Ranna Coſſit,	Samuel Ward.

Mr. Daniel Hitchcock of Yale College, received the Degree of A. M.

The honorary Degree of A. M. was conferred on the Reverend Francis Peliſie and William Nelſon.

Laſt Tueſday died very ſuddenly at Weathersfield, the Hon JOHN CHESTER, Eſq; of that Place, the particular Circumſtances of whoſe Death are not yet come to Hand.

THOSE perſons who have received the Connecticut Courant of the ſubſcriber at Pittsfield, Great Barrington &c. are hereby informed that the Year expires with No. 352 of ſaid paper— He therefore deſires all indebted to him to leave the pay at the places where their reſpective papers have been left. Thoſe who are late ſigners for ſaid paper are deſired to pay up to the above time, that their year may begin with the firſt ſubſcribers. And as he is obliged to make a conſiderable payment to the Printer, he hopes ALL concerned will comply with the above requeſt, which will effectually enable him to fulfil his engagements, and the Favour be ſuitably acknowledged by their Humble Servant.

BEAUTY's VALUE.

Beauty is but a vain and fleeting Good,
  A ſhining Gloſs that fadeth ſuddenly;
A Flower that dies, when almoſt in the Bud,
  A brittle Glaſs that breaketh preſently.
A fleeting Good a Gloſs, a Glaſs, a Flower,
Loſt, faded, broken, dead within an Hour.
As Goods when loſt are wond'rous ſeldom found,
  As faded Gloſs, no rubbing will excite;
As Flowers when dead, are trampl'd on the (Ground,
  As broken Glaſs, no Cement can unite.
So Beauty blemiſh'd once, is ever loſt,
In ſpite of Phyſick, Paintings Pains, and Coſt.

THIS is to give notice to all perſons that may have any EXCLAIM againſt George Mabry come to John Kinbrough's the firſt Friday in January and you will oblige your friend John Bryan.

December 6th 1770.

MR. George Mabry ſir I underſtand that you have wronged Robert Jackſon greatly, for in that fray you had at the face you was the firſt that ſtruck as I underſtood and the more that you got from Jackſon he is obliged to work for by day work, inſtead of working for his family and the mare you let him have in favour of pretending is not worth ten ſhillings, and I did not think a man of your ability would go to uſe any poor man ſo villinly [villainouſly] as you did him and now my deſire is to you, for to take Jackſon his mare home again or ſix pounds. Take back your ten ſhilling mare again and deliver him up his note and I deſire that all this may be completed by this day three weeks or you may expect what will follow. This is from your friend. John Bryan.

January [illegible]th, 1771.

THE judgment of the committee is, that George Mabry is to pay Robert Jackſon the ſum of ſix pounds ten ſhillings proc. which money the ſaid Jackſon paid Mabry for abuſe.

And likewiſe to pay James Garran four Shillings proc. the money which Garran paid Mabry for feeding his mare.

And likewiſe, the judgment of the committee is, that George Mabry ſhall in twenty days from the above date, that he the ſaid Mabry ſhall bring in four ſufficient freeholders, and give in to John Bryan as ſecurity for his good behaviour and if the ſaid Mabry ſhall fail or neglect ſo to do, then the ſaid Mabry ſhall leave the province in twenty four days after that without fail. William Field, John Field, Joſeph Robbins, John Bell, Alexander Smith, William Thorſbury, Edward Thorſbury.

A true copy of the judgment of the Regulators certified by me John Bryan, Capt of the regulators.

⁂ The genuineneſs of this copy of the judgment of the committee has been proved by the oath of John Kimbrough, who ſeen the above named ſign it, and who ſaw John Bryan certify it as above; and by the oath of George Mabry, who in his oath further declares, he was obliged to pay the money as by them awarded, they threatning to whip him and burn his houſe in caſe of his refuſal.

January 28th, 1771.

Loving Friend,

MR. Mabry has been here on his journey to leave the province. He tells me his father lies dead and he would willingly go home and bury him, beſides the manner that he is leaving the province in, is not anſwering the purpoſe you intended. I would not have you think that we want to aboliſh any thing you have done but I think, at this critical time, it is better for him to return to his family and bury his father and let the matter ly over for a further hearing, becauſe the manner he accepts of the puniſhment is anſwering no purpoſe, it only exaſperates both parties. He ſays that judgment paſt againſt him at the firſt meeting, ſo that he had not the liberty of getting his evidence. We cannot tell how it is, but pray don't concern with him for ſtopping his journey. Conſider a partner is a nigh friend to part with. There was a company of people here as he went along and ſtopt him or elſe he would have purſued his journey. So we hope you will not hurt him as we were the cauſe.

We have agreed to ſet on for Newbern on Monday the 11th of next month and has great dependence on your parts. Let no private animoſities diſturb you at this time when the public call us to action. Write to your friends on this occaſion—We remain your friends.

[By deſire of the Clergy the following is inſerted.]

To the PUBLIC.

New-York, Auguſt 13 1771.

AS Doctor Chandler, and thoſe of his brethren who have publickly eſpouſed the romantic and pernicious project of importing a Biſhop into America, have conſtantly endeavoured, in order to facilitate the meaſure at home, to perſuade their ſuperiors, that it has no oppoſers in this country, except the Non Epiſcopalians, and comparatively ſpeaking but a few of them; it is conceived neceſſary, for preventing the operation of ſuch an iniquitous deception, to make the following Proteſts and Reſolve as public as poſſible; and the more ſo, as two of our three printers have not thought proper to inſert the former in their papers, for what reaſon, and by what influence, is beſt known to themſelves.

Previous to their inſertion in this paper, I ſhall make the ſix following remarks.

1. That had a number of Laymen publiſhed an advertiſement expreſſive of one purpoſe for aſſembling a Convention, when they intended it for another of which they gave no intimation, they would never have been able to retrieve their characters as honeſt men.

2. That there cannot be a ſtronger argument of the extreme arrogance and affrontery of the eight Clergymen who voted for the application in queſtion, than that they ſhould take upon themſelves to agitate ſo momentous a matter in a province in which, as appears by one of the Proteſts, there are above an hundred Epiſcopal Clergymen; nay, that they ſhould arrogate to themſelves an authority of acting for all the Laity of Virginia, their conſent unaſked; nay, what is the very quinteſſence of all impudence, for all the Laity in America—If eight little pariſh prieſts can occaſionally aſſume ſuch extenſive prerogatives, what may we not expect from ſo diſtinguiſhed a Dignity as my Lord the Biſhop!

Quid domini facient, audent cum talia fures?

3. That it is the duty of every Epiſcopal Clergyman in this province, who has been any ways inſtrumental in impoſing on the public, as before mentioned, (and of Doctor Chandler in particular, as the chief of ſinners in that tranſgreſſion) to make all the amends in his power, by undeceiving every perſon who has been deluded by his artifice, as he can have no doubt either of the Virginians being Epiſcopalians, nor of their being oppoſed to the project under conſideration.

4. That the following publication renders it evident, that a perſon may be oppoſed to the ſaid project without being diſaffected either to the Church of England, or the Britiſh Conſtitution (a calumny moſt liberally beſtowed by thoſe who ought to be an example of chriſtian meekneſs and charity, on all that oppoſed it in this province) becauſe I cannot think that the Doctor or even the moſt ſcurrilous ſcribbler in his train, will preſume to impeach the Virginians either of want of loyalty to the King, or proper affection to their own church.

5 That the reſolve of the Houſe of Burgeſſes for thanking the Proteſtors, was nemine contradicente, which in legal conſideration, is full evidence that the people of Virginia (excepting only the eight Clergymen before mentioned) are univerſally againſt an American Biſhop. That conſequently,

6 Doctor Chandler in the ſecond edition of his appeal, ought to deduct from the number of Epiſcopalians, whom he ſuppoſed were for an American Biſhop, all the white people in that dominion, except eight, and (as all negroes according to his Argument, are preſumed to be of their maſters religion) all the blacks in that province, except thoſe belonging to the ſaid eight.

The Proteſt againſt the Proceedings of the Convention, holden at William and Mary College, on the 4th day of June, 1771.

WHEREAS the following Reſolution was agreed to, by a majority of the Clergy aſſembled at the ſaid Convention,

That a committee be appointed to draw up an addreſs to the King for an American Epiſcopate, and that the committee ſhall apply for the hands of the majority of the clergy of this colony; in which, if they ſucceed, the Biſhop of London is to be humbly addreſſed for his concurrence, and requeſted to preſent their addreſs to his Majeſty, but without a concurrence of a majority of the clergy the addreſs not to be tranſmitted, and that the Reverend Meſſieurs Camm, Wylie, Skyring and Fountaine, or any three of them, are appointed a Committee to prepare the ſaid addreſſes.

We whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed, and who did vote againſt the ſaid reſolution, do publickly declare our diſſent, and proteſt againſt it.

Firſt. Becauſe as the number of the clergy in this colony is, at leaſt, a hundred, we cannot conceive that twelve clergymen are a ſufficient repreſentation of ſo large a body.

Secondly. Becauſe the ſaid reſolution contradicts a former reſolution of the ſame convention, which put a negative upon the queſtion, Whether the King ſhould be addreſſed upon an American Epiſcopate?—And, that an aſſembly, met upon ſo important an occaſion, ſhould reſcind a reſolution, agreed to and entered down but a few minutes before, is, in our apprehenſion, contrary to all order and decorum.

Thirdly. Becauſe the expreſſion, American Epiſcopate, includes a juriſdiction over the other colonies; and the clergy of Virginia cannot, with any propriety, petition for a meaſure, which, for aught that appears to the contrary, will materially affect the natural rights and fundemental laws of the ſaid colonies, without their conſent and approbation.

Fourthly. Becauſe the eſtabliſhment of an American Epiſcopate, at this time, would tend greatly to weaken the connexion between the mother country and her colonies; to continue their preſent unhappy diſputes; to infuſe jealouſies and fears into the minds of proteſtant diſſenters; and to give ill diſpoſed perſons occaſion to raiſe ſuch diſturbances, as may endanger the very exiſtance of the Britiſh empire in America.

Fifthly. Becauſe we cannot help conſidering it as extremely indecent, for the clergy to make ſuch an application, without the concurrence of the PRESIDENT, COUNCIL and REPRESENTATIVES of this province—an uſurpation directly repugnant to the rights of mankind.

Sixthly. Becauſe the Biſhops of London have always, hitherto, exerciſed eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction over this colony; And we are perfectly ſatisfied with the mild juſt and equitable government of our excellent dioceſan, the preſent Lord Biſhop of London; and do think a petition to the crown to ſtrip his Lordſhip of any part of his juriſdiction, but an ill return for his paſt labours, and contrary to our oath of canonical obedience. We do farther conceive, as it had been unanimouſly determined, by this very convention, that his Lordſhip ſhould be addreſſed for his opinion, relative to this meaſure, the clergy ought to have waited for his Lordſhip's paternal advice, before they had proceeded any farther, in an affair of ſuch vaſt importance.

Seventhly. Becauſe we have particular objections to that part of the reſolution, by which the committee are directed to apply, as it is termed, for the hands of the majority of the clergy of this colony; A method of proceeding in our opinion, contrary to the univerſal practice of the chriſtian church, it having been cuſtomary for the clergy to ſign all acts of an eccleſiaſtical nature in public convention; whereas the manner of procuring their concurrence, now propoſed, is unworthy the decorum and dignity, by which ſo venerable a body ought ever to be guided.

(To be concluded in our next)

LONDON, July 10

The following is a copy of a Letter received on Tueſday night by the Right Honorable the Lord Mayor, from the Earl of Hertford, Lord Chamberlain;

" My Lord, 9 July 1771.

" As in conſequence of the notice given of the time your Lordſhip propoſes ſetting out To-Morrow, the Livery may be induced to attend your Lordſhip to St. James's I have the King's commands to acquaint you, that it being unprecedented to admit the Livery upon ſuch occaſions, as well as impracticable to introduce ſo numerous a body, no perſons beyond the number allowed by law to preſent petitions to the Throne will be admitted, except your Lordſhip, the Aldermen, Common Council, and City Officers.

I am, with the greateſt reſpect, my Lord,
Your Lordſhip's moſt obedient humble ſervant,
Groſvenor Street 9 July. HERTFORD."

July 10. On the Lord Mayor's coming into Council he read the Letter above-mentioned to the Livery then aſſembled; in conſequence of which a Committee of ten (the number allowed by law to preſent a petition) was appointed from the body to attend the Lord Mayor into the King's preſence.

July 11. Yeſterday the Lord Mayor, attended by the Aldermen Stephenſon, Trecothick, Townſend, Sawbridge and Oliver, the two Sheriffs &c. with upwards of 100 of the Common-Council, in about 50 carriages, attended by the committe appointed from the Livery to attend the Lord Mayor into the King's preſence, with Sir James Hodges (Town Clerk) the City Marſhal, &c &c, proceeded, amidſt the greateſt acclamations of the people to St. James's, with the following addreſs, Remonſtrance and Petition, which was read to his Majeſty by the Town Clerk, viz.

" Moſt Gracious Sovereign;

WE your Majeſty's dutiful and loyal ſubjects, the Mayor, Aldermen and Livery of the City of London, in the Anguiſh of our hearts, beg leave to approach your royal Perſon, & deeply to lament that we ſtill ſuffer, together with many others, all thoſe great and unparallelled Grievances, which we have before ſubmitted to your Majeſty, with the hope of a full and ſpeedy Redreſs from our Sovereign, as the Father of his People.

" The ſame arbitrary Houſe of Commons which violated the ſacred Right of election, and ſeated among themſelves, as a Repreſentative of the People, a Man who was never choſen into Parliament, have, the laſt Seſſion, proceeded to the moſt extravagant Outrages againſt the Conſtitution of this Kingdom, and the Liberty of the Subject, of which your Majeſty is by Law the great Guardian. They have ventured to impriſon our Chief Magiſtrate, and one of our Aldermen, for diſobeying their illegal Orders, and not violating the holy ſanction of their oaths to this great City, as well as their duty to their Country. They have, by the moſt artful Suggeſtions, prevailed upon your Majeſty, to ſuffer your royal Name to give a pretended Authority to a Proclamation iſſued at their expreſs deſire, contrary to the known Laws of the Land. At length they proceeded to the enormous Wickedneſs of eraſing a judicial Record, in order to ſtop the Courſe of Juſtice, and to fruſtrate all poſſibility of Relief by an appeal to thoſe Laws, which are the nobleſt birthright and inheritance of all the Subjects of this Realm.

" During the unjuſt Confinement of our Repreſentatives, they proceeded to a Law, depriving the Citizens of London of a conſiderable Part of their Property in the Soil of the River Thames, ſolemnly granted to them by divers Charters, and confirmed by the authority of Parliament; and under colour of Equity, inſerted in that Law an unuſual ſaving Clauſe, ſubverſive of the known and eſtabliſhed Laws of Property; they have, without any pretence of an Abuſe, ſuperſeded the Conſervancy of the River Thames, in the liberty which the Citizens of London have enjoyed from the Conqueſt.

We therefore, your Remonſtrants, again ſupplicate your Majeſty to reſtore our Rights, and to give peace to this diſtracted Nation, by a ſpeedy Diſſolution of Parliament, and by removing your preſent wicked and deſpotic Miniſters for ever from your Councils and Preſence."

To which Addreſs, Remonſtrance and Petition his Majeſty was pleaſed to return the following Anſwer:

I Shall ever be ready to exert my Prerogatives as far as I can conſtitutionally, in redreſſing any real Grievances of my Subjects; and the City of London will always find me diſpoſed to liſten to any of their well grounded Complaints: It is therefore with Concern that I ſee a Part of my Subjects ſtill ſo far miſled and deluded, as to renew, in ſuch reprehenſible Terms, a Requeſt, with which, I have repeatedly declard, I cannot comply.

July 17. Monday ſome particular diſpatches were ſent off from Lord Hillſborough's Office, for his Excellency Governor Tryon at North-Carolina, relative to the affair of the Regulators.

Yeſterday was held a Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen at Guildhall, when Meſſrs. Wilkes and Bull gave bond to ſerve the Office of Sheriff.

We are aſſured, that in leſs than a month the preliminary articles of peace will be ſigned between Ruſſia and the Porte.

July 18. The meaſures adopted by the Miniſtry for making the American Governors independent of the provinces, ſeems very well calculated to ſecure the dominion of the mother-country: while the Governors depended entirely upon the provincial aſſemblies for their ſalary, they were always ſlaves to the party preponderating, and were often led into conceſſions, not a little injurious to the ſupremacy of England: the removal of the cauſe therefore will naturally annihilate the effect, and we ſhall not make the guardians of our rights the unavoidable betrayers of our property.

A correſpondent ſays, "His Majeſty told the Sheriffs, he would receive the Lord Mayor and Aldermen; by which it is ſuppoſed the Livery are to ſtand without-ſide the gate, as a proper puniſhment for their inſolence in chuſing Mr. Wilkes Sheriff."

July 19. We have the pleaſure to acquaint the public, that the Earl of Rochford has ſent a very ſpirited memorial to the French Court inſiſting on the immediate payment of the Money due on account of the Canada papers; and that a firm reſolution is at length taken, that this matter ſhall no longer remain the diſgrace of our public conduct, and a ſtain on the national honour.

Extract of a Letter from the Hague. July, 1.

" We have juſt received advice here, that not only frigates, but likewiſe all ſhips of war, without diſtinction, of every nation, are forbidden by the King of Spain to enter into any of the ports of his States; and we are aſſured his motives for this ſtep are, that it has been perceived for a long time paſt, that ſhips which are not ſubjected to Viſitation have greatly abuſed the permiſſion granted them by the Spaniſh Monarch of putting into his ports, by exporting not only a great quantity of gold and ſilver in money & in ingots, but alſo by carrying on a contraband trade with the inhabitants, which has greatly prejudiced the Revenue of the Crown.

By the Boſton Poſt.

BOSTON, September 19.

Since our laſt arrived here Capt. Scott, Capt. Chambers, and Capt. Symmes, from London: From the public Prints, one of which is to the 3d of Auguſt, brought by Capt. Chambers, who put into Falmouth, we have the following Advices:

WARSAW, July 13.

LETTERS from the army of Field Marſhal Romanzow adviſe, that General Weiſſman having paſſed the Danube for the third time, had attacked the 19th of laſt month, under Tulcza, a body of 8000 Turks drove them from their intrenchments, cut to pieces near 1000 of them, took 106 priſoners, and 24 pieces of cannon, with ſeveral ſtandards.

LONDON, Auguſt 3.

The Holland Mail has brought the important News from Peterſburg, that the Ruſſian Prince's Dolgorucki's Army has forced the Lines of the Turkiſh Army which conſiſted of 50 000 Tartars, and 7 000 Turks, with the Loſs of only about 100 killed and wounded, among the latter were four Officers: The Prince's Trophies conſiſted of 40 Pieces of Cannon, and a great Quantity of Powder and Ball.

A dreadful Fire happened at Conſtantinople, the 3d of June, which laid in aſhes two Thouſand Houſes.

LONDON,

July 25. It is ſaid, that the ſcheme for eſtabliſhing a Biſhop in America is privately carrying on, and that a Clergyman at the head of a Church Seminary there, is ſhortly expected over, to facilitate the plan concerted between the Miſſionaries in America and their Superiors in this Kingdom.

Extract of a Letter from Glouceſter. July 20.

" The moſt ſhocking inſtance of ſavage barbarity ever heard of in theſe countries was perpetrated, on Thurſday evening laſt, near Lidney, in this county.—Miſs Mary Jones, youngeſt daughter of William Jones, Eſq; of Naſs, and Miſs Gough, a young lady of Monmouth, who was upon a viſit at Naſs, were inhumanly murdered in a meadow near Lidney Church, as they were returning from Lidney to Naſs.—The young Ladies after tea, took a walk to Lidney, where they were detained by the rain till near ten o'clock, at which time they ſet out for Naſs, about two miles diſtant, without any attendant. The family at Naſs, ſurpriſed the Ladies did not return, ſent a ſervant with a lanthorn to meet them, who found Miſs Jones lying dead acroſs the path in the meadow, with the back part of her ſkull beat to pieces, and Miſs Gough in a ditch near the ſame place moſt ſhockingly bruiſed. It is impoſſible to deſcribe the diſtraction into which the family was thrown. The whole country being ſoon alarmed, every man was ſummoned to go in purſuit of the murderer. William Morgan, a young man of Lidney, a Sawyer by trade, was the only perſon abſent. He was in bed, when one of his neighbours called him up, and told him what had paſſed. As ſoon as he came down, ſome blood being obſerved upon the knee of his breeches, he was directly charged with the fact, which he without heſitation confeſſed. On Saturday evening he was brought to our Caſtle, and gives this account of the horrid deed.—He ſays, he had been playing at fives on Thurſday evening, and had loſt all his money; but had engaged to play for ſix pence the next night. Whilſt he was thinking how to get the Money, theſe two young Ladies paſſed him, and it came into his mind that he might eaſily rob them of their money as they went home. He accordingly followed them, and it being nearly dark, paſſed by them. Miſs Jones ſaid, Good night to you Will. Finding that he was known, he determined to murder them, and taking a little circuit in the meadow, came behind them, and with a ſtake ſtruck Miſs Jones upon the head, which brought her to the ground; he then gave her another blow, and left her dead on the ſpot. Miſs Gough, who had run a few yards, he followed, and ſtruck in the ſame manner. She ſcreamed out, upon which he repeated his blows till ſhe was, to all appearance, lifeleſs. He ſuppoſes, in ſtruggling ſhe had fallen into the ditch, as he did not throw her there. He then knelt down and took off Miſs Jones's pockets, but left her watch, and in kneeling down his breeches were ſtained with the blood. Juſt as he had taken off the pockets, he ſaw the ſervant coming up with a lanthorn, and ran off. He ſays, as he paſſed through Lidney Church Yard, he heard a terrible noiſe in the church, which threw him into ſuch a panic, that if a pool of water had been near he ſhould have drowned himſelf; however, he continued on his way home, and went to bed. When he was firſt apprehended, and queſtioned, whether any other was concerned with him, the villain charged an innocent man as his accomplice, but afterwards recanted. He appears to have been an ignorant idle, diſſolute fellow.——Says, he did not intend doing the Ladies any injury, if Miſs Jones had not diſcovered ſhe knew him.——Miſs Gough, upon being carried to a houſe, ſhewed ſome ſigns of life; and, by the means of Mr. Jones, of Newnham, and Mr. Hawker, of Chepſtow, the Surgeons who were called in, ſhe revived ſo far as to ſpeak ſome incoherent words, and was not dead yeſterday but lay in a delirious ſtate. This melancholy event has affected the whole country. Theſe unfortunate young Ladies were diſtinguiſhed by their amiable and excellent qualities."

Charleſtown (S. Carolina) Auguſt 26.

Laſt week a Chief of the Oneida Indians arrived here from the Cherokee country, attended by five or ſix of his own countrymen, and about 20 Cherokees. He has been on an embaſſy to the ſeveral tribes on the Ohio, and ſays he has made a general peace between the Engliſh and Indians, as far as the Chickeſaws. He has had ſeveral conferences with his honour the Governor in Council, and propoſes to embark in the firſt veſſel for Philadelphia, in order to return to his own country.

On the 11th inſtant a large ſhip was ſeen on fire a few leagues off Cape Florida, thought to be from Jamaica with rum, &c. and continued burning till next morning, when the maſter of the veſſel, who brings us the intelligence, conjectures ſhe muſt have gone down, as he could ſee no more of her. Several other ſhips were in company with, or in ſight of her.

Charleſtown, South-Carolina, Aug. 19.

On Thurſday Evening laſt, a Duel was fought with Piſtols, in a Room in Mr. Holliday's Tavern on the Bay, between Dr. John Haly and Peter Delancy, Eſq. Poſt-Maſter General of the Southern Diſtrict of North-America, which unhappily ended in the immediate Death of Mr. Delancey. The Diſtreſs of the Families of both Parties may be more eaſily imagined than deſcribed.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor has been pleaſed to appoint William-Henry Drayton, Eſq; to be Deputy Poſt-Maſter General of the Southern Diſtrict of North-America, in the Room of Peter Delancy, Eſq; deceas'd.

BOSTON, September 16.

The Engliſh Papers contain a great Number of Accounts of the great Pains the Miniſterial Party took, by offering Money, Tickets, Threats Intreaties by Letters, &c. to the Livery, to ſet aſide Wilkes and Bull, but their Offers rather helped them on, as it gave the People Room to think the Cauſe of Wilkes was the Cauſe of Liberty.
